The Seattle Post Intelligencer says:

"It involves some of the best acting of the cinema season."

The Seattle Star says:

"This film contains all the best elements of all the sea stories that have been told in films."

Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theatre, Chicago:

"The type of picture my patrons like. Many stopped me to say how good it was. A real action picture of the sea with an interesting love story. Business good."

"TROUBLE"

Jackie Coogan—Presented by Sol Lesser. M. Golomb, Franklin Theatre, Union Hill, N. J., says, as reported in the Exhibitor's Herald:

"Grab this. Pleased 100 per cent. You will sure make money. Very good."

Raymond Gear, Mayflower Theatre, Florence, Kas., reports:

"A good one both from entertainment and box office standpoint."

J. A. Hopkins, Arcade Theatre, Holtville, Cal., says:

"Exceptionally good picture. Pleased 100 per cent."

"ONE CLEAR CALL"

A John M. Stahl production, presented by Louis B. Mayer.

W. W. Booth, American and Strand theatres, reports in the Exhibitor's Herald:

"A wonderful production. Splendid acting, photography, direction and story. Should go good where better pictures are appreciated."

The Birmingham News says:

"A simple, strong and gripping story—novel treatment."

"THE CROSSROADS OF NEW YORK"

Mack Sennett's latest big comedy-drama feature, starring Mabel Normand, is making the money.

The New York Picture News says:

"This picture has one of the biggest and best casts ever assembled."

The Pittsburgh Press says:

"One of the season's most novel and entertaining comedy dramas. It is entirely different from anything that has preceded it."

The New York Star says:

"Some thrills, many laughs and a timely touch of human interest. Action good, picture well cast and directed."

The Seattle Times says:

"Now delighting enthusiastic audiences. It is another feature which, like 'Mickey' and 'Molly O.' has brought the comedy king to the front as a director of high class drama."

The Cleveland News says:

"Real old-fashioned melodrama. Contains romance, thrills, drama and comedy, and an imposing cast."

The Yonkers Herald says:

"An unusual photoplay. Not satisfied with the title of King of Comedy, Sennett set out to conquer the field of comedy drama with tremendous success. His latest screen offering as notable as previous successes."

The Los Angeles Times says:

"Sennett opus goes over as clever burlesque. It reaches highest point yet reached in this form of entertainment. Is sparkling satire and rollicking burlesque."

The Omaha Bee says:

"The 'Crossroads' has drama uppermost, leavened with humor and culminating in many unusual thrills. Sennett never before gave such an entirely unusual production."

Independence

A GOOD picture is good no matter what its source.

Its goodness, for instance, isn't determined by the fact that it comes from an independent or a program producer or distributor.

And exhibitors want good pictures—more than ever this season because the public is more than ever apathetic and competition is more than ever keen—and times have been mighty bad. There's a lot of catching up to do. It's serious, all around.

Good pictures!—that's the first and highest consideration. The need is urgent—critical.

But—

—And this is important—there's something beside the immediate present to consider, there's a look ahead always to be taken if this business is to have a stable future; and it is necessary, highly necessary, that the independent producer get all the encouragement his product deserves, so that we may have many and capable independent producers.

It is necessary to the health of the box-office; and the box-office is the heart and arteries of the whole industry, high and low. Every company, every individual, is concerned with this great problem of holding the public favor.

There seems to be widespread confusion about the term "independent."

Throughout the history of the industry the word has been applied, at times of competitive crises, to all those who operated outside of a so-called "trust."

At present however, and fundamentally at all times, the word has a broader economic application.

"Neutral" is a better word.

An independent exhibitor, or distributor or producer is one engaged wholly in the ownership and operation of his own particular branch of the business, and with no such interest in either of the others.

An independent producer, in other words, produces only. He doesn't distribute or exhibit his goods.

It is of this independent producer we would speak here—

And of his importance to the industry at large.

We are engaged in the business of entertaining—in this country alone—many millions of people in several thousand communities with a daily and weekly change of program. No such magnitude, no such responsibility was ever before approached in the show business.

To this end an industry has been reared with an investment said to total a billion and a quarter dollars.

This huge investment, the present security of it, the responsibility for its future growth are swung, you might say, from the sources of production.

And the sources of production mean, primarily, the brains that conceive and build the pictures that will please the great public.

It is apparent to anyone that these sources of creative effort must not be kept narrow.

The book and magazine field today has thousands of contributing minds.

We need as many—if the public is to be pleased, as the picture can please.

How many dependable creators of good pictures have we today?

Make your own estimate.

Then multiply it by a hundred—and you won't have too many—

—If the public is to be pleased—and kept pleased.

There's too much similarity in pictures today, too much copying, however skillful.

The public is bilious with the sameness of the food it gets.

We hew too much to the narrow line.

The whole wide world is ours but we stick to studio walls and standards.

We've got to expand.

For this expansion, for this freshness of creative effort, we have got to look constantly afield, and far afield.

We've got to encourage the man, whoever or wherever he is, who feels the urge of production.

And the problem, we repeat, is the problem of all because we all as an industry will thrive only on public favor realized at the box-office.

THE echoes in New York of the Harry Charnas—Al Lichtman trip—Pittsburg - Cincinnati - Detroit - Cleveland—pronounce it an unqualified success.

It was good for the state rights market, it was good for the independent producer—and for the motion picture at large, because the largely attended banquets were as dignified as they were interesting, and the press in each city got a favorable impression of the enterprise and seriousness of this industry.

Several hundred exhibitors altogether were in attendance and a lot of good resulted from the close contact. Some New Yorkers we might mention got some new ideas of exhibitor conditions.

Everybody likes Harry Charnas, and everybody likes Al Lichtman; and everybody respects them roundly for their enterprise and ability and because they play the game absolutely on the square.

It was some eight years ago, we believe, that Harry Charnas got his first start in Cleveland. Today his offices cover almost the entire floor and he does as big a business throughout his territory as any of the National distributors. If all other independent exchanges were run like the Standard Film Service there wouldn't be any question about the size and solidarity of the state rights field.

We like Al Lichtman's speeches. His statements are liberal and sound—broad, like his experience in this field. He doesn't even brag about his own product, so we'll say here for him that "Rich Men's Wives" had a lot of nice things said about it by exhibitors who had run it. It seems to please everybody. Ben Schulberg should have been present and heard his child praised.

The only boasting Al did was over his associate, Ben Schulberg. They started in the film business together, have always been in the thick of it and now their original dream has been realized. They have their own company. We prophesy success for them because both deserve it.

"Shadows" is Schulberg's new picture, recently changed from "Ching, Ching Chinaman." The new title suggests itself to us as more suitable also.

It wasn't an easy matter to press-agent and handle the thousand worrisome details of this one night stand banquet tour through four cities. It took veterans to do it. So our hats are off to Linn Bonner and Frank G. Hard.

LOIS WEBER, who has held a conspicuous position as the only picture director of her sex, will have to share this honor with Julia Crawford Ivers. The Famous Players' scenario writer leaves in a very short time for the Hawaiian Islands with a company to make one of her own stories into a picture. Mrs. Ivers will have under her direction such players as Betty Compson, Sylvia Ashton, Ed. Martindale and Arthur Hoyt. It is the director's intention to make all the exteriors there and lights will be transported for some of the scenes.

JACKIE'S mother (there is only one Jackie) arrives in New York this week to be present at the metropolitan showing of "Oliver Twist," Jackie's recently completed feature production. This marks the first eastern trip of Mrs. Coogan in a year.

their hurried rush to the subway, stopped in their track the night that the Criterion flashed "When Knighthood Was in Flower." The sign announcing Marion Davies a star in the picture covers the entire front of the theatre. It is positively the biggest eye catcher which has ever advertised a play or picture. By comparison the signs advertising the wares of the dramatic producers fade into insignificance. Its candle-power is intense, sending forth a radiance during the nocturnal hours comparable to a full September moon.

WHEN a globe trotter steps into the rostrum he usually has something to offer. Here is E. M. Newman back from Africa with 30,000 feet of negative of his journey. Accompanied by two cameramen, he made a 7,000 mile trip through the heart of the dark continent from the Cape to Cairo—the trip taking five months.

"It was well worth the effort," said Mr. Newman. "I don't believe there is a single specie of animal in the African jungles that we failed to get on the film. We made cinema studies of 200 different tribes of natives."

For a year he will show the picture exclusively with his lectures. They will be released to the theatres, eventually. Mr. Newman's first lecture will be at Cleveland, October 9th, to be followed by an engagement at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, October 11th.

F. RICHARD JONES, the director of those three little maids from Hollywood, "Mickey," "Molly O'" and "Suzanna," all servants for Mabel Normand, has arrived in New York where he expects to remain until "Suzanna" makes her debut on the screen of one of Broadway's big nickelodeons.

D. W. GRIFFITH is living up to his title—"the man of mystery." One never knows what this producer has up his sleeve or behind the walls of his studio. We have gleaned the information that he has finished the production upon which he has been working for the last five months.

The problem of the coal shortage has brought complications to his future plans. It has been his intention to make at least one or more pictures in this country before taking up his plans for the productions he intends to make abroad.

It is doubtful whether the Mamaroneck studio can be operated since it is only equipped for hard coal fuel, and the shortage may cause an immediate shutting down of the work there.

D. W. has not allowed any visitors at his studio while the new picture was being produced. Costly experiences with the advance news about his productions has recommended a conservative policy of information.

A DOG is always up to tricks. Those of you who saw the stage production of "Peg o' My Heart" will remember Michael. If you didn't see the play, doubtless you have heard of the canine, anyway, for no dog ever received more volumes of publicity. The little terrier has appeared in 2,000 performances of the play. A few days ago just when Laurette Taylor was in the midst of production of the screen version of the play, Michael deserted the cast abruptly. For the first time in his life he was late to rehearsal. He retired temporarily to become a mother. Which leads us to suggest—What's in a name?

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in Hollywood has sent "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" to New York. The film left Los Angeles in care of Harry D. Buckley. Nothing like having a traveling companion for these precious photoplays—seeing as how they represent a few bars of gold ingots.

J. GORDON EDWARDS, director general of the spectacular photoplay specials of the William Fox organization, returned from Palestine last week. He took an entire company with him to the holy land, and in the very places described in the Bible, he photographed the picturization of Wright Lorimer's famous novel, "The Shepherd King." The story deals with the life of David, beginning when he is a mere shepherd lad and kills the giant Goliath.

Mr. Edwards enacted a prologue to the principal story, showing Moses leading the tribe of Israel out of bondage, passing the Pyramids and the Sphinx.

Subsequent scenes were taken in and near Jerusalem and the battle with Giant Goliath was staged in the actual valley where the original combat took place. The giant Goliath was impersonated by a tremendous Egyptian, seven feet six inches tall, a well known character in Cairo, Egypt, who was engaged specially for the role. Miss Violet Mersereau, the leading woman of the cast of "The Shepherd King," also returned to America with Mr. Edwards. The remainder of the company returned to the William Fox studios in Rome, Italy, where other pictures will be made. Meanwhile, Mr. Edwards will remain in America for the first showing of "The Shepherd King" which will take place sometime during the winter after the task of cutting and titling has been completed.

THEY are making a scene out Hollywood way—which will represent one of the longest streets ever built for a motion picture. It is said to be nearly a mile long and depicts the tenement district of Chicago with buildings constructed on both sides of the street. The picture is "Chicago Sal," and among the players who will walk or ride up the lengthy avenue are Milton Sills, Alice Lake, Ralph Lewis, Claire McDowell, Richard Hedrick and others. Irving Cummings is the director.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER, author of "Pigs Is Pigs," and other essays, satires and stories, has been engaged by Norma Talmadge to write a series of six advertisements for her productions. "Pictures is Pictures" these days with Norma. Have you booked "The Eternal Flame"? If not, why not?

ARTHUR S. KANE has left New York on a short business trip in the interest of Associated Exhibitors. His itinerary reads like "big time." Among the cities visited on the motor trip are Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Mr. Kane's chauffeur has been requested to make stop-over privileges at interesting points of the trip.

STRAIGHT from Lasky lots comes the information that Conrad Nagel will love or lose Pola Negri in "Bella Donna"—that Maurice Flynn will stand ready to do or die for Mary Miles Minter in "Sacrifice," and that Antonio Moreno will keep the home fires burning for Gloria Swanson in "My American Wife."

Hobart Bosworth in a scene from "On the Lap of the Gods," which was filmed at the famous Argonaut mine, the last scene being completed only a few days before the disaster which entombed forty-seven miners. A number of the men who were used as "extras" in the picture were among those trapped under ground.

COSMOPOLITAN'S stupendous picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," has made screen history. It is not only Cosmopolitan's greatest achievement, it is one of the greatest achievements of the silversheet. A stirring story of the chivalrous days of Hampton Court, the producers remembered that the grandeur of the court life during the reign of Henry VIII must be duplicated in every way possible. It is a costly picture, but every penny has been spent wisely if lavishly.

It seems as if the sponsors said to themselves—"We'll keep faith with that colorful chapter of English history; we'll keep faith with Charles Major's vital and vivid romance; we'll keep faith with all the atmosphere, detail and background, not only as they pertain to the author's novel, but as they pertain to the court life of the Tudors."

Let us look into this production. What do we see? Thousands of people, ancient armor, a reproduction of the Hall of Hampton Court palace, Gothic tapestries, a tremendous street scene of Paris, and an array of costumes which must have cost a princely sum. The backgrounds have been re-created by Joseph Urban, whose genius in this direction has been appreciated before. Art dealers and collectors, authorities on armor, modistes, designers—these and many others whose services were necessary to reproduce the details carefully were called upon to make the picture genuine. But the greatest credit belongs to Robert G. Vignola for his masterly direction. He was given these rich gifts and he fashioned them into a gorgeous tapestry. Discretion has been his watchword throughout. And what a gift in itself is discretion!

The cast reads like a blue book of stage and screen. Marion Davies as Mary Tudor does the greatest work of her career. Lyn Harding's portrayal of Henry VIII is marvelous. He is Bluff King Hal to the life as Holbein and Shakespeare, Major and history have painted him. Wolsey is impersonated impressively by Arthur Forrest, while William Norris as the decrepit old King Louis XII of France, gives a fascinating performance. He has caught the eccentricities of the aged monarch—his make-up being a work of art, indeed.

With such a cast—with such opulence and display—with such colossal effects—with such a story, the picture version of the play and story stands as a monument for the industry. None have excelled it in its appeal to the eye, the heart and the imagination. Very few have equalled it.

RICHARD WALTON TULLY and "Omar the Tent-maker" are in New York, the picture being the second in which Guy Bates Post is starred. Mr. Tully, accompanied by his wife and daughter, will sail shortly for England, where he will produce "The Masquerader" on the London stage, as well as superintend the London premier of the play in picture form.

WHILE working on location recently, Arthur Trimble, a five year old actor, featured in two reel child stories, was nearly drowned in a diving scene and later in the day was thrown from a horse. Fortunately, no serious injuries. Isn't it about time that these youngsters had their doubles?

RANCES MARION has completed the scenario of the life of Abraham Lincoln for the Rockett-Lincoln company. This is NOT an adaptation of John Drinkwater's play.

Optimism Keynote Among Independents

By CHESTER J. SMITH

A TOUR of the Independents these days sounds a new note, a note that is ringing throughout the industry, but one that has not rung for many months. It is the note of optimism that has replaced that of pessimism.

The Independent producer and distributor sees the bright light ahead. The little fellow and the big fellow see it in the immediate future. They figure the time is here that will either make or break them. There is none of them who expects the break.

Ready for the "Shoppers"

Much has been heard of "shopping for pictures." From all parts of the United States comes the word that the public is shopping for its pictures and the exhibitor is shopping for his pictures.

And so the Independent is ready now with a challenge. He is ready now to place his product against the big national producers and distributors and to stand or fall by the judgment of the exhibitor and the public. He feels that he has the goods and is willing to play it fifty-fifty against the opposition. If it is a survival of the fittest based on picture merit, the hat of the independent is in the ring and he can see nothing but prosperity from now on.

William A. Johnston, publisher of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, says in his editorial that the independent offers the salvation of the industry. The independent wants to be the savior and thinks he has the goods if he can get those goods displayed.

"If the exhibitor is on the level with us and will give us a break, you will soon see an improvement in pictures," is the trend of the statement coming from every independent office. "Each of our pictures is sold on its individual merit, unlike the program pictures of these big national producers and distributors. We have to make good with every picture to make a livelihood.

"Our product has improved to a greater extent than the other fellows. If it is a case of shopping, our show windows are open and we invite the closest inspection."

Unfortunately for the independent market there have been within its ranks unscrupulous producers and distributors, but it has been a long hard fight and not many of these have survived. Those who have and whose business methods have stood the test are certainly putting forth every effort to produce better pictures, for they realize the keen competition both in their own field and in the opposition forces and know that only better pictures can bring them results on their investments.

The independents with headquarters in New York want only the cooperation of the exhibitors, which has often been promised them but has not yet been realized to the extent it should. If it is a fact that the exhibitor is doing his shopping more carefully he must give a good share of his patronage to the independent market. Producers in this field have been sincere for the past year in their cleaning-up methods. They have supplanted the cheap, tawdry pictures with real productions of merit and if they can't get the latter over, then control of the industry must pass absolutely to the other fellow, which would not serve for the betterment of the whole industry.

Variety of Product Available

Among the independent releases for the 1922-23 season are included big specials, spectacles, features, serials, novelties and all sorts of short-subjects. There is a wide variety from which an exhibitor may select, and little excuse for a lack of patronage.

Take the Warner Brothers, one of the largest of the independents, for instance. Included in their list of coming productions are: "Rags To Riches" and "Little Heroes Of The Street," both starring Wesley Barry; "Brass," by Charles Norris, and one of the recent best sellers in book form; "Dangerous Adventure," in which Grace Darmond will be starred; "Main Street," "Little Church Around the Corner," and "Beautiful and Damned." All of these have been produced or are in process of production. And then there are "School Days," which is proving its value as a box-office attraction wherever it is shown; and "Your Best Friend," with Vera Gordon.

The Al Lichtman Corporation, recently organized, promises some pictures of exceptional merit in "Rich Men's Lives," "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," "A Bird In A Gilded Cage," "Poor Men's Wives," and "When A Woman Marries." The Lichtman-Schulberg combination is highly respected throughout the industry, and it is reasonable to suppose they are putting forth their best efforts in every picture they handle or turn out.

The C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation recently started distribution of "More To Be Pitied Than Scorned," which has received favorable comment wherever it has been shown.

Charles C. Burr's "Sure Fire Flint," "I Am The Law" and "Go Get 'Em Gallagher" have been registering successes from the exhibitor's standpoint. The Aywon Film Corporation with "Wildness of Youth," now being distributed, and a number of other features appears to have some real winners. The Clark-Cornelius Corporation with a series of melodramas and "Laughographs" has what appears to be an attractive list.

Dr. Shallenberger, President of the Arrow Film Corporation, can be proud of the record made with "Ten Nights In A Barroom," one of the successes of the season. "The Innocent Cheat" and "The Splendid Lie" are among others of the numerous Arrow successes, which include a wide variety of subjects.

"Where Is My Wandering Boy," an Equity product is one that the entire independent field can be proud of. The Export and Import Film Company proves its desire to distribute better pictures by acquiring the big foreign spectacle, "Sodom And Gomorrha," and "Othello." The former is said to be one of the biggest spectacles ever produced in Europe. The story was prepared for the screen by Ladislaus Vajda and adapted by Michael Kertesz.

Lee-Bradford have made the statement that they were successful in getting twice as much money in Boston recently for "Determination" than they could have had a few months ago and promise eight additional pictures of exceptional merit for fall release.

Mr. Lee declares the recent slump in the game has been a decided help to the independents, and that it has broken the control of the big fellows. Nathan Hirsh, President of Aywon, has said in his observations he has found the exhibitor more willing to cooperate with the independent than ever before and that they are re-ordering more than ever before. "If you have the goods," he says, "you can sell them." That is the principle upon which the independent market is functioning at present.

Invasion of Foreign Field

Where the independents have gained a strong foothold in the past year has been in the foreign market. William A. Brady, theatrical producer, said in an interview recently that the American independents had a great chance to cut into the foreign market because the big national producers here would not cooperate by handling foreign pictures. Whether the increased business abroad on the part of the independents is a result of this is hard to say, but the fact remains that the American independent product is being rather widely distributed in all foreign countries.

Pictures in large numbers are being shipped to France, England, Belgium, Argentine, Cuba, Porto Rico, India and other countries abroad. As an example of the possibilities abroad six distributors from Argentine are reported to have been vying with each other here for independent product.

Not only are the independents putting out a better product but they are getting behind their pictures to a greater extent than ever before. Real money is being dispensed in the exploitation and advertising of the independent pictures. They are vying with the big fellows, and they are offering press books and exploitation ideas that are of real value to the exhibitor.

The old utter lack of organization in the handling of the independent product is being supplanted by an organized movement to bring results to the producer, distributor, and exhibitor alike. It is no longer a hit-and-miss game where the interest of the producer ceased as soon as his picture was disposed of. Service is the watchword of the reliable independent, and that service is now being continued as long as it can be applied to advantage.

The public and the exhibitor have long been crying for better pictures. The exhibitor has said for some time he knew he must support the independent producer and distributor. The latter claim to be doing their bit to bring about the desired improvement. It has about come to a showdown. Last week, no less a power among the country's exhibitors than National President Sydney S. Cohen declared emphatically for the Independent when he said, before the Massachusetts and New Hampshire state exhibitor organizations in convention at Boston, that distribution systems must be so changed that the independent producers will be given an opportunity to market their product among exhibitors.

Spokane "Go to Theatre Week" Successful

Despite Unfavorable Weather, Parade and Other Stunts Register With Public

DESPITE the fact that the elements seemed to have had an antagonistic attitude toward the movement, fifteen theatres of Spokane, Wash., celebrated the first "Go to Theatre Week" in the city's history eight days, August 26 to September 2, with good results.

Opening on Saturday, August 26, "Go to Theatre Week" bucked up against four days that averaged more than 96 in the shade, unusually hot weather for Spokane. On Wednesday, ten minutes before the parade which exhibitors had been working on for a month started on its route through the downtown section, the heavens broke loose and following a half hour of heavy rain a hail storm played havoc with the floats, marchers and thousands who lined the downtown streets to see the parade. In spite of the heavy downpour and the fact that the plane which flew over the parade fell into the river when the hail stopped the engines at an altitude of 500 feet, the parade was run off on schedule time and no deviations from the original plans were made from the time of starting until the line of over a hundred automobiles and floats disbanded at the terminus. The spirit of the parade was one of the most commented upon features of the celebration.

On Saturday, Pilot Nick Mamer, driving a Casino theatre plane, flew over the city and distributed 20,000 programs for "Go To Theatre Week." Each theatre distributed 5,000 or more programs during the preceding week and with department stores, hotels, clubs, parks and music dealers participating, it is doubtful if many Spokane people missed seeing the schedule of attractions for August 26 to September 2. Slides screened at all theatres for two weeks previous were used up to and including Sunday August 27 and the city was well placarded with special window cards and photographs and window tie-ups of various screen stars whose pictures were shown during the celebration. Ten window tie-ups were effected on current attractions. A band on a transport truck paraded the downtown and residential sections of the city at noon each day during the celebration. On Monday, Pilot Mamer and J. L. Johnston, special representative for the celebration, flew over the city for a stunt exhibition and distributed 250 passes to various theatres along with 20,000 programs.

Through G. E. Foster, photoplay editor of the Chronicle, Spokane's leading newspaper, a movie stars' impersonation contest was conducted, a special column being devoted to the idea each day. The Spokane Press ran a special three page advertising section on August 26 and another on August 29. The Spokesman Review also gave the event considerable publicity. Fifty dollars of the five hundred dollar fund subscribed by the theatremen to advertise the fete was given the Chronicle as prizes for the best impersonations of stars and the Associated First National Exchange of Seattle contributed fifty dollars to be divided by Chronicle judges among the three theatres contributing the three best floats in the parade. Judges of the dual competition were Harry Eagles, Paramount Pictures; Mrs. John T. Little, Spokane society matron and W. E. McMillan, Universal Film Exchanges. First prize for floats was awarded to Dr.

Mayor Turns Down Plea from W. C. T. U.

MAYOR SAMUEL LEWIS SHANK of Indianapolis Tuesday turned down a request of a delegation from the Marion County W. C. T. U. urging that he close all theatres on Sunday. The women said they had a petition signed by twelve thousand favoring Sunday closing.

"I told them if they did have twelve thousand signatures the theatres could put out papers in their lobbies next Sunday and get one hundred thousand names in favor of Sunday shows," said the mayor.

The women threatened to bring suit to compel the mayor to enforce the Sunday closing law and the mayor's reply was to go ahead, that he would have to clamp the blue law lid on everything in town if they did and he hoped it would not come to such a pass.

H. S. Clemmer of the Clemmer theatre who entered a rich red cloth float on which was mounted a throne occupied by a bejewelled beauty who posed for a moving picture made by a feminine cameraman whose tripod rested on the snowy surface of a miniature mountain at the other end of the display. Second prize went to O. W. Newton of the Rialto theatre, Hillyard, Wash., whose float was a canoe made of paper roses and containing six little girls in white dresses who tossed candy kisses as they paddled. Third prize was awarded George Terhune of the Rex theatre whose float was made to resemble a tropical scene from "The Idol Dancer," the First National attraction he featured during "Go to Theatre Week." A dancer who closely resembled Clarine Seymour and impersonators of Richard Barthelmess and Creighton Hale also rode in the float. Mr. Terhune also entered two decorated cars.

Manager Ray A. Grombacher entered twenty-two new cars bearing the impersonators of the Chronicle contest as the Liberty theatre display. Each car was decorated and bore a two by five canvas sign calling attention to some feature of Liberty theatre service or the name of some forthcoming attraction. Manager Stillwell of the Casino entered a "Monte Cristo" float on a huge 7½ ton truck; the Empress, Lyric and Majestic theatres had decorated cars. The American theatre had ten cars and six Northwest Mounted Policemen in uniform. Pantages had two decorated trucks and four cars, the Rotary and Ad clubs had decorated cars and Pathe, Hodkinson and Universal and the Alexander Film Laboratories had decorated cars. Pathe employees distributed 1,000 asters to people watching the parade and the Pathe cameraman took pictures of the parade for showing at the Casino theatre the same evening. Associated First National Pictures of Seattle entered a handsome float of white and silver on which Miss Ruth Harkins, prize winning beauty of the Inland Empire, dressed in a dainty pink erinoline gown of 1865 rode with a prize Siberian wolf hound tied to a leash. Miss Harkins distributed asters to the crowds and also tossed away several thousand miniature real photographs of First National stars. Over 300 vari-colored asters were used in the folds of the cloth on the First National float.

The Casino theatre's Curtis plane was appropriately decorated for flying low above the parade. Only skillful handling of his plane enabled Pilot Mamer to land in the river, just below the twin falls, without accident. Trying to alight in the stadium floor, Aviator Mamer noticed children at play there and in an effort to avoid killing them by suddenly alighting in their midst he fell into the river bed, causing considerable damage to the plane and narrowly escaping fatal injury to himself and companion, who was tossed headlong into the rapids.

Ad club, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Chamber of Commerce club organizations gave the principal speaker's privilege to theatre men at each regular meeting during the week and at each event all theatre men of the city were present as guests of the clubs.

Members of the committees in charge of "Go To Theatre Week" were: Ray A. Grombacher and James E. Vesey, Liberty theatre; E. Clark Walker, Pantages; Dr. H. S. Clemmer and Hugo C. Lambach, Clemmer theatre; George Terhune, Rex; C. E. Stillwell, Casino; E. C. Schaffer, Class A; Charles Packeritz, Empress; O. W. Newton, Rialto, Hillyard; Major Laird and J. P. McGovern, American and J. L. Johnston, First National Pictures and manager of the celebration.

Blanche Sweet and John Bowers spent a few hours in Spokane during "Go To Theatre Week" en route from Marcus, Wash., to Los Angeles. Miss Sweet gave a message over the Chronicle radiophone.

Programs of all theatres participating:

Liberty—Mack Sennett's "Crossroads of New York" (4 days), John M. Stahl's "The Song of Life" (3 days).

Clemmer—Thomas Meighan in "If You Believe It, It's So" (4 days), Anita Stewart in "Rose o' the Sea" (3 days).

Pantages—Charles Chaplin in "The Idle Class" (one week) and vaudeville.

Casino—Hobart Bosworth in "The Sea Lion" (all week).

Fox Launches Educational Brand

New Division of Company to Release Short Subjects, Starting on Sept. 24

AFTER a year of preparation and research, the Educational division of Fox Film corporation will be inaugurated on Sept. 24 with the release of six short subjects.

To pave the way for this far-reaching task, Mr. Fox one year ago turned over to the Educational division all the physical and executive resources of his establishment, including his studios, his equipment, and his staff of expert workers, with the entire technical department of laboratories, cutting rooms, scenario staff, title writers and competent artists; giving every possible facility for the turning out of the very highest type of educational films to meet the entertainment requirements of all exhibitors as well as the most fastidious demands of the educational field.

Mr. Fox called upon his two hundred and fifty cameramen in all parts of the world—men trained in all the skill of the filming art and alert for all possible subjects of educational value, with thrills and interest, to serve in bringing to the screen of the exhibitor a program of short subjects covering travel, geography, science, natural history, sports and athletics, history, invention, medicine, surgery, progress in society, politics, music and art.

The regular motion picture exhibitor will now have within his reach a variety of rare and novel short reel subjects which he may advantageously add to his program and which will prove to be as attractive to the general public as the subject matter is varied and authoritative.

These subjects will run from four hundred and fifty to a thousand feet in length and will be packed from beginning to end with live matter of continuous action and universal interest.

Mr. Fox thus promises the public through the exhibitor the fulfillment of its demands in providing the right kind of entertainment—entertainment that is mixed with short doses of education—highly interesting information that is combined with entertainment served to the public in a way to both please and instruct. The practice of showing the Fox educationals will soon win for the exhibitor an enviable name among educators, clergymen, leaders of welfare work and the intellectuals in his community, and he will by this means win the approval and cooperation of the leaders of thought and social service everywhere.

Mr. Fox has entrusted the production of his Educational pictures to Herbert E. Hancock who is assisted by Mr. Frank A. Tierney. The Fox Educational Sales organization is headed and managed by Mr. Edward J. O'Donnell.

Hancock is a New Yorker. For 15 years he worked successfully on all the big metropolitan dailies—New York Herald, Evening Telegram, Sun, Evening World, Journal and American.

When the International Film Service was first formed, he was transferred and became manager of the Animated Cartoon department. Later on he was appointed feature editor. When the U. S. entered the war, Hancock joined the Creel Bureau in Washington, D. C. The war over, he blossomed out as an independent producer, and had already released two pictures when William Fox came along and took him over to organize and launch his news reel.

Frank A. Tierney, assistant director, was for many years one of the best known political reporters in this country. He was associated with Martin H. Glynn of the Albany Times Union for twenty-five years and served as Mr. Glynn's secretary when the latter was lieutenant-Governor and governor of New York state.

Paramount Pep Club Holds Election of Officers

The annual election of officers of the Paramount Pep Club was held at the home office of Famous Players-Lasky, New York, Tuesday evening, September 12th. The following officers were chosen:

President, Eugene J. Zukor; vice-president, Melville A. Shauer; treasurer, E. A. Brown, and secretary, Bertha Wiener. The Board of Governors comprise: Elsie Hemmer, Florence McGovern, G. B. J. Frawley, Julian Johnson, Paul Morgan, George Spidell, Harry G. Wylie.

The report of the treasurer showed the finances of the club to be in a highly satisfactory condition, while the chairman of the athletics committee reported a most successful year.

The annual outing of the club was held at Asbury Park, N. J., on Saturday. Members to the number of four hundred left by boat at 8:30 for Atlantic Highlands, where a special train took the party to Asbury Park. There the members enjoyed dancing, bathing, golf and other amusements throughout the day. Both luncheon and supper were served at the Balconades at the Beach Arcade. The return trip was made by special train, the party leaving Asbury Park at 8:15.

"Remembrance" Booked for Showing at Capitol

"Remembrance," the Rupert Hughes picture, written, directed, edited and titled by himself, and the first of Goldwyn's "big twenty" productions for the new season, is to be shown at the Capitol theatre, New York, a week in advance of its national release date.

This is the picture which Goldwyn is confident will surpass in popular appeal and in boxoffice success the other big Hughes photoplay, "The Old Nest." It was shown, following a luncheon at the Astor hotel, last week to the entire membership of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and held the exhibitors enthralled by its drama and its humor.

An advance advertising campaign for "Remembrance" has been in progress in the New York newspapers for two weeks and will be continued until the showing is finished. The picture will be given special exploitation and a special Rothafel presentation.

Kann to Direct Publicity for Litchman

Maurice Kann, for four years assistant to the editor of The Film Daily, has been appointed director of publicity for the Al Lichtman Corporation.

Before entering the film publication field, Kann was a reporter for the New York Journal of Commerce.

Public Relations and the Picture Industry

Five C's Necessary for Success of Theatre Told by Public Relations Expert

By Turner Jones

THE Five "C's" of Cinema are far more important to the theatre from a box-office standpoint than the average manager is willing to admit and from the standpoint of goodwill, they are everything. The Five "C's" are:

CO-OPERATION
CIVILITY
COME-AGAIN

The letter "C," as a Roman numeral, means one hundred, and if the first four "C's" are practiced sincerely, the fifth will take care of itself, and the letter "C" in Cinema will stand for 100 per cent success. Any public utility officer will tell you that all of the public relations work and publicity in the world won't help unless it is backed up with service, efficiency and the Five "C's," which are the fundamental basis of building goodwill for a theatre or an industry.

It is worthwhile to glance for a moment at the definitions of these words, since it would be impossible to over-emphasize their significance in this connection.

Confidence—Trust, belief, assurance, faith.

Courtesy—Politeness, favor or indulgence as opposed to right.

Co-operation—Association or collective action of persons for common benefit.

Civility—Polite education or training; hence good breeding, refinement, culture.

Come-Again—Is the cumulative result of the application of the first Four "C's."

All public relations requirements are summed up in those five words.

It is unnecessary to say that no goodwill is lasting unless confidence is its essence.

Goodwill is not to be gained unless uniform courtesy is shown, and here it may be pointed out that indulgence is part of courtesy. The theatre belongs to the public in a very real sense, since it can live only by the public and the public must be indulged often.

Co-operation, as has been stated, is the democratic principle upon which all of the Better Films program is based.

Civility, or refinement, is essential to the atmosphere of the theatre if we are to lift our industry above the plane and ethics of the old "Barnum-showman."

Every theatre employee should be instilled with these principles. The theatre's lobby is its show-window, and the manager, cashier, and doormen are its salesmen. Its business is as competitive as that of a department store. Competition today is largely waged with these Five "C's" as the weapons in the biggest businesses, and we need them badly in the theatre business.

In the larger cities we have compiled what we call "Policy Pass Lists." These lists carry the names of prominent men and women representing various enterprises and organizations throughout the city. Season passes are issued to each one. The importance of this lies not in the issuance of passes, but in the manner of issuance. With each pass goes a letter stating many facts, which we have discussed in these articles, and emphasizing the necessity for the theatre "to maintain a vital

Business Fundamentals in Relation to Theatre

APPPLICATION to the theatre of those fundamental principles that must regulate the policy of any business in its relation to the public, if it is to be successful, is explained and discussed in this article by Turner Jones, Public Relation Representative of the Southern Enterprises, Inc. This is the fourth and last of a series of articles written exclusively for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

What Southern Enterprises has done, other theatres can do, and this series of four articles presents a logical and effective working plan for the exhibitor who desires to become, if he is not already, an integral part of the life of his community. That, in a great measure, is the answer to the difficulties facing the motion picture industry today.

touch with public sentiment if it is to render an entertainment service to the community." These people are requested to criticize us and make suggestions.

The results of this "kitchen cabinet" pass list have been astounding. We hear of agitation before it breaks out. These people feel that they are having a say-so in the management of our theatres and consequently they often rally to our defense when most needed. This is at once one of the most economical and most effective means of establishing contact with community leaders.

We are now experimenting with theatre managers' clubs in a few cities. The idea is that all of the managers shall gather once a week for lunch, at which time some local personage will address them. Newspaper reporters will be present to tell the public through their paper's columns that the Rev. Dr. So-and-So, or Mayor ——— said this or that to the theatre managers. Thus we offer some of our bitterest opponents an opportunity to unburden themselves where it does us the least harm, yet gives them the greatest satisfaction. Further, this is a constructive step, since there are many improvements which we can make when they are brought to our attention.

The theatre's investment compares favorably with that of other retail concerns and its interests are equally as permanent. Therefore it is logical that the theatre should be interested, as any other business enterprise, in the development and growth of the community. With this in mind we encourage all managers to become members of local chambers of commerce and civic organizations. There is scarcely any civic asset to a theatre greater than to count its manager among the members of the Rotary, Kiwanis, or Civitan clubs.

Whether our manager is a member of such civic organizations or not, we encourage him to appear before them and talk on motion pictures. No contact with the public is as valuable as personal contact, and public opinion is born in these civic organizations. These are strategic positions for the representatives of the motion picture industry to present our story. We also encourage the exhibition of especially good pictures at the meetings of these civic clubs, as our contribution to their programs.

Probably no other company has carried this method of public relations work as far as has the Southern Bell Telephone Company. This organization has specially built demonstration sets which its representatives use before civic organizations in order to present the problems of the Central, the repair man and also to give the public an elementary knowledge of the mechanism of the telephone system. They also follow out this principle in window displays.

It would be well for the motion picture industry to borrow a leaf from the telephone company's book. Models of the old Zoetrope, Kinetoscope and the modern projector would make a most interesting display and deliver a story of the progress of an industry that was born less than fifty years ago.

As a further means of getting a direct contact with our patrons we sometimes advertise that "stills" of certain popular stars will be mailed to all who leave their names at the theatre office. With each "still" goes a little statement of policy, explanation of some irritating condition, or a few lines relative to our problems.

We spoke at some length in an earlier article relative to the "personalization of the theatre or company." It was pointed out that a corporation seems to draw attacks and slander, while an individual is not so quickly subjected to such malignity. The same is true, to a lesser degree, of the theatre. The Isis theatre may be cold, arrogant and inconsiderate, but the manager of the Isis can change this reputation. He can so humanize his theatre, inject his own personality into it and create a new atmosphere that a new reputation will be the result.

Where a theatre or corporation does business with thousands of people it is impossible to make effective contacts with each individual. Consequently the vast majority feel rather far removed from the theatre or corporation and feel that the human element in its management is distant. The lack of personal contact is one of the things which has made sales a difficult problem in big business, and the motion picture industry has suffered as much as any other from becoming big. "A soulless corporation" is a favorite epithet thrown at every concern by patrons who do not come in personal contact with the management. This difficulty may be overcome in a measure by the use of advertising to put flesh and blood into the "soulless corporation." The Pacific Gas and Electric Company is attempting this on a rather large scale.

Their ads show linemen clinging to the top of icy poles repairing lines, or their "hello girls" working late into the night to handle some emergency. Advertising can accomplish much in this way, but it is not sufficient in itself.

To accomplish this end it will be necessary for the manager to utilize every opportunity to meet and effect a contact with the public. With this in view we are planning to place the name of each manager, in the form of a neat gold and black sign, upon the box office where every passerby will see it.

The old coffee distributors advertised their drink so universally and with so little regard for the health of the public that they aroused the antagonism of the physicians of the country. The Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Committee has been recently formed and charged with the duty of advertising to doctors and public alike the truth about coffee. They deal fairly, telling its ill effects as well as its good effects.

Any number of examples, similar to those mentioned, could be cited, but it would seem that sufficient has been said to indicate that a greater respect for the truth in motion picture advertising in regard to the suitability of the picture for adults or children, in regard to the type of pictures, and in regard to the admission prices, would be the best business policy.

In conclusion, be it observed that every contact with the outside public is a definite sales opportunity—an opportunity to sell your policies, your attractions, your sincerity, your difficulties and the motion picture as a community institution, and to receive in return a sympathetic understanding and fair play at the hands of the public.

Sufficient has been said to show the close connection and interdependency of sound public relations and politics. Unfortunately, we exhibitors have to enter the political arena occasionally, and we usually get pretty well fleeced before we are permitted to depart.

This is usually the case because of two facts: (1) We seldom have anything like cooperation and unity among ourselves, and (2) we seldom know anything definite about politicians.

Here in the South we are attempting to overcome these two obstacles by following a definite plan of procedure. First, we are trying to form state units of exhibitors to handle such questions. Usually the downfall of a business association comes about through internal dissensions on account of questions arising within the business. By confining the activities to what may be called our "foreign relations," we hope to avoid disastrous friction.

Virginia Censors Are Kept Busy

THE Virginia State Board of Motion Picture censors has examined a total of 293 separate pictures, representing 783,000 feet of film, since the Board entered upon its duties on August 1st.

The Censors work on the pictures from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. each day, the average number of reels examined daily being about thirty-five, although forty reels have been disposed of on some days.

Evan R. Chesterman, chairman of the board, stated that an effort will be made to show some of the films at the State penitentiary and the Virginia Home and Industrial School for Girls, in Chesterfield county. In order to do this, it will be necessary for the board to move to the point at which the picture is to be shown, and to carry on the censorship there, as no picture can be shown more than once by the board.

No entire pictures have as yet been eliminated by the Virginia censors, but many scenes have been cut out.

Allen Creditors Ask an Extension

AN application has been finally and formally made to George S. Holmsted, K.C., Registrar in Bankruptcy, Osgoode Hall, Toronto, by the creditors of the Allen Theatres, Limited, for the granting of an extension of time to the company in which to satisfy claims.

This action was agreed to by a majority of the creditors of the company, it was announced, who felt that an extension would be preferable to selling out to another theatre company which has made several offers to buy the Allen theatre assets.

The application to the registrar in bankruptcy for his approval for an extension which was made on September 14, is the final legal move on the part of the creditors to provide for the solution of the financial difficulties in which Allen Theatres, Limited, had been involved.

The next step is to have each exhibitor establish friendly relations with his representatives, whether they be in council or in congress. Each one is issued a season pass with a frank letter which states that the pass is given in order that he, "as a member of the government, may become thoroughly familiar with methods and policies of the motion picture industry," since he will be called upon to pass on matters vital to the industry. This frankness is disarming in itself and appreciated.

Each exhibitor is expected to secure full information upon all members of state legislatures and send it to a central office where it is recorded as follows in a loose leaf index:

Name, county, district, representative, senator, address, state, party, term, stand on censorship, stand on Sunday closing, business affiliations (type of business engaged in, relations with business concerns, such as investments, legal affiliations, personal connections, banking connections, etc.), political career (positions held in the past, factional affiliations, political friends, future aspirations, etc.), platform (election promises if significant), contact (through what individual or firm can this member be reached?), remarks.

This enables one to sit in the office and direct our political interests with fair accuracy and intelligence. It prevents duplication and wastage in many instances.

But of far greater importance than any of these points is the fact that when we are forced to enter a legislature we do so with clean hands, with frankness and a willingness to meet the other man half way. When a fight comes we know that we have done all in our power to present the facts of the case legitimately and fairly and we usually meet with a corresponding fairness.

The results of a year and a half devoted to this general program are concrete and definite. We have seen the agitation for censorship practically die out in four states and materially wane in two others. Civic and religious organizations have taken an active part in the defeat of regulatory measures in several instances.

We are beginning to see a more liberal and progressive attitude on the part of some of the leading newspapers and in a few instances this change is reflected in denominational publications. There is a more sincere note in the public's interest, and we feel that there is discernable a distinct growth of sympathy toward us.

To attain the goal which we have set for ourselves the intelligent assistance of every employee is essential, and with this end in view we have published a pamphlet, "Information for Employees," which seeks to give them the attitude of the company upon important questions, the company's policies and ideals, and an understanding of its growth in the past and its aims in the future.

After all is said and done, the man who makes contact with the public, whether it be the corporation's president or the theatre's doorman, is the one who determines the reputation of the concern. No amount of work with the public will avail if employees are misrepresentatives instead of representatives of those policies and ideals which serve as the company's or theatre's goal.

Seventeen Companies Launched in N. Y.

With an aggregate capitalization of a little less than $700,000, the first half of September brought the incorporation of seventeen motion picture companies in this state. The records in the secretary of state's office here show the following companies as having been formed so far this month:

Shea's Incorporated, $100,000, Buffalo. Micha I. Shea, James Franklin, Thomas D. Powell, Buffalo; Emessen Pictures Corporation, $2,500 M. S. and P. B. New Ad Cut System Inaugurated by Franklin

Makes Possible High Type of Advertising for All Theatres in Famous Chain

A NEW system of interchangeable unit advertising cuts was this week inaugurated by Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, which will make it possible for the smallest house in the chain to have advertising as distinctive as that of the houses which have their own artist.

This system consists of a special series of cuts, to be used in conjunction with the regular pressbook cuts, which will be furnished to each Famous Players theatre.

A considerable number of these cuts are name-cuts, made up in two shapes, rectangular and triangular. These cuts make it possible to accomplish an important result seldom gotten with type-set heads—that of trade-marking the advertising of that particular theatre by having the name appear in distinctive lettering, the same day in and day out.

Furthermore, these cuts are being made up in a number of styles that will give variety, holiday appeal, and a community spirit to the advertising of the theatre, in that cuts are available with thumbnail illustrations appropriate to election day, Christmas, New Year's, Fourth of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving, Mothers' Day and all such important dates, as well as one for the anniversary date of the house.

There are also special cuts reading: "Matinee," "Coolest Spot in Town," "Continuous," "Matinee Daily," "Exclusively Paramount Pictures," "A Super-special," and the like, in several styles and shapes.

These cuts are furnished in various sizes, and, in conjunction with the regular pressbook

Advertising Plan Has Many Unique Features

THE accompanying article sets forth a new plan put into effect this week by Harold B. Franklin, director of theatres for Famous Players-Lasky corporation, which should be of interest to theatre men everywhere.

This plan makes it possible for the smallest house in the Famous Players chain to carry advertising as high class as the largest house, at a minimum of expense and effort.

If this plan, or a suitable modification of it, can be made available to houses throughout the country, it should work a revolution in motion picture theatre advertising. Meanwhile, the plan merits the consideration of all owners of theatre chains.

cuts and mats, make it possible for the exhibitor to prepare advertising of distinction, carrying a uniform style, and standing out strongly on the theatre page from mediocre type-set displays.

This plan marks a distinct advance in theatre advertising, since it places the small theatre without an artist or engraving plant in a position to prepare advertising that will compare favorably with that of any house in the country.

It has the further advantage over the use of straight pressbook ads that it is flexible, and can be adapted to fit any space requirements and special conditions of any sort.

Proofs and cuts of all of these units are being sent to all Famous Players houses, together with numerous examples of advertisements made up with them. The letter which accompanies them, from Mr. Franklin, contains so much sound advice on advertising layout from one who knows, that portions of it are worth quoting:

"The object of furnishing you with a series of cuts is so that your newspaper advertising will be attractive at a minimum of expense. Most small town newspapers have not the facilities nor the compositors to properly set up attractive advertising.

"You will note that in getting up this sheet we have, in every instance, made use of portions of the various press books that are furnished for each production. Intelligent use of the press books, together with the special cuts, should give your theatre 'big time' advertising, providing judgment is used in selecting good copy and in the arrangement of the ad. We particularly wish to call your attention to the spacing and the abundant use of white space.

"In the preparation of your ads you are not to be guided by the amount of space we have taken in those on the sample sheet, for we feel that with judgment you can cut down your newspaper appropriation considerably in some instances, and still prepare effective and distinctive ads.

The use of these various headings helps to promote a certain amount of civic pride, when properly connected with patriot days, etc. It also serves to give your ad interest that it might not otherwise have, and, of course, prevents monotony. While these special signature ads are shown in different styles, still they succeed in distinctly associating your theatre with a certain style of advertising."

There is a possibility that this plan, or a modification of it, will later be made a part of the Paramount pressbook service to all exhibitors.

Elaborate Renovation for Fox's New York Studios

An elaborate reconstruction of many features of the $3,000,000 building, housing the New York studio and offices of the Fox Film Corporation, is under way. Several thousands of dollars have been devoted to the new additions and decorations which are being installed.

The reconstruction began with an enlarged entrance on the Tenth Avenue side. New tile walls, mural fixtures, and pretentious wood-work form the embellishments here. The reception room has been similarly redecorated and a large oil-finished walnut standard case stationed in full view of all who enter the building.

Two new projection rooms have been erected one to be used by officials of the corporation, and the other for trade and private showings. These projection rooms possess all the latest theatrical appointments. The construction is such as to permit full ventilation and perfect view for each of the thirty possible visitors.

The advertising and publicity department has been provided with larger quarters, now occupying an entire section of the top floor. The 54th Street Annex has also been the object of many improvements.

Little Coal Trouble Expected, Reports Show

Many Theatres to Use Other Fuel; Large Number Furnished Heat, News Correspondents Find

REPORTS from cities not heretofore covered in the fuel survey of MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week failed to materially change the appearance of the situation.

The survey has developed the fact that a surprising number of theatres are heated by municipal heating plants, public utilities companies, and central plants in the buildings in which they are located. A considerable number, too, use gas-steam boilers, oil or electricity.

Including the reports published below, information has been gathered from virtually every section of the country, and the outlook revealed has been far more cheerful than that predicted by the "calamity howlers." The reports have been mainly from the larger cities, of course, and it may be that the situation in the small towns will be more serious, but such towns as have reported have mostly signified their intention of burning wood or other substitute fuel in the event that coal could not be obtained.

This week's reports, in detail, follow:

KANSAS CITY, MO.: All downtown houses use city heat, and, as the city has an unlimited supply of coal, these houses are assured of heat. About twenty per cent of the suburban houses use oil for fuel. The Warwick has five months' supply on hand. The Ellsworth, Baneroff, Strand, Isis, Summit, Mozart, Palace, Empire, Bonaventure, Benton and Gladstone have amounts on hand varying from two weeks' to two months' supply. The Murray, Rainbow, Centre and

Final Results of Survey of Fuel Situation

ALTHOUGH the coal strike has been settled, the fuel situation is still a pressing one, since the lost production cannot possibly be made up before winter comes.

Hence, the NEWS is publishing this third and last installment of reports from its correspondents in every part of the country, giving in detail the source of heat used by theatres, supply of fuel on hand, plans for emergency heating, and the like.

This article, together with the two published previously, presents a comprehensive picture of conditions throughout the United States.

Maple have none on hand but have coal ordered. The Circle, Alamo, Broadmoure, Spillane, Bell, Penn Valley, Brooklyn, Diamond, St. John, Belmont, American, Linwood and Admiral have none on hand and none ordered.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.: Bijou has coal on hand to last until January 1. The Orpheum has ten weeks' supply. New Garriek has practically none. The Idea has heat included in its renting contract.

RENO, NEV.: Motion picture theatres here will not suffer from possible coal shortage or be forced to close down, as they will be heated by oil burners. This means of heating was tested last year in the Majestic, and it is planned to extend this to the Rialto and Grand this winter.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.: Prospects of a shortage and of excessive prices is causing some worry, but few houses admit possibility of closing down. Poli's is understood to be protected by a standing contract, the Elite, Victory and Orpheum have none on hand and none in sight. The Strand, Hippodrome, Barnum, Park, West End and Liberty are confident of a supply. The Empire, Paramount, Dawe's, Bijou and Palace will burn oil if it becomes necessary. The Capitol has a supply of wood available, should it be needed.

HARRISBURG, PA.: Peculiar situation exists here, making fuel shortage out of question. The city is located on the Susquehanna river, which runs through the hard coal mining regions of the state, and has for years been depositing a supply of anthracite coal, of a size adapted to steam-making use, at the very front doors of the city. This fine coal, not much larger than sand, is dredged from the river. The principal theatres, including the Majestic, Orpheum, Colonial, Victoria and Regent, buy city heat, as do several of the smaller houses.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.: The fuel situation is one phase of the motion picture business which does not affect houses here, as the climate is such that none of the theatres have to worry about coal.

CINCINNATI, O.: In addition to previous reports, seven theatres, the Royal, Gifts, Ohio, Avenue, Rex, Gem and Main, are heated by gas, and hence express little concern over the possibility of a fuel shortage.

New Exhibitor Service by First National

Offers Free Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Material for Fall Opening

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES comes forward with a genuine innovation in the way of direct service to the exhibitor. The service is to be given free to franchise holders and exhibitors playing the First National product, and is instituted with a special eye to the assistance of the small-town exhibitors. The service consists in the distribution of a complete line of advertising, publicity and exploitation fanfare with which to feature the fall opening and announce in effective display the many attractions that are to come to the screen of the theatre during the new season.

The material, which is shipped in what is termed "a fall announcement package," comprises the following:

"A two color campaign press sheet, containing brief, concise news stories of First National attractions and stars for the coming year that can be used in newspapers as a program announcement by theatres that will play the First National schedule.

"Five rotogravure sheets in subdued, handsome colors. There is one each on Mack Sennett's 'Suzanna,' Richard Walton Tully's 'The Masquerader,' starring Guy Bates Post; R. A. Walsh's 'Kindred of the Dust,' and Thomas H. Ince's 'The Hottentot.' A fifth one is a composite of big scenes from many of the forthcoming attractions.

To Arrange New Contract for Jackie Coogan

THE present contract for the services of Jackie Coogan, whose next picture, "Oliver Twist," is soon to be released, having nearly expired, his parents are now on their way to New York from the coast to make final arrangements with some Eastern producers, several of whom have made flattering offers for the services of the child star.

The last time the elder Coogans were here was over a year ago, when they entered into a contract for Jackie's services that has kept him busy ever since.

"A five-colored announcement sheet with a film strip of First National stars and featured players and a list of attractions to be released through First National.

"Sixteen 11 x 14 finely lithographed colored star portraits, including the following favorites: Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, John Barrymore, Richard Barthelmess, Guy Bates Post, Katherine MacDonald, Jackie Coogan, Charlie Chaplin, Hope Hampton, Mabel Normand, Dorothy Phillips, Miriam Cooper, Buster Keaton, Anita Stewart, Claire Windsor and Strongheart, the wonder dog.

"A slide enabling exhibitors to make a screen announcement of the coming annual opening display.

"A postcard to request cuts and mats reproduced in the press sheet from the First National exchange. The cuts and mats in this press sheet will be supplied without charge.

"Miscellaneous material consisting of program suggestions, samples of miniature star photographs to be given away at small cost, lobby strips with the pert and pertinent slogans from the First National symbol, 'Standing Room Only. A First National Attraction Today,' 'Look, Who's Here for the Whole Year,' the latter being especially appropriate for exhibitors featuring First National attractions and wish to sell their patrons on this standard of entertainment.

"Equally valuable with the element of timeliness for a fall display are the all-year advertising and exploitation possibilities that the announcement package offers. Some of the rotogravure sheets feature special attractions, but the composite one can be used throughout the year as well. In the case of the star portraits these are adaptable as long as the theatre contemplates using any attractions with these stars. Second only to the precedent established in a stupendous fall opening is the exploitation aid that these accessories offer."

Valentino Troubles Are Aired in Court

Rodolph Valentino, through his attorney, Arthur Butler Graham, recounted his troubles with the Famous Players-Lasky organization before the New York Supreme Court during the week.

Among the charges lodged by the star, in the hope of severing his connections with the producing company was one that the latter had mentioned the names of two women as co-stars in the advertising of the picture, "Blood and Sand," which he claimed was against the conditions of the contract.

Valentino also claimed he had been put to considerable physical disadvantage, and that the salary of $1,250 a week was inadequate. He said the company had given him a dressing room smaller than a cell in a building reserved for "extras" though several dressing rooms were available in the building reserved for stars.

His attorney also contended that a request for a couch in the star's dressing room resulted only in the placing there of a table, a stool and two small chairs. Because of this alleged treatment Valentino quit work last month and came to New York.

Famous Players-Lasky, through its attorneys, Guggenheim, Untermyer and Marshall, asked the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining Valentino from acting for anyone else until his contract expires in February, 1924. Decision was reserved.

Mrs. Samuel Katz, Wife of Chicago Exhibitor, Passes Away

The offices of the Tivoli, Chicago, Riviera and Roosevelt theatres, of Chicago, were closed over the past week-end in tribute to the passing away of the wife of Exhibitor Samuel Katz. Particulars in further reference to Mr. Katz' bereavement were not available upon going to press.

John C. Flinn Elected President of A. M. P. A. Victor Shapiro Made Vice-President

At the annual election of officers of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, held in New York City at the Cafe Boulevard, on Thursday, September 14th, the following ticket was selected for the new term:

President, John C. Flinn, of Famous Players-Lasky; vice-president, Victor Shapiro, of Pathe; secretary, Thomas G. Wiley, of Photo Repro; and treasurer, Horace Judge, of First National.

The Board of Directors comprises: Charles Barrell, A. M. Botsford, Arthur Brilant, Howard Dietz, Paul Lazarus, P. A. Parsons, Nat. Rothstein, Harry Reichembach, C. L. Yearsley.

Managing Editor A. M. P. A. Bulletin, J. M. Loughborough.

Chancellor Chamber of Commerce, Samuel D. Palmer.

The only opposition in the ticket was for the office of vice-president. Mr. Shapiro running against J. W. O'Mahoney, of Educational, Mr. Shapiro being elected. Later his election was made unanimous by a rising vote.

Mr. Flinn succeeds C. L. Yearsley, who retires as president to become a member of the Board of Directors. After the result of the election had been announced Paul Gulick paid tribute to the splendid work done by Mr. Yearsley and the other retiring officers of the A. M. P. A. Mr. Flinn was then called on for a speech. He said:

"I feel a particular pleasure in being elected for the reason that I have been away from New York. To come back and be received like this is gratifying. I hope we can accomplish much during the coming year. I have been a member of the A. M. P. A. ever since it was started some six or seven years ago, and can look back with pride on its splendid record. While every other similar organization has disintegrated, the A. M. P. A. has stuck. There is a very good, definite reason for this. The officers you had heretofore stuck on the job."

"My hat is in the ring with John Flinn," said Mr. Shapiro. "I hope I shall be something more than John Flinn's only vice."

Harry Wilson, a publicity man from the Coast who attended the meeting, extended greetings from the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers.

Carter De Haven Host at N. Y. Luncheon

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE leading exhibitors, representatives of the daily and the motion picture trade press greeted Carter De Haven, whose two-reel comedies are now being released through the Film Booking Offices of America, at an informal luncheon at the Hotel Astor in New York on Monday, September 18th. Mr. De Haven was the host of the afternoon.

The F. B. O. comedy star is making a Coast to Coast tour and in every city is renewing acquaintances with old friends and making a host of new ones. At the Hotel Astor on last Monday he kept his audiences laughing during the entire luncheon with a running fire of stories and "gags." The entire gathering was strictly informal and not a serious note was sounded.

The Regent theatre at Elizabeth, N. J., one of the handsomest and best appointed motion picture theatres in the country, erected at a cost of $500,000, recently opened with an all First National program. This big house forms another link in the New Jersey chain controlled by the Fabian Enterprises, of which Jacob Fabian, second vice president of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is the head.

The Regent opened on Wednesday, Sept. 6th, with Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," Buster Keaton in "Cops," and other First National Attractions. The initial showing was an invitation affair. The mayor of Elizabeth, who was one of the guests of honor, made a talk in which he praised motion pictures and came out squarely in favor of Sunday picture shows. John K. English, president of the Elizabeth Chamber of Commerce, also spoke and presented George K. Robinson, the manager of the Regent, with a letter from the Chamber of Commerce.

Charnas Proves Lavish Host to Exhibitors

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland, the largest independent film exchange in the country, entertained all of northern Ohio motion picture exhibitors and their families last Wednesday evening at a dinner-dance, followed by a premiere screening of "Rich Men's Wives," the first Preferred Picture released.

There were approximately 450 guests assembled at the Carlton Terrance, the scene of the Standard Film party. Invitations were issued to every exhibitor in the northern Ohio territory. And every exhibitor had the privilege of bringing one guest. Never before has an independent exchange entertained on so lavish a scale nor has an independent exchange ever staged a premiere screening so elaborately.

"Rich Men's Wives," as Fred Desberg, of Loew's Ohio, Inc. said, "is a real picture. Every exhibitor present at the screening, and every competitive exchangeman who saw it, agreed that it contained every element for success. Film men were particularly enthusiastic over the Prizma title decorations.

Labor Troubles Loom for Toronto

Labor troubles are looming up for Toronto exhibitors as a result of the demand of theatre employees for the restoration of the 1921 scale of wages for musicians, projection machine operators, electricians, stage hands, and other organized workers.

A walkout was threatened on September 7, but it was averted by the arranging of a two weeks' truce by W. Covert, business representative of the projection machine operators. The differences are far from being settled. The locals pointed out that they had accepted a 10 per cent reduction in wages last winter when business conditions were causing the exhibitors considerable worry, but they now want the old rates of pay restored.

Canadian Producers Protect Pictures

At a conference of delegates representing the active and proposed Canadian producing units, held at Ottawa, September 16, it was decided to reserve for Canadian management the distribution of all productions made with Canadian capital on Canadian soil.

By the adoption of this policy, Canada does not establish a new precedent, but merely elects to exercise the same rights enjoyed by the United States, Great Britain, Italy and France, in regard to the marketing of their product.

The paramount factor in determining this move on the part of Canadian producers is the preferential tariffs and special commercial treaties in force between the Dominion and a majority of the foreign countries.

Schnitzer Baby F. B. O. Latest Star

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Schnitzer are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, who arrived on Sunday, September 17th. The F. B. O. vice-president brought the news to the Home Office on Monday morning, and there was general rejoicing throughout the big R-C building.

Little Miss Schnitzer will be called Joan.

Colored Picture Syndicate Formed

William Travers Jerome Announces Corporation to Develop New Process

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by William Travers Jerome, former District Attorney of New York county, of the formation of a syndicate to develop and perfect a new process for coloring motion pictures. The organization is controlled by forty-five business men who have subscribed $1,000,000. The process was invented by Daniel Frost Comstock, a scientist and engineer, who for several years has been a member of the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The first public showing of a complete film under the new process, which is said to be the most inexpensive applied to moving pictures, will be shown in New York in October.

The Teeni Color, Inc., the name of the new corporation was chartered in Delaware on September 12, with a subsidiary concern in Maine called The Teeni Colored Picture Corporation of Maine.

Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, a member of the industrial engineering firm of Kalmus, Comstock and Wescott of Boston is the president of the new company. William Travers Jerome is vice-president, and the directors are William Hamlin Childs of Brooklyn, Eversley Childs, president of the Bon Ami Company, N. T. Pulsifer, president of Valentine & Co., Thomas W. Sloeum, of Minot, Hooper & Co., C. E. Danforth, a broker; Alfred W. Erickson, of the Erickson Co., Inc.; and Alfred Fritzsche of the Grinnell Company, Inc. Marcus Loew will be added to the directorate next Tuesday.

Among others who are interested in the syndicate are: Frederick H. Ecker, Vice President and Director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; Horace S. Wilkinson, Chairman of the Board of the Crucible Steel Company; William L. Ward, the Republican boss in Westchester County; Henry A. Colgate, Secretary of Colgate & Co.; Austen Colgate, Second Vice President and Director of Colgate & Co.; Leroy W. Baldwin, President of the Empire Trust Company of 120 Broadway; Nicholas M. Schenck, Secretary of Loew's Theatrical Enterprises; H. Hobart Porter, the consulting engineer; James C. Colgate of 36 Wall Street, and Frank Foster of the Congoleum Company.

Lieber Will Open New Independent Office

The H. Lieber Company of Indianapolis, who have been handling their state right features in conjunction with First National attractions in that district, will open a new office within the next few weeks to handle independent films exclusively. They have purchased the entire Warner Brothers series, also special C. C. Burr attractions, and will continue to buy the biggest and best pictures available to the independent distributors.

They are entering into contract with the Cusack Company for billboard display on their coming attractions, which will surpass anything in the way of co-operation the exhibitor has ever had in this district, in the way of selling attractions direct to the public.

Mr. M. J. Doody, who will manage the exchange, in a letter to Motion Picture News states that the outlook is very promising for independent pictures in consideration of the exceptional product now on the market as practically all of the big pictures have already been sold in the key cities. He adds that business conditions in general have shown a decided turn for the better and that the next few months will entirely eliminate that malady which has geographically been referred to as "grief."

Gene Stratton-Porter Enters Production Field

One of the most attractive and interesting production announcements for the fall and winter season comes from Gene Stratton Porter, who has just returned to Los Angeles from a summer vacation spent among the birds, flowers, and swamps of her beloved Limerlost country in Indiana.

Mrs. Porter has decided that after many years waiting, she is ready to produce her own stories in pictures, under her own supervision. Her books include such successes as "The Harvester," "Michael O'Halloran," "The Girl of Limerlost," "Laddie," "Her Father's Daughter," "Freckles," "At the Foot of the Rainbow," "A Daughter of the Land," and "The Fire Bird."

"Michael O'Halloran"—the story of the best beloved and most widely known youngster of modern fiction—has been chosen for the initial production. It will be screened with an all-star cast, and a competent technical staff of skilled picture makers, at the Ince Studios, where Mrs. Porter will give it her daily personal attention. She will supervise the entire production.

Because Mrs. Porter has strenuously objected to the practice of many producers changing the theme and spirit of novels when adapting them to the screen, she has persistently refused offers from picture producers for the screen rights to her novels.

Business Picking Up in Atlanta Territory

Business is picking up in the Atlanta territory, according to word from M. Mitchell, manager of the Standard Productions, whose headquarters are in Atlanta. Writing to MOTION PICTURE NEWS he says: "May I not congratulate you on an independent issue? This kind of co-operation spells success for the independent pictures, and I am sure that the good work that you have started will produce satisfactory results."

"Business in the Atlanta territory is picking up and we are looking forward to a wonderful fall and winter season. Also wish to say that the Exhibitors are on the lookout for good independent productions and those with merit have no trouble in being exhibited in the big first run houses. We have been very fortunate in securing Warner Brothers' big independent productions and I do not hesitate to say that we are expecting to do big business with them."

Kansas Puts Ban on "Movie Cop"

"Any burlesque of an officer of the law or any scene which would tend to create disrespect for any law, Federal or State, or mitigate against its proper enforcement, shall be eliminated."

That is the resolution passed by the Kansas State Board of Review. The "movie cop" is doomed in Kansas. The ruling, according to members of the Censor Board, not only prohibits a comical role in police attire, but forbids "making light" of the Prohibition Amendment.

Cosmopolitan Leases London House

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the signal success of Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the New York Criterion comes the news by cable from London that Cosmopolitan has leased the Scala Theatre, where this historical picture will begin an indefinite run the first of October. The Scala is London's finest and most fashionable film theatre, and the fact that the Prince of Wales has given royal approval to this pictorial romance of English royalty means that it will become the vogue in England.

Jack Potter, of Philadelphia, who has become the representative of the Hearst publications abroad, took the film to London and was commanded to give a private showing at York House, the town residence of the Prince of Wales.

Pyramid Pictures to Film on West Coast

Production activities of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., will, according to announcement this week, be extended to Hollywood, where two feature photoplays will be made with Ray C. Smallwood in charge of production. "The Deerlayer," James Fennimore Cooper's famous novel, and "What Fools Men Are," will be made on the coast. In Pyramid's Astoria (Ore.) studios, George Terwilliger will make "Wife in Name Only," by Bertha M. Clay, and a second director will make Joseph C. Lincoln's "Captain Eri."

An official of the company said: "In extending the scope of our production, activities have outgrown one or two studios. We must have ample room in which to move, and just as rapidly as we can come to it, we shall put half a dozen productions into work simultaneously."

Goldwyn Opens Branch at Indianapolis

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation has opened another new branch office. It is in Indianapolis, Ind., and is located at Nos. 438-440 Illinois street.

The name of the manager of the Indianapolis branch, and also of the new sub-office to be opened by Goldwyn in Milwaukee will be announced within a short time. It is expected that a third new exchange will shortly be opened.

Harold Lloyd's "Dr. Jack" Shipped to New York

HAROLD LLOYD'S new feature comedy production, titled "Dr. Jack," has been shipped to New York, according to word from the Pathe home office. The picture was completed at the Hal Roach studios several weeks ago and was recently given a "try-out" before the regular patrons of the Strand Theatre, Pasadena, Cal. The Pathe home office reports that the consensus of verdicts on the new picture is "'Dr. Jack' contains more laughs than 'Grandma's Boy.'" It is likely that Lloyd's new multiple-reel comedy will be showing before the public before the end of the year.

Gladys Walton's Latest, Bret Harte Story

Gladys Walton's latest feature picture, adapted by Universal from "M'liss," one of Bret Harte's most famous stories, will be released under the title "The Girl Who Ran Wild."

Universal officials explain that the title change was made, not because of any commercial motive, but because another film company requested it.

Years ago, so it is explained, Mary Pickford made a picture called "M'liss." Although prints of this picture are no longer available, Universal was requested not to use the title and readily acceded to the request as a courtesy to the other company.

"The Girl Who Ran Wild" has been completed and the first print received in New York from Universal City.

The picture will be released October 9, and constitutes the eighth unit of the "Winning Nine," Universal's first group of 1922-1923 attractions.

Pathe Lists October 1st Releases

Schedule Headed by Leo Maloney in "Deputized" and 12th Roland Episode

PATHE'S October 1st release schedule is headed by Leo Maloney in "Deputized," one of the Range Rider series. Horsemanship, some realistic two-listed hard fighting, and a story of complications built around the jealousy of a misguided husband are presented as the high-lights of the new western. In the "The Abyss," the twelfth episode of Ruth Roland's serial, "The Timber Queen," the heroine is faced with some new thrillers, including her imprisonment in a shack mounted on rollers which is sent sliding down the hillside towards the brink of a deep chasm while the hero, outside, resolutely tries to break his way into the moving prison and effect a rescue.

The Hal Roach comedy released on October 1st, presents Paul Parrott with Jobyna Ralston in a comic reel of pageantry entitled, "Face the Camera." In the Aesop's Film Fable, "The Big Flood," it literally "rains cats and dogs." It is an animated cartoon with Farmer Al Falfa and the whole Paul Terry menagerie doing and suffering an ark-full.

"Pay Your Dues" is the Harold Lloyd re-issue in this schedule. The comedian is inveigled into a secret society which employs imitation horrors wonderfully ingenious and abundant. "Snub" Pollard has his full share in these proceedings. But Bebe Daniels springs a few horrors of her own in time to save the victim's life and sanity, and he is able to turn the tables neatly on his tormentors.

Pathe Review No. 175 presents in its series of photographic views a charming "silhouette of Nature"; a bit of life in the Congo country, Africa; an object lesson in the visible effect upon individuals in a life crisis; a dog's own story of his best friend; and a beautiful Pathecolor example showing the olive harvest in Tunisia.

Noah Never Had an Ark It Was a Pyramid

O. C. Getsinger, archeological student, is in town with the first two of a series of animated diagrams dealing with the original sources of historical and Biblical facts and fancies.

The first of these takes up the origin and meaning of the signs of the Zodiac and the second deals with the making of the Pyramids of Egypt, one of which it seems, according to Mr. Getsinger, was built by Noah, as a refuge from the flood, instead of the wooden ship described in the Bible.

Mr. Getsinger's subjects are not without interest, but seem better suited to the class-room than the motion picture theatre.

Geo. H. Wiley, Incorporated, is handling the film. It was made under the personal direction of Mr. Getsinger, with the assistance of William Hopkins, artist and James T. Giboney, cameraman.

Cast Is Announced for New Leah Baird Feature

The fourth Leah Baird attraction for Associated Exhibitors is well under way. It is being directed by Wallace Worsley. Dorian Neve wrote the story, which at present bears the title, "All Mine." Prominent in the cast are Richard Tucker, Walter McGrail and Tom Santsehi.

The above scenes in the Pathe serial, starring Charles Hutchinson, a George B. Seitz production, indicate why "Speed" is so named.

Two Lichtman Subjects to Be Released Shortly

October 15 is the release date set for "Shadows," the second release of the Al Lichtman Corporation. Incidentally it is the second picture to be made for Lichtman by B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc.

The production is practically completed and reaches that stage almost simultaneously with "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" which Louis J. Gasnier is directing. The production title for "Shadows" was "Ching, Ching, China man," the story of which was written by Wilbur Daniel Steele. The other picture is based on the novel by Bertha M. Clay and will be released about six weeks after "Shadows."

Two More Best-Sellers Are Acquired by William Fox

WILLIAM FOX continues his ambitious shopping tour among the high-class contributions to popular fiction. His latest acquisitions in the field of the best-sellers are Booth Tarkington's "Gentle Julia" and E. M. Hull's "The Shadow of the East," a sequel to Mr. Hull's now famous "The Sheik."

"Gentle Julia" is typically American in atmosphere and deals with a young woman in a fair-sized city, who is pursued by numerous swains. Each of these ardently presses his suit but in the end loses out. The book is to be made into a big Fox production. "The Shadow of the East" is the story of a young Englishman and his numerous affairs of the heart. The locales shift from Japan to England, thence to Africa and finally back to England again.

Ince Announces Titles of Three Productions

PERMANENT titles of three of his eight forthcoming productions to be distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has been announced by Thomas H. Ince.

The picture which has been in production under the title "Jim," with Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers and Milton Sills, from Bradley King's original story has been titled "What a Wife Learned," as a result of a contest conducted among exhibitors and motion picture editors, which was won by Harry W. Wilbur, owner of the Rialto Theatre, Fullerton, Calif.

The picture, which has been produced under the working title, "Some One to Love," and in which Madge Bellamy and Cullen Landis have the principal parts, has been titled "Ten Ton Love." The story is a tense human interest drama built around the affection of a circus elephant for an abused child of the circus.

"The Brotherhood of Hate," which was the working title of a drama in which Frank Keenan, Marguerite de la Motte and Lloyd Hughes have chief roles, has been finally titled "Scars of Jealousy." This was produced from a story by Anthony E. Rudd, under the direction of Lambert Hillyer.

French Performers Signed for Century Comedies

Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corporation, has cabled his home office from Europe that he has signed up the Renault brothers, a celebrated pair of French clowns. The Renault brothers will leave for this country shortly and will go straight through to Hollywood to begin their contract at the Century studios.

Associated Exhibitors' October List

Martin Johnson Adventure Film, Kohn-Cabanne Picture and MacManus Feature

A NNOUNCEMENT is made by Associated Exhibitors of the three productions scheduled for release during the month of October. They are Martin Johnson's "The Head Hunters of the South Seas," set for October 1st; the Dependable Pictures attraction, "Till We Meet Again," produced by William Christy Cabanne and scheduled for October 15th; and the Edward MacManus production, "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," to be released October 29th.

In its statement describing the new Martin Johnson film, Associated Exhibitors writes as follows: "It includes scenes from the actual, every day life of the savage head hunters; a weird and frenzied tribal dance; some remarkable shark pictures, a strange tribe of pygmies who live in trees and climb about with the dexterity of monkeys, and, for perhaps the first time, a real earthquake recorded on film."

On September 15th Associated will present Morris Kohn's Dependable Pictures attraction "Till We Meet Again." This is a William Christy Cabanne production. The cast is headed by Mae Marsh, and includes Norman Kerry, Martha Mansfield, J. Barney Sherry, Julia Swayne Gordon, Cyril Chadwick, Walter Miller, Dick Lee, Tammany Young, Danny Hays and Fred Kalgren. It was adapted by Edmund Goulding from the story by William Christy Cabanne. It is said to contain a wide variety of scenes and large and costly sets as well as a gripping plot.

October 29th is the date set for the release of Edward A. MacManus' six-reel production, "The Woman Who Fooled Herself." From an original story by Charles A. Logue, this attraction offers as the featured players, May Allison and Robert Ellis. It was co-directed by Mr. Logue and Mr. Ellis. Others in the cast include Robert Schabel, Louis Dean, Frank Currier, Raphael Arcos and Bessie Wharton. The story deals with a beautiful Broadway favorite who is made the tool of American capitalists in their efforts to secure certain rich interests in South America. The production was made in Porto Rico.

Sales Representatives for Associated Appointed

Additional sales representatives for Associated Exhibitors were appointed last week. Harry Sigmond, well-known in the film circles of the Northwest, goes to the Seattle office. D. R. Davis, who has been associated with Pathe's St. Louis and Chicago offices, has been placed in charge of the St. Louis branch for Associated.

Walter F. Haynor, formerly Goldwyn manager at Washington, D. C., has been appointed an Associated Exhibitors representative in the Philadelphia territory.

Paul DeOnto, well known throughout the Middle West has been named an Associated salesman under Bert Mandelson at Kansas City.

Shapiro Made Manager of Boston Office

William D. Shapiro has resigned as Home Office Representative of the Fox Film Corporation to take charge of the Franklin Film Company in Boston. Shapiro is well known in the industry as he has been connected with it in various capacities for many years.

He started with the Fox Company in Boston seven years ago and after a year was made assistant manager in Boston. Shortly after he was promoted to foreign manager at the home office, where he remained about a year. From there he took charge of the Fox Cleveland office for two years.

Goodman Production Booked to Play Cameo

"What's Wrong with the Women?" a Daniel Carson Goodman production being distributed on the state right market by Equity Pictures, opened at the Cameo theatre, New York, on Sunday, Sept. 17. The picture was booked at the Moss house by Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Film, the company distributing the feature in the New York territory.

"What's Wrong with the Women?" has also been booked over the entire U. B. O. circuit in New York. These are the first reports of big bookings on the picture received at the Equity office, although it is understood that negotiations are now under way in other territories where the picture has been sold which will assure it a representative first run in every key city.

Mr. Goodman's production will follow Marion Davies in "The Young Diana" at the Cameo. This new B. S. Moss theatre, while it is one of the smallest of the Broadway picture houses, is nevertheless looked upon as one of the most important houses in New York.

"What's Wrong with the Women?" is enacted by a cast including Montagu Love, Barbara Castleton, Rod La Rocque, Huntley Gordon, Julia Swayne Gordon, Wilton Lackaye and Constance Bennett.

Wm. Fox Revising Jane and Katherine Lee Comedies

Jane and Katherine Lee have been brought back to the screen by Fox Film Corporation in re-edited versions of some of their former successes. The pictures have been edited by Ralph Spence and cut down in two reels. The first of the series of the comedies is called "A Pair of Aces" and is made up of the funniest situations and bits of business culled from several of the original eight reels.

"Notoriety" Will Have Special Showing

L. LAWRENCE WEBER and Bobby North are preparing plans for a special presentation on "Notoriety," the seven-reel feature recently completed by Will Nigh. The picture is now being cut under Nigh's supervision, after which unique art titles by one of the foremost artists of the day will be inserted. The presentation will celebrate the union of L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North and Will Nigh, the director. "Notoriety" is Nigh's first picture for that distributing firm.

In the past, every one of Nigh's productions were deemed big enough to warrant a special showing. "Why Girls Leave Home," "School Days" and "Your Best Friend," each were individually staged for private screening at the Astor Ballroom.

The cast of "Notoriety" includes Maurine Powers, Mary Alden, Rod La-Roque, Geo. Hackathorne, Richard Travers, J. Barney Sherry, Mona Lisa, Wm. H. Tooker, Anders Randolph and Ida Waterman.

New Universal Manager in New Zealand Chosen

Appointment of Clifford F. Eskell, well known motion picture man in Australasia, as general manager for Universal's New Zealand exchanges is announced by J. V. Bryson, Universal's export manager. Mr. Eskell's headquarters will be in Wellington.

The new Universal manager has been with the Universal for two years most of the time as manager of the New South Wales branch of the Universal exchange system in the Antipodes. Before joining Universal he was identified with distribution of motion pictures in Australia for about eight years.

Goldwyn Announces Changes at Branch Offices

SEVERAL changes at the branch exchanges of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation were announced this week, effective at once.

Nat Barach, for several years in charge of the Pittsburgh office, has been transferred to the Cleveland exchange, succeeding W. J. Kimes, resigned.

Lester Sturm has been appointed manager of the Pittsburgh office, replacing Mr. Barach.

Thomas W. Brady has been appointed in charge of the Buffalo branch office, releasing George A. Hickey, who will be assigned to more important work.

J. H. Hill, who has been assistant manager in the Kansas City exchange, has been promoted to be the manager of that branch office.

Goldwyn recently announced the opening of two new exchanges—in Milwaukee and in Indianapolis. No managers for these exchanges have been announced yet.

A. A. Schayer, formerly assistant manager at Denver, has been made manager of the Goldwyn exchange in that city.

Strong Supporting Cast for Dustin Farnum

An excellent supporting cast has been chosen for Dustin Farnum's next vehicle, "While Justice Waits," according to announcement from the Fox West Coast Studios.

Irene Rich, who played the wife in "A Fool There Was," the Fox special for the current season, has been chosen by Director Bernard J. Durning for the feminine lead. Her work was the subject of much praise by many of the New York critics. Durning has to his credit the direction of "The Fast Mail," another current Fox special.

Earl Metcalf, well known character actor, will play the role of George Perkins; Junior Delameter will play Hunt, Jr.; Frank Lee will be Jos; Hector Sarno, a man; Peaches Jackson, the man's daughter; and Grethen Hartman will essay the character of Mollie Adams.

Don Short, who will photograph the picture and who has been a cameraman for many Fox stars in recent screen plays, is one of the co-authors of the story, which offers many unusual situations and promises the elusive "something new" so eagerly sought by picture exhibitors and fans. The other co-author is Charles A. Short, while the story was adapted for the silver sheet by Jack Strumwasser.

Cosmopolitan Players Sail to Europe

Cosmopolitan Productions sent a specially selected company to Europe Saturday on the President Harding, to film Blasco Ibanez's story, "The Enemies of Women," amidst the scenes where the author located his latest, and as many consider his greatest romance.

The members of the cast who sailed are Lionel Barrymore, Alma Rubens, Gareth Hughes, W. H. Thompson, William Collier, Jr., and Gladys Hulette. Alan Crosland, who will direct the picture, also sailed and the party in addition, includes Daniel Carson Goodman as company manager; Lynn Shores, assistant director; Ira H. Morgan, cameraman, and Harry Wild, assistant cameraman.

Goldwyn Appoints District Supervisors

SEVEN district supervisors, to oversee distribution, have been appointed by Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, in addition to its twenty-four branch managers.

The country has been divided into seven districts and each supervisor will have several exchanges in his territory. The supervisors were formerly managers of Goldwyn's branch exchanges. Their names and the cities where they will make their headquarters follow:

S. Eckman, Jr., New York; Ben Fish, Denver; J. A. Koerpel, Cleveland; H. Leonhardt, Los Angeles; Arthur Lucas, Atlanta; C. E. Maberry, Chicago; W. E. Truog, Kansas City.

Thomas Dixon Enters Field of Picture Production

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" and many other popular novels and plays, has begun producing for the screen the first of a series of photoplays based on his own stories. The new company is to be known as the Thomas Dixon Corporation, and has engaged space at the Tilford Studio, New York, where "The Beast," the initial subject of the group, is now being filmed.

Madelyn Clare and Robert Ellis have been cast in the leading roles. Helen Ware and Gustav Von Seyfertitz will also appear in important parts. It is announced that Mr. Dixon has arranged for a stage production of "The Beast" to follow its screen presentation.

William A. White, Arthur S. Bandler and Oscar F. Grab are said to be identified financially with the new producing company.

Export and Import Acquires Latest Negri Film

"Sappho," the latest Pola Negri film to be brought into this country, has been acquired by the Export & Import Film company. It is a modern, five part version of the world famous story.

Miss Negri's visit to America will have especial significance in the distribution plans now being arranged for this feature. At the offices of Export & Import no information was given out as to whether the film would be placed on the independent market or distributed through some national organization.

It was stated that three national distributors were negotiating for the American rights to "Sappho." Release was to be definitely decided upon this week.

Myron Selznick in East to Complete Picture

Myron Selznick, president of Selznick Pictures Corporation, arrived in New York City from Los Angeles Monday, September 18. He was accompanied to New York by Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore, both stars in Selznick pictures.

His principal mission in New York at this time is to put the finishing touches on "One Week of Love," which was made on the coast and is being cut and titled for release soon after the middle of next month. Mr. Selznick brought the working print of the picture with him from Los Angeles. Miss Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are co-starred.

Scenes from "The Veiled Woman," a Hodkinson fall release, produced by Renco Film and featuring Marguerite Snow and J. Landers Stevens.

Lichtman Forms Southern Exchange Makes Agreement with E. V. Richards for Distribution of Preferred Pictures

E. V. RICHARDS, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Co. of New Orleans, and Al Lichtman have entered upon an agreement covering the distribution of Preferred Pictures through the Al Lichtman Corporation in the eleven Southern States. Under the terms of the deal the Al Lichtman Southern Exchanges will come into existence.

The arrangement further provides for the formation of three subsidiary companies to operate under the direct supervision of Richards who makes his headquarters in New Orleans. The key points will be Dallas, Atlanta and New Orleans. One subsidiary unit will be known as the Al Lichtman Exchange of Dallas, and will handle sales in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. The second will be known as the Al Lichtman Exchange of Atlanta, and will cover North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida and Alabama. The third will be called the Al Lichtman Exchange of New Orleans, and will handle distribution in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Messrs. Richards and Lichtman are joint partners in the transaction. The deal swings behind the Lichtman company the full power and prestige of the Saenger circuit of theatres, one of the most powerful in the country, in view of the fact that Richards is vice-president and general manager of the Saenger Amusement Co.

Final arrangements and details were made by Richards personally in New York. E. C. Leeves, former district sales manager for Associated Producers in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, was also here earlier in the week preparatory to starting for Dallas, where he will assume the general managership of the Dallas territory. He is now en route to start operations in that block of territory.

At a later date an office will be opened in Oklahoma City.

Henry Ginsberg, sales manager of the Al Lichtman Corporation, left for Atlanta Tuesday evening to arrange for the opening of an exchange there. From Atlanta he will go to New Orleans for a conference with Mr. Richards.

The New Orleans office will open for business next Monday morning. The others will start work as soon as possible. The tie-up is considered important in view of the support sure to be given the Preferred Pictures by the Saenger circuit, in its particular territory.

"Ching, Ching, Chinaman" Is Changed to "Shadows"

"Shadows" will be the definite title of the second release of Preferred Pictures through the Al Lichtman Corporation. The working title was "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," but it is believed that the new name will be a closer approach to the real character of the story, than the author's title. Wilbur Daniel Steele wrote the story, which is based on life in a New England fishing village. Lon Chaney as Yen Sin carries the principal role.

Well-Known Fun Writers Added to Sennett Staff

Word has been received from the First National home office to the effect that Mack Sennett's scenario department have been registering unusual activity in anticipation of the 1922-1923 Sennett producing campaign which is now opening. Three authors recently added to the staff are John Grey, Mell Brown, and Rex Taylor. This trio of writers have gained considerable attention for their ability to originate funny situations.

"Slim Shoulders"

A panorama of the Southern playground of the rich, a dash at a string sport through tortuous Florida waterways at the wheel of a powerful motorboat; a dancing interlude of rare charm and grace; a mysterious midnight adventure in male dragons, a profusion of beautiful gowns, and, above all, a genuinity and absorbingly interesting story of love and intrigue in the innermost circles of the "goss"—such is Irene Castle at her best in her newest motion picture triumph.

Fashion Promenade

HERE is the latest presentation of the smartest styles in Costuric silk that Paris has produced, personally selected for the discriminating women of America by the most discerned woman in the world! A kaleidoscopic review of the latest fashions and wraps the master designers of Paris have created, shown on living models, and accompanied by interpretative ballet specially arranged for the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade by Mr. S. L. Rothafel.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Blood and Sand—

Two solid weeks of capacity business. Wonderful picture. Valentino draws large houses. Splendid newspaper notices helped fill the theatre. (Middle West.)

Played to packed houses the second week. Fine picture for Valentino. (Middle West.)

Good business second week and held on for third week. (Middle West.)

Went splendidly on second week run. (East.)

Opened to capacity business which sloped off a bit the last half of week. Turned away for four days. (East.)

Business rushing at times with some lockouts, but it wasn't as big as expected. Reason not known. No records broken. Being held over for second week's business. Some dissatisfaction was expressed at an unhappy ending. (Middle West.)

Valentino's greatest picture. Drew capacity houses throughout the week at 40c top. Held for second week. (Middle West.)

A great drawing card. A capacity business the first week. (Middle West.)

Business much improved with this one. (West.)

The Ordeal—

Business satisfactory. Picture did not seem to meet with entire satisfaction, however. Miss Ayres is not strong enough to carry through in picture of this type. (Middle West.)

The Siren Call—

The Good Provider—

Good heart interest in this picture. Went over big at this house. (Middle West.)

North of the Rio Grande—

Bebe Daniels' popularity helped pull them in on this one. Box office receipts very satisfactory. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Eternal Flame—

As fine a picture as "Smilin' Through" and did enormous business the first week. (Middle West.)

Fairly good picture and fair business. (West.)

Business very good; splendid picture. (West.)

Very fine comment by patrons. Good business. (Middle West.)

Business good and maintained a good average for entire week. Picture seemed to give general and enthusiastic satisfaction. (Middle West.)

Red Hot Romance—

Poor picture and business very much off. (East.)

Kindred of the Dust—

Not much of a picture. Fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Many people thought this was the best of all recent pictures. Good business. (Middle West.)

The Crossroads of New York—

An average attendance turned out for this one. (Middle West.)

Good entertainment. Excellent patronage. (Middle West.)

Alias Julius Caesar—

Plenty of action and humor. A typical Ray hit. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

The Song of Life—

An average picture. Other attractions proving drawing power for week. (Middle West.)

Fool's First—

Had a very big week. Picture was put over with an elaborate style show with living mannequins, a runway and special attractions. (Middle West.)

FOX

Monte Cristo—

Business in second week justified another seven additional days. Capacity limitation of business at advanced prices. (Middle West.)

Three consecutive weeks of excellent business, in a house out of the beaten path. Unusually large matinees. (Middle West.)

Fine picture which drew the crowds. Held for second week. (Middle West.)

Did good business. Was first picture to be reviewed by local board of endorsement appointed by federation of women's clubs and was well recommended. It was thought that it might be held over until another week, but business did not warrant this. Was run in competition with two big features. (Middle West.)

Oathbound—

Picture and business both fair. (East.)

Business not so good. Competed with three big features. Otherwise picture pretty fair. (Middle West.)

A Fool There Was—

Good picture and fine business. (West.)

Not so good — business fair. (West.)

The Fighting Streak—

The picture played to a good week's attendance. (Middle West.)

Footfalls—

A long drawn out feature. Business fair. Patrons not enthusiastic over it. (East.)

Trooper O'Neil—

Just another Northwest Mounted story. It attracted average business. (East.)

For Big Stakes—

Ordinary for Mix; good action picture and played to fair houses. (Middle West.)

Just Tony—

Fair picture and business fair. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Storm—

Fine picture and business excellent. (East.)

Splendid picture. Tremendous outdoor scenes that pleased. Business better than it has been. (Middle West.)

Striking ad copy for "The Storm," as used by the Colorado theatre, Denver

Did a flop. Not properly exploited. Held second week. (East.)

Top O' the Morning—

Bright, interesting and entertaining. Business better than average. (Middle West.)

Confidence—

A good drawing card. Good attendance for the week. (Middle West.)

Human Hearts—

Fair picture and fair business. (West.)

Good picture; business fine. (West.)

F. B. O.

Son of the Wolf—

Enough red-blooded action in this one to satisfy any audience. Above average. Nice business. (Middle West.)

In the Name of the Law—

This one played to good crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS
Grandma's Boy—

Knocked 'em dead first week. Played to big houses. Lloyd's best. (Middle West.)

Third week — business good. (West.)

Packed them out onto the sidewalk and hailed by patrons and newspaper critics as the best comedy in years. Held over for another week. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Three Must-Get-Theres—

Good picture but would have done better if run as a shorter feature. (East.)

HODKINSON

No Trespassing—

Fairly good feature and business. (West.)

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

The New Linden, located on Belmont Avenue, has reopened after being thoroughly redecorated and improvements made in equipment and furnishings.

L. M. Rubens, who has been confined to the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, for some weeks, has undergone a third minor operation and now is reported as definitely on the highway to recovery. His many friends were glad to learn that no further operations will be necessary, and that the popular president of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners will be able to be out again within two or three weeks at the outside.

Joe Friedman, of Celebrated, is enthusiastic over Al Lichtman's first release, "Rich Men's Wives," and declares it the fastest booking picture that Celebrated has ever handled. Edward Grossman, Mr. Lichtman's representative in the territory, has just returned from a trip to Indianapolis and other Indiana key centers, and reports the picture has been booked into all of them, and in Chicago it has been booked into The Chicago Theatre, Woodlawn, Stratford, the entire Lubliner & Trinz circuit, including the Senate and Pantheon, as well as many other houses. The compelling heart interest of this fine picture has been particularly commented on by exhibitors, who declare it will be one of the greatest box office attractions for women ever screened, and that it brings tears to the eyes of "hard boiled" theatre men, which is a real proof of a picture's power.

Louis Bloom, former owner of the Crystal Theatre, 63rd and Ashland Avenue, has purchased the Lawndale, on Grand Avenue, from Tony Arado.

President Kempner, of Kempson Pictures, was in Chicago this week, conferring with General Manager Bush. Mr. Kempner expects to leave for New York the latter part of the week, visiting several exchanges en route, and Mr. Bush also is scheduled to make a swing around the circuit, visiting Kempson exchanges in the west.

Goldwyn Pictures took possession of their new Milwaukee office in the Toy Building this week, and this new exchange will be in operation within a few days, with Manager Joe Hickey in charge. Goldwyn will maintain a force of inspectors and others necessary for the physical distribution of films, as well as a sales force at the Milwaukee exchange, and expects to be able to greatly improve its service to Wisconsin exhibitors.

Clay Roberts, recently connected with the First National exchange at Salt Lake City, has become a member of Manager Steinson's staff of salesmen, and will cover central Illinois for Vitagraph.

Joe Koppel has been appointed manager of the Astor, the handsome three hundred seat loop theatre which opened a few weeks ago.

Harry Grampp has purchased the Lincoln Square Theatre, at Decatur, where he also operates the Avon Theatre, and will make his headquarters in that city. The Lincoln Square is a fifteen hundred seat house, according to Bob Lucas, who looks after the interests of the Grampp Circuit in Chicago.

H. H. Hurn, formerly branch sales manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation at Cincinnati, has been appointed central division sales manager and will make his headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Hurn is widely and favorably known throughout the central west as a film executive, and will be a welcome addition to Chicago's film row. W. F. Seymour, formerly central division sales manager, has been transferred to the post of eastern division sales manager.

The Orpheum, at Bay City, Michigan, is now being managed by Charles Menzing, who is well known in Chicago film circles as manager of Windy City houses. The Orpheum, which is a Butterfield house, will be remodeled to include a mezzanine floor, a rest room for women, play room for children, and a smoking parlor for men. It will also be enlarged so that its capacity will be eighteen hundred seats.

Maude George, who has just completed a tour of twenty-eight cities, where she made personal appearances in connection with the showing of "Foolish Wives," passed through Chicago last week, en route to Los Angeles, where she is to start work in a new Von Stroheim directed picture.

Frank Thielan, of the Thielan Circuit, which operates motion picture houses in Galesburg, Bloomington, Ottawa, Elgin, and Aurora, is at St. Joseph's Hospital, Joliet, suffering from the effects of a severe injury, which he received last week. Mr. Thielan was walking along the street in Joliet when a heavy stone fell from a building in the course of construction, and struck him on the head, fracturing his skull. Fears were expressed that the injury might prove fatal, but physicians now state that he may pull through and be himself again. Fifteen pieces of bone were removed from his head during an operation following the accident and pressure on his brain relieved.

G. A. Durlan has been appointed manager of Famous Players-Lasky's Milwaukee exchange, taking the position made vacant by the resignation of A. E. Bernstein.

Hobart Henley, one of the directors actively engaged in production work for Universal, passed through Chicago, en route from the Pacific Coast to New York, last week. Mr. Henley states that this Fall points to one of the busiest seasons of the industry. After a two weeks' stay in New York he will return for further work at Universal City.

Ben Garretson, known to film row as an energetic and able publicist, is about to move to Joliet, where he plans to open an up-to-date dance hall about October 15th.

Lester Sturn, having become associated with Goldwyn's Pittsburgh exchange, Tom Norman will cover the Milwaukee territory for Fox.

Sales Manager Larson, of Russell's Productions, is in the east, where he has sold the state rights for several territories for some of his company's latest productions. W. D. Russell made a flying trip to Cleveland this week. Both Mr. Russell and Mr. Larson expressed themselves as encouraged over the outlook for state right business this Fall and Winter. They believe that good independent pictures will find a ready market.

District Manager Herbert Given, of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has completed plans for the opening of a branch at Peoria on October 5th, with Milton Hirsh, who has been connected with the Milwaukee branch, in charge. This is in line with the Famous Players' policy of building up the sales force in this state and facilitating the shipment of film to down state cities. The same policy is being carried forward in other states and in both Pennsylvania and South Dakota new exchanges have been opened, which, with the addition of the Peoria branch, brings the total number of thirty-four.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer are planning to open their new McVicker's early in October, as, notwithstanding the remarkable speed made in building this house, it is impossible to get certain details finished to give premier performance on September 18th, as originally planned. The production department for the new house has been established in a suite of offices on the seventh floor of the Masonic Temple, and each day Aaron Jones presides over a conference at which S. Barrett McCormick submits ideas for presentations, H. Leopold Spitalny, musical director, outlines musical accompaniments, and Zimmerer paints artistic and colorful settings. It is said the plans for the first two months' campaign at the new McVicker's are now practically completed.

J. J. Collins, who recently sold his Apollo Theatre at Ottawa, Illinois, and purchased the Marquette of La Salle, Illinois, which he renamed the Peck, was, with his wife, a guest of the Universal exchange at Chicago last week. Mr. Collins is making plans for the Peck, which will assure the town of La Salle of first class motion picture presentations.

Short Subject Sales Manager Aschtrachan, of Universal, is showing a lot of speed these days and is proud of the contracts being brought in by his salesmen. The Orpheum and Ascher's Palace at Peoria have both signed up for International News, day and date, seven days a week. The Majestic Theatre at Chicago is also playing the International News, and other Orpheum houses in the territory are signing up. Another important short subject contract was that made with Ascher Brothers, who will play the Century Comedies every week in their entire Chicago circuit of sixteen theatres.

The National Screen Service has opened Chicago offices at 732 S. Wabash Avenue. H. C. Young, who has been connected with the company for several years, is in charge. The National Screen Service already is making announcement trailers for more than forty theatres in Chicago, which it has been serving from its New York office, and in order to facilitate service in the central west, has established this branch in Chicago.

Frank Young, formerly connected with Goldwyn, is now selling Universal product in Chicago and suburbs.

Harry Weiss, who is now occupying the manager's chair at the First National Exchange in St. Louis, has forsaken the old fishing hole in Logansport, Indiana, and now can be found on Sundays at Spanish Lake, Missouri. Harry sends word that the only difference between catching fish in Indiana and Missouri is that in the latter state the fish look up to the slogan of "show me."

A. "Milo" De Haven, well known theatre manager, whose presentations, atmospheric prologues, etc., have made him a well known figure in the industry from coast to coast, is vacationing at his cottage at Benton Harbor, Michigan. Mr. De Haven, it is understood, has offers from several large theatres to become managing director, but will not announce his future plans for a few days, as he desires to have an opportunity to rest up before resuming his business activities.

Illustrating decorations on marquee of the Park theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, during the run of "Monte Cristo"

Week of Advance Publicity Devoted to "I Am the Law"

Corsicana, Texas.—One week in advance of play date of "I Am the Law," slides were run on the screen of the Palace theatre, announcing the coming of the picture.

For several days in advance a local grocery company loaned the theatre space on the sides of all its trucks to carry one-sheets about the picture. The town was billed heavily with regular accessories.

In the lobby Manager W. W. Grist erected in one side a large cabin which carried a sign over the entrance, "R. N. W. M. P." painted in the rustic style. Also, in the lobby stood a star some six feet tall which acted more as a six-sheet frame than anything else. The title of the picture was painted on this star in such a way that it balanced perfectly. In the center of the star attractive still photographs were mounted, giving to the star another duty—that of a still photograph frame.

In front of the theatre was painted on the street two large white lines designating the non-parking space. This space was further designated by two posts, both carrying a large star, the title of the picture painted thereon. A local drug store co-operated with Mr. Grist by allowing him to paint signs on the soda fountain mirrors, telling the public about the picture at the Palace theatre.

In the newspapers there appeared, one week in advance, a series of teaser ads.

Chicago Theatre Arranged Tie-Up and Proved It Can Be Done

CHICAGO, Ill.—Both in the scope of circulation and the intensity of interest the tie-up arranged by the Chicago Theatre with the Chicago Daily News on "The Masquerader," stands prominently among big exploitation events. It marked the first time in recent memory that a paper of such huge circulation gave such an unstinted tie-up, and among the few times that a big city paper has gone in for motion picture exploitation wholeheartedly.

The story was run in serial form by the News, which advertised it from all its delivery trucks and created its own slogan for the story. It sold the serialization to its subscribers as "A Drama of Tangled Lives."

Adds Scenario to Stunt on "Crossroads of New York"

Tulsa, Okla.—Home made movies with local comedians have been all the rage since "The Crossroads of Louisville" started the idea of exploiting "The Crossroads of New York" with a local take off. It remained for the Rialto theatre, Tulsa, Okla., to broaden the scope of public interest by having the fans take part in the scenario writing as well.

Manager W. M. Smith offered a prize for the best scenario for a short comedy to be enacted by a local cast. It wasn't that he didn't have the men who could write one themselves but he thought that this angle of enlisting public interest was worth the money.

Some 25 scenarios were turned in and, in conjunction with the Tulsa Tribune the stunt was worked to a successful conclusion eclipsing the exploitation possibilities on the attraction that were initially visualized by George Sine of Louisville.

Ballyhoo which was used in exploiting "Fools First," at the Ada Meade theatre, Lexington, Ky.

Co-operation of Newspaper Assists in Coogan Resemblance Stunt

Montgomery, Ala.—Manager H. C. Farley, of the Empire theatre, secured the cooperation of the Montgomery Journal in putting on a Coogan resemblance contest and parade for "My Boy."

On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday before the picture opened on Thursday the Journal carried illustrated stories on the front page inviting all the boys—and girls, too—in Montgomery to get in on the fun.

The first prize was $10.00, the second prize $5.00 and all who entered the contest were given free admission to see the picture. The entrants, numbering over 100, collected at the Journal office at 3:00 p. m. on opening day. Mr. Farley furnished appropriate banners and they staged a parade from there to the theatre. A girl won first prize and a boy second. Sex of contestants was not specified, it only being required that they look like Jackie Coogan.

Mr. Farley also tied up with the Boys' Department of a local store by which he got a window and mention in the store's ads in return for 100 passes. The theatre distributed the passes to their customers, not more than one to each customer, as long as they lasted.

The above illustrates exploitation ideas executed by George Rea, manager of the Forum theatre, Hillsboro, Ohio, when playing "Pay Day," "The Sawmill" and "The World's Champion"

Exploitation array used by the Quality theatre, Independence, Kansas, on "The Silent Call"

Lobby Display for "I Am the Law" Results in Drawing Crowds

Ft. Smith, Ark.—The lobby of the Palace theatre, under the management of J. B. Robinson, took on the atmosphere of ice and snow for the play date of "I Am the Law," when the lobby was cloaked in white cloth, representing snow, and electric light bulbs were frozen in cakes of ice.

Directly in the center of the lobby was a miniature display showing trees, hillsides and everything as if covered in a mantle of snow, but the most effective feature of the display was the frozen lake made from a block of ice, on the inside of which were electric light bulbs which were seen to burn. Mr. Robinson arranged with the ice company to freeze an electric light bulb along with still photographs from the picture, in a huge block of ice. When placed in the lobby in connection with the display, with the bulb connected to the electric circuit so that it burned, it developed an altogether different effect from anything seen before in Ft. Smith, and attracted sufficient attention that receipts proved the investment worth the time and expense involved.

Window display which was secured by a tie-up with a furniture dealer in Allentown, Pa., on "While Satan Sleeps," which was the attraction at the Strand theatre a half block away from the store

Colorful Decorations Used when Presenting "Fascination"

DENISON, Texas. Novel electric arrangement proved a business stimulator for Manager E. E. Collins, of the Rialto, when he exploited "Fascination."

The entire front of the theatre was boxed in with beaver board. This beaver board was painted a "fiery" red with small ornaments and Spanish designs painted in yellow. There were eight openings besides the entrance and exits to the theatre in this beaver board display. Behind these openings hung electric lights, each a different color with the entire group connected to the electrical theatre sign. As the sign flashed on and off, so did these lights, and the fact that they were concealed by colored tissue paper attract considerable attention from the outside.

Directly in the center of the lobby stood a cut-out of Mae Murray taken from the six sheet. This cut-out was dressed up in silks and satins according to the Spanish days. Behind the cut-out and acting as a background was a circular desk covered with red stain. This same display was used in Dallas at the Palace Theatre some weeks before the run in Denison.

Best Smiles for Six Days Boost "Smilin' Through"

Janesville, Wis.—The manager of the Apollo theatre, Janesville, Wis., had the city smiling for six days steadily as part of his tie-up on "Smilin' Through" with the Janesville Daily Gazette.

The paper had a cameraman out in an automobile snapping smiling citizens in its search for the best smile each day. Prominent personalities figured in the daily news stories run in connection with the feature and it was one of the best attractions for the paper that had ever been run. It helped work up "optimism" business for the picture and created a better spirit throughout the business section with its message to go "Smilin' Through."

Exhibitors Judge Best Make-up Imitating Star of "Trouble"

Madison, Wis.—Two hundred children under twelve years of age, all dressed in cast-off clothes, "daddy's old breeches" and a cap with the bill to one side, loose sweater and safety-pinned suspenders, imitating Jackie Coogan, describes the method used by Manager A. P. Desormeaux when "Trouble" was the attraction at the Strand. The "exploiters" all saw the show free. Two of them, four and twelve, respectively, were awarded prizes for being the most effective imitators of the young star. A department store furnished a dress for the little girl who won, and a men's furnishing store donated a "Jackie Coogan" suit for the four-year-old boy.

Motion pictures were made of the contestants and the judges, who were managers of the five theatres here, which were run the first three days of the week following the showing of "Trouble." This brought crowds of relatives and friends of the contestants, and both local daily newspapers found room for many human interest stories of the contest.

Copped Diogenes' Stunt But Went Him One Better for "Trouble"

LA CROSSE, Wis.—Manager William Friese copped Diogenes' stunt but he went the old Greek one better in putting over "Trouble," at the Rivoli Theatre. The exhibitor sent out a man with a lantern on the streets and the sign "I see TROUBLE coming." So far that stuck to the lines of classic history; but Manager Friese also gave his ballyhoo artist a magnifying glass, so that he could see trouble long before it saw him.

And when he saw "Trouble" coming he ran to meet it and a large percentage of La Crosse's population did likewise.

The Jackie Coogan impersonation contest is old but it still works wonders. They used it as part of the campaign on "Trouble." By actual count 175 youngsters thought it worth while to get out the old overalls and doll up like Jackie Coogan for the sake of getting in free to see the picture. Some of the contest Jackies were girls; but little questions like braids and skirts didn't bother them when it came to seeing "Trouble" for nothing.

Florida Exhibitor on Job Puts Over Timely Exploitation

Lakeland, Fla.—To Manager B. B. Garner, of the Casino theatre, goes credit for a campaign on "Our Leading Citizen." In addition to a newspaper contest and a lobby display, both executed in the most approved fashion, he put over a novelty co-operative page consisting of a tie-up, made with the Lakeland Telegram, by which the paper got right behind a contest to determine Lakeland's leading citizen. Twenty dollars in prizes was offered for the best letters nominating the leading citizen of Lakeland and stating reasons for the choice. Representatives of the various civic organizations formed the committee of judges.

This contest went over so big that it became the town topic for days. The rival paper took it up and wrote a long editorial on the qualifications for a "Leading Citizen." And the editor ended up by saying, "Anyway, we are going to see the picture at the Casino that has caused all this speculation."

The only expense of this contest was $20.00 for prizes. It gave front page publicity for over a week in one paper and the editorial in the other.

For the novelty co-operative page Mr. Garner lined up fourteen merchants. Each carried a partly obliterated photograph of some prominent citizen of Lakeland. And each merchant offered a prize for identification of the photograph in his ad and the best letter setting forth the qualifications for the leading citizen of Lakeland. Mr. Garner took a space on the page and offered as his prize $2.00 worth of tickets to the Casino. This was the only expense to him.

The lobby display was a "campaign headquarters" with desks, chairs, banners, campaign slogans, ballot boxes, etc.

Poster Developed Into Lobby Display

EL PASO, Tex.—A lobby display for "Across the Continent," Manager J. M. Edgar of the Palace, used a cut-out from the six-sheet poster showing Wallace Reid speeding across the continent with an audience of men and boys laughing at the car he drives.

Above this display was a sphere, representing the world, around which was built a race track on which Reid and his Dent speeded. The flash told the passer-by the idea that the Palace was a cool, snappy place full of excitement and fun.

The local Ford agency came in for a co-operative newspaper ad, the first the border city has ever seen.

Improved Lighthouse Attracts Spot Shows on "Reported Missing"

EL PASO, Texas.—In the lobby of the Palace Theatre, during the run of "Reported Missing" stood a lighthouse, made from Upson board, and so painted that it resembled stone. This tower was the full height of the lobby and in its top was placed a search-light that is spot, which revolved and by use of mirrors a continual stream of light played on the street directly in front of the theatre. Where the light hit the pavement was painted the title of the picture.

Around the base of this lighthouse Hart had placed large rocks, which fitted in unusually well with the painted scenery in the background. Then a small boat, with sails all set was rigged up in the water around these rocks so that it appeared shipwrecked.

High above these displays hung an aeroplane, which was connected to a motor and ran or flew all the day.

Decorations for "Her Gilded Cage," used by manager J. T. Clancy, of the Capitol theatre, Hartford, Conn., included the erection of this huge gilded enclosure, which was set in the center of the main lobby

This attractive bower, representing a scene in "Nice People," was arranged by J. T. Clancy, manager of the Capitol theatre, Hartford, Conn.

Effective Tie-Up with Shoe Store for "The Woman Who Walked Alone"

Little Rock, Ark.—Manager George Waters, of the Capitol theatre, secured an appropriate tie-up when exploiting "The Woman Who Walked Alone," by enlisting a local shoe store's cooperation. The advertising of the attraction was combined with that of the Kempner shoe store, attaching the name of "The Dorothy Dalton Model for Ladies" to their footwear, having secured an alleged wire of endorsement from the star, which was duplicated and placed in all windows carrying the Kempner slipper, combined with photographs of Miss Dalton in attractive frames. It was also announced through the newspapers and on advance slides that during the run of "The Woman Who Walked Alone" special matinees would be given for the ladies, and that each lady attending would receive an autographed "Fanphoto" of the star. Neat cut-outs of the star and display mats in the lobby furnished an atmosphere altogether in harmony with the general scheme of exploitation.

"Request Week" Acclaimed As Exploitation Stunt

SAN DIEGO, Cal. As a mid-summer stunt the management of the Superba theatre put on a week of "request" features, making a daily change. While of necessity the repertoire included some of the popular films which had already had a showing in San Diego, many people were attracted by the presentation of such a variety of the prominent pictures which have been released in the past few months. Manager W. E. Jones added some special musical numbers to the daily programs. The pictures shown included "The Mollycoddle," "The Idol Dancer," "The Kid," and other popular returns. Short comedy reels were given in connection with the features.

Silent Cowboy for Lobby in Advance of "Sky High"

SOUTH PITTSBURG, Tenn. Manager Ogg of the Imperial Theatre secured a model which he dressed in cowboy costume and placed in his lobby four days ahead of showing "Sky High."

"Two for One" Stunt Wins Popularity in Ohio

M T. VERNON, Ohio.—H. V. Smoots, manager of the Vine Theatre, one of the Harris and Smoot houses, reports that for the past two months the use of a coupon, printed in their newspaper advertising, offering two seats for the price of one to the attraction playing on a certain date, stirred up sufficient interest to warrant continuing the use of same. The ads are "keyed," so that the management is able to gauge what paper earns the most returns. The coupon reads: "The Vine"—then in large type—"2 for 1," under which the date coupons may be used is given.

Lobby Display Played Part in Exploiting Meighan Feature

Abilene, Texas.—The lobby of the Queen theatre was the big factor in getting people in to see "If You Believe It, It's So," according to Manager Hugo Plath who, acting upon the suggestion sent out by the exploitation department, got busy with his keyhole saw and sandpaper and made cut-out letters to go across the front of the lobby.

These were hung on wires in such a way that to anyone passing they seemed to be hanging in the air. The letters were painted in the most brilliant colors and spelled out the title and the star in the picture.

Then under the letters stood a large cut-out of Thos. Meighan in a pose as if making an address. Often the accessory paper lends itself to attractive cut-outs and serve just as well as an art display that would amount up into figures that would be prohibitive. This manager has always been very conservative, yet the displays in front of his theatre have always been attractive and in keeping with the high standard set by the pictures shown.

Rex Theatre Features a Floral Lobby

SPARTANSBURG, S. C. Manager A. C. Cowles, Rex Theatre, arranged with a local florist for a display in his lobby in connection with "The Wonderful Thing." And flowers, both cut and potted plants, were banked around a large cut-out from the twenty-four sheets in the center of the lobby.

On the last night of the showing all cut flowers were given away to the lady patrons of the theatre, one flower to each lady.

This display was secured at the cost of running a slide for the florist during the two days' run of the picture.

Decorations and Streamers Combined Dress Lobby of Palace

Dallas, Texas.—An advance campaign on "The Man From Home" was begun by the Palace theatre several days prior to the showing by placing insert cards in prominent locations around the city.

The lobby front was made by a local Art Department and consisted of a beaver board arch, representing the covering of an Italian villa. By means of scenic drops, a background was furnished on which was painted a view of the Mediterranean Sea, with Mt. Vesuvius in the distance.

Purple paper streamers floated in the breeze in front of the theatre, which were kept blowing by the use of fans pulling the air out from the theatre.

A prologue entitled, "The Venetian Night," consisted of a scene in Venice at night, with the moon rising. A Venetian boatman was seen standing in the distance, who rendered appropriate vocal selections.

Discussion on Marriage and Men Used to Exploit "The Storm"

SEATTLE, Wash. — Twenty-four prizes for the best answers to the question "Should a Girl Choose a City Man or an Outdoors Man," were awarded a few weeks ago by the Seattle Star, an evening daily, cooperating with the Columbia Theatre in putting over advance exploitation on "The Storm."

Manager R. W. Crane believed that the problem of Manette, in the photoplay, was a theme worthy of public discussion, and therefore made arrangements with the newspaper to carry on the contest for several weeks before the engagement of "Th Storm" began.

For many days the contest editor of the Star was deluged with letters upon the subject.

Exploiting Local Personages Wins Publicity and Favor

BUFFALO, N. Y.—"Who's Who in Buffalo," is the new local film stunt being put over by Al Beckerich, manager of the Loew State. Prominent business men are "shot" and back and side views are shown on the screen. Patrons who guess the names of the list shown are given money prizes. The next week the front views of the men are shown and the winners of the past week announced. The same stunt is being used Niagara Falls by Herman Lorence of the Bellevue.

Exploitation for "Molly-O" Serves Also to Clean up Town

Electra Fla.—Old tin cans were legal tender at the Liberty theatre, and they came at a rate that was surprising.

It was a part of the plan of Manager H. D. Morgan of the Liberty to aid Mayor William Calvert. A receptacle was made of twelve-inch boards about ten feet long, and placed just in front of the curbing at the Liberty. There was a big placard bearing the sign. "Boys—Bring twenty cans and get a free ticket to "Molly-O."

The cans started coming in early, and they continued all day long. It seemed surprising that so many old cans could be found in one community. At any rate, it is reasonably sure there is a considerable depletion of cans in back yards and alleys.

New Englanders Mystified by Visit of "Antinea"

BOSTON, Mass. An exploitation stunt which aroused the interest and curiosity in New England was recently devised in connection with the showing of "Missing Husbands."

It consisted in a visit to that city of "Antinea," a mysterious young woman, who claimed that her body contained the spirit of the ancient "Antinea, Queen of the Egyptians," whose fascination is revealed in "Missing Husbands." She carried with her a message of freedom for her sex, and gave newspaper interviewers a lively story of her opinions on the modern woman.

The leading dailies played up prominently the arrival of the mysterious and beautiful young woman, and most of them published her photograph. Her secretary was kept continually busy arranging appointments with the press representatives clamoring for interviews with Antinea, at her luxurious suite at the fashionable Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston. Her intended talk to Boston women on historic Boston Common aroused great interest.

"Man glories in his sex triumphs," voiced the mysterious beauty. "Women should glory in hers and not struggle to disguise her exultation as she does."

"Antinea's" contention that she was the reincarnation of the ancient Egyptian queen aroused as much curiosity as her rather liberally-inclined views on the future of her sex.

Miniature Church Forms Lobby Display for "Little Minister"

CHICKASHA, Okla. A reproduction of an Episcopal Church composed the lobby display in the Rialto Theatre when "The Little Minister" was presented. A cut-out of Betty Compson and John Hackathorne stood directly in front of the entrance to the church. At night the display was so arranged that lights seemed to shine through the transparent windows. In the background was seen a trellis.

The sign across the front of the lobby announced the standing of the contestants in a movie contest being held.

Natives Who Passed Crossroad See Themselves on Screen

ATLANTA, Ga. Manager Willard C. Patterson of the Metropolitan Theatre, employed a method of exploiting "The Crossroads of New York" by having a motion picture taken of several "crossroads" in Atlanta, and calling it "The Crossroads of Atlanta" and then in his advertising, invited Atlanta's populace to come and see themselves in pictures. The picture was made by a local scenic house, and consisted of showing several of the busiest sections of Atlanta's downtown section and close-ups of several social and civic leaders.

It was very easy to get the impression from the advertising that a photographer had secretly caught a close-up of each Atlantan, and, of course, this had the desired effect upon business.

Contest Brings Publicity for "Our Leading Citizen"

Jacksonville, Fla.—Manager Guy Kinimer of the Arcade theatre succeeded in getting considerable publicity for "Our Leading Citizen" by convincing the editor and editorial writer of the Journal of the contest possibilities in the title.

The paper ran a six inch two-column announcement on the front page of the afternoon edition reading in part as follows:

"Our leading citizen—who is he? Is he the man who merely boasts that he has amassed the most money? Is he the man who wields political influence but only for his private gain? Is the mayor our leading citizen? Is the president of our chamber of commerce the real leader of the community?"

The Journal offered $5 for the best letter submitted, not to exceed 200 words, and twenty pairs of tickets to the Arcade for best of the others.

"The Siren Call"

(Paramount—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

YOU won't find anything new in plot or characterization in this picture. It takes Dorothy Dalton back to the day when she made a regular appearance as a dance hall girl. Inasmuch as no actress ever equaled her vital and vivid portrayal, let it be said that the star makes the offering a crisp melodrama through her spirited acting. The plot is very familiar. All the old-time ingredients are in their accustomed places. There is the dance hall and there is the girl and the motley throng includes a gambler husband, a vicious trapper and the usual derelicts of the frozen North.

The trapper finds a baby whose parents perished. He gives it to the girl for adoption, and straightway her redemption is in sight. The thrills creep in here and enliven the picture through its conclusion. The reformers are also in the plot. And they burn the dance hall (a picturesque episode). We must discover the gambler and his wife presiding over a store which the husband eventually sells to the trapper. The physical action continues for the villain is killed by the heroine. The hero, a young prospector pursues the faithless husband and the subsequent shot reveals an exciting touch as they fight on a raft in mid-stream. Naturally the youth triumphs and happiness is complete when the gambler eventually loses his life.

Some may call the picture commonplace. But the star and a good supporting cast make its moments interesting for those who love melodrama in the raw. You will probably recognize every scene as having been "shot" before. What of it? The primitive touch will always be found in the frozen spaces. And a picture of the North should live up to it. It seems good to see the star in the type of role which established her popularity. As long as she can play the primitive woman better than anyone else—let her sponsors place her in the character occasionally. At least she will do her part, even though the story is old stuff. David Powell, Mitchell Lewis and Edward J. Brady give convincing performances.

The Cast

Charlotte Woods, a dancer.....Dorothy Dalton
Ralph Stevens, a prospector.....David Powell
Beaugard, a trapper.....Mitchell Lewis
Edward Brent, a gambler.....Edward J. Brady
Gore.....Will Walling
Eleanor Du Bois.....Leigh Wyant
Irishman.....Lucien Littlefield
Judge Green.....George Williams

By J. E. Nash. Scenario by J. E. Nash and Philip Hurn. Directed by Irvin Willat. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Trapper finds a baby in the frozen north and takes it to dance hall girl as a bribe to win a kiss. The girl is the wife of a gambler, but she adopts the child and sells her kisses to provide a bank account for the infant. The reform element burn the saloon and the girl and her husband open a store. This is sold to the trapper. The girl kills him and the worthless husband is pursued by a young prospector. And the girl finds happiness with him after the death of her husband.

Classification—Melodrama of far north, typical of Dorothy Dalton's releases of two and three years ago.

Production Highlights—The atmosphere. The exteriors. The acting of the star. The burning of the dance hall. The fight on the raft.

Exploitation Angles—Get out your far north atmosphere, such as snow shoes, moccasins, etc., for a lobby display. Play it up as a typical Dalton attraction.

"The Orderly"

Pathe—5373 Feet

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

REMEMBER your attitude towards the first foreign-made picture you ever saw? Too overburdened with detail to be dramatically interesting, to be sure, but yet the European atmosphere commanded curiosity. That is just about the status of "The Orderly," a production which distinctly is French from beginning to end, opening with a suicide and closing with a murder—all over a woman, which is more conclusive proof that it is French.

Technically, there is nothing in the production unusual—just the simplest of simple plots, but exterior backgrounds, portraying beautiful French scenes, and some good photography in spots aid the picture to place among the "also rans" at least.

That a woman who had married a colonel as a result of mere appreciation of kindness, should later betray his trust in her when she finds the young handsome, "one and only," is nothing startling, while the eventual suicide of the wife and the murder of the "other man" conforms with the expected regularity of events about as consistently as the "nineteenth hole" after a hard match on the links. Paul Hubert displays unusual ability in assuming the role of the "other man," as far as looking and acting deceitful is concerned, but that just about lets the entire cast out.

The Cast

Jeanne.....Mme. Nathalie
Col. de Limousin.....K. Colas
Phillip.....Paul Hubert

From the story by Guy de Maupassant.

The Story—A colonel's wife has committed suicide, the reason being unknown to him. Following the funeral he finds a letter from her, telling him how he had promised to care for her after her mother's death, how she later had married him, but that she did not really love him and had become infatuated with a young officer and, fearing the worst, had taken her own life. The colonel calls his orderly to him and asks the identity of the lover. The orderly hesitates and is shot by the colonel.

Classification—A love triangle containing less than the average amount of human interest.

Production Highlights—Picturesque scenes, showing Notre Dame and Eiffel Tower; the scene where orderly is called before colonel and killed.

Exploitation Angles—The unusual scenic value of the production and the fact that it is a foreign picture should attract interest if properly played up.

Drawing Power—A success in the big houses only. A poor bet with anything other than a highly cultured audience.

"The Price of Youth"

Arrow Film Corporation—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

HERE is a pretty little story of love and youth and villainy and heart throbs that will fit excellently into the average programme. Supervised by Ben Wilson "The Price of Youth" is one of the best pictures of its class turned out during the current season. It does not rank with the super-dramas of the larger producing units and probably never will be featured on Broadway but it has plenty of dramatic interest and makes pleasing entertainment.

Neva Gerber as Adela Monmouth is in a part well suited to her particular style of beauty. She handles the many trying situations that fall to her lot most charmingly. Jack Pratt as Spencer Traves also does an artistic job in portraying the polished villain that infests the big cities waiting to prey upon the pretty country girls that come in search of musical or artistic careers. Spottiswoode Aitken in the role of Gregory Monmouth gives a presentation that shows real ability.

The plot of "Price of Youth" has often appeared on the screen. It is the old story of a country gentleman whose wife had deserted him for a musician. Then daughter shows the maternal fondness for music which forces father to tell his story for the first time but without revealing the name of the villain. Father dies of shock when the brother is killed and daughter does not learn the man in her mother's case.

Although it rarely happens in real life it always seems necessary in pictures to have the very same villain seek to befriend the daughter so that he can force himself on her. And the hero never fails to return from Canada or somewhere else at the proper time. He would probably do so even today when the shopmen have the railway schedules shot to pieces. At any rate he does so in "The Price of Youth."

The Cast

Adela Monmouth.....Neva Gerber
Gregory Monmouth.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Owen Barwell.....Ashton Dearholt
Hugh Monmouth.....Charles King
Doctor Holt.....Joseph Girard
Spencer Traves.....Jack Pratt
Kerenski.....Pietro Sosso

Directed by Ben Wilson. Produced by Berwillia Film Corp. Distributed by Arrow.

The Story—When Adela Monmouth insists upon a music career, her father tells how his wife ran off with a musician. The son is killed, and the shock causes the father's death. Adela never learns the musician's name. In New York she meets reverses and is befriended by Spencer Traves, Wall street broker. He pretends to invest her small funds but she learns the truth when he makes violent love to her. When told that Traves is a sharper Adela agrees to help trap him. When Owen Barwell, her brother's chum, arrives at the lodge where she holds Traves prisoner and informs her that Traves was the man who stole her mother's love.

Classification—Pretty little love drama. Not too heavy.

Production Highlights—When Monmouth tells the children of his wife's desertion. Traves' attempt to force his love on Adela, revealing the source of her income. Barwell's arrival at the lodge and unmasking Traves as the man who stole love of Adela's mother.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the title and Miss Gerber. She is sufficiently popular to attract many patrons. Can work tie-up with music stores on theme and with druggists, modistes, clothing dealers, etc., on title.

"Skin Deep"

First National—6500 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS is a picture with punch plus. It's different. It grips. It reminds us that we have, at least most of us, forgotten a great duty—to help the disabled former service man back on his way "up." While it is entertaining us, it is making us think.

We see a "ten-minute egg" from the underworld going through the fire of hell in the front line trenches, where he displays superhuman bravery. He of the hardboiled qualities comes home. The cops still hound him. Finally he's railroaded to jail. He makes a sensational escape, but is seriously injured in a fall from an airplane. Taken to a disabled soldier's hospital, he is brought back to health and with the aid of plastic surgery, his crime smeared visage is changed to more respectable proportions. He is treated so kindly by everyone that he becomes a new man. He goes back unrecognized to his underworld lair and aids the district attorney to "clean up."

In the viewing of this colorful tale, we are carried through a series of thrilling scenes which comes to a climax when Milton Sills as Bud Doyle, leaps over the prison wall to the roof of a moving train and thence up a rope ladder to an airplane. Talk about punch! It's only one of the stirring moments. There's a host of other scenes equally exciting.

The Cast

Bud Doyle.....Milton Sills
Ethel Carter.....Florence Vidor
Sadie Doyle.....Marcia Nanon
James Carlson.....Charles Clary
Dr. Langdon.....Winter Hall
Joe Culver.....Joe Singleton
McQuarg.....Frank Campeau
Mrs. Carlson.....Gertrude Astor
Baby Carlson.....Muriel Dana
The Aviator.....B. H. deLay

By Marc Edmund Jones. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Scenario by LeRoy Stone. Photographed by Charles Stumar. Personal supervision Thomas H. Ince.

The Story—Deals with the complete change in identity of the ringleader of a gang of crooks. The transformation is effected by plastic surgery following the injury of the crook in an airplane accident while he is trying to escape from jail. His wife and another crook had "railroaded" him into prison. The man returns to his old haunts. He learns how his wife and her friends are planning to double-cross him and also of a plot to steal a disabled soldier fund. He aids the district attorney in cleaning up the political crooks and weds the daughter of the doctor who "brought him back."

Classification—Something new in high class melodrama, replete with thrills, subtle characterization and exciting incident.

Production Highlights—The work of Milton Sills in the role of Bud Doyle. The uniformly excellent supporting cast. The opening scenes in the trenches. The escape from jail by jumping from the walls to a swiftly moving train and thence to the rope ladder of an airplane. The changing of Bud's face. The raid on the political crooks. The holdup and robbery of the doctor in his home and the theft of the soldier fund. The fine moral of the story.

Exploitation Angles—This is one of the finest pictures ever produced which gives exhibitors opportunity to tie up with American Legion posts. Dress the ushers in uniform. Dress your lobby with war and crook articles combined. If there is a flying field in your city, arrange with the aviator to drop heralds from the sky. Play up the fine cast, the thrills, the big train-airplane escape. This picture will stand up under the biggest campaign you ever put on.

Drawing Power—Suitable for high class theatres everywhere. Should be a clean-up if properly exploited.

Scene from "Lorna Doone," screen version of the famous classic produced under the direction of Maurice Tourneur.

"The Yosemite Trail"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

DUSTIN FARNUM is deserving of better things than this old school melodrama which takes him and the spectators back to the early days of the nickelodeon. In the first place it carries a hero who is actually a coward at heart and he eventually loses all sympathy for his strange conduct in performing the self-sacrifice to the limit.

In the first place he calmly steps aside when his cousin double-crosses him in drawing for the privilege of the first proposal. This makes the character heroic—a pose which never leaves him. The self-sacrificing young man goes away, but returns after a year to find his rival mistreating his wife. Her husband has become utterly worthless and to keep up his double-crossing tactics he contrives to make the hero suspected of being the robber of the stage coach. And with the law hard on his heels the righteous hero is ready to sacrifice his life for the girl.

The picture has some compensation in its backgrounds, the exteriors presenting many gorgeous shots. Also there are a few thrills if you haven't been surfeited with the eternal chase as it is found in westerns. But try as he might, Dustin Farnum cannot make this hero real. It is an unconvincing story—with an unconvincing characterization. The players must have appreciated its weakness for they don't act with any show of spirit. The titling is not up to present day standards.

In all, a picture which goes back many years, although the production is meritorious in itself. Such two capable players as W. J. Ferguson and Frank Campeau are lost completely here—their talents never having a chance for real expression. The star needs vital material. He will do his part when given the opportunity.

The Cast

Jim Thorpe.....Dustin Farnum
Eve Marsham.....Irene Rich
Ned Henderson.....Walter McGrail
Jerry Smallbones.....Frank Campeau
Peter Blunt.....W. J. Ferguson
Sheriff.....Charles French

By Ridgwell Cullum. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Directed by Bernard Durning. Photographed by Don Short. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Youth and his cousin both love the same girl. They draw for privilege of first proposal and the former wins. However, the cousin double-crosses him and wins the girl. The hero goes away, but returns a year later to discover that his rival is mistreating his lost sweetheart. The husband has become a bandit and after a time is eliminated, thus paving the way for the happiness of the other.

Classification—Melodrama on triangle theme.

Production Highlights—Fine backgrounds.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Dustin Farnum. He is your big bet here. Use stills of him and fill up your program with interesting short subjects.

Drawing Power—Will possibly draw in small houses.

"When Knighthood Was In Flower"

Cosmopolitan-Paramount—Twelve Reels

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

A WORTHY example of photoplay excellence is "When Knighthood Was in Flower," an achievement which marks an important milestone in motion picture annals. Teeming with reality, startling in historical atmosphere, custom and detail, it is a vivid, impressive and colossal spectacle, the acme of directorial perfection, the pinnacle of cinematographic accomplishment.

Undertaking to adapt Charles Major's famous novel, founded upon historical incident allied with the reign of King Henry VIII, was nothing short of a Herculean task at the outset. It stretched the imagination to visualize the possibility of reproducing the necessary background period and palatial requisites. Nevertheless, the efforts of all concerned have combined in delivering a motion picture accurately adherent to the thrilling tale of romance and adventure, overwhelming in suspense, an innovation that will win new followers of the screen and gratify the ambitions of the most altruistic patrons of the motion picture theatre.

The cast is composed of a number of genuine notables, each of whom deserve individual comment and personal praise, which only the lack of space prevents. In the role of Mary Tudor, Marion Davies is delightful. She is the madcap princess personified. Not in the history of her career has she ever delivered a performance to compare with her splendid work, having scored in a number of difficult scenes to a point commanding recognition. And it must be said that Lynn Harding as King Henry VIII, William Norris as the decrepit King Louis of France, and Forrest Stanley as Charles Brandon, the hero-knight, seem to have stepped from out the pages of the book, so life-like and precise are their characterizations.

The most lavish sets ever designed even by Joseph Urban lend valuable assistance in making this capital performance a marvel. Sponsored by Cosmopolitan Productions, Robert G. Vignola, his assistant Philip Carle and the working staff have brought a 1922 masterpiece to the screen.

"The King is dead." Long live "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

The Cast

Mary Tudor.....Marion Davies
Henry VIII.....Lynn Harding
Louis XII.....William Norris
Charles Brandon.....Forrest Stanley
Duke of Buckingham.....Pedro de Cordoba
Sir Edwin Caskoden.....Ernest Glendinning
Duke Francis.....William H. Powell
Cardinal Wolsey.....Arthur Forrest
Duc de Longueville.....Macy Harlam
Will Sommers.....Johnny Dooley
King's Tailor.....William Kent
Grammont.....Gustav von Seyffertitz
Sir Adam Judson.....Charles Gerrard
An Adventurer.....George Nash
Sir Henry Brandon.....Arthur Donaldson
Queen Catherine.....Theresa Maxwell Conover
A french Lady-in-Waiting.....Flora Finch
Lady Jane Bolingbroke.....Ruth Shepley

From a book by Charles Major. Scenario by Luther Reed. Directed by Robert G. Vignola, assisted by Phil Carle. Settings by Joseph Urban. Produced by Cosmopolitan Productions.

Classification—Spectacular, historical drama, with a background of pomp, ceremony, and accurate description of how women in the reign of King Henry VIII were at the mercy of his selfish lusts and ambitions.

Highlights—The scene showing Mary Tudor at the altar in prayer, when appealing to stay the execution of her lover. The elopement episode, when, following the death of King Louis, Charles Brandon seeks the welfare of the Princess, and they ride away in the most realistic storm ever staged on the screen. Mary's duel with the ruffian of the tavern. Mary's scene with the King when she begs for the life of Charles Brandon.

Exploitation Angles—Serves as an excellent tie-up with dealers in outfits for riders, dealers in furs, wearing apparel antiques, house-furnishings and book-stores.

Cecil De Mille-Paramount—Eight Reels
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

LOOKING aside for the moment from the spectacular side of this newest De Mille achievement—its reproduction of decadent Rome under the Caesars, its lavishness displayed in the cabaret sets, and the opulence suggestive of the manner in which the idle rich live—looking aside from all these typically De Mille effects, we must give him credit for building the most direct action which has graced the screen in many a day. It is direct story telling, think what you may of the theatrical character of the plot. It moves and by moving holds your attention through a chain of events dramatic, perhaps impossible, but which points a moral notwithstanding.

Alice Duer Miller's "Manslaughter" is a story of the craving for excitement among the young wasters of the present day. De Mille doesn't waste a scene nor a subtitle in emphasizing the fact that the dancers and drinkers must pay the pipers and bootleggers.

The pretty, wealthy and high strung disciple of speed and jazz has been arrested for stepping on the gas. She bribes the officer. And when he attempts to arrest her again—to give her back the bracelet, she swerves the car into a side road and he is catapulted through space when he is unable to make the turn on his motor-cycle. Here is the outstanding scene of the picture. A tremendous punch. She is indicted for manslaughter and the prosecutor sends her to jail for her own good. This breaks his moral fibre. He becomes a sodden drunkard. Yes, it is theatrical here, but there is no denying that it is completely absorbing. When the girl gains her freedom, her forgiveness—her regeneration comes as a redeeming spark to him. He rises from the depths and happiness is indicated for both. We won't argue about the theme whether it is logical or not. What we will say is that De Mille has accomplished something in direct story telling.

By Alice Duer Miller. Scenario by Jeanie MacPherson. Directed by Cecil B. DeMille. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Wealthy girl craving excitement is arrested for manslaughter and convicted of the crime. The district attorney, her fiancé, prosecutes the case to the limit—his object being to save the girl by sentencing her to prison. It breaks his heart to obey his duty. So he becomes a sodden drunkard. The girl serves her term and forgives him. And his redemption is assured. Happiness comes to both.

Classification—Indictment of the craving for excitement, told dramatically and to the point. Drama of serving duty rather than love.

Production Highlights—The direct story telling. The scene when policeman is killed. The Roman scenes. The lavish sets. The work of a large and competent cast.

Exploitation Angles—Use the names of author, scenario writer and director. Also the principal players. Play up as DeMille's best. Use the title and the theme for copy. Go to it. It is worth it.

Drawing Power—Good for every kind of house—the big ones, the little ones. Particularly a good attraction for the large cities.

Epco-State Rights—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a French picture telling a highly complicated story of crime and retribution with so much action crowded into its six reels that one becomes puzzled in following its hectic ramifications. There is evidence of bad editing because of the jumpy character of the plot. One scene the action is in Paris—to be immediately followed by an episode off the coast of Spain. And you have to use your 'think-tank' to guess at the identity of the characters. Particularly puzzling are the opening reels, when the figures are introduced haphazardly. After a time you catch the substance of the plot—which concerns an international crook and his wife, an adventuress attempting to steal and blackmail their way through the port cities of Europe.

The action is serial-like in its plotting and counterplotting, but the scheme of the story is the effort to pass the wife off as an heiress to a rich estate—the real heir having lost his life on a liner while the international crook, an American, uses a Parisian dummy figure for the missing man. This crook stops at nothing in his mad plotting. Murder, arson—all the crimes imaginable swoop forth from his master mind. There are some daring rescues and some thrills here and there. But the players act and act and act without any repression whatsoever. Moreover they are badly made up. The crook himself is the principal offender.

The story presents scenes which are duplicated, too. A ball room is used in Paris which bears a marked resemblance to the interiors of a London home. The lighting is poor—which indicates that the French are not so advanced in technical matters as producers on this side of the big pond. The main fault of the picture is its crowded action. Carefully edited—with much of this "over-shooting" eliminated, particularly the scene when the heroine is "gassed," the picture would carry a greater value.

The Cast

Ron Brandeau.....Lee Parry
Doris Vale
Strella Costo

Author and director unknown.

The Story—International crook and his wife play a game of intrigue—the scheme of which is to mulct wealthy men of their money. Blackmail and theft are their principal crime. Eventually they are caught.

Classification—Wild melodrama of theft and blackmail, arson and murder.

Production Highlights—Scene of rescue of heroine and child.

Exploitation Angles—Go carefully on this if you bill it. Simply play it up as a melodrama of action.

Drawing Power—Small neighborhood houses and second class downtown houses may like it.

"Missing Millions"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a clever crook story for you! Trust Jack Boyle, author of the "Boston Blackie" tales to know his underworld—trust him to keep his plots moving straightforward without losing momentum! So "Missing Millions" enters the category of better pictures. It is a Boston Blackie story, too, but the colorful crook has an accomplice here in Mary Dawson, played with a fine show of spirit and understanding by Alice Brady—the role being the best which she has had in years. And she makes the most of it.

The pattern of the picture has been used before. This is nothing against it, for in this day of keen competition it is difficult to strike anything original. If a producer can discover a note of novelty on an old theme—it is quite sufficient after all. And this is what "Missing Millions" discloses—a different treatment of the high-strung girl who plots to ruin her father's enemy.

The director has adroitly extracted sympathy for the two crooks by showing the Wall Street magnate promising to release the girl's father from prison in return for his stolen jewelry—and then allowing the victim to die. You are with them even though they stop at nothing to mete out vengeance. There is much gold bullion coming by ship. This will save the financial wizard from ruin. The crooks proceed to get busy on the steamer and manage to carry the gold away. There are some surprisingly good touches here—and the spectator is in for fifteen or twenty minutes of keen excitement.

There is no let-down in the action. It builds easily and surely and is compact all the way. The conclusion, however, seems rather mild in view of preceding incident. The heroine has a moment of conscience and returns the gold—her reason being that the innocent pursuer is suspected of the theft. There are no false heroics attempted here. The story is logically developed and every dramatic value is extracted by Joseph Henebery. David Powell makes a suave Boston Blackie—his personality being ideal for the type. The cast comprises such capable players as Frank Losee, William B. Mack and Riley Hatch.

The Cast

Mary Dawson.....Alice Brady
Boston Blackie.....David Powell
Jim Franklin.....Frank Losee
John Webb.....Riley Hatch
Handsome Harry Hawks.....John B. Cooke
Thomas Dawson.....William B. Mack
Daniel Regan.....George LeGuere
Mrs. Regan.....Alice May
Sir Arthur Cumberland.....Cooper Cliffe
Donald Gordon.....Sidney Deans
Claire Dupont.....Beverly Travers
Frank Garber.....Sidney Herbert

By Jack Boyle. Scenario by Albert Shelby LeVino. Directed by Joseph Henebery. Photographed by Gilbert Warrenton. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Girl plots with crook to seek revenge upon Wall Street operator for imprisoning her father. The magnate is deaf to their entreaties but promises to release him if they will return his stolen jewelry. He fails to keep his promise, and they bring him to a financial crash. Eventually the girl returns her theft.

Classification—Crook melodrama written around the Boston Blackie characterization. Filled with bright touches.

Production Highlights—Progressive action. The able work of Alice Brady, and the fine support contributed by David Powell, Frank Losee, Riley Hatch and William B. Mack. Scenes aboard the steamer. The suspense.

Exploitation Angles—Bill this as an exceptionally fascinating crook melodrama. Mention Jack Boyle. Your steady patrons are familiar with his stories. Play up the action and suspense. Feature the star and a cast which comprises several favorites.

Drawing Power—Good for all localities and any type of house.

"A Woman's Woman"

Albion Productions, Inc.—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

HERE we have Mary Alden paralleling, if not eclipsing her work in "The Old Nest." We predict for this production much favorable comment and real success at the box office. It is a picture of the "home" type which will appeal to all classes of theatregoers. It reflects life as it really is in countless homes in this country. Folks like to have their faults and follies shown them on the screen. When they see "A Woman's Woman," a lot of them are going to do some very deep thinking.

In the interpretation of the role of Densie Plummer, wife and mother who sacrifices everything to her family except her own ideals and thoughts, Miss Alden adds another laurel to her histrionic crown. It's a character of wonderful heart appeal. It is vibrant with reality. Densie lives. She is a screen replica of thousands of other "unpaid domestic drudges" who are continually being forced into the background of our social fabric. American womanhood will thank Miss Alden for throwing this bombshell on the shadow stage. It will blast many into a realization of their own personal deceit and selfishness.

The picture is a directorial triumph for Charles Giblyn. He has brought forth a number of tense moments, one being when the mother overhears her daughter accuse the father of going around with another woman and the mother's realization that the crisis has arrived in her life. Another is the scene between the father and "the woman," where confessing his financial ruin, the latter turns him out. Still another is that in which the brother seeks out the man who ruined his sister and is shot dead during a combat with the man. Then we come to the scenes showing Densie's personal triumph in Washington and finally the high light of her career, the making over of her home, the death of her son being the magnet that draws the wayward back to the fold. It's all very fine and all America will want to see it. The rest of the cast does well.

The Cast

Densie Plummer.....Mary Alden
Harriett Plummer.....Louise Lee
Sally Plummer.....Dorothy Mackaill
John Plummer.....Holmes E. Herbert
Kenneth.....Albert Hackett
Dean Ladbury.....Rod La Rocque
Sam Hippler.....Horace James
Iris Starr.....Cleo Madison
Rex Humberstone.....Donald Hall
Senator James Gleason.....J. Barney Sherry

By Mrs. Nalbro Bartley. Directed by Charles Giblyn. Scenario by Raymond Schrock. Photographed by Jacques Bizeul. Distributed by Allied Producers and Distributors corporation through United Artists' exchanges.

The Story—Shunted to one side by every member of her family, except her son, Densie Plummer decides her family does not need her and sets out to develop her own personality. She succeeds, becoming a national figure. But, in the meantime, her family, without her guidance, disintegrates. Her son's death brings her to the conviction that the trouble with her own people is that they lack a home. She gives up her career and again becomes the home-maker.

Classification—A delightfully told story of home, abounding in heart interest.

Production Highlights—The work of Miss Alden in the role of Densie Plummer. The all-star cast. Charles Giblyn's direction. The fine moral of the story. The artistic interiors and exteriors.

Exploitation Angles—Tell the world that this is Mary Alden in another "Old Nest" triumph. Play up the names in the big cast. Tie up with the women's clubs in your town. Give a private screening for them—they'll give the picture a lot of mouth-to-mouth advertising. This one will stand up under the most extensive exploitation campaign.

Drawing Power—Just the type of picture everyone likes. Therefore it can be shown with success anywhere.

"The Snitching Hour"

Clark Cornelius—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS comedy gives a neat little slap at prohibition. Even the strongest disciple of Volstead will have to admit after seeing it that liquor serves its purpose especially if an inebriate can walk around in a bland manner and stumble upon a pair of crooks at work. The piece takes you right into the cellar and introduces you to Arthur Housman, who has gained some publicity as a gifted interpreter of the rum hound. The star has played some bits for other producers—his portrayals of late centering upon the gentleman jag. He doesn't overdo it. And if there is a role which can be overplayed it is the stage or screen drunk. Housman knows when to use repression. And if he can't make his feet behave, at least he is not indulging in grotesque acrobatics, eye-rolling and arm-waving and other antics of the exaggerated drunk.

The comedy doesn't really amount to anything. It serves its little hour, although compressed into three reels it would carry a greater momentum and consequently more high jinks. Doubtless it will appeal more to the boys around the clubs and fire houses than it will to their wives and sisters. But it is so innocent in its design that a worthy churchgoer cannot take exception to its plot and characters.

A rajah owns a valuable ruby, which is sought by an adventuress. His daughter is giving a house party and her BOY FRIEND comes much overpowered by hooch. He wanders aimlessly about and is so careless with his feet that he spoils the pretty plans of the crooks and discovers the ruby himself. He really extracts sympathy and admiration—because his manner is so apologetic—or polite. There is subtle comedy throughout the piece and it will be appreciated by those who see it. In the supporting company are Nita Naldi, who is playing the adventuress in several pictures, and Gladys Leslie.

The Cast

Bunny.....Arthur Housman
Lois Dickerson.....Gladys Leslie
Mr. Dickerson.....Frank Currier
The "Countess".....Nita Naldi
Larry.....George Lessgy

Story and Scenario by Lewis Allen Browne.
Directed by Alan Crosland.

The Story—Treats of a Rajah's ruby which is hidden in a marked bottle in his wine cellar. He is susceptible to the wiles of an adventuress, posing as a countess. Her object is to secure the jewel. At the house party, the daughter's suitor is intoxicated, and due to his condition he blunders about, spoiling the plans of the crooks, and discovers the ruby.

Classification—Romantic comedy with a touch of melodrama.

Production Highlights—The good comedy portrayal by Arthur Housman as an inebriate. The pleasing story, light but amusing in a quiet way.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Housman as a new type of comedian. Get out some snappy copy about hooch, bootleggers, etc. Use a teaser campaign as the best angle for exploitation. If you have played "Blood and Sand" use Nita Naldi's name. Folks will recognize her as the adventuress of the Valentino picture.

Drawing Power—Good for neighborhood houses and small downtown theatres.

"Confidence"

Universal—4787 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE author of this story has been reading "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," for his characterization is nearly identical. But in order to get away from the original he has burlesqued the plot—or perhaps it was the director who supplied the slapstick. There is much rural comedy of the Sennett brand—a trick Ford being used for a taxicab—a Ford, "by heck," which does away with traffic cops because the "stop" and "go" signals are attached to the car and manipulated by the driver. The sheriff belongs to the Keystone family and others who are representative of the "hick" comedy include the sheriff, the fat boy, the fat girl, the "constables," and some typical native sons and daughters—one of them being the wealthy skintint who is determined that the village will continue its humdrum existence.

Herbert Rawlinson plays a traveling salesman, sent to get the account of the village Croesus, and the entire plot revolves around an exchange of bags. The hero drops his valise in the aisle of the pullman and the villain to escape the law, picks it up and exchanges his own—there being a cool million tucked away inside. Then it's a chase upon the part of the crook to get his bag again. The hero is fired but opens his bag and discovers himself rich. So surrounded by the officers he takes it to the bank for safe keeping.

Here is where the Wallingford touch is introduced. A silk-hatted confidence man, cut according to the Chester pattern, schemes with the erstwhile salesman to put the town over. They will promote some frenzied finance—boost the town and invite factories to come there and operate. So the gullible villagers dig down in their pockets and give freely. One cannot take the picture seriously, because the director is emphasizing the hick comedy and burlesque. A slight romance intrudes occasionally, giving Harriet Hammond, from the Sennett lots, a chance to appear in smart frocks rather than a bathing suit. The picture ends with the pursuit of the financiers by the sheriff in the trick Ford—and some trick camerawork is employed here, registering the speed of the cars. The hero returns and plays square. And the real crook confesses. There are some bright moments. But you'll have to accept it as burlesque because of the rural hokum.

The Cast

Bob Mortimer.....Herbert Rawlinson
Miriam Wiggins.....Harriet Hammond
Professor Lang.....Lincoln Plumer
Homer Waldron.....William A. Carroll
Josiah Wiggins.....Otto Hoffman
Ephraim Bates.....William Robert Daly
Elmer Tuttle.....Hallam Cooley
Henry Tuttle.....John Stepping
J. D. Sprowl.....Melbourne McDowell
Henry Taylor.....Gerald Pring
Bige Miller.....Robert Milasch
Mrs. Waldron.....Margaret Campbell
Constable Kittering.....Sam Allen

By Bernard Hyman. Scenario by Raymond L. Schrock. Directed by Harry A. Pollard. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Traveling salesman has confidence in himself and wins the friendship of the villagers. He is fired but is astonished upon opening his bag to find himself immensely rich. So, taking a real confidence man into his confidence, he puts over several projects to build up the town. It turns out that the money belongs to a real crook and the hero is in the good graces of the town after being held under suspicion by the sheriff.

Classification—Comedy balanced with theme of frenzied finance, showing considerable rural hokum.

Production Highlights—The rural comedy, some tricks used being entirely novel.

Exploitation Angles—This is a rural comedy-drama and play it up with a snappy teaser campaign. You can use a good line of argument around the title for teasers, etc.

Drawing Power—Good for small town houses, and small neighborhood houses.

"The Hardest Way"

Joan Film Sales—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

FANNY WARD is an object lesson for our feminine populace. She proves that it is possible to appear attractive and youthful looking no matter what one's age may be. And Fannie is much over sweet sixteen. Fannie is the one excuse for this production which is decidedly too long for the plot material. Miss Ward has a large following in this country, being remembered for some very creditable work several years ago. This picture was made in France and we are given some attractive views of Paris boulevards and gardens.

Miss Ward has a role calling for much emotional display. In fact there's too much of it. There's no comedy relief whatever and one becomes impatient with the effort to drag the action out to its unwarranted length. The foiling of her father's attempt to murder the man to whom he owes a large sum with the result that she brings suspicion upon herself when caught in the room by the latter starts the trouble. Her father then takes his own life and exacts a promise from the daughter that she never divulge the true facts. The terrible time she has in trying to carry out this promise and keep her own name pure forms the backbone of the story.

The production suffers in comparison with our American product. The direction is mediocre and the photography and lighting below par. One gets tired of reading the overabundance of subtitles. Miss Ward wears some attractive gowns in the picture. There are some views of Chateau-Thierry—but they are of the graves.

The cast is made up of foreign players. M. Signoret as Jules Surret is the only convincing member of the personnel. The feature would be decidedly improved if edited down a few reels.

The Cast

Jack Baldwin.....	Rex McDougal
Ellen Olcott.....	Fannie Ward
Jules Surret.....	M. Signoret
Paul Renard.....	M. Regnard
Richard Olcott.....	Howard Stanton
Mme. Renee.....	Ruth Kellogg Waite
The Captain.....	Wilfred Glenn
The Doctor.....	Sudworth Fraser

Adapted from story by Henry Kistemaekers.

The Story—Ellen Olcott's father is ruined through his passion for card playing. He loses to Surret, his friend, while taking the latter on board ship to London. He gives Surret a worthless check. Attempting to get it back, he goes to Surret's cabin, armed. His daughter stops him from carrying out the murder and returns to the cabin to get the gun which has fallen on the floor. Surret discovers her and finding the pistol believes she tried to murder him. The father commits suicide. He tells the daughter not to reveal the truth. Her efforts to carry out this promise despite the threat of Surret to inform her fiancé of her unworthiness take up the rest of the action.

Classification—A heavy society drama produced on foreign soil with a French cast.

Production Highlights—The star. Her gowns. The Parisian backgrounds. The discovery of the girl in Surret's room after she has saved him from being murdered by her father. Injury of Surret. His overhearing of the girl read the letter in which her dead father commanded her not to reveal the true facts surrounding the attempt on Surret's life.

Exploitation Angles—Your one best bet on this one is Fannie Ward.

Drawing Power—Might go over where you change them every day.

"Honor First"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

THIS is a mixture of old ones. In the first place, the war is its foundation, its underlying theme, and the opening scenes are in the trenches. There will be, of course, a backswing of the pendulum from the reaction against war stories and pictures; but that time has not come yet, and the feeling of revulsion against dramas of the war, on the part of audiences fed up on war—itsself the greatest drama of the age—is hard to overcome, no matter how good the subject matter may be. And the subject matter in "Honor First" is not startling either in its newness or its presentation.

Its motifs of brotherly sacrifice, of mistaken identity, of Parisian Apache plots, of a deep-dyed scheme to palm off an unsuspecting young woman as the long-lost daughter of a wealthy Duke—all were fine old ideas in their day. Each served a useful purpose in many a picture. Surely it would seem that now they might be allowed to rest.

In regard to the acting, "Honor First" is much better. John Gilbert, as the scoundrelly Lieutenant Du Bois and also his admirable brother Jacques undertakes a dual role with a large degree of success. Renee Adore makes a charming damsel in distress, and Shannon Day is satisfying as the deux ex machina through whom all is made to end with that degree of happiness demanded by motion picture-goers. But try hard though they do, it is impossible for them to lift this production far from the dead level of mediocrity.

The Cast

Lieut. Honore Du Bois {	John Gilbert
Jacques Du Bois {
Moire.....	Renee Adore
Piquette.....	Shannon Day
Moire's father.....	Hardee Kirkland
Tricot.....	Wilson Hummel

Direction, scenario, photography, etc., uncredited.

The Story—Jacques Du Bois finds his brother Honore a craven coward, takes his place on the field of battle and wins honor and glory. Recovering from wounds, Jacques finds himself a famous hero with a wife not his own. The situation grows desperate when she shows her love for him. Honore, in seclusion, is enraged by the turn events take, has his brother thrown in the river and resumes his old place in life, though unconvincingly to his wife. Jacques is rescued and turns up to expose the deception and foil a money-making fraud by Honore. A second attempt to kill him results in the stabbing of Honore by mistake.

Classification—Drama of the great war, sacrifice and duty.

Production Highlights—The battle scenes. The love scenes between Moire and Jacques. The fight with the Apaches. Scenes in the underworld cafe.

Exploitation Angles—The star capably portrays a dual role, and the leading lady is lovely and well-known. But don't dwell on the picture.

Drawing Power—Might go in some neighborhood houses.

"Diamond Carlisle"

Clark-Cornelius—Five Reels

(Reviewed by D. I. Gest)

"DIAMOND CARLISLE," a story of the Northwest and the mounted police should please audiences that delight in much shooting, scrapping and the accompanying love for the girl that reforms the bandit man.

The picture starts out with plenty of action, ushering in the "hero" escaping from the sheriff and his posse. And right about that time one of several impossible situations are interjected into the picture. "Diamond Carlisle" is surrounded by the sheriff's men, yet is able to tie a bundle of bullets into a hemp rope so that they will pop off at regular intervals when he sets fire to the rope, and makes his getaway.

Situation Number Two that proves a puzzler for students of psychology and things of that sort is why a bold bad bandit boy and a slicker with the paste boards when he hits a lumber camp should suddenly decide to play straight. Of course love is a wonderful thing but there are certain kinks in the human make-up that even Dan Cupid couldn't iron out that quickly. At any rate we don't raise that sort of bandits in the big towns. The last puzzler is why the famed Northwestern Mounted Police should be so easily tricked by merely switching clothes with a dead man.

But those are mere details. "Diamond Carlisle" on the whole is a good picture of its kind. George Cheseboro as the hero gives a fine portrayal of his character. Alfred Hewston as "Lopez" makes a very good villain of the type that is too frequently seen on the screen, and Iva Brown handles the part of Mae Boyd excellently. It is about time we quit having Mexican villains. How can we ever hope to live on good terms with our Southern neighbors.

The Cast

"Diamond" Carlisle.....	George Cheseboro
Lopez.....	Alfred Hewston
"Black" Meyer.....	Milburn Morante
Belle.....	Peggy Weightman
Dick Boyd.....	Frank Caffray
Mae Boyd.....	Iva Brown
Mrs. Boyd.....	Mary Hawley
Virginia Boyd.....	Virginia Morante

The Story—"Diamond" Carlisle, card-shark and bandit, by a trick escapes from pursuing sheriff and posse after enabling his companion, Lopez, a murderer, to make a getaway. Lopez double-crosses "Diamond," carrying off his horse. In Canada "Diamond" is hired by "Black" Meyer, a gambler who seeks to break Dick Boyd, a lumberman. Boyd needs $10,000 and holds up Carlisle. Later Carlisle returns the money in spectacular style and, escaping, meets Lopez. They battle in a log flume and Lopez is killed. Carlisle then switches clothes with Lopez, and when the mounted police arrive they think the dead man is Carlisle. You know the rest.

Classification—Northwestern mounted police.

Production Highlights—The battle in the log flume. The escape from the sheriff's posse. A card shark playing an honest game of cards. The hold-up of "Black" Meyer's place when Carlisle returns the money stolen by Boyd.

Exploitation Angles—Perhaps a raid by the sheriff or town marshall would land front page story in newspapers. Another stunt would be a miniature log flume calling attention to the battle between Carlisle and Lopez featured in the picture. Play up title in newspaper advertising.

Drawing Appeal—Neighborhood houses, smaller down-town theatres and rural communities where they like plenty of action.

"The Radio King"

(Universal Serial)

A SENSATIONAL, forceful but withal a weird sort of melodrama, the first three episodes of which grip the interest and up to the concluding fade-out, fail to let go of it. One might say that it is "electrical," which of course, it is, being founded upon the subject of the modern discovery. However, the abuses of "radio" as applied by a fiend scientist, whose ambition is not to bring the possibilities of the discovery further to light with a view to benefiting mankind, but on the contrary to do his utmost to distribute harm, forms the basis of the story. He is, in addition, the leader of a gang of anarchists and bad men, a powerful personage of the underworld, whose misdeemeanors have attracted the attention of "the radio king." The staging of the quarters wherein these experts operate, is an out-of-the-ordinary departure from the usual serial entanglement, but it offers the same mysterious angles, involves all the characteristic thrills followers of serials enjoy, and at the same time expounds a lot of worth-while information about "radio."

This chapter play has been well directed, and may boast of a splendid cast. The title role is enacted by Roy Stewart, the hero-radioman, whose skill in the final analysis will undoubtedly bring the fiend and his followers to justice. But up to the end of the third episode, Roy has succeeded only in getting some valuable evidence against the plotters, escaping from electrocution, and fighting his way to save the child whose message, via radio, led Roy to the hot-bed of crime. His sweetheart is trapped there, ad interim and in the efforts of the "Radio King" to escape further violence upon those whose interests he is protecting, he ensnares himself into a trap where the girl, the boy and the hero are caged—until the following episode. Corking good serial idea.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Expose of Sawing a Lady in Half"

(Clarion—S. R.—1½ Reels)

ALTHOUGH this is drawn out terribly, and there are long, discursive subtitles and explanations which are redundant, the subject is a really interesting one. The illusion is performed first as it appears to the audience in a theatre, and then the feat is repeated, this time each detail being carried out in full view and explained. Thousands have seen the illusion performed, and since it has mystified so many, the exposé carries genuine interest.

If it had been done in one reel, which would have been a simple matter, the interest would not have been so evenly balanced with ennui. Even so, it's quite worth while.—STUART GIBSON.

"Please Be Careful"

(Fox—Two Reels)

HERE'S a rather average bit of horseplay, in which the typical comedy lover meets with the typical comedy mishaps in the course of his typical comedy pursuit of the fair lady, and stumbles through them and falls over them and bumps into them and hurts himself against them until eventually fate is kind and the two loving hearts are united.

A series of scenes in which an automobile and an amazingly heavy rainstorm figure afford an opportunity for some comical, though rather obvious, buffoonery. The scenes in the storm, based upon the well-known fact that folks love to laugh at somebody being made uncomfortable ought to prove good laugh-producers.—STUART GIBSON.

Three Hy Mayer Travelaugs— F. B. O.

(One Reel Each)

HY MAYER certainly gives the spectator some interesting close-ups of the life, customs and atmosphere of his newest travelaugs. "Such is Life Near London," takes us into the English provinces adjacent to the big metropolis. Is there one defiant enough to stand up and remark that English country life isn't perfect? To us it seems the acme of true enjoyment. Eton, its famous school, life along the Thames, seaside resorts, presumably Brighton is one of them—these are shown with all the color and atmosphere. The fade-ins of Mayer's—especially when he presents picturesque characters—are particularly noteworthy. They are really the humorous touches of his sketches.

"Such is Life in the Riviera" introduces us to the greatest playground in the world. While this beauty spot can only be appreciated in its reality by the visitor, nevertheless the patron who journeys no further than the picture palace can drink in its vistas and find them optically pleasing. There is rugged background everywhere—genuine old world atmosphere.

"Such is Life among the Idlers of Paris" is an animated close-up of activities in the gayest city in the world. The sidewalk cafes, the boulevardiers, the busses, the gendarmes, the parks, the famous Champs Elysees, the Bois de Boulogne, the Trocadero—these come under one's vision and the appreciation is certain. Good little fillers, all—good for any house, be it million dollar palace or modest neighborhood theatre. Hy Mayer is performing a real service. He is giving us intimate glimpses of the passing through the atmosphere, the high spots of Europe. Thus we become travelers at home.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Blacksmith"

(First National—Two Reels)

BUSTER KEATON, of the lugubrious countenance, has some of the funniest tricks of his career in this conglomeration of incidents. He is ably seconded by a beautiful horse in a series of scenes in which he fits the horse with shoes as a salesman in a shoe store would, using a rolling ladder, a mirror and ribbon laces to add to the charm of the footgear.

The "shock-absorbing" saddle with which he fits another horse whose rider suffers from many bumps, and the terrific havoc wrought to an apparently beautiful automobile sent to the shop for repairs are good for many a laugh. The comedy is always clean and clever and the audience should be left aching.—STUART GIBSON.

VERY light. Good idea, not particularly well worked out, therefore lacking in comedy punch. Nevertheless, it is well staged, employs some splendid players and will get by fairly well.

Betty Covington, daughter of an owner of blue ribbon horses, regrets to see the once popular winner "Imp" barred from the track on account of his age. Betty's sweetheart owns what he thinks is the winner of the derby, and makes a bet with Betty's father, which, if he wins, will entitle him to call the older man "papa." But just before the race the young pair discover that Jack's horse is scratched account of a bowed tendon. Their happiness depends upon father's horse losing that race, so they contrive to enter "Imp," with Betty as the jockey, by giving "Imp" a bath in white-wash. Here is where the comedy weakens, due to the absence of logic. A sensitive horse having been confined to a stable, with no training, then shocked by an irritating application of white-wash, would hardly be in condition to win a hard race, nor could he have been entered by the method employed to sneak him into the paddock. There was an opportunity for well developed comedy and a long line of laughs, which was overlooked in making the situation ridiculous rather than natural. The race scenes, however, are splendid, exciting and well photographed. Dorothy Devore, George Stewart and Lincoln Plummer in the principal roles, also, give splendid performances.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Tiger of San Pedro"

(Educational—Two Reels)

ANOTHER of the Conan Doyle stories, with Ellie Norwood as Sherlock Holmes, Hubert Willis as Doctor Watson and a cast to impersonate the characters identified with the story, the "tiger" being a man who takes fiendish delight in clawing the faces of victims of his treachery.

This is a good detective story which begins with showing Holmes about to leave his house in Baker Street, when a man in quest of his assistance appears and relates a sort of weird experience which puts Holmes on the track of the "tiger." Needless to say, he succeeds in the end, after a thrilling number of happenings which finally leads the criminal into the hands of the great detective. One of the best of the series.—LILLIAN GALE.

Movie Chat

(Urban—One Reel)

IN the newest Urban Movie Chat there are some excellent views of the Sealeyhams engaged in a chase to illustrate why these animals are especially bred as hunting badgers. And as far as the publishers of these newsy film offerings know, there is nothing about dogs contained in the new tariff bill which has to do with the importation of Sealeyham dogs, which are just beginning to make their appearance in American kennels.

In this same exchange of information is shown one of the odd ways of making a living this old world affords. It is one that is associated with seashore resorts and the men who employ themselves in this occupation are called "beach combers." At the end of a bathing season they search the beach to gather any valuables the thousands of visitors may have left behind. They are experts in their peculiar line and if there is anything of value hidden away in the shifting sands, they are sure to find it.

Seeing them at work makes an interesting portion of this chat.—LILLIAN GALE.

Fred Gillen for the past three years vice president and general manager of the Kodeco theatre corporation, comprising the Strand, Armory, Star and Symphony theatres in Binghamton, N. Y., has resigned that position to become associated with Rosenthal & Rubin, owners of The Fair Store in the southern tier city. David Cohen and Ned Kornblite, who were associated with Mr. Gillen in the management of the Kodeco interests, will assume charge of the Strand theatre.

The Buckley-Ferguson company's first production, "Her Own Story," starring Baby Mildred Elsie Ferguson, was given its premiere at the Strand theatre in Binghamton, N. Y., Friday, September 15. The picture was produced under the technical direction of Leo J. Buckley. Mr. Ferguson directed the production. The exteriors were all taken in Newark Valley, Vestal and Broome County Home in the Southern Tier.

William McKenna, manager of the recently opened Olympic in Buffalo, is proud of the fine music he is offering his patrons. Preston Sellers, Jr., is playing the $35,000 Wurlitzer organ and there is an excellent orchestra under the direction of Eric Hurdler. This week Bill is giving his patrons a big double bill.

Coroner W. L. Draper is investigating the death of Joseph Casala, 45 years old, owner and manager of the Star theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y. Mr. Casala was stricken while in the cellar of the theatre and died on the way to Mount St. Mary Hospital. He was looking for a leak in a water pipe and had an extension cord in one hand when he was stricken. This gave credence to the report that he had been electrocuted but experts of the Niagara Electric Service Corporation, who investigated the fatality, say that the wire which he carried had only 110 voltage, an amount insufficient to cause death, and that there were no high tension wires in the building. Mr. Casala leaves a widow and five children. He was a popular and highly esteemed citizen of the Pine Avenue east side district.

Charles L. Hamer, manager of the Crescent theatre, Ithaca, N. Y., is dead. Mr. Hamer passed away at DeRuyter's Lake of pneumonia. He was vice president of the Ithaca theatre company.

Carter DeHaven gave the exhibitors of Buffalo a fine treat when he played host to the boys at a luncheon in the Hotel Iroquois, Wednesday, September 11.

Brief Stories Concerning Exchange People and the Pictures They Handle

BUFFALO exchange managers turned out en masse for the first annual clam-bake of the Rochester Picture Exhibitors Association at Point Pleasant, Irondequoit Bay, Wednesday, September 20. Jules Greenstone was there as "Glad Hand Man." The film men enjoyed a boat ride from Point Pleasant around Irondequoit Bay in the afternoon. There was a program of athletic games. Archie Moses and Tom Brady, American Releasing and Goldwyn managers respectively put on their famous "Polar Bear Duet." The affair was a huge success and promises to be a big annual event in western New York film circles. In the Buffalo delegation were A. W. Moses, T. W. Brady, W. A. V. Mack, E. J. Hayes, Fenton Lawlor, Fred Zimmerman, Charlie Johnston, Allen S. Moritz, C. W. Anthony, Harry E. Lotz, Henry W. Kahn, M. A. Chase, Bob Murphy, Syd Samson, Chester A. Saunders and others.

The local Associated Exhibitors exchange in the Pathe office has a new sales manager. He is John J. Mooney, who comes from New York. E. M. Hoppercraft, salesman, has been sent to the Rochester territory where he will be at home in the future in the Kodak Town. Rochester girls, beware! Before going to Rochester, Hoppy booked "Grandma's Boy" for a special showing at the big Shredded Wheat convention, October 3, at Niagara Falls.

Bill Mack, Pathe manager, has a hat that came over in the Mayflower. It's so old it has become a trick hat. Bill sits in the office with it on. When exhibitors come in and offer him outrageous prices for features, Bill has the hat fixed so that with a twitch of his head muscles the benny springs into the air. The stunt has evoked no end of merriment in the office. When accompanied with a look of astonishment, it really appears as though the hat was started in the air by amazement.

Sherman Webster has resigned from the Nu-Art Pictures Corporation and, it is rumored, is about to join Goldwyn. There have been a number of changes at the new Goldwyn exchange. The going of George A. Hickey as manager and the coming of Tom Brady from Hodkinson as his successor has been announced. Now Otto Siegel, former assistant manager, has gone on the road and he has been succeeded by Clarence Snyder. Edward Mace, who has been connected with the fillum business for some 18 years, during which time he has been associated with most all the local exchanges, has been placed in charge of the shipping department. Eddie was with the old General Film exchange for over five years.

Mike Resnick has resigned from F. B. O. sales staff to accept a similar position with Manager Syd Samson's Grand and North outfit. The famous "Hub" Taylor has also resigned from F. B. O. to join the Pathe forces, covering the Southern Tier.

Fred M. Zimmerman of Nu-Art has booked Clara Kimball Young in "The Hands of Nara," at the Eastman theatre in Rochester. Fred is anxiously awaiting a print of Johnny Hines in "Sure-Fire Flint."

ALBERT EDEN is no longer manager of the Cleveland Select exchange. It is said that Eden has entirely severed his connections with the Select Pictures Corporation. His successor has not yet been appointed. District Manager J. J. Rotchford is in charge of the office until a new resident manager has been named.

Carter DeHaven was in Cleveland last Wednesday. He dropped in just to say howdy to the local Film Booking Office's manager and the local press representatives, but he permitted himself to be induced to make a personal appearance at Loew's State theatre. Not having been previously announced, he was a great surprise to the audience, and made a big hit, both he and his audience acting entirely extemporaneously.

Jack Osserman, one-time film salesman and more latterly manager of the Duchess theatre at Warren, Ohio, has gone back to his first love and is selling pictures again.

William Rosenthal of New York has joined the local Fox family as sales representative.

E. H. Brauer, who holds an endurance record among film salesmen by remaining with one company for three consecutive years, has recently become associated with the Cleveland Fox exchange. Brauer sold First National pictures out of Toledo for the last three years.

Cleveland Chatter

The Ohio Amusement Company of Cleveland has leased the Capitol theatre, Cleveland for a term of 65 weeks. The Capitol, located on the West Side in the Gordon Square Building, was built by Jules and Jay J. Allen. It was opened simultaneously with the big 3,000-seat down town Allen theatre and was meant to be a link in a chain of Allen houses that was to cover the States. It was surrendered by Allens some time ago. The Ohio Amusement Company, composed of D. L. Schumann, Meyer Fine, and Abe Kramer, is now operating the Dennison Square, Yale, Savoy, Five-Points, Jewel and U. No., beside the Capitol. All of these theatres are located in Cleveland.

S. Barrett McCormick was in town for the day last Wednesday. He came to Cleveland on personal business but he had a hard time dodging his friends. Seemed good to see him around the Allen theatre again. McCormick said that the McVickers theatre in Chicago, of which he is managing director, would open about the middle of October.

C. R. N. (Battleship) Morris, known all over the central states among motion picture exhibitors, has been appointed treasurer at Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland. Morris has until recently been one of the Ohio sales representatives for United Artists.

Lincoln J. Carter, author of "The Fast Mail" and other equally thrilling thrillers, was in town between trains one day this week. His arrival having been announced, he was greeted at the station by local Fox manager Robert Cotton and several press representatives. Asked what kind of pictures he thought are in greatest demand the author naturally said, "Pictures with lots of action."

Charles Schweitzer has succeeded Osserman as manager of the Duchess theatre. Schweitzer has previously been interested in selling film.

Jimmy Surrell, manager of the American theatre, Elyria, paid Cleveland a flying visit last week. Surrell used to be manager of one of Cleveland's down town first run houses. He says business is good in Elyria when the weather is cool and the pictures are good.

The Cinema Club of Ohio will hold a state-wide convention in Cleveland October 6 and 7 at the Hotel Statler. Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, president of the Cleveland Cinema Club, is arranging a program of entertainment for the visitors.

Washington News

Two current damage cases brought against theatre owners in the region have shown the legal pitfalls encountered by the amusement enterprises. Damages of $50,000 are sued for by Mrs. Ora Crouse, former cashier for the Winston-Salem theatre, owned by the Piedmont Amusement Corporation. The charge that she was short in accounting for their funds, the alleged consequent loss of position and vituperative defamation of character, she asserts, have injured her position in the eyes of her friends. S. E. Edwards and J. B. Craver are her attorneys.

Experts of The Lehigh Structural Steel Works who are fabricating the girders, etc., for the Washington Auditorium, have informed Colonel Harper that their delivery will be made here so that the convention in May of the Northern Baptists can be held in the completed structure. The John L. McDonald Company, local contractors, say that the metal work will be the most elaborate ever used here. Shacks and other buildings on the site at 19th and New York Avenues, northwest, will soon be demolished and foundations and footing can be started before November 1, Col. Harper is assured. The site embraces 30,037 square feet of ground.

Phil Powers took over the Truxton theatre some time ago from the Stein interests and the deficit which they were up against has been wiped out by his policy so that house is doing fine business and is becoming a money maker again.

South West Washington, the downtown waterfront section, is now having a new boom, due to improved pier and warehouse facilities, and the resident business men and house-owners are trying to get a first-class neighborhood picture house for their section.

Seating company salesmen have been active in the Crandall offices lately to land the contract for his new theatres, the Tivoli and Ambassador. They were also active in the office of Lawyer Fischer, counsel for Emanuel Stutz, whose new Chevy Chase theatre will soon open its doors. The respective seat salesmen will carry away quite a neat sum of Washington gold in return for their elaborate opera confection.

Nelson Bell and John J. Fayette both returned recently from New York city. Bell returned Wednesday of last week while Mr. Fayette got back Friday, having left for Manhattan Wednesday night.

Mr. Joseph P. Morgan, of The Crandall Enterprises, returned several days ago from an outing at Lake George, New York.

CHARLES E. WAGNER has severed his connection with the local exchanges as corresponding secretary to the Washington Film Board of Trade and has returned to New York.

Manager Eugene Wilson of Vitagraph has recently passed his fifth anniversary as a member of that organization. As a memento of Vitagraph's regard for "Gene's" service, he now proudly carries a gold Gruen Verithin octagon watch. Several important changes became effective in mid-September at Vitagraph's Washington exchange. A. C. Loeffler, well known as booker and salesman there the past four years, has resigned and sailed for Buenos Ayres, Argentina, to enter the coffee brokerage business there. Cashier D. D. Burroughs has therefore been advanced to booker. Assistant Bookkeeper George A. Norris has been made cashier. Mr. Wilson himself expects to put in the next few days around Norfolk, observing progress on the new million dollar Otto Wells theatre there, and boosting the Vitagraph product.

C. C. Ezell, field representative for Select Picture Corporation, stopped off in Louis Reichert's Washington office on his way south to Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas, last week.

American Releasing Corporation, with their new suite of offices at 908 Mather Building, are sailing rapidly along getting their product favorably known to exhibitors in the territory.

Bernard Davis is a new face in the Mather Building film fraternity.

Local No. 224 of the Operators' Protective Union submits the following statement in correction of an article appearing on page 1415 of the September 16th issue of the News:

"First: Our wage scale negotiations as yet have not been settled for the coming season and conferences are still being held.

"Second: We have accepted no reduction for the coming season as stated in your columns, nor have we been asked to consider any reduction in salary for the coming season.

"Third: Our international office has not to our knowledge asked us to consider any change in our working conditions but has given us their full support.

"Fourth: This organization does not demand the conditions as stated in your columns."

It is reported that the Hoy system will send a legal secretary here to take over the duties that Chick Wagner has relinquished.

Charles Davis, who was with the local exchange of the Goldwyn corporation for over two years, having served as shipper and booker, and was being groomed as a bookkeeper, is now shipping clerk for the Federated Films Exchange.

A. M. Van Dyke of the Goldwyn office here is sojourning for a brief vacation at Atlantic City.

and Rivoli theatres, New York, has just become concertmeister of the Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra of thirty soloists. Artist Noble is a violin virtuoso of experience, Director N. Mirsky tells us.

Organist Milton Davis' "French Trot" is one of the September 15th Victor phonograph releases. It was first played on the pipe organ here by Davis and has caught on in New York and been danced to with pleasure.

William J. Vernon Broyles, experienced in theatrical management has succeeded J. J. Bell as assistant manager at the Metropolitan.

Leopold Kohls of the Circle theatre staff and a young woman companion were held up by a negro last week, Kohls losing $25 and a watch and the young woman a wrist watch.

Slight damage was done in the operating room of the Lenwood the night of Sept. 5, after the show had closed. Police discovered the blaze before it had gained any headway.

Operators in Evansville, Ind., dropped talk of a strike when a 12½ per cent wage increase was granted.

Officers from American Legion national headquarters and members of the Indiana Board of Photoplay Indorsers were guests of Ralph Lieber, manager of the Circle at a special screening of Ince's "Skin Deep," the veterans being asked in because the film illustrates plastic surgery. The film was indorsed. It probably will have its Indiana premiere at Terre Haute, Sept. 25 to 27, at the time of the state convention of the Legion.

Robbers who are thought to have remained in the house after it was closed Labor Day night robbed the safe of the Capitol theatre, Clinton, Ind., of $1,500, representing almost three days' receipts. Manager B. B. Moore said the house carries burglar insurance.

Indianapolis theatres can generally count on some extra attendance state fair week, because of the thousands of folks who come from the small cities and towns for a day or two stay in the city, but this year was not so good. Attendance at the fair was approximately 75,000 under the record mark of three years ago, due to the thermometer hovering between 90 and 100 degrees throughout the week. The state agricultural board took out $100,000 insurance against rain and not a sprinkle fell until Saturday after the fair was over.

Albany Items

Edward H. Crawford, of New York city, will act as manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy. This is the Collar City's newest motion picture house, and was opened a week ago.

Virgil N. Lappeus, who has acted as assistant manager of Proctor's Fourth Street theatre in Troy, will succeed John G. Wallace as manager of Proctor's Harmanus Bleecker Hall, in Albany. Mr. Wallace severed his connections with the Proctor interests to accept a position in the office of the city engineer.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was in town one day last week.

A motion picture house in Port Leyden, owned by Clarence and Gertrude Taylor, has just been sold to John Castle, of Norwood, who will assume immediate possession.

Running double features throughout the summer has been a life-saver, according to Fred Elliott, owner of the Clinton Square theatre here. Mr. Elliott asserts that he has had one of the best summers in years and may continue the double feature program through the winter.

Harry Horne, of Utica, has just been transferred to the Palace theatre in Watertown, as stage manager, taking the place of Hughie Mack.

Kansas City Notes

David Harding of the Liberty theatre, Kansas City, who was shot August 2 in an attempted holdup of the theatre, left Research Hospital Wednesday, and Friday was again on the job at the Liberty. Physicians who attended Mr. Harding asserted that only by a miracle did the prominent Kansas City exhibitor escape death as the bullet passed through the small of his back.

The championship baseball game between the First National-Educational and the Pathe-Crescent clubs, which has been pending since the close of the Film League season, probably will be played next week. Interest in the contest is rife as the outcome will decide a long standing issue, to say nothing of the pennant.

Mrs. B. L. Short, member of the Kansas State Board of Review, will forward to each exhibitor in Kansas a list of films suitable for juvenile entertainment, upon request of the exhibitors, she has announced.

An outdoor club among school children in all towns which have booked forty new western productions is being formed by the Standard Film Company of Kansas City, according to Bernard C. Cook, manager. C. F. Foye, a lecturer, is in charge of the organization of the clubs, the primary purpose of which is to substitute the words "outdoor pictures" for westerns, for which it is believed many theatre patrons have formed a dislike.

Canadian Paragraphs

C. M. Crawford of Montreal, Quebec, has installed two Mazda projection machines in the Community theatre, Halifax, N. S., this being the first installation of this equipment in a Canadian theatre, it is announced. The Mazda machines have also been adopted as equipment in the Passe Temps theatre, Montreal. Mr. Crawford, who was formerly a representative of the Fox Film Corporation, has opened his own headquarters in the Albee Building, Montreal.

The several moving picture theatres of Kingston, Ontario, are literally presenting the "silent drama" as the result of a dispute between the exhibitors and the local musicians. The latter refused to accept the same conditions as last year, it is said, and also demanded that the exhibitors employ stated numbers of musicians at each house. The exhibitors claimed that they could not afford to do so and the outcome was that the three local theatres have dispensed with music altogether.

Announcement is made from the Winnipeg, Manitoba, office of Winnipeg Productions, Limited, that the shareholders' portion of the weekly profits from "The Forfeigner" and "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," produced under the direction of Ernest Shipman, are being received from the Hodkinson Company, New York, at the rate of from $1,000 to $1,500 per week. During the fall season, the returns will increase to an appreciable extent, it is stated.

Pauline Garon, star of "The Man From Glengarry," which has been produced in Ottawa by Ernest Shipman, made personal appearances at the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, during the week of September 11 when the attraction was "Reported Missing," in which she was co-starred with Owen Moore.

The Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors has condemned no less than five features released by Vitagraph, it is announced at Winnipeg.

San Francisco News

"Paramount Week," September 3rd to 10th was a great success in San Francisco, and surrounding cities. Over fifty theatres in San Francisco alone showed Paramount Pictures that week. In Oakland fifteen theatres showed Paramount product. Besides these, over 260 around San Francisco and in the San Francisco district also played Paramount.

A percentage of the gross receipts taken in during one week in September, by the chain of theatres in the Turner and Dahnken circuit will be donated to the stricken families of the forty-seven miners who were killed in the Argonaut mine disaster.

The One Hundred Per Cent Club and the San Francisco Historical Society have started a motion picture publicity campaign and are raising $25,000 to send motion pictures of San Francisco around the country.

J. M. MULLIN, special representative at Montreal of the Film Booking Offices, assisted by Messrs. Blackman and Alexander of the Associated Screen News, recently gave a moving picture entertainment on board the Atlantic liner "Regina," for the officers and crew of the ship, while it was in port. John Fiddes, manager of the System theatre, Montreal, and Bert Mason added to the program with songs. Announcement was made that when the boat again docks in Montreal, a similar performance will be presented, the feature of which will be "In the Name of the Law."

According to word received by the Canadian Universal Film Company, Toronto, "Foolish Wives" recently broke all records at the Allen theatre, Vancouver. B. C. The feature played to 7,000 people the opening day alone, it was reported, and the theatre management had to stop selling tickets no less than 12 times during the day. The Allen seats 1,800 patrons and the house was filled approximately four times during the day.

A. B. Cass, St. John, N. B., manager of the local branch of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto, was recently married in Toronto.

One result of the exploitation activities of W. de Grandcourt, special representative of the Fox Film Corporation in Canada, at Winnipeg, Manitoba, was the staging of a

"William Fox Entertainment Week" during the week of September 11. In a full-page combination display in the Winnipeg Evening Tribune, announcements were made of the presentation of Fox releases during the week at no less than nine Winnipeg theatres.

At the Province theatre, the week's bill included Fox's "The Fighting Streak," "Laughing Gas," a Chester Conklin comedy and the Fox News.

Every child cutting out a portrait of William Fox from the special page was admitted free of charge to any theatre during the week, except Saturday, when accompanied by an adult.

Announcement is made by Clair Hague, Toronto, general manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, that a brand new five-story building in Toronto is to form the future Canadian headquarters of the company. This is to be known as "Film Exchange Building" and suites of offices on various floors are to be rented to other organizations. The local Universal offices are now located at Yonge and Elm streets, but these premises have been found to be too inadequate for growing business demands.

David Baden has arrived in Toronto from Universal City to arrange for the special exploitation of new Universal Century Comedies which come in two reels.

Harrisburg, Pa., News

Charges that the three members of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors, along with 24 other officials or former officials on the payroll of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, evaded the Constitution of the State to obtain increase in their own salaries, have just been made in the Harrisburg Patriot and the Harrisburg Evening News, daily newspapers published by Vance C. McCormick, who was Democratic national chairman at the head of the campaign when Woodrow Wilson was elected President the second time.

These charges allege that Harry L. Knapp, chairman of the board of censors; Mrs. E. C. Niver, vice chairman, and Henry Starr Richardson, secretary, all resigned their position on May 31, 1921, knowing that they would be re-appointed the following day by Governor Sproul, at increased pay, thus dodging, it is charged, the Constitutional provision that no state official can accept an increase in pay during his tenure in office.

The other officials against whom similar charges were made by the McCormick newspapers, included former State Forester Clifford Pinchot, who is now Republican candidate for Governor.

The Constitution of Pennsylvania plainly says that no increase in salary, approved by the Legislature, shall apply to the occupant of an office at the time the increase was authorized, the intent being that it can go only to the incumbent's successor.

The Legislature of 1921 passed a law increasing the salary of the Chairman of the censorship board from $3,000, which Knapp had been receiving, to $3,600; that of the vice chairman from $2,500, that Mrs. Niver had been getting, to $3,300, and that of the secretary from $2,400, that Richardson had been receiving, to $3,300.

It is charged that to evade the provision preventing the increases from applying to the incumbents, "it became necessary," in the language of the Harrisburg Evening News, "to create the fiction that Pinchot and the others were not the occupants of the offices to which the increase applied. So these officeholders resigned one day; the salary increase became effective the next, and these same old men were restored to their jobs with bigger salaries."

The Garrick theatre, Chestnut street near Broadway is to open on Saturday, September 23, as a stock dramatic house. In recent years it has been used for burlesque and prior to that moving pictures and vaudeville. C. D. Woodward, veteran stock actor, is in charge of the new venture. The opening show will be "Polly With a Past." In the company will be Hazel Whitmore, Francesca Votoll, Jane Stuart, Laura Lovett, Bessie Warren, John Warner, Maurice Franklyn, Sherold Page, A. S. Bryon, Erville Alderson, Albert Schilling and Henry Ward.

Edwin Olmstead, who last week succeeded Charley Vollmer as manager of the Delmonte theatre, has also resigned and returned to the Missouri theatre, where he formerly was employed. J. Wagner, auditor of the Delmonte, has taken over the managership. Vollmer is again in charge of the Midway theatre, Grand and Washington boulevards.

Spyros Skouras of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Company is on Manhattan Isle this week. Gossip along the local film rialto has it that when he returns from the bright lights of Broadway he will have another theatre for St. Louis tucked under his arm. He is already interested in eighteen theatres and half a dozen airdomes, fourteen of the playhouses being controlled by the St. Louis Amusement Company.

The Orpheum Hannibal, Mo., reopened on Sunday, September 17, with a combination programme of pictures and vaudeville.

"Orphans of the Storm" will play a return engagement at the William Fox Liberty commencing October 14. This picture ran for four weeks at the Liberty last April and May.

Jim Reilly of the Princess and Grand theatres, Alton, dropped down on the interburban.

A. C. Norwein of the Norwein Amusement Company, Bonne Terre, was another regular seen along picture row during the past week.

Al Bernstein of the Capital theatre, Springfield, Ill., was in for some short stuff and features. He is optimistic about the outlook for fall and winter.

Crowds gathered several hours in advance of the opening of the theatre doors where "Grandma's Boy" had its premier. St. Louis showing at the New Grand Central, Saturday, September 16. It was Tom Meyers of the Capitol theatre, Charles Skouras and Frank J. Laurent, auditor for Skouras Brothers Enterprises, are vacationing in the Ozarks. They made some of the boys feel bad by sending back glowing reports of the fishing in that district.

Atlanta Items

The Rialto theatre, Atlanta, after being closed for repairs for a week reopened Labor Day, with a change of policy and management. Phil Gersdorf will act as manager. The Rialto will run only first-run-week-run pictures, with several shorter attractions each week.

The decorations and changes have worked wonders with the theatre, and it is now one of the best and coziest in the city.

Better Films Week is being observed in Atlanta this week. Every theatre, exchange and equipment house in Atlanta has promised to work with the Better Films Committee in making the week a success.

The program includes a showing of selected pictures in all of the theatres. A feature of the week will be an exhibit of moving picture equipment of the most modern type in the assembly room of the chamber of Commerce Building.

"Athletic Atlanta" a locally made film of famous Atlanta athletes proved quite a drawing card recently at the Howard theatre, Atlanta.

The picture was made by the Hamilton-Beach Film Corp., and was directed by De Sales Harrison of the Howard. The titles were by Ernest Rogers of The Atlanta Journal. The picture will be shown at numerous theatres of the Southern Enterprises in the South.

San Diego Paragraphs

Manager Rob Hicks found it advisable, from a box office standpoint, to keep over for a full second week the Rodolph Valentino feature, "Blood and Sand," thus showing it continuously from September 3 to 16, inclusive, at the Cabrillo.

J. B. Mason, manager of the Dream theatre, in connection with the showing of "The Better Man Wins," on September 10 and 11, had as an added attraction the star of the picture, Pete Morrison, who appeared in person. Manager Mason is giving four changes a week, at 10 and 15 cents, war tax included.

At the Plaza theatre, Manager Russell Rogers has had installed very attractive parchment panels and lanterns, furnished by the Tufts Studio of San Diego, along both sides of the auditorium and in the foyer, giving a very pleasing effect, with ruby lighting. Very tasty gold curtains have been placed in the foyer.

The Plaza found a big attraction in "A Tailor Made Man," featuring Charles Ray, which began a week's showing on September 9.

The Broadway theatre, through a tie-up with the Evening Sun, is accepting a Sun subscription receipt for the current month for one admission to any show on any day.

Florida Chatter

H. Pitman, who operates the Capitol theatre at Clearwater, Fla., has been awarded the contract to furnish the picture shows at the Belleview Hotel, Bellaire, Fla., during the winter season. The Belleview is the largest winter hotel on the West Coast of Florida. Several nights each week, during the winter season, they show pictures in the ball room for the amusement of their guests.

This contract gives Mr. Pitman practically four shows along the West Coast, as he also operates the Royal at Tarpon Springs, and lately opened a house for negro patrons in Clearwater.

The Juanita Film Co., of Tampa, Fla., is going to move to Orlando, Fla., within the next thirty days. The latter city has given them three acres of land and they are now building a modern studio there.

For some time now the Juanita Company have been making two reel comedies with Bobby Burns the featured comedian. They expect another company to join them in their Orlando studio, who will make two reel westerns, as the "locations" are ideal for this style of pictures in the high lands of Florida.

Business is getting better all through South Florida. Many of the winter residents are coming in now, and everybody is preparing for an immense season. This makes lots of work, and that helps the amusement business.

New England Brevities

The Boston theatre celebrated its 68th anniversary on Monday this week, the fact being announced from the stage and causing considerable enthusiasm in the audience. It is only within recent years that the theatre has been other than legitimate, and is now running a mixed program of vaudeville and pictures under B. F. Keith management.

Society in New England's northern colony has taken up motion picture production. Warwick Potter Scott, of Harvard Hasty Pudding Club fame played the lead, the entire cast being other members of the set. The play "Tangled Hearts," was produced last week in Bar Harbor, Me., the proceeds going to the benefit of the Bar Harbor Hospital. An enthusiastic audience of 1,500 persons viewed the premiere.

The Fenway theatre, one of the most popular of Boston's smaller houses, has installed a new organ of remarkable range, and Lloyd Del Castillo, one of the most capable organists in the East, and composer of many melodies widely used in picture houses, has been appointed organist.

Contrary to the general custom of one week runs at the Park theatre, Boston, Jacob Lourie is holding "Grandma's Boy" over for its third and final week, so great has been the demand for the keeping of the film. "Never an empty seat" has been the slogan so far for the run.

N.Y. Exporter Purchases Burr Product

William M. Vogel, exporter, located in New York, has closed a deal of considerable dimensions with C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc.

In addition to the exclusive foreign rights on "Sure Fire Flint," the Johnny Hines (Torchy) current comedy special, now ready for release, Mr. Vogel has also purchased the complete foreign rights to the next six-reel comedy special featuring Johnny Hines, as well as the forthcoming Whitman Bennett-C. C. Burr six-reel special, "The Secrets of Paris." In addition he has closed for the forthcoming series of twelve, two-reel All-Star comedies starring Charlie Murray.

"Beware of the Law," Jawitz Release

What is claimed to be one of the best independent offerings of the 1922-1923 season is the release of the Jawitz Pictures Corporation, which it is announced will be extensively exploited and advertised under the title of "Beware of the Law."

The production has just reached its final stages of assembling, editing and titling, and will be released about October 1, 1922. It features Marjorie Payne, a well-known stage actress. The picture was adapted to the screen from a magazine story, and was personally directed by W. A. S. Douglass.

A press book, complete as regards to exploitation suggestions, is now in preparation.

Author Gives Approval to Picture

"Timothy's Quest," by Kate Douglas Wiggin, distributed by American Releasing Corporation, has been praised by the entire trade press.

Of especial interest because it is all too unusual for an author to find complete satisfaction in the screen adaptation of a favorite work, is the following letter from Kate Douglas Wiggin to F. B. Warren, vice-president of American Releasing Corporation.

"Through your courtesy I have just been the sole spectator in a private showing of the film version of 'Timothy's Quest.'

"It has been an enchanting hour, full of surprises, notwithstanding the fact that I have stood shoulder to shoulder with the other workers from the 'first shot' to the last; and now there is nowhere in the world a more grateful author than I."

Production Started by New Fat Comedian

"Fatty" Karr, who is being starred in a series of two-reel comedies directed by Bruce Mitchell and distributed by Franklyn E. Backer, president of East Coast Productions, began work last week on his first two-reeler.

These two-reelers are being made in California and it is expected by both Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Backer that "Fatty" Karr will make a place for himself very soon as "the fat comedian of the screen."

In the Independent Field

Conducted by CHESTER J. SMITH

Slump Aids Independents, Says Arthur Lee

ARTHUR A. LEE of Lee-Bradford, is among the many optimists in the industry. It is his opinion that the slump which he now considers a thing of the past, has been, and will be a great help to the independents in that it has broken the control of the big fellows and that it will create a more general shopping demand. "There is no doubt in my mind," said Mr. Lee, "that the end of the slump has passed. It will probably take two or three months for the independents to get straightened out financially and then all will be clear sailing, with the field more open for the sale of our product than ever before."

"I recently visited in Canada, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Boston, and met with splendid success. Things look much better than they have for some time. In Boston, for instance, I think I got twice as much money for 'Determination' as I could have gotten a month ago. There is every indication that the people are getting more cash, and as this cash loosens up there is bound to be more liberal spending of it."

"What is hurting our end of the industry more than anything else is the fact that certain people will go out and dispose of pictures on a percentage basis. They go out with a lot of

Strikes Can't Stop 'Em in Southland

"D ESPITE the fact that the exhibitors of Kentucky and Tennessee are in the very heart of the sections greatly affected by the railroad and coal strikes," says Lee L. Goldberg, secretary-treasurer of the Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville, Ky., "we are hopeful for good fall and winter business."

"The exhibitors in our territory are beginning to depend as much on the big state right specials, such as 'School Days,' 'Why Girls Leave Home,' and 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room' as they formerly did on the big specials coming from the National distributors."

junk and it is bad both for the producer and the distributor.

"We have stuck rigidly to a rule not to dispose of a single picture on a percentage basis. This has cost us sales, but it is a principle upon which we are going to stand. Our foreign business is particularly gratifying and it is conducted strictly upon a cash basis. We are shipping to France, Belgium, Argentina, Cuba, Porto Rico, India and other foreign countries. The picture 'Determination' seems to appeal to them and it has been disposed of in all those countries."

"Our product this fall is beyond doubt the best we have ever put out. We have eight pictures for fall release, among them being a Herbert Brennan production with Marie Doro, titled 'Stronger Passion,' 'Orphan Sally' with Flora Finch and Margaret Beecham, an Alan Dwan production titled 'Superstition,' a mystery story, 'The Midnight Mystery,' and 'The Judgment of the Deep.' In addition we have six Squirrel Comedies and fifteen Canadian Travelogues."

"It has been a hard pull for many of those in the independent field, but I honestly believe we have pulled over the top of the hill and it will be down grade from now on, particularly if the independent product continues to improve and the business is conducted along legitimate lines giving everyone a chance for a division of the profits. The independents certainly have their chance now and it is up to us to take full advantage of it."

Uphold Own Interests, Says Ivan Abramson

IVAN ABRAMSON, President of the Graphic Film Corporation, is perhaps as familiar with all branches of picture making and distribution as anyone in the industry. His impression in that the independents are in for an exceptionally good year providing the independent exhibitors uphold their own interests and book independent productions.

"What have been the real successes of the past three years; what the real money makers?"

queries Mr. Abramson, and his answer is: "The independent productions. Only about five per cent of all productions are successes," said Abramson. "About forty-five per cent are mediocre stories and the other fifty per cent are spoiled by the censors."

"These big pictures are being made too much like Fords. They pass through too many hands before they are completed and by the time the product is presented on the screen the author does not even recognize his own story. They are all too much alike in their construction and their themes. I write my own continuity, do my own directing, cutting and titling, and consequently I know every angle of the picture I am building. That is why my product has been successful."

"These big producers with their star system and their highly perfected organization are putting out a product that is largely an insult to the intelligence to the picture-going public. That is what has hurt the industry."

"The independents are taking more care with their productions. They are not making so many and they are getting better stories and building them carefully. That's why a majority of the big successes are independent pictures."

"If we must have censorship then we should have a Federal censorship board made up of about twelve people who are qualified to judge of art, the story and all the different phases of picture making. When these twelve people can review all of the product and then classify the pictures into A, B and C groups it will mean something. Classification of pictures is what is most needed. Take out the exaggerated advertising stuff and put up to the public the fact that this is a class A, B or C Picture and that will do more to gain their confidence than anything else that has been done. If proper advertising is then applied in the different classifications the public will know just what to expect when they go to a picture house."

Coast Exchange Man Sees Biggest Year

"THE outlook for independent productions in our territory, California, Arizona and Nevada is better this year than at any time in the history of the business," says George Oppenheimer, exchange man of San Francisco.

"We are distributing Warner Brothers ten big productions. It is the consensus of opinion of exhibitors that these are the ten biggest productions to be released by any exchange this year. We are launching the biggest billboard campaign of Warner Brothers seven new big productions ever attempted in the territory. Every town of two thousand or larger will be posted."

Valentino Feature Is Selling Fast

HERALD Productions reports that State Rights buyers for the Valentino feature, "Isle of Love," are doing big business with this feature and in most instances are ordering additional prints to supply the demand for these bookings.

On account of the tremendous box office value of Rodolph Valentino unsold territory is being rapidly closed.

Healthy Rebound, Declares Clark-Cornelius

“WITHOUT attempting to strain our optimism or even to draw on it beyond the common sense standpoint, it is evident that the state right field is experiencing a quicker and more healthy rebound from the days of depression than any other phase of the industry,” says a statement from the Clark-Cornelius office.

S. J. Rollo

“Aside from the political phase that this branch of the business might enjoy its fundamental principle is such that it can more quickly and more easily reach a position than the program method of operation. While the conditions we have passed through are worldwide in their scope, still there is always a local angle to every operation that also must be met. This the independent exchangeman recognizes and remedies or alters immediately. He is not hampered by decisions being made for him which in many instances are more detrimental than helpful. He is interested in the right solution and its quick application, because it affects his money and his business.

“We have had a splendid opportunity to study both the state-right and program phase of this business, having been operatives in both. The state right method of marketing is not only a more logical proposition but one that permits of a more thorough marketing of a picture. It gives the production longer life. The exchangeman has his money invested in it and cannot afford to forget it.

“The independent exchangeman thoroughly realizes the necessity of establishing on a basis that will be recognized by the distributor and which will permit the distributor to secure the sort of picture that will be instrumental in placing the independent faction in its proper sphere. He is harking away from the miscellaneous way of doing things and establishing in a definite way so as to build constructively and have something of a positive nature to offer the exhibitor.

of ‘How much do you want?’ is no longer so prevalent. This condition is fast becoming a reality throughout the country. We have interviewed a great number of the exchange owners and have been able to build a definite policy for the coming year. A policy in which we know we will have the co-operation of some of the best and most progressive exchanges in the country.

“The opportunist has been more or less eliminated during the days of depression. Those who weathered conditions have recognized the necessity of getting on a firm footing. This experience has done much toward stabilizing the state right field. It will mean a more hearty co-operation between distributor and exchangeman, and the respect of the better theatres and better pictures will be circulated through this branch of the business.

“During the coming year the state right field will reach a higher plane than ever before in its history. While it probably will not be so extensive as during the past few years, still it will be more stable. And it will market superior pictures.”

Nathan Hirsh Forecasts Prosperous Future :

ACCORDING to Nathan Hirsh, President of the Aywon Film Corporation, prospects look unusually bright for the independents during the coming season, and his past experience qualifies him as a prophet. He is continuously in close touch with conditions throughout this country and abroad and knows the pulse of the picture industry in all parts of the world.

Nathan Hirsh

“Things look good all over,” is the way Mr. Hirsh puts it. “I don’t want to let myself get too optimistic, but I can’t help but know the tide has turned for the independent producer, distributor and exhibitor and that in the very near future we are going to begin to realize some of the hopes we have entertained for the past few months.

“The exhibitor feels that better times are here. He is prepared to book good pictures, and good pictures are going to make good money. Anyone who has the goods is going to profit through them. Things certainly look better than they did last year. We are going to gross more on independent pictures than the National producer if we have the goods, and the Aywon Film Corporation has the goods.

“My observation is that the exhibitor is more than willing to co-operate with any reliable independent. In fact we have closed many important contracts and the exhibitors are reordering more than ever before.

“We expect great results from our picture, ‘The Unconquered,’ in which the giant Maciste is the featured player. It is his first picture since the war, in which he played such a conspicuous part. I contracted for it last year while I was in Europe, and I honestly believe it will be a sensation here. It was made in Italy, is in seven reels and will be ready for release in about a month.

“We have some really splendid product for Fall release and as a consequence we have little apprehension regarding the immediate future. In addition to ‘The Unconquered’ we will distribute another foreign picture titled, ‘The Clowns’ Carnival,’ and a series of Dick Travers five reels which have great stories and strong casts in support of the star. Two of these pictures are ‘White Hell’ and ‘The Dawn of Revenge.’ Then we have a series of cartoons, ‘The Mexican Picture Book,’ which I believe will prove a decided novelty.

“We are well satisfied with our output and have every confidence for the independent end of the industry for this season. It looks to me as though it was going to be a great year.”

Alexander Proves Confidence In Future : :

“THE best proof of my confidence in the independent market,” says William Alexander, president of the Alexander Film Corporation, “is that Jack

William Alexander

Levy and I have just bought out our partners in the corporation and will continue to conduct the business as our own. In addition we have just renewed our triangle contract which we have held for the past three years.

“There is nothing wrong with the business now. It has been very quiet for the past few months, but I do not think there is any reason for apprehension in the immediate future. There is every indication that boom times are here. If Mr. Levy and I did not think so we would not have assumed this venture at the present time.

“There has been more activity around our exchange in the past two weeks than in the entire four or five months preceding that time. Five buyers from the Argentine alone have been here actually competing with each other for product. One of them controls no less than ninety houses. Numerous other foreign buyers have been active lately. Not only are the foreign representatives getting busy, but there is a healthy activity among the United States buyers.

“We have just entered into an agreement with Boris Thomashefski, prominent Jewish actor and dramatist, for a series of pictures to be produced in New York City. The productions will be made from the best of some three hundred plays Mr. Thomashefsky has in his library. These are not Jewish plays.

“In the immediate future we will be releasing our series of fifty-two single reel comedies, which we think will prove a sensation on the independent market. We will also release a series starring Jean Gabriel, with Irene Pretty and Pearl Sheppard. The first of this series, of which we have the world’s rights, is titled, ‘Between Two Husbands,’ and it will be ready for release in about a month. Other releasing plans are developing, but we are not yet ready to announce them.”

Both Mr. Alexander and Mr. Levy have long been identified with the industry and their many friends wish them success in their combined venture. Alexander was with Fox for eight years, during which time he opened several exchanges in America for that concern, as well as a number in South America and Great Britain.

Levy was with the Fox Film Corporation for so many years he has almost forgotten when he started.

The biggest box office title of the year —

"WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN"

A NY wise film man will tell you that—it's one thing to get a sure-fire winner box office title—and it's a horse of a different color to produce the picture to back up the title.

In Equity's big picture "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN" exhibitors are given what has been admitted, the biggest box office title of the season, and that doesn't mean just among independent pictures but among all pictures of the year.

No exhibitor who is in dead earnest about making some money for himself can ignore the title nor the cast of this production.

And speaking of casts, no independent picture ever produced this year or any other year, surpasses the cast that Equity has chosen for "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN."

Such names as Wilton Lackaye, Barbara Castleton, Montagu Love, Julia Swayne Gordon, Huntley Gordon, Mrs. De Wolf Hopper, Constance Bennett, Rod La Roque, Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, Paul McAllister, Helen Rowland.

ADD to this the fact that four of the shrewdest independent exchangers in the United States bought this picture on sight, and you will begin to understand the size and character of this production.

The advertising, exploitation and publicity prepared for "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WOMEN" stands supreme in box office power. This material campaign commands your attention.

Laboratory Shows Industry's Pulse

Evans Reports Renewed Activity Particularly in Independent Field

"THAT business is on the up grade is evidenced by the increased activities that already are apparent by the pictures that are starting to move throughout the country," remarked Thomas Evans, president of the Evans Film Laboratories.

"The Laboratory is more or less an accurate pulse of the industry," continued Mr. Evans. "We know to a certain degree just what sort of picture is popular and what is not. We are also one of the first branches of the industry to note any increased activities."

"In the independent market we are a gauge of the conditions throughout the country. While the information we secure is always confidential, we are in a position to gather vital data on conditions and sections of the country."

"In the last few weeks there has been a notable movement in some territories. The buyers are preparing in a rather definite way for the fall season. Other territories show signs of a revival very shortly. We arrive at this conclusion from the orders we have for future delivery."

"The improvement in business as it is evidencing itself right now looks very healthy. It is not a sudden spurt but is more in the form of a natural growth. It is evident that there is a good deal of thought behind this move. It is more deliberate than in years but definite."

"From the production stand-point there is some noted activity. Our laboratory is used by a number of independent producers as a repository and advices we receive are that shipments from the coast and here in the east will be going forward to us during the month of new negatives which will be marketed this season.

"Sizing up the entire situation there are signs of a healthy revival of business in the industry which, in many quarters, will not be greatly noticeable because of its natural and gradual growth. Every day this increase is noticeable with us, because our activities are with many in both the production, distributing and exchange end of the industry."

Exhibitors Will Buy Good Independents

J. F. CUBBERLEY, manager of the Educational Film Exchange of Minnesota, has evidently made a careful study of things having to do with the industry. He expresses the belief that the exhibitor is looking for good pictures and is as willing to buy them from the independent as he is from the regular releasing companies.

He writes as follows:

"We have great faith in the independent market of the future; in fact, our faith is so great that we are investing $100,000 in pictures for this territory, having lined up with Mr. Lieberman, Warner Bros. and Charlie Burr and at the same time negotiating at all times for other independent productions which we think will get money."

"The exhibitor today is not nearly so well sold on the regular releasing companies as he has been in the past. In other words, he is looking for good pictures and does not care who makes them or through what company they are distributed. The independents, however, must make good pictures and deal fairly. Our trouble in the past has been that if some one made a picture that really had a little box-office value they wanted to become a millionaire on the one picture. This is not going to work in the future. The exhibitors positively will not pay the rentals for pictures at least during the present season that they have in the past and at the same time won't buy unless the pictures are good."

"The independents are working under a certain disadvantage on account of selling costs but this will gradually be overcome as our product increases. We are meeting with excellent success so far as sales are concerned provided we quote the exhibitor a price he can afford to pay. Business conditions in the Northwest are slowly but surely improving but not to the extent the national distributors would like to believe. A great number of theatres have closed and will never open again; this of course referring to the small towns."

"The independents have always complained about the unreliable buyers for their product. In my opinion there will be plenty of worthwhile buyers with plenty of money to handle independent product just as soon as there is enough independent product available to make it worth while for capital to be invested. Personally I know people in 50 per cent of the territories in the United States who are at the present time more than willing to invest when they are convinced of enough worthwhile product to operate a worthwhile film exchange."

Backer Foresees Year of Prosperity

FRANKLYN E. BACKER, president of East Coast Productions, is very optimistic over the conditions governing the independent field for the coming year. Jack

Franklyn E. Backer

Von Tilzer, general sales manager, returned from an extensive sales trip last week, having closed several territories for the J. B. Warner starring series.

East Coast Productions, Inc., on the strength of this belief and Von Tilzer's report, signed contracts to distribute the following units of independent producers in addition to what it has been distributing for the past several months:

A series of six two reel Crescent comedies, the first two of which "East is Worst" and "Easy Pickin's," recently received very favorable trade paper reviews. East Coast has also contracted to market the new series of Fatty Karr comedies.

It is the opinion of Mr. Backer, bolstered by exhibitor demand, that the time is now ripe for a fat man screen comedian, and after having looked over the field Fatty Karr was selected not only for his generous physical proportions but because of his splendid acting abilities as shown in "Human Hearts" and "Omar the Tentmaker."

Screen Service Opens Chicago Office

National Screen Service announces the opening of its new headquarters in Chicago which will furnish service direct to exhibitors throughout Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri and Iowa.

Headquarters have been established in the heart of the Chicago film district, in charge of H. C. Young, who is personally known to the majority of Exhibitors throughout that territory.

The Chicago office has been created to give the exhibitor in the Chicago territory, the same high type of service that the eastern Exhibitor is enjoying through the New York Office. A complete staff has been organized to take care of the exhibitor's requirements properly.

National Screen Service has made wonderful strides in the past year and now numbers through the eastern territory over 1200 subscribers. Among them, are included important Circuits, like the S. A. Lynch Circuit, The Stanley Circuit, The Keith & Moss Circuit, The Wm. Fox Circuit and the leading theatres in all the principal cities.

Exhibitors have come to look upon National Screen Service method of announcing their coming attractions as an invaluable asset in interesting their audience in their coming attractions, and thereby building up their patronage.

"I believe the trade papers are to be commended on taking up the independent productions as they have the last few months and with their help no question but what plenty of producers will offer good pictures at prices that the state right man can distribute profitably and that the exhibitor can get money with at his box-office."

Northwest Not Worried Over Prospects

OUT around the Pacific Northwest they are not worrying much about conditions, according to a statement just received from L. K. Brin, president of Kwaliti Pictures, Inc., of Seattle, Wash.

He writes as follows:

"Owing to the big success I have had with Warner Bros.' productions in the nine Northwestern States, comprising Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Alaska, and with the new releases which are to come out this fall, it has been necessary to enlarge our present quarters in Seattle as well as opening up our own branch office in Denver, which will be under the management of Mr. E. J. Lipson. Mr. Lipson has been in the film business for the last ten years."

"Our Seattle office will be in charge of C. Olness, who has been connected with Mr. Brin since the organization of this company the first of the year. Mr. H. K. Brin will have charge of Montana, with headquarters in Butte."

"I will have general supervision of the different office as well as personally making the key cities in the territory."

"Our business has been growing by leaps and bounds and the reason for this is our fair and square treatment to all exhibitors, and above all the high standard of pictures that Warner Bros. are producing."

"Exhibitors throughout the territory are very optimistic about the fall, and judging from the way inquiries are coming in we are going to have a very busy year."

A Policy and A Promise

TO the leading and progressive independent exchanges of this country this announcement is a forerunner of a program of productions which will make unprecedented history in the industry.

The selection of these pictures has been and still is being made with a thorough knowledge of the definite requirements of the independent branch of the industry.

They will do more for the independent exchange man towards blazing his way into the very finest theatres and retaining this patronage than any offerings ever presented to him.

Each release will be of a high standard of excellence.

Simeral Company Buys Arrow Pictures

H. C. Simeral Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., have contracted with Arrow Film Corporation for the new series of William Fairbanks' pictures which Arrow will release.

H. C. Simeral, who heads the company bearing his name, is most enthusiastic concerning his recent purchase for a number of different reasons.

"I consider William Fairbanks a tremendously powerful attraction," said Mr. Simeral, "and having learned of what Arrow proposes to do with this husky young star, I feel confident that whatever assets he already possesses will be magnified a thousandfold."

Warner Picture For Capitol Leading New York House Books Wesley Barry Feature, "Rags to Riches"

THE CAPITOL THEATRE, New York, has booked the first Warner Brothers release, "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production, featuring Wesley Barry and it will be shown during the week of September 24th, according to Harry M. Warner.

This booking is said to be the forerunner of an unusual number of other first run showings being arranged throughout the country by the exchanges that have contracted for the entire series of seven forthcoming Warner pictures.

To aid the Capitol theatre in putting over the picture, the Warner Brothers' huge float is being utilized to tour throughout the city. In addition to this moving twenty-four sheet, a big billboard newspaper and ballyhoo campaign has also been evolved. S. L. Rothapfel is said to have planned an unusual presentation for the feature.

"Rags to Riches" is declared to tell a story that gives Barry full scope to reveal his ability as a screen actor. He plays the part of a regular boy who longs to do the things that regular boys like to do, and in his endeavor to carry out his plans despite paternal protest to the contrary, he becomes involved in a chain of incidents that are said to be replete with thrilling adventure, romance and laughter.

Prominent members of the cast supporting Barry include Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Richard Tucker, Russell Simpson, Minna D. Redman and Eulalie Jensen. The picture was directed by Wallace Worsley, and the story was written by W. Nigh and Walter De Leon.

Frederick G. Becker, associated with Arthur Trimble Productions.

"Wildness of Youth" Selling Ivan Abramson Disposes of Latest Product In Several Territories

IVAN ABRAMSON, producer of "Wildness of Youth," featuring Virginia Pearson and Mary Anderson, announces that his feature has been sold to Frank Zambreno of the Progress Pictures Company of Chicago for the territories of Northern Illinois and Indiana, to Richards and Flynn of Kansas City for the territories of Missouri and Kansas, to William F. Donohue and John Gill of Imperial Pictures Company of Philadelphia for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

In line with these sales, producer Abramson also announced that the following first run bookings in New York City and Brooklyn had been obtained on this latest Graphic Productions release: Grand Opera House, 23rd St. and 8th Ave., October 21, 22, 23, 24; entire M. & S Circuit commencing October 6; Apollo, New Douglas and Odeon theatres, owned by Leo Brecher, beginning September 25; Fifth Avenue theatre, 110th St. and 5th Ave., for one week, beginning September 29; Henderson's theatre, Coney Island Stadium and Supreme theatres, Brooklyn, October 8, 9, 10 and 11; Myrtle and Glenwood theatres, Brooklyn, October 10, 11, 12, 13, 14; New theatre, Rockaway, October 17, 18; Stadium theatre, October 29, 30, 31.

Reports from Graphic exchangesmen throughout the country indicate that "Wildness of Youth" will probably break all standing Graphic Film Corporation records for first run bookings. The demand on this latest Graphic release, which includes in its cast, aside from Virginia Pearson and Mary Anderson, such screen celebrities as Harry Morey, Joe Striker, Bobby Connelly, Thurston Hall and Julia Swayne Gordon, has been the greatest in the history of Ivan Abramson's career as a producer.

Burr Signs Mary Anderson Will Appear in Series of Twelve Two-Reel All-Star Comedy Pictures

THE triumvirate of stars for C. C. Burr's "All-Star Comedies" was definitely completed this week when it was announced that "Sunshine" Mary Anderson, long a screen favorite and star, had signed with Burr to appear in a series of twelve two-reel all-star comedies with Ray McKee and Charlie Murray, veteran Mack Sennett comedy star.

Miss Anderson has already begun work at Burr's Glendale Studio, where production on the "All-Star Comedies" started last week with McKee and Charlie Murray under the direction of Gregory La Cava, who was associated with Johnny Hines in the production of the "Torchies" and in Hines' latest feature, "Sure-Fire Flint."

"Mary Anderson is certainly a welcome addition to our all-star cast," commented C. C. Burr, "since her work before the screen in female leads with Vitagraph and First National in such lead pictures as 'Two Minutes To Go,' with Charles Ray and in Oliver Morosco's 'Half Breed,' has brought her the admiration of a legion of movie-goers.

"Miss Anderson fits in our all-star plans nicely, for in conjunction with Ray McKee and Charlie Murray, I believe we have a cast and production unit that we can be proud of. These comedies are to be made at the rate of one each month for twelve months, and judging from the high calibre of the 'rush' prints made to date on the first of these, I am certain that this entire series will be heartily welcomed.

Unity Productions Has New Picture

Unity Productions, Inc., have a picture now in preparation which, they claim will cause a stir in the independent field. This is "A Woman's Story," the story of a young girl's struggles in the face of adversity.

Unity announces that this special will follow "Why Do Men Marry?" featuring Edy Darilea, the rights of which have already been disposed of for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey.

Miss Darilea, the star of this latter production, received warm praise in the reviews of this picture.

Cutting of "Othello" Near Completion

The work of cutting and editing the continental Shakespearian photoplay, "Othello," which Export & Import and David P. Howells have acquired for the American market, is rapidly nearing completion.

It is expected that a private showing of the film will be given early next week.

Sales Manager Returns From Middle West

Jack Von Tilzer, general sales manager of East Coast Productions, has returned from the Middle West. Mr. Von Tilzer says that business conditions are excellent and that there really is a big demand for the right kind of picture.

Shadows

in the age of primitive man were strange and terrible. In modern times shadows have been made to provide four fifths of all the theatre entertainment of mankind, in the form of motion pictures or "movies." At first these were confused and crude, making their appeal in places of the old "nickelodeon" type; but step by step the moving shadow picture has been developed to the degree of excellence displayed in the productions released by

SECOND NATIONAL PICTURES CORPORATION

Out of the Shadows

of the past, the haphazard methods, misdirected efforts, expensive experiments and domineering tactics which have come near to wrecking many of the older film concerns, has emerged triumphant, the brightest hope and one best bet of independent producers and progressive exhibitors.

SECOND NATIONAL PICTURES CORPORATION

WHY

play the old, unsatisfactory, losing game when Second National is in a position to insure prosperity to wide awake producers and exhibitors alike?

CURRENT RELEASES:

- "ONE MOMENT'S TEMPTATION"—An unusual photoplay of rare charm and strong human interest, scenes laid in Maryland, with Marjorie Villis, James Knight and Bernard Dudley.
- "THE NIGHT RIDERS"—Thrilling Northwestern from the popular novel by Ridgewell Cullum, with Maudie Dunham, Albert Ray and Andre Beaulieu.
- "HER STORY"—Tense human interest photodrama featuring Madge Titheradge, speaking stage star of "The Butterfly on the Wheel."
- "DAVID AND JONATHAN"—Picturization of E. Temple Thurston's famous novel of love and adventure afloat and ashore, with Madge Titheradge.
- "BROKEN SHADOWS"—Irish love story from the novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice, featuring Isobel Elsom, Mary Forbes, James Lindsay and Ivan Sampson.

Producers Security Has Many Successes

The Producers Security Corporation is playing no little part in strengthening the State Right field. Many of the biggest successes of the year have been placed in this distributing channel by this enterprising organization.

Dorothy Gish's latest success, "The Country Flapper," is a box office magnet for Independents. "Trail of the Law," "The Man Who Paid," and "The Wolf's Fangs," Oscar Apfel Productions, are decided successes.

"The Right Way" and "The Soul of Man" are two of the biggest pictures of the year to be State Righted.

"Squire Phin," "Welcome to Our City," "Mr. Potter of Texas," and "Mr. Bingle," from Maclvn Arbuckle features, are being offered to State Righters. "Diare of Star Hollow," with Evelyn Greeley, has been most successful in this field.

Two new features are ready for immediate release: "In the Night," a mystery drama, and "Madame Sans Gene," a massive spectacle to be presented by Aubrey Kennedy.

"Jungle Goddess" Gets Unusual Praise

It is an unusual thing for a big production and distributing organization to compare an independent product with its own, but that is what Pathé is doing with the Selig serial "The Jungle Goddess."

Pathé of London purchased the United Kingdom rights to this chapter-picture from the Export & Import Film Company, so annexing the first independent serial they ever handled.

In advertising the serial they state it is their supreme serial offering and in every way meets the high standard of quality they have set for their serial offerings, according to word from the Export & Import company.

"Only a Shopgirl" Has Strong Cast

THE greatest cast ever assembled for an Independent production is claimed for "Only a Shopgirl."

Word comes from the New York offices of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation that producer Harry Cohn, in charge of West Coast production centre, has completed the signing of a company that will make Independent history, and be the biggest thing of its kind ever undertaken.

Included in the company are Estelle Taylor, Mae Busch, Richard Dix, Wallace Beery, Claire Dubrev, Baby Josephine Adair and Billy Scott.

This cast was assembled after closest study of the script and each player was selected because he or she best typifies the character and spirit of the various roles.

Edward Le Saint, who gave "More To Be Pitied" such excellent direction, is directing "Only a Shopgirl."

Equity Picture Given World Premiere

"What's Wrong With the Women," Daniel Carson Goodman's production for release on the independent market through Equity Pictures had its premiere in two key cities simultaneously this week, marking the world's premiere of this production. In Philadelphia the picture is now playing the Palace and Arcadia theatres. It will run a week in each house.

"What's Wrong With the Women" is being distributed through the Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia.

In New York, where it is being distributed through Commonwealth Film Corporation, the picture opened last Sunday at the Cameo theatre, a Broadway first-run house, where it will play an entire week. Following this booking the picture will start over the entire Keith Circuit.

Steiner to Maintain Neal Hart Unit

William Steiner will maintain the Neal Hart unit in Hollywood for several productions. The Hart company recently made a trip to the far north to secure shots for their latest release "South of Northern Lights," in which it is claimed the most successful photography of the aurora borealis ever made by any company is embodied in the story.

Steiner will make a flying trip to the coast next month. He is looking for good western and semi-western stories for the Hart unit. Arrangements are under way for a well known studio in Hollywood, which will give the Steiner Productions three studios—one at Cliffside, N. J., the other at Hot Wells, Texas, and the one at Hollywood.

Mrs. Keating Will Head Warner Scenario Dept.

Mrs. Pearl Keating, who was handling the "fan" magazine publicity for the Warner Brothers pictures, has been placed in charge of the Warner Scenario Department.

Mrs. Keating was formerly on the dramatic staffs of the Boston Herald, Globe and Traveler, Artcolor Film Sold for New England and Penn.

"Making Hubby Like It," an Artcolor picture distributed by American Releasing Corporation, has been extensively booked in the New England and Philadelphia territories. This includes the Black New England theatres, Famous Players houses in New England; W. P. Gray Circuit, and Empire Theatres, Inc., of New England, and Commerford and Stanley of Pennsylvania.

"Making Hubby Like It" is the first motion picture produced, photographed, printed and developed in natural colors. It was made by the Artcolor process, perfected by Louis J. Dittmar, which cost over a million dollars and required eight years of scientific research to develop.

The colors are not produced by hand, stencil or artificial treatment of any kind but are acquired solely by a photographic process.

Big Poster Campaign on C. B. C. Pictures

Following announcement last week that Apollo Exchange of New York, which holds Greater New York rights to "More To Be Pitied," was covering the entire territory with twenty-four sheets on this C. B. C. picture, comes word of one of the biggest poster contracts ever let by an Independent Pittsburgh film exchange, according to C. B. C.

Harry A. Lande, manager of Quality Film Corporation, Pittsburgh, states that he has contracted for the placing of five hundred twenty-four sheet stands in various places throughout the territory he controls on this production.

Mike Rosenberg on Way to New York

Mike Rosenberg, who, with Irving M. Lesser, controls the activities of Western Pictures Exploitation and who, with Sol Lesser, is associated in the Principal Pictures corporation, will arrive in New York this week direct from the Coast.

Mr. Rosenberg will make his offices in the Loew State building with Lesser while in Gotham. His stay will be brief and only matters of utmost interest pertaining to the Western Pictures exploitation company and Principal Pictures corporation, will be discussed.

Ten Year Old Veteran Has New Contract

MASTER JOSEPH DEPEW, ten year old veteran of the screen and stage, has been re-engaged by director Dell Henderson, in whose production "The Broken Silence," Joe played an important role.

This time, Joe will complete work which was started in the spring on "Jacqueline." The exteriors showing a spring thaw were necessarily taken during the "melt," but the picture was scheduled for fall release and consequently was set aside to be completed in September.

Meantime, the youngster who is winning a flattering number of admirers, has scored the hit of his young career in "Timothy's Quest."

Second National Names Second Release

"One Moment's Temptation," is announced as the second release for the Fall season by Second National Pictures Corporation. The scenes are laid in Maryland, on what is said to be the most beautifully wooded canal in America. Marjorie Villis, James Knight and Bernard Dudley are featured in the production.

"One Moment's Temptation" is said to appeal through many tense situations and exciting action. The picture will be offered for booking in a few days.

The first release by Second National for the Fall season is "Broken Shadows," now booking, a romantic picture play of life in modern Ireland founded on the novel, "Nance," by Charles Garvice, featuring Isobel Elsom.

Second National plans to release two pictures each month for the current season.

Hollywood Picture in Toledo Theatre

After a successful premiere presentation at Wood's Theatre during the week of September 11th, "Night Life in Hollywood" will begin a week's engagement at H. C. (Doc) Horater's big new Alhambra Theatre in Toledo on September 18th.

Schlesinger Leaves on Trip to England

GUS S. SCHLESINGER, general manager of the Warner Brothers foreign department, left last week for England to negotiate for the distribution of the forthcoming series of Warner pictures.

Schlesinger will remain in Europe for three months, and during that time he expects to not only successfully dispose of the Warner productions, but also to make a first hand study of foreign conditions. His study of the foreign market will center on the production advance of European producers, and what is in most demand by exhibitors and buyers in general.

WHY DO MEN MARRY?

Featuring

EDY DARCLEA

Fresh From Her Triumphs
In Fox's "NERO"

"A Statuesque Type of Beauty."—M. P. NEWS

The story holds one's interest because it has suspense and the players are ideal types for their respective roles, particularly the men who portray the clubmen. Edy Darclea, a statuesque type of beauty, plays a dual role and gives a good performance. The scenes of Venice are the real thing, and the atmosphere is entirely correct. Lesley Mason has edited the picture so that it carries an even sequence throughout, the story interest being emphasized through the captions. The picture should please American audiences.

M. P. NEWS

THE VERDICT OF THE PRESS

Luxurious settings and the story that displays some effective intrigue, keeps the spectator interested in this production, starring Edy Darclea, who made an impression in "Nero" by her performance of the slave girl. In this she plays a double role, that has been designed with more than usual originality. She is possessed of so much physical charm, that she will be attractive to many. Big scenes in the theatre have been well directed. There are some rich interiors and a number of beautiful outdoor shots.

Pathe to Release Will Rogers Two-Reelers

PATHE announces the acceptance of two two-reel comedy productions starring Will Rogers for release this fall. They are entitled respectively, "The Ropin' Fool," which was shown at the Capitol theatre, New York, with great success several months ago, and "Fruits of Faith," the latter having yet to make its first public appeal.

New York newspaper reviewers found "The Ropin' Fool" admirable as exhausting every refinement of the art of making a looped rope aside from the picture's feats of lassoing animals after the cowboy fashion.

"The Fruits of Faith" is described as an effective melting together of genuine humor and pathos. The hero is a true tramp but with a tender heart. His aversion to any sort of labor is cured when circumstances make him the sole protector of a baby wail.

Picture Brings Hostile Savages Together

A film battle with ever-present possibilities of becoming too realistic is what will be seen in "Passions of the Sea," formerly known as "Captain Blackbird," a story of the South Seas, directed by R. A. Walsh for Goldwyn.

Bringing together into one big mob scene the natives of twelve different and not-too-friendly districts was the unprecedented diplomatic accomplishment of M. D. Gardner, business manager of the company. The French government of Tahiti has always been very careful to keep the tribes separate, but so strong was the lure of the camera, even for the untutored Polynesian, that they laid aside all other rivalries except as to which should most quickly and correctly do what the director told them.

Famous Mission Figures in Walker Film

The famous old San Juan Capistrano mission, midway between Los Angeles and San Diego, will figure prominently in "Captain-Fly-By-Night," Johnnie Walker's first starring vehicle for F. B. O. release.

The story, written by Johnston McCulley, which appeared in the Blue Book magazine, deals with the early period of California, during the days of the missions. A great many of the scenes are laid in the famous old mission.

Walker will take his entire organization to the old mission, where several days will be utilized in filming certain scenes in the exact locale of the story.

"Ebb Tide" Filming Difficult

Director George Melford Conquered
11 Natural Elements in Production

LISTED among new records in the record-smashing business of making motion pictures is said to be the recent achievement of George Melford in his conquering of about every possible natural element during the production of "Ebb Tide," his Paramount picture version of the Robert Louis Stevenson-Lloyd Osbourne South Sea tale, in which Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery and Jacqueline Logan are the principal players.

"Ebb Tide" was taken on land, on the water and under the water, while transportation to and from a Pacific Island location required travelling over the water in a hydro-aeroplane.

Scenes on land included a reproduction of the waterfront at Papeete, Tahiti, at night, a scene which required the transportation of sufficient electrical equipment to light a town of ten thousand people. This constituted a new record for across water transportation and illumination.

On the water there was a dramatic scene in which a 330-foot schooner was burned. And also on the surface one sees the beginning of a strenuous fight with an octopus by Lila Lee and James Kirkwood which is the big punch of the story.

The octopus fight and scenes of pearl-diving are continued under water through the use of a diver in a diving suit and a diving bell holding the cameraman, Bert Glennon. Expert Hawaiian divers who worked in these scenes, some of which required many minutes of immersion, included J. P. Spencer and Chief Lava.

Selznick Special Promises Much

"One Week of Love," Nearing Finish,
Expected to Start Season With Bang

WITH the last shots being made on "One Week of Love," first of the sixteen super specials scheduled for production by the Selznick company during the season of 1922-23 being made on the Pacific coast, there is arriving daily a mass of information which seems to indicate that this big photoplay is destined to start the Selznick season off with a bang. Of particular interest are the still photographs which better than words, tell just what the producers have been able to accomplish.

The story has remarkable scope, dealing with "high society" life, the customs and manners of more commonplace people, and, in addition, with exciting incidents in the borderlands of the United States and Mexico.

Some of the big situations have to do with the extremely hazardous business of driving aeroplanes over the lofty western mountains. There is a particularly thrilling aeroplane crash. Another big situation shows the wreck of a train as it is crossing a torrential mountain stream. The stills prove that all of this thrilling action has been caught for the picture.

Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are co-starred in "One Week of Love." Advance information is that both gave remarkable performances in the roles for which they were cast.

It is expected that the cutting and titling of the picture will be completed within the next two or three weeks and a rush print delivered to the Selznick home offices in New York city.

Vignola Receives Warm Praise

Hailed As Director of Year's Best
In "When Knighthood Was In Flower"

PROBABLY the greatest tribute ever accorded a motion picture director was paid to Robert G. Vignola this week by the critics of the New York newspapers who, after viewing the premiere of Mr. Vignola's Cosmopolitan production, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," unanimously declared him to be the outstanding figure in the directorial ranks.

The New York Times, generally conservative in its reviews, said in part: "More than any one else the man responsible for the genuine merit of 'When Knighthood Was in Flower' is Robert G. Vignola. It is first of all Mr. Vignola's film and he should be proud of it."

The New York Daily News said: "The triumph belongs to Robert G. Vignola. In the field of artistic production and direction he has hung up a mark for others to shoot at and he has hung it high."

The New York Mail said: "Robert G. Vignola who directed this picture has by this picture elevated himself to the ranks of those who can do the biggest things in the film world and do them splendidly."

"Sherlock Holmes" To Go Through Goldwyn

"SHERLOCK HOLMES," starring John Barrymore, will be released by the Goldwyn Pictures corporation as one of its twenty big pictures of the year, according to announcement just given out. The photoplay was adapted by Earle Browne and Marion Fairfax from William Gillette's stage play based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories. Albert Parker directed the production.

The cast supporting the star contains the names of many of the best known players on stage and screen: Gustave von Seyffertitz, Carol Dempster, Roland Young, Louis Wolheim, Albert Brunning, Hedda Hopper, Peggy Bayfield, Margaret Kemp, Anders Randoir, William H. Powell, Robert Schable, Percy Knight, Reginald Denny, David Torrence, Robert Fischer, Lumsden Hare, Jerry

Light for 500 Homes on Single Set

Enough electricity to illuminate 500 homes was used to light one of the huge sets used in the screening of "Peg O' My Heart," Laurette Taylor's photoplay. King Vidor is directing the screen version of the international stage success by J. Hartley Manners at the Metro studio.

With the total amount of 850,000 watts of electricity, not only could 500 homes be illuminated, but there would remain current enough to operate in each the phonograph and player piano, the doorbell and cooking range, to charge the wireless battery, manufacture ice in the refrigerator, heat the curling irons, percolator, toaster, and cook the waffles, to do the ironing, make the ice cream and do the family washing.

Latest Travelaugh Laid Along Riviera

"Such is Life on the Riviera" is the current Hy Mayer Travelaugh release on the Film Booking Offices of America short subject program. This is the twelfth of these single reel cartoon-scenic novelties to be issued by F. B. O. It has already played at the Capitol theatre, New York, and will shortly be seen in many of the leading first run screens of the country.

This reel shows the exquisite beauty of the "playground of Europe" as well as illustrating the quaint types of peasants. The Cosmopolitan throng of visitors has also been caricatured and artistically photographed.

Unique Tie-up Made on "Turn to the Right"

A NOVEL advertising campaign successfully tied up local stores as well as the name of the photoplay when "Turn to the Right" was shown by Fred. S. Meyer at the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Mr. Meyer placed two advertisements, two columns wide and two inches high, in an issue of the Hamilton News which preceded his showing. One was worded: When you shop, do you "Turn to the Right" Dealer, or do you buy at random? There's a message in store for you, telling you where to "Turn to the Right" store for the right thing. "Turn to the Right" merchant when in need of any of life's necessities. "Turn to the Right" store for quality merchandise, in other words ADVERTISED goods. "Turn to the Right" of page 3 in tomorrow's news.

On the following day appeared a large advertisement of many of Hamilton's leading shops, with the phrase "Turn to the Right" stressed in many ways.

Sam Benjamin Oklahoma City F.B.O. Manager

Harry M. Berman, general manager of distribution of the Film Booking Offices of America this week announces the appointment of Sam Benjamin, formerly manager of Universal's Oklahoma City branch, as manager of the F. B. O. exchange in that city. Mr. Benjamin is one of the best known ex-changemen in the Southwest and comes to F. B. O. with a thorough knowledge of his territory and a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Berman is now on a tour of F. B. O. exchanges and is at present in the South. He reports that branch managers everywhere are highly enthusiastic over the reception accorded to "In the Name of the Law," the F. B. O. police picture, by exhibitors.

"Dangerous Age" Has Thrills and Beauty

With the production of "The Dangerous Age" John M. Stahl recently completed his fifth all-star special for Louis B. Mayer presentation through First National.

Among the spectacular features incorporated in the story are a thrilling race between an automobile and a train, culminating in a sensational smash-up; a horse race staged especially with ten horses and jockeys from the Tia Juana track in Mexico; a café scene in which hundreds of beautifully gowned women take part, and in which was installed all of the high-pitched gayety known to mark the famous old Cafe de Paris after which the set was copied. There is also a wedding scene said to be very beautiful.

Ingram Begins on "Passion Vine"

Author of Story with Unit at Miami To Insure Accuracy of All Details

REX INGRAM began the making of his forthcoming production for Metro release, "The Passion Vine," at Miami, Florida, this week.

Locations have been finally chosen, technical facilities arranged satisfactorily and such settings as are required in the outdoor scenes erected. The last few days were consumed in going over every detail of plan in order to reduce to a minimum the time necessary for minor rearrangements after actual beginning of the filming.

With Mr. Ingram is John Russell, author of the story, who will serve in an advisory capacity. "The Passion Vine" is a colorful romance of the South Seas, one of the famous volume of short stories by Mr. Russell, published under the title "Where the Pavement Ends." After a wide circulation here, the book was given a most hearty reception in England. It is first-hand writing, for Mr. Russell spent several years cruising about the islands near Papeete, living with natives, chumming with beachcombers, hearing the outlandish tales of traders in the clubs on the fringe of civilization and coming upon tales even more stirring. He has been beyond where the pavement ends; and his presence with the Ingram organization will be invaluable in insuring that every detail of dress and custom and setting be accurate.

The leading roles in "The Passion Vine" will be enacted by Alice Terry, who has added to her already enormous success by her representation of the Princess Flavia in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and by Ramon Navarro, the dashing young Rupert of Hentzau in the same screen drama. Edward Connelly, Mr. Ingram's superstition—for the brilliant young director feels Mr. Connelly's membership in a cast of his is guarantee of a picture's success—has left Hollywood for Miami.

For a later Rex Ingram production, "Scaramouche," a novel by Rafael Sabatini, has been purchased by Metro, it was announced this week. This is one of the literary sensations of the last five years.

Critics Praise "Manslaughter"

New York Newspaper Reviewers Unite In Declaring It C. B. DeMille's Best

NEW YORK newspaper critics, in reviewing Cecil B. DeMille's latest production for Paramount, "Manslaughter," now running at the New York Rivoli, seem to be practically of the same mind as their professional relatives in Los Angeles, Chicago and San Francisco, all of whom agree that the picture is DeMille's greatest accomplishment thus far and that it will prove one of the outstanding box-office successes of recent years.

The praise of the reviewers is well distributed, for the author, Alice Duer Miller, and the scenarist, Jeanie Macpherson, in every case are credited along with the producer and the featured players, Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson, with their just due in the division of the honors.

"Competently done, consistently interesting—well worth a trip," said the Sun critic, who re-echoed the sentiments of R. W. Baremore in the Telegraph, who said: "Here is a really great picture. . . .

'Manslaughter' cannot be too highly recommended. It is one of the finest pictures ever shown on Broadway and surely will satisfy the most exacting patron of the motion picture theatre."

Said the Journal: "'Manslaughter' appears to possess all the elements of an unusual success," and the Call: "People will flock to see it."

Particular stress is laid upon the work of the leading players in the large cast made up entirely of people well known to screen patrons. "Mr. Meighan's performance here is powerful and human," said the World. The Herald's critic said: "Meighan is an admirable strong man in the grip of merciless fate and Misses Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson, together with the rest of the cast, make 'Manslaughter' a sure 'killing' in popularity. DeMille is just the man to have handled it, with its sophistication."

Semon Comedies Get Medal

Take Honors at Milan, Italy, Fair Win Praise from Continental Papers

LARRY SEMON comedies are the most popular ones shown in Italy judging from the vote and the award at the recent international contest, held in connection with the Milan fair, of a gold medal and diploma d'onore.

The rewards commission of the fair examined almost 100 films, from America, England, France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy. From this number they selected sixteen features, which were considered favorably. These were submitted to the throngs attending the fair. The selections of the public, through the vote, were awarded the prizes.

Of the 16 selected, 6 were American, 4 Italian, 3 Austrian, 2 German and 1 Swiss.

"Ridolini," which is Milanese for Larry Semon, seems to have found the Italian funny bone, with his

Paramount Stars Lead Cincinnati Contest

PARAMOUNT stars grabbed the inside track and held the lead to the finish in a contest recently conducted by the Cincinnati Post to determine the most popular male star of motion pictures.

Thomas Meighan led with 391 votes, Wallace Reid was a close second with 372 and Rodolph Valentino was third with 357. Moreover, says Paramount, what was still more significant of the popularity of these three stars was that the next highest was nearly 300 votes behind Valentino, polling only 72 votes.

Newspaper Comments on "Grandma's Boy"

The Heilig theatre of Portland, Ore., ran Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy" for four weeks, and the Portland Telegram commented editorially on this, characterizing it as "America's answer to the film makers."

Under the heading of "Grandma's Boy," on September 2nd, the Telegram said:

"For four weeks one of Portland's leading theatres has played a film comedy to crowded houses. Between 75,000 and 100,000 people have laughed and cried over the predicaments and trials of 'Grandma's Boy.'"

"The success of 'Grandma's Boy' is convincing argument that the American people as a whole, still love the clean, the true, and the beautiful in life."

"The success of 'Grandma's Boy' is America's answer to the film makers. Create what is pure, and sweet and real, and the American people will open their hearts and let you in."

"Remembrance" Gets First Runs Rapidly

Goldwyn's production of "Remembrance," its new Rupert Hughes picture, and the first release under the new policy of but twenty productions a year, all of them big super-features, is being booked rapidly in first run theatres, says a statement from Goldwyn Distributing Corporation.

The national release date for "Remembrance" is Oct. 8th. In a few instances there will be pre-release showings, notably at the Capitol theatre, New York, on Oct. 1 and at the California theatre, Los Angeles, on Sept. 24.

Betty May to Star in Al Herman Comedy

A special attraction in the new Century Comedy directed by Al Herman and starring Lee Moran will be Betty May who is to be featured in it.

Miss May, who has fully recovered from her bruises when a Ford used in a comedy scene, tipped over throwing her and George Monberg into a ditch filled with sharp stones, which necessitated bandages on both arms and prevented her appearance before the camera for several weeks.

First "Slippy McGee" Review at Natchez

THE national premier review of Oliver Morosco's production of "Slippy McGee" will be held in the city where the picture was filmed—Natchez, Miss. So great has been the interest in the Morosco feature in the Mississippi city that George R. Bentel, vice president and general manager of the Morosco Holding company is preparing to send a special print there that the Natchez citizens who cooperated in the production may have the first view of the film.

Bentel's decision was influenced, too, by the requests from the players who were in Natchez eight weeks and were won by the famed Southern hospitality. Colleen Moore, herself a Southern girl, was particularly anxious that Natchez be honored with the preview.

Neilan Finishes First for Goldwyn

Marshall Neilan last week finished the photography on his first production made in association with Goldwyn, "The Strangers' Banquet," adapted from Donn Byrne's novel. He is now engaged in editing and titling it.

"The Strangers' Banquet" is the biggest production of Mr. Neilan's career and is one that both Mr. Neilan and Goldwyn officials believe will rank among the biggest things yet done in the films.

Chester Writes Script For Mayo Film

"The Hot Head," Frank Mayo's current starring vehicle at Universal City, which Edward Sedgwick is directing, was written for the star by Lillian Chester, the wife of George Randolph Chester. Chester is a very busy man as one of the supervisors of the scenario department, but found time to prepare the continuity.

Mayo is supported by such artists as Helen Ferguson, Charles Clary, Albert McQuarrie, Melbourne MacDowell and Tom Kennedy.

"Manslaughter" Release Sept. 24

Said to Be Cecil C. DeMille's Best; Features Large Cast of Noted Actors

PARAMOUNT'S release for September 24 is Cecil B. DeMille's production, "Manslaughter," which has been pronounced by all the Paramount executives the greatest picture, judged from both box-office and artistic standards that the producer of "Old Wives for New," "Something to Think About" and "Male and Female" has ever made.

This picture opened Sunday at the New York Rivoli where it is booked to run for four weeks.

The story of "Manslaughter" is by Alice Duer Miller and the book proved to be one of the most sensational and best-selling novels of the past two years. Jeanie Macpherson adapted it for the screen and is said to have added bright laurels to her crown as a creator of film literature. Thomas Meighan, whose last appearance in a DeMille production was in "Male and Female," is featured in the leading male role, along with Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson.

Mr. Meighan plays the district attorney and Miss Joy the role of Lydia Thorne, the society girl, while Miss Wilson plays the important character of Evans, Lydia's maid, whom she has sent to prison for a petty theft. Others in the remarkably well chosen cast are John Milner, George Fawcett, Julia Faye, Edythe Chapman, Jack Mower, Dorothy Cumming, Casson Ferguson, Mickey Moore, James Neill, Sylvia Ashton, Raymond Hatton, Mabel Van Buren, Ethel Wales, Dale Fuller, Edward Martindel, Charles Ogle, Guy Oliver, Shannon Day and Lucien Littlefield.

"Rich Men's Wives" Given Immediate Bookings in Many Important Cities

IMMEDIATE play dates are being accorded "Rich Men's Wives," the first Preferred Picture to be released through the Al Lichtman corporation.

To those who have an intimate knowledge of a peculiar condition existing in the industry for some months past, this is interesting. Sales managers of the large distributing companies have issued orders to the members of their sales forces to secure immediate play dates at all costs and concentrate their energies along those lines rather than close for future bookings. The reason is that play dates are pay dates and spot bookings mean a flow of revenue to the distributor's treasuries.

In view of this, the Lichtman corporation feels that the reception accorded its first picture is somewhat out of the ordinary. In New York, the 96 day booking deal with the Loew circuit was consummated before negotiations with the Capitol had been started. It is common knowledge that this important circuit has all sorts of products upon which to draw and the fact that it played "Rich Men's Wives" so soon after the Capitol premiere is considered out of the beaten path.

Out of New York, the same state of affairs prevailed. First runs who had contracted for the production gave "Rich Men's Wives" immediate dates at once and in many cases, shelved other pictures to play it. The Consolidated Realty and Theater corporation made a blanket deal for five theaters in Chicago.

In Los Angeles, the Garrick will show the production for a week, following a similar engagement at the California.

If the Select picture "A Woman of No Importance" may serve as a criterion, exhibitors are offering more co-operation in an advertising way than ever before. For the showing of Oscar Wilde story at Clune's Broadway theatre in Los Angeles, Manager Jay Haas used a full page advertisement in The Record.

In addition to such a generous amount of space being allotted the production an additional source of gratification is the skilful way the page has been arranged. Select officials feel that advertising of this character cannot help but be a benefit to the industry as a whole.

Stage Player Added to Alice Brady Cast

Another addition to the cast of Alice Brady's latest Paramount picture, "Anna Ascends" is Grace Griswold, one of the leaders of the theatrical workshop movement and well known for her work on the legitimate stage. She has done little picture work, having been in but three pictures, "Disraeli," with George Arliss, "Smiling Through," and a Griffith Production.

Next Playgoers Release Is Announced

"THE MAN SHE BROUGHT BACK,"

a Charles Miller attraction, is announced for release by Playgoers Pictures on September 24th. The cast includes Earle Fox, Doris Miller, Frank Losee, Charles Mackay, Donald Russ, Harry Lee and Frederick Burton. It is in five reels, from the story by Jasper Ewing Brady and directed by Charles Miller. The story is said to follow a new angle based on the exploits of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, for in this case the trooper found it hard to be a hero. He was handicapped by fear, and he knew it; he was ashamed of it.

This release follows the Playgoers attraction "Face to Face" a romantic mystery drama featuring Marguerite Marsh and Coit Albertson, the release date of which was September 17th.

Suspense Said Strong in "High Seas"

Suspense is said to be employed to marvelous effect in "On the High Seas," a new Paramount picture in which Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are featured, supported by Mitchell Lewis. It is an Irvin Willat production.

The suspense in the scenes where the liner is on fire and Miss Dalton refuses to be hurried, waiting to dress until her way of escape is almost barred by flames, is almost unbearable, Paramount states, and her final rescue brings about a situation that is almost unparalleled.

Miss Dalton, in the role of a carefully reared girl, is in a leaky open boat with two stokers, one a brute, the other a gentleman. She is forced to bail the boat, drink and eat scraps. A sail is sighted which proves to be a plague ship. But they board her, clean ship and escape the plague.

Metro to Release Stan Laurel Comedies

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION will act as the distributing medium for a series of eight comedies, presented by the Amalgamated Producing company and starring Stan Laurel, it is announced by W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro. The first two of the series, "The Egg" and "The Weak-End Party," have already been completed and are scheduled for release within the immediate future.

Gill Pratt has been chosen as director of the staff. His experience of eleven years with the best comedy companies in motion pictures qualifies him admirably to fulfill his present position. Norman Tourag, associate director, has for the past three years been connected in an important capacity with Larry Semon. Clyde Brockman, formerly with Buster Keaton, has been engaged to provide special "stunts" for the series, serving in the same capacity as Percy Penbrooke.

Arctic Feature Praised by Explorers

Through the co-operation of the Chicago Daily News, "Nanook of the North," now showing at Orchestral Hall in that city, was shown last week at a meeting of the famous Adventurers' club. Some of the comments follow:

Ralph Linton, assistant curator of North American Ethnology: "It is the best show of the sort that I have ever seen. It is entertaining and at the same time has great scientific value."

Major F. J. Franklin, explorer, who has made many trips to the arctic: "This picture greatly impressed me. I recognized immediately that it was the real thing."

R. W. Patterson, member of the Arctic Brotherhood: "A story of the North that is an epic. In depicting the life of the natives, living and climatic conditions, and topography, the best picture every filmed."

New Owen Moore Comedy Draws Praise

Select branches throughout the country are conducting private showings incidents to the booking of "Love Is An Awful Thing," starring Owen Moore, which has just been released following its successful engagement at the Criterion theatre, New York city. In starting the boys out on these private showings General Manager John S. Woody asked for a little originality and it is appanent that he is getting it.

Rae Samuels, widely known as "The Blue Streak of Ragtime," who attended a showing in Seattle, says: "I raved over 'Reported Missing' and didn't think they could make a picture funnier, but Owen Moore's latest sure reaches the highest point in comedy. If I could put that kind of comedy in my vaudeville act the booking managers would have to get the United States mint to pay me."

Hodkinson's Schedule for Fall

Seven Productions Are Listed for Release During the Autumn Season

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces seven productions for release during the coming fall season. The forthcoming releases will feature such well known authors of the present day as Myrtle Reed, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Clara Louise Burnham and Charles K. Harris on the story side; while from the angle of production, the schedule will present the latest screen works of such prominent producers and directors as Hugo Ballin, Benjamin Hampton, Lloyd Ingraham, who is directing under the auspices of the Renco Film organization; Alan Crosland, Ward Lascelle, and C. S. Clancy. A screen adaptation of Washington Irving's "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," with Will Rogers, is among the releases.

"The Veiled Woman," based on Myrtle Reed's story of mystery and intrigue, was directed by Lloyd Ingraham and will be released by Hodkinson as a Renco Film production. Marguerite Snow appears in the featured role. Mr. Ingraham is said to have developed the screen version in such a way that the element of suspense is sustained to the very end.

"Married People," starring Mabel Ballin, was produced by Hugo Ballin. The picture is of the domestic problem type and is described as an intensely interesting subject with a wealth of exploitation possibilities.

Irene Castle in "Slim Shoulders," which has already been given an auspicious premiere at the Broadway Capitol, New York, is also included on the Hodkinson fall schedule. The famous Castle dancing steps and gorgeous gowns are among the features of the production. The story is by Charles K. Harris, and Alan Crosland handled the direction. The picture is already playing to big business in first run theatres in various parts of the country where elaborate fashion revue shows are accompanying the presentations.

Another "Miracle Man" is the claim for "Hearts' Haven" made by the Hodkinson organization. This subject will present Robert McKim in the leading role. The story, portraying the triumph of an unswerving faith over bodily affliction, is from Clara Louise Burnham's popular book. It was produced for the screen by Benjamin B. Hampton.

Colleen Moore appears as the star of "Affinities." This is rollicking comedy based on the story by Mary Roberts Rinehart and presented by Ward Lascelle.

The screen adaptation of Washington Irving's classic, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," will be released under the title of "The Headless Horseman." This production presents Will Rogers in the role of Ichabod Crane. C. S. Clancy presents the film version of the famous tale which has been a literary favorite of young and old for the many years that have elapsed since its first publication in Irving's "Sketch Book," a schoolroom standard text of the present day.

In "Mind Over Motor" is presented another amusing story of Mary Roberts Rinehart. This is one of the popular "Tish" stories. Trixie Friganza plays the leading role in the film production, which is being presented by Ward Lascelle.

More Praise for Lloyd Feature

Telegrams Continue to Come In With Congratulations on "Grandma's Boy"

IF "the proof of the pudding is the eating," then Harold Lloyd has certainly provided a tasty dish in his first five part feature, "Grandma's Boy," according to Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, the basis of judgment being the telegrams which he is receiving from every section of the country.

Here is one from Ray Grombacher of the Liberty theatre, Spokane: "Accept my congratulations on success of 'Grandma's Boy' which I personally claim the world's greatest audience comedy picture."

W. C. McIntire of the Rose theatre, Burlington, N. C. wires as follows: "Harold Lloyd's 'Grandma's Boy' was so funny that time fairly flew by. The walls fairly echoes with laughter. Will want an early return date on it."

From Seattle, Wash., dated September 13th: "'Grandma's Boy' opened September 9th, Liberty theatre. Quite a number of people have already seen it four times and any number two and three. All records for attendance run and audience approval will undoubtedly be smashed."

From Indianapolis, dated September 11th, "Grandma's Boy" opened at the Apollo theatre yesterday to record breaking business. Heavy downpour of rain could not stop people from waiting in line for hours trying to get in.

The following from Omaha, following the big opening at the Sun theatre: "'Grandma's Boy' opened to tremendous business. Thousands turned away and people standing in line until closing time."

"Passions of the Sea" Near Completion

Director R. A. Walsh is taking interiors for "Passions of the Sea," formerly called "Captain Blackbird," at the Goldwyn studios and expects to finish photography on the film within a few days.

"Kid" McCoy was engaged by Goldwyn to supervise the fight scenes in "Passions of the Sea" and he has been on the set much of the time since the return of Director Walsh and the cast from Tahiti.

Famed Norwegian Novel Bought by Universal

THE Universal Scenario Department announces the purchase of the world screen rights to "The Power of a Lie," internationally famed novel by Jonan Bojer, leading Norwegian writer. This book has been hailed as one of the greatest of modern novels. It won for its author the laurels of the French Academy.

Universal's acquisition of the novel came as the culmination of a hotly contested rivalry among several film companies. Moffat Yard & Co., the American agents of the Norwegian writer, were besieged by offers for the film rights. The novel is said to have material for the making of one of the strongest stories ever put on the screen.

"Golf" Wins Comment of Sports Writers

There seems to be much irresistible stuff in Larry Semon's new comedy, "Golf," that the newspaper cartoonists and sport writers can't make their pencils behave. First he won the top of the sport page in the Kansas City Star, and now comes the San Francisco Chronicle, which divides honors between Larry and the baseball feature writer.

Perhaps the reason may be found in some of the remarks of Harry B. Smith, who reviewed the picture at the California for the Chronicle:

"If a lot of our golfers took their royal and ancient as does Larry Seamon, they might get more of a kick out of the sport as a pastime. As the Semon comedy unreels I tried to get the golfing frame of mind in order to properly criticize. About the only admonition I could think of was 'Keep your eye on the ball.' Larry did everything but that. It was just one steady laugh, and when golf hands me that, I'm for it!"

McGregor Selected For "Cold Courage" Role

Malcolm McGregor is to have the leading role in "Cold Courage," the Metro production of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," Ben Ames Williams' sea story. Irvin V. Willat is to direct the photoplay.

It was less than a year ago that Mr. McGregor, formerly a Yale swimmer, was selected by Rex Ingram for a prominent part in "The Prisoner of Zenda." His work in this production won him a long-term contract with Metro. Soon after this Allan Holubar chose him for the principal role in "Broken Chains," the Chicago News $10,000 prize-winning scenario. Upon the completion of this part he was immediately assigned to play in "Cold Courage."

In this powerful sea story Mr. McGregor will enact the part of Joel Shore, an apparently cowardly sailor who develops into a real man. Billie Dove is the only other member of the cast selected so far. Other well known players will have important roles.

"Hound of Baskervilles" in Photoplay Edition

A SPECIAL photoplay edition of "The Hound of Baskervilles," the Sherlock Holmes story which is now being distributed by the Film Booking Offices of America, will be issued by Grosset and Dunlap, publishers. This novel, one of the three Sherlock Holmes stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle which has been published in novel form under its own name, is still enjoying a tremendous sale in this country, and is counted as the most mystifying and fascinating novel of Sherlock Holmes.

The photoplay edition of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will carry a specially designed jacket, mentioning the photoplay, and will be illustrated by the most thrilling scenes from the feature.

Waterfront Reproduced for "Singed Wings"

Short, winding cobblestone streets, along the sides of which rise squalid, bleached buildings, here a tenement home and there a greasy, evil-smelling restaurant, make the water front scenes along the San Francisco beachline an unusual and picturesque setting for "Singed Wings," Penrhyn Stanlaw's production for Paramount featuring Bebe Daniels.

An entire district of the North California city was copied at the West Coast Paramount studios for scenes in "Singed Wings." Al-

Comedian Makes Mark in Serious Acting

Raymond Griffith, comedian whose first dramatic work in Marshall Neilan's "Fools First" established him as one of the most notable actors of serious roles in the films, will be seen in "Minnie," Neilan's newest picture for First National.

Griffith's work in "Fools First" has been hailed by the critics as one of the best characterizations of the year. He has been called the second Henry Walthall of the screen as a result of his portrayal of "The Wop" in Neilan's crook picture.

In "Minnie," Griffith is given a comedy role, that of the enterprising chewing gum salesman and according to reports, his work in this picture will duplicate his success in "Fools First."

Jury Says Showing of "Nanook" is Success

Arthur E. Rousseau, Pathe Export manager, quotes from a London cable just received from Sir William Jury the statement that the preliminary United Kingdom trade showing of "Nanook of the North" was a great success. Sir William holds from Pathe distribution rights in the Flaherty Eskimo epic for Great Britain and Ireland, and is said to have initiated an exploitation campaign for the picture of a character and scope heretofore unknown in the history of the cinema trade of the British Isles.

Critics Laud "Eternal Flame"

New York Reviewers Enthusiastic In Praising New Norma Talmadge Release

NORMA TALMADGE in "The Eternal Flame," a First National Attraction, opened at the Strand theatre, New York, to crowded houses on Sunday, Sept. 17. Managing Director Joseph Plunkett of the Strand arranged an effective musical accompaniment for this splendid Joseph M. Schenck production.

Motion picture critics of the New York newspapers were enthusiastic in their praise of Norma Talmadge in this, her latest screen vehicle. Following is the substance of their comments:

Herald—The picture is more consistently dramatic than "Smilin' Through," and there are sufficient intense scenes to outfit several romances. Miss Talmadge is very moving, playing with exceptional variety in her different moods.

Times—It is unquestionably a fine picture because it presents the always competent Miss Talmadge with an excellent story, intelligent direction and an unusually good supporting cast.

The director, Frank Lloyd, has made a careful, workmanlike job of the whole picture, without any undue straining for effects.

Tribune—Every foot of it is interesting. How could it fail to be, with those two fascinating people, Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle, as the lovers?

World—A remarkably fine performance by Miss Talmadge and one of corresponding excellence by Conway Tearle, combined with a sincerity of direction and a splendor of background, make it a real and holding drama of the screen.

Max Linder Comedy Wins Praise

Philadelphia Reviewers Like Satire Note of "The Three Must-Get-Theres"

WHEN Max Linder's feature length burlesque, "The Three Must-Get-Theres," an Allied Producers' and Distributors' corporation release, was shown recently as the chief attraction at the Aldine theatre, Philadelphia, it won quick approval of critics and public. "The picture as a whole," said the review of the North American, "is a gem or refined slap-stick comedy. Max Linder's principal burlesque is of the sword play in the motion picture version of 'The Three Musketeers.' The perfect ease and nonchalance with which Linder, as Dart-in-Again, overcomes the most terrible obstacles and overwhelming numbers of enemies causes riots of laughter."

"Those who enjoy comedies with a subtle shaft of satire will be regaled effectively by 'The Three Must-Get-Theres,'" said the critic for the Inquirer. "The keen wit of the author and actor will be appreciated alike by those who have and have not seen the serious presentations of 'The Three Musketeers,' on which this burlesque is based. Twentieth century slang runs riotously through the picture. Kings and queens tumble and velvets are torn. Plume hats are chewed by hungry donkeys and the most burlesque duels are fought."

"Speed" to Be Released Oct. 22

Latest Hutchison Vehicle Said to Be Most Thrilling of All Patheserials

A PATHE announcement of interest to exhibitors fixes Oct. 22 as the release date for "Speed." This latest production starring Charles Hutchison is asserted to be the swiftest moving, most thrilling, of Patheserials. Proof of this claim, says Pathe, is contained in the voluntary testimonials of every exhibitor or other picture expert who has witnessed the screening of the opening episodes.

For the filming of Charles Hutchison's third "stunt" Patheserial Producer George B. Seitz is declared to have utilized every resource acquired in his long and successful career as a maker of this type of motion picture. The story was conceived and developed to bear out the preconceived idea of the theme and the title—"Speed." The main requirement of the action was clean-cut, decisive, realistic human achievement in perilous circumstances and in scenes succeeding each other with the maximum of swiftness.

With this object in view, the supporting cast was selected with the utmost care. The part of the heroine, Lucy Durant, was entrusted to beautiful and intrepid Lucy Fox. Harry Semels, an outstanding figure in several Seitz productions, was engaged to play Jim Sprague, who has a sufficient motive to sustain a running battle with the hero from the beginning to the end of the story. Other important characters are played by John Webb Dillon, Cecile Bonnel and Winifred Verina, the last named winning her chance by first winning a beauty and talent contest in which two hundred New York stage examples of special attractiveness were entered.

Publisher Plans Movie Edition of "Salome"

ONE of the most prominent of American publishers is preparing a new edition of Oscar Wilde's "Salome" to be illustrated by photographs of scenes from Nazimova's motion picture production of the same name. The book will appear coincidentally with the release of the photoplay, it is expected.

It will mean that joined with the force of the national publicity campaign for Nazimova's "Salome" will be that of the publisher's in behalf of the new Wilde book. This latter will doubtless embrace specially prepared window displays and country-wide newspaper advertising, with a mention of the photoplay, necessarily. Tie-ups with the book stores and with the book departments of department stores will be almost automatic, and the returns from such co-operative sales efforts will be no less so.

Like "Tailor Made Man" in Cleveland

"Charles Ray's 'A Tailor Made Man' has many scenes in it which are true pantomime," said the critic for the Cleveland, Ohio, Press when this United Artists release was shown recently at Reade's Hippodrome theatre. "Charles Ray loses his bashfulness in 'A Tailor Made Man,'" wrote the reviewer for the Cleveland News. "Here we see Ray, a typical young chap, enthusiastic about his position, ever seeking to increase his knowledge with regard to world affairs, always on the alert for something new that will be of assistance to some great man in some great industry, making love in the modern way, and proving to a 'waiting world' that clothes do make the man."

Preferred Executive on Return to Coast

Sam Jaffe, business manager of Preferred Pictures, Inc. which distributes through the Al Lichtman corporation has left New York for Los Angeles after spending a brief vacation in town. Jaffe will reach Los Angeles in time to get busy on two new pictures, "Are You a Failure?" an original story by Larry Evans which Tom Forman will make as his second Tom Forman Production, and "The Hero," which will be directed by Gasnier.

Record Sized Sign Used for "Monte Cristo"

One of the largest canvas signs ever used to advertise a motion picture was a feature of the exploitation campaign of the Grand theatre, Columbus, O., during the recent showing of "Monte Cristo," the Fox Special.

The sign was dropped from the roof and along the side of the building and extended over a stretch of five floors. It was 69 feet long, 11 feet wide; the letters

Good Representation in Philadelphia

THE productions of United Artists corporation and the subsidiary organization, Allied Producers and Distributors corporation, were well represented in various theatres of Philadelphia last week. Max Linder's burlesque, feature-length comedy, "The Three Must-Get-Theres" was the feature attraction at the Aldine, while at the Palace in East Market street, Charles Ray's "A Tailor Made Man," a United Artists release, was drawing capacity business. The Great Northern and the Allegheny, two of the biggest outlying theatres in Philadelphia, also were showing "A Tailor Made Man" to good business.

Sidney Bracy Kept Busy At Universal

Sidney Bracy, who just recently completed the "heavy" characterization in "The Radio King," Universal serial, is playing a principal role in support of Herbert Rawlinson in "One Wonderful Night."

Bracy had no sooner played the "Radio King" role than he was chosen for one of the central roles of "Merry-Go-Round," the forthcoming von Stroheim Universal-super-Jewel.

While von Stroheim is preparing and shooting preliminary scenes, Bracy is portraying an odd character in the Rawlinson picture.

"If I Were Queen" Out Shortly

Ethel Clayton's First Release For F. B. O. Said Greatest She Has Made

THE second week of October will see the release of the long heralded "If I Were Queen." Ethel Clayton's first production for release through the Film Booking Offices of America. Every effort has been made to introduce Miss Clayton as an F. O. B. star with the best picture of her career, and it is stated that "If I Were Queen" is the most artistic and elaborate photoplay which has ever been made at the R-C Studios.

To assure Miss Clayton the most capable directorial genius possible Wesley Ruggles was engaged to handle the megaphone for the first Ethel Clayton F. O. B. release. His work in "If I Were Queen" is one of the outstanding features of the production. His treatment is artistic to the highest degree and he has handled the many romantic scenes in the play in the most colorful manner.

According to F. O. B. officials, Miss Clayton has never had such an opportunity to allow her personality full play as in "If I Were Queen." A great part of the story is laid in a mythical Balkan principality, with the star cast as an American girl thrown into the vortex of its intrigue and enmeshed in a royal romance. Hurrying to the aid of a schooldays companion, Princess Oluf of Kosnia, the girl is delayed in a neighboring principedom, mistaken for the princess and courted by the impetuous young Prince. These scenes allowed Mr. Ruggles to present elaborate interior scenes as well as permitting Miss Clayton to wear regal gowns and coronation robes with beautiful effect. Seldom has such colorful romance been presented on the screen as in this sequence.

A number of physical thrills are incorporated in the picture, a train wreck is presented in the early reels and the breaking of a dam and flooding of the valley follows closely.

"Our Gang" Comedy Gets Place Over Feature

The tendency of reviewers to award prominence to superior short subjects is again noted by Pathe in connection with "One Terrible Day," the first of the Hal Roach two-reel children and animal "Our Gang" comedies.

The New York Post reviewer wrote: "The best thing on the Rivoli program this week is the funniest comedy shown for some time—'One Terrible Day,' bringing forth screams of laughter. It is just a handful of youngsters assisted by some clever horses, a monkey, and barnyard animals, but is worth seeing."

"There is an extremely funny comedy film tacked to the bill at the Rivoli," says the New York World, "called 'One Terrible Day,' dealing with philanthropic women and slum children. It had them laughing out loud yesterday, which is a real accomplishment."

Work Started on Leah Baird Special

With arrangements just completed for a series of Leah Baird special productions to be made for Associated Exhibitors under an agreement between Arthur S. Kane and Arthur F. Beck, her manager, the first special already is well under way at the Thomas H. Ince studio.

Miss Baird, who wrote her own scenario for this picture from a four act play, "All Mine," is being supported by a trio of leading men, Richard Tucker, Walter McGrail and Tom Santchi. Wallace Worsley is directing.

Jungle Scenes Prepared for Minter Release

Mary Miles Minter's new Paramount picture, directed by Charles Maigne and adapted by Will M. Ritchey from Stephen French Whitman's novel, "Sacrifice," will shortly take the company into jungle scenes, representing the heart of the African forest. Semitropical locations have been made purely tropical by the hands of the studio experts not far from Hollywood. Thus, these African scenes will be as realistic as if they had been taken in the actual wilds.

"Oliver Twist" to Open Kentucky Theatre

COLONEL FRED LEVY, franchise holder of Associated First National Pictures in Kentucky and Tennessee, announces that his new Kentucky theatre in Lexington, Ky., will open early in October with Jackie Coogan's recently completed super-feature, "Oliver Twist."

"I have been anxious to book a big production for the new theatre," said the Colonel, "and really did not know what I would select until Sol Lesser gave me a peep at Jackie's beautiful production. Immediately after viewing this Dickens classic, my troubles were over insofar as the opening program was concerned."

The new Kentucky theatre is said to be one of the finest houses in the entire south.

New N. Y. Exploiteer at Universal Exchange

W. C. Herrmann, general sales manager of the Big "U" exchange, the distributing center for Universal pictures in the New York territory, reports the addition of a new member to the Big "U" exploitation staff. The newcomer is James F. Biggin, of East Orange, for several years on the staff of the Newark Star Eagle.

Biggin will assist Fred V. Greene, Jr., exploitation expert in charge of the Big "U" exploitation department. Greene reports that he is overwhelmed by requests from exhibitors anxious to have exploitation co-operation in putting over their programs.

Universal Buys "Bavu," Russian Melodrama

Universal has bought the screen rights to "Bavu" the Russian melodrama produced in New York last winter. Word of the purchase was received this week from the Universal home office.

It is understood that the play will be made into an all star screen feature.

"Bavu" was written and produced by Earl Carroll at the Carroll theatre. It is a mystery melodrama.

Universal officials say it embodies phases of characterization and action never before attempted on the screen.

Two Additions to Cast of Ferguson Film

Two noteworthy additions have been made to the cast of Elsie Ferguson's new Paramount picture, "Outcast," which Victor Fleming is now directing at the Long Island studio. John Davidson, who played in Cecil B. DeMille's production, "Fool's Paradise" and "Saturday Night," will have the role of a Spanish heavy, while William David, who played with Charles Cherry and Francine Larrimore in "Scandal" and was prominent in the Paramount production, "The Copperhead," has been assigned to an important role.

Atlantic City Beauty Wins Contract

ONE of the big features of the tremendous Atlantic City Pageant which just closed was the Inter-city Beauty Contest, wherein the prettiest girls from fifty-eight American cities participated.

Realizing the necessity for new screen material and realizing, too, that no better opportunity would ever present itself for the selection of such material, Arrow Film Corporation decided to choose from those representative American beauties, one girl, to be started upon a screen career.

Miss Edria Fisk of Trenton, N. J., was the girl upon whom it was decided to bestow the award and she was accordingly presented with a contract on the stage of Wood's Theatre, Atlantic City, on the evening of September eleventh, co-incident with the premiere presentation of "Night Life in Hollywood," under the terms of which she will begin work almost immediately in "Jacqueline," a forthcoming James Oliver Curwood picture, produced by Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., and directed by Dell Henderson.

St. John in Under-water Two Reeler

AL St. John's first two-reel special comedy for Fall release has been completed, according to announcement by the Fox Film Corporation. It is called "All Wet" and a great part of the action takes place under water.

Al St. John's experiences with various types of sea monsters, after his home had been washed some distance from the shore, is said to provide a number of unusual comedy situations for "All Wet."

The comedy starts off where most feature pictures end—on the hero and heroine's wedding night. They spend their honeymoon close to the sea—too close in fact—and one morning they arise to find various kinds of sea going creatures making themselves at home in various parts of the house.

Al St. John not only plays the star part in "All Wet," but he wrote the scenario and directed the picture. He is supported by a cast of well-known comedy artists.

Bessie Love Supports Youthful Star

Bessie Love will portray the leading feminine roles in support of little Arthur Trimble in the entire series of twelve two-reel comedy dramas, according to Producing Director Frederick G. Becker, who is now filming the third of the series. A contract to this effect has been signed, according to advices from the Hollywood Studios, Inc., where the pictures are being made.

Robert N. Lee, brother of Rowland Lee, Fox director, is now working on the continuity for the fourth production.

Mae Murray Unit Goes to Coast

Larger Studio Needed; Productions to Be Made in California, Europe

MAE MURRAY, Robert Z. Leonard, her director; and a technical staff left New York Thursday for Hollywood, where the Metro star's next picture, "Coronation," will be made.

Announcement of this was made by William E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro Pictures corporation, distributors of Miss Murray's photoplays.

Need of studio room more ample than that provided by any eastern motion picture plant is one determining reason for the transference of Mae Murray's production activities to the west coast, according to Mr. Atkinson. This new Mae Murray picture is to be the most gigantic and lavish of any she has attempted.

This picture will be made partly in California, and partly in Europe. In fact it is but the first of the coming series of Tiffany Productions which will call for locations both in this country and abroad. There is a tendency of some stability now to seek foreign backgrounds in foreign countries. The insistence upon absolute realism by Mr. Leonard has prompted him to the decision to make the European episodes of "Coronation" in the country where the story calls for their occurrence.

Coincident with his announcement of the departure of Miss Murray and her husband for Hollywood, Mr. Atkinson made public the purchase for this star of the recent Broadway success, "The French Doll," presented for a long and prosperous run in New York by Ray Goetz. Like "Coronation," parts of "The French Doll" call for foreign backgrounds; and for these Miss Murray will make a second trip to Europe. The itinerary of the Mae Murray company will be to Hollywood for some of the episodes, thence to Europe for the remainder, before returning to New York for cutting and titling

Universal Short Subject Plans

High Standards For These Releases are Set; Jack London Series are Included

UNIVERSAL'S new 1922-3 short subjects program had its inception this week with the release of "White and Yellow," the first two-reeler in the Jack London fish patrol series, starring Jack Mulhall. This marks the beginning of one of the strongest two-reeler series ever put out, Universal sales officials assert.

Three high class series of two-reelers now are under way. The first is a series of six new rounds of "The Leather Pushers," starring Reginald Denny, the star of the first six, and directed by Harry Pollard, who made the original series. "The Leather Pushers," rounds 7 to 12, also will be released as a Universal-Jewel-Collier series, by reason of the appearance of the stories in Collier's.

The second short reel series to be put into production, and which already is being released, is "The Fish Patrol Series," adapted from Jack London's famous stories.

The third two-reel series being made by Universal is a "Lumber Jack" series starring Roy Stewart, who recently starred in "The Radio King," a Universal scientific chapter-play. The series is being made in the lumber camps of the California mountains. Robert Hill is the director.

The first release of the Lumber Jack series is "Giants of the Open," to be put out September 25. The others will follow every third week. In addition to the new series of selected two reel subjects, Universal has edited the pick of Harry Carey's celebrated western dramas of several years ago, and will release eight of them, beginning with "The Wrong Man," scheduled for October 2.

"Zenda" Wins Critic's Praise

Toronto Reviewer Lauds Photodrama; Says It Is Done as Only Ingram Can

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA" is a romance done with genuine distinction. It is the first picture of the new season that I am going to list among the best photoplays of the year. It is a pleasant change to be able to recommend without qualifications a new movie drama."

So writes the special motion picture reviewer of the Toronto Sunday World in his weekly digest of photoplays. The critic devotes more than a column of space to an appraisal of the merits of Rex Ingram's production for Metro Pictures Corporation of "The Prisoner of Zenda," which began a run in a leading theatre in the Canadian city. The account continues in part as follows:

"There are a lot of reasons why 'The Prisoner of Zenda' is a photodrama that can be recommended.

"The producer has given us Anthony Hope's story, and has caught in a marked degree the romantic spirit of the novel. It is a long time since I have seen in a picture as much of the feeling of romance. If costume dramas could all be done as Rex Ingram does them, they would soon be the most popular type of screen offering. Unfortunately, he is one of the few men who can make you feel that you are in France, or Ruritania or the Argentine, or wherever the action of his story happens to be.

Houdini Feature Will Have Road Show

"THE Man from Beyond," Houdini's special feature which scored a success during its recent run at the Times Square theatre, New York, and which is now being sold on the states rights plan, will be routed as a road show in a number of territories throughout the country this season.

This show is called the Houdini Wonder Show of 1922. It consists of "The Man from Beyond," which is its principal component part, and a program of spiritualism and mystery, prepared by Houdini and presented by mystifiers of his selection.

The Wonder Show is being booked in the New York territory by Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Picture Corporation which has bought "The Man from Beyond" for New York and Northern Jersey.

"Praise Is Superfluous" Says "Life's" Critic

Robert E. Sherwood, the picture reviewer of Life, was unable to be present at the opening of the run of Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy" at the Mark Strand, New York, but he sent a letter to Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, thanking him for the invitation.

In his letter Mr. Sherwood recalled the preview of the picture which he had had in California in company with Bebe Daniels and Mr. Lloyd himself.

"Best wishes for the success of 'Grandma's Boy' are conventional but superfluous," concluded Mr. Sherwood's letter.

"The Jellyfish" New Standing Vehicle

The newest starring vehicle of Wyndham Standing, just completed is "The Jellyfish," which Producers' Security claims will be one of the really big screen classics of the year. It is a Smith Cadwell production and deals with a mollycoddle son of a rich man who preferred chasing butterflies to a business career.

In support of Wyndham Standing is J. Barney Sherry and Dorothy MacKail. Hamilton Smith directed the picture.

The Producers' Security Corporation will handle the releasing arrangements.

Selig Serial Gets First Run Bookings

Reports coming in from territorial distributors of the Selig wild animal serial, "The Jungle Goddess," show many first runs being given the Export & Import release.

The latest word comes from Tom Brannon of the Eltabran Film Company, Atlanta, Ga., which controls the southern rights to the serial, to the effect that he has booked it over the Southern Enterprise circuit of houses. He has also secured a first run in Macon at the Criterion.

Proper Way to Build Chamber for Reception of Organ

Walls of Swell Boxes Must Be Perfectly Smooth and Free from Moisture

THE Technical Expert of the American Photo Player Company discusses the proper way for building a chamber for the reception of a theatre organ:

Due to different architectural conceptions and also due to limited or unfavorable space in theatres already built it is not always possible to place an instrument of the size desired in the space allotted or available. These conditions are met by building the organ as a divided instrument, arrangements of the different parts being so designed to give the most harmonious results both from an acoustical as well as mechanical viewpoint.

The installation should be arranged so that the acoustic qualities of the theatre are best served. To this end special thought should be given in preparing the correct scales and wind pressures best adapted to the requirements of each individual installation, the final tone regulation and voicing being done in the theatre or auditorium itself.

Organs are built in enclosures called swell boxes which allow (through the means of expression shutters which are controlled by the organist), the increasing and decreasing of the volume of sound. More frequently, however, organ chambers are built in some suitable location in the theatre. These chambers are so constructed that an opening of proper size is provided to which the expression shutters are fastened.

These chambers in a new theatre should be built of concrete or brick or tile and when complete the walls of these chambers should be perfectly smooth, in fact as smooth as the walls of a living room and must be perfectly dry at the time the organ is installed and must always be free from moisture or any great changes in temperature.

In a building already existing it is customary to provide organ chambers which are constructed of 2 ft. 4 in. or 2 ft. 6 in. studding to which fire proof lath is fastened and a heavy coat of plaster applied, both on the inside and outside of the chamber. These plaster walls are then

The Exhibitor Should Know

The Editor of this department feels there is a lack of authentic information on organs for motion picture theatres. Upon request, the American Photoplayer Company gave their hearty cooperation in submitting the article herewith presented dealing with the construction of the organ chamber. In submitting this article, H. J. Werner, President, adds:

"We are enclosing herewith our Technical Expert's opinion as to what is the proper way for building a chamber for the reception of an instrument. In this connection, too much publicity cannot be given to the importance of proper chambers, which have so much to do with the tonal results of the instrument, and we are elaborating on this, as it is of the utmost importance that the theatre owner cooperate with the organ builder to the fullest extent, as in this manner the best results are obtained."

The organ has a big two-fold purpose.—it is not intended (excepting in the smaller theatres) to replace the orchestra of a big theatre, or the theatre that uses a reasonable number of musicians. It is supposed to augment, assist and cooperate with the musicians to give a better class of music to the public at an economical cost to the theatre, but it rests in the theatre as a bulwark of protection against every contingency, and it makes it possible for the theatre man should conditions in his particular locality be such that he must dispense with his orchestra, that he sits in the position to do so and to cooperate with absolute efficiency.

given another coat of fine, hard, finish whiting so that they are perfectly smooth and clean and dry.

The opening in these chambers to which the expression shutters are fastened are made to measurements furnished by the organ builder. In the front of these openings there is usually a grille work of some kind designed by the architect to conform with the general architectural requirements of the building and these grilles at the same time conceal the operation of the expression shutters which are placed in the rear of the grille. The openings of these grilles should be ample to allow the full volume of the organ to go into the auditorium without any of it being lost or retained within the organ chambers.

It is also of great value that the theatre provide a proper amount of light in the chamber so that the tuner can do his work properly. If an organ is designed in one unit the floor measurements that are required for an organ built as per the specifications tabulated on page 1662 would be 10 ft. 3 in. wide, 10 ft. 3 in. high and 7 ft. 6 in. deep. If the instrument is built divided with a section on each side of the building or otherwise distributed it will require approximately 6 ft. 6 in. in depth and the same width and height as quoted above, for that section containing the pipes, and width as given above for the section which contains the traps and percussions.

However there is no fixed method in vogue, it always being the aim to make the division so that the best tonal results will be obtained. The purchaser gets the best results as a rule when he has his architect cooperate with the organ builder and through this cooperation both the builder and owner are able to expect the best results.

If the specification herewith presented were intended to be placed as a divided instrument a very good division would be as follows:

On one side of the theatre would be placed the flutes, violin, vox humana and on the opposite side the trumpet, baritone and the pedal bass Flute 16'.

If traps and percussions are added to this instrument the division would be on these lines. The flute, violin, vox humana, chrysoglott, the drums with cymbal and small traps on one side and on the opposite side the baritone, trumpet, pedal bass flute 16', chimes, xylophone and orchestral bells would be placed.

In a further discussion concerning the organ for the Motion Picture Theatre, H. J. Werner, president of the American Photo Player Company explained:

"It is my opinion that a great many theatre men count the number of pipes in an organ and base their opinion as to the

Motion Picture Theatre Plans Awarded First Place in Competition

Jury of Awards, Beaux Art Institute of Design designates two lay outs

A MOVING picture theatre is to be built on a level rectangular plot having a frontage of 100'-0" on an important street and a depth of 175'-0". The purpose of this theatre is naturally the showing of motion pictures, but at the same time an orchestra and other forms of entertainment will be used in conjunction with the pictures, and in the study of the problem, the following provisions should be made to this effect.

"The stage behind the curtain upon which the projections are thrown shall have a depth of approximately 20'-0", and in connection with this stage there shall be dressing rooms and other accessories. In front of the curtain space for an orchestra of twenty (20) musicians shall be provided.

"The ticket office, lobbies, staircases, offices, smoking and toilet rooms, etc., shall be so arranged that the control, convenience of the patrons, and economy of operation and space shall be as great as possible. Exit courts not less than 10'-0" wide, open to the sky, shall be left at each side of the building, and sufficient exits shall be provided so that the theatre can be emptied within three minutes.

"In studying the seating capacity of the theatre, while it is of importance that this shall be as large as possible, at the same time it should be remembered that a good

New Use for Ultra Speed Camera

A NEW phase in the use of motion pictures for educational purposes is to be adopted by the Athletic Department of the University of Missouri. In the future, athletes at the University are to be given training by motion pictures. A camera recently presented the University by alumni and business men will be fitted with a slow motion attachment which will make it possible to project the movements of an athlete on the screen permitting close study which may be analyzed and copied by others. By filming the work of athletes who develop exceptional ability, the University expects to build up a library covering virtually every phase of sport.

view of the screen from every seat is essential, and that the comfort and convenience of the patrons should not be sacrificed. A certain number of the higher priced seats shall be provided in loggias or open boxes, either on the floor or in the balcony, and a space reserved for 'standing room'."

The above are the specifications arranged by the Committee on Architecture on the subject of the Beaux Art Institute of Design competition on "A Motion Picture Theatre." Approval Worth While

WHEN a great industry in the course of its ordinary development requires the service or equipment of another industry, it is axiomatic that such selection is made only after careful, exhaustive study of the merits of various factors in that industry.

WHEN Mr. George Eastman, of the Eastman Kodak Company, in consultation with Russell B. Smith Engineers, awarded us the contract for the seating of the EASTMAN THEATRE he paid us one of the greatest compliments we have ever received, and incidentally endorsed the good judgment of the theatre owners of America.

Society Motion Picture Engineers Benefit All Phases of Industry

IT is interesting to note the far reaching and beneficial influence that the various papers presented at conventions of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers have had on the design of motion picture theatres, laboratories, projection studios, etc.

We can therefore look forward with keen anticipation to those papers which will be presented at the coming fall meeting of this society which will be held at the Power Hotel, Rochester, N. Y., on the dates, October 9-12 inclusive.

It is extremely gratifying to those who are lending their unselfish efforts in promoting this Society, to note that the majority of new theatres now constructed always incorporate some new thoughts brought out in the works of the Society.

There is no better source that the up-to-date theatre which is already constructed or the theatre which is to be constructed, can look to for authentic information on the best procedure and data to follow in embodying all the new and desirable features for a modern motion picture house than the transactions and the authorities embodied in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

To convey an idea of the variety and practical bearing which papers presented at the Society meetings have on this industry in general, the following papers are quoted as examples: Condensers for Motion Picture Projection, Their Contour, Size, etc.; Condenser Design and Screen Illumination; Motion Picture Film Perforation; Manufacture, Tinting and Toning Motion Picture Film; Reducing the Fire Hazard in Film Exchanges; Some Considerations and Applications of Tungsten Filament Lamps; Projection of Motion Picture by Mazda; Light Intensities for Motion Picture Projection; Light for Motion Picture Theatres; Studio Lighting; Design of Power Plants and Electrical Distribution in Large Studios.

These papers representing only a very small part of the entire list presented at the Society meetings are the results of work and study of those who are most expert in their individual line in the motion picture industry. The Society as a whole, welcomes any suggestions from the exhibitor or the laboratory, studio or cameraman concerning the investigations and research which would be most beneficial to their particular phase of this industry.

The personnel of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers includes the expert research and consulting engineers of the following concerns: Projector, electric machine, arc, incandescent lamp, camera and film manufacturers. Also the many consulting engineers throughout the industry and the engineers operating technical departments of the various trade papers. The president of the society, Mr. L. C. Porter, Fifth and Sussex streets, Harrison, N. J., would gladly give any information desired concerning this organization or the procedure necessary in securing the transactions of the Society.

"Tex" Combs Pays Regards to New York

New York had a visitor last week from the Golden West in the person of "Tex" Combs, general manager of the Theatre Equipment Supply Company of San Francisco.

"Tex," we notice, has a very effective and novel business card. The card is of the ordinary size, only it has two pages, such as the outside covers of a book.

On the inside is neatly listed a list of the more important equipment carried by the supply house while the back is used to again emphasize the Theatre Equipment Supply Company and the important firms for whom they are agents.

The card is very effective and striking in appearance.

Appoints New Distributor

Manager O. F. Spahr, of Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, announces that the Art Film Studios, Inc., of Cleveland, has been appointed Motiograph distributor for the northern half of Ohio.

F. C. Detwiler, who heads this concern, has had long experience in the manufacture of commercial film and is thoroughly familiar with the motion picture field.

Mr. Detwiler has a number of salesmen on the road and is in position to give good service to users of Motiograph Projectors in his territory.

Mr. Detwiler states that he will be ready to announce a number of Motiograph installations within a very short time.

Barbash Manager New Chester Theatre

L. Barbash has been appointed manager of the new Chester Theatre, which had its opening last night, September 7. The Chester Theatre is located at 355 Chester street, in the East New York section of Brooklyn, and according to reports is one of the most attractive houses in this section. It has a seating capacity of about 1,000. Barbash, who is well known in the film business, will be assisted in his new duties by his son, Jack.

FOR BETTER PROJECTION POWER'S Dissolving Stereopticon

HANDBOOK of PROJECTION for Theater Managers and Projectionists

Fourth Edition

by
F·H·RICHARDSON

WE STRONGLY ADVISE AGAINST USING THE MOVING PICTURE PROJECTOR STEREOPTI-CON ATTACHMENT.

There are two advantages in the dissolver as against the single stereopticon. First, the dissolving out of one picture by the other is a much more pleasing effect than can possibly be had with a single stereopticon. Second, when using a single stereopticon, unless the projectionist is very careful while removing or inserting slides, he will move the carrier, which will cause the picture on the screen to move or jump. This is not possible with the dissolver.

Stereopticon pictures may be projected with a very much less brilliant light source than is necessary with motion pictures. As a matter of fact high amperage for stereopticon projection is objectionable, because the resultant heat may and probably will crack the slide if it be left in the light for more than a very brief period of time.

Use of Lens Table for Finding Size of Picture, Lens and Throw

THE table given below showing the relation of the size of picture, equivalent focus of the objective lens and length of throw will be found of great value to all projectionists who have not some such table. In selecting the equivalent focus (which is given in inches) of the objective lens needed to give a certain size picture at a given throw, it is only necessary to look under the column containing the throw in feet from the objective lens of the projector to the screen; running down this column until the size of picture required is found. Then look over to the equivalent focus column and read the equivalent focus of the objective lens needed.

Let us illustrate through an example. A theatre requires a picture 15 feet wide and the distance from the objective lens to the screen is 105 feet. What equivalent focus objective lens should be procured?

First select under the "Throw in Feet" column the distance 105 and run down this column until the nearest to 15 feet for the width of a picture is found. (The width is the top one of the two dimensions given.) We find that 15 ft. 2 in. is the nearest, although just a little too large. The next size under the 15 ft. 2 in. is 14 ft. 7 in., so the best one to select would be 15 ft. 2 in. Next run over sideways along the row containing this figure 15 ft. 2 in. to the extreme side column for the size of focus which we find reads $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches. Therefore the lens to try out would be one of $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches equivalent focus.

A like procedure is used for getting the size of picture when the length of the equivalent focus of the objective lens and throw is known or in the case of finding the throw necessary to give a certain sized picture with an objective lens of a given focal length.

Let us assume for another illustration that we have an objective lens of $5\frac{3}{4}$ inches equivalent focal length and we desire to know what size picture it would show at a throw of 102 feet.

Find $5\frac{3}{4}$ under the Equivalent Focus column and run out sidewise to the column under 100 ft. throw. As there is no column for 102 ft. throw, the size of the picture to desire is between the size of pictures listed under the columns for throws of 100 ft. and 105 ft. As 102 ft. (the throw we are working with) is nearer 100 than 105, then the size picture is nearer that under the 100 ft. column. We can guess quite closely at this size by judging the two columns. By inspection of the table the Editor would say at 102 ft. throw with a $5\frac{3}{4}$ focus objective lens, the picture would be just value, on the amount of stops in the organ. They do not go into the detail end as to whether they are complete stops; whether they are small scale; what functions they are called upon to perform, with the result that many theatre men have apparently large organs, at least judging from the number of pipes that are contained in the instrument, and find themselves finally limited as to the usage of these pipes. Whereas, other theatre men, more far-seeing, have taken the position that they have to have flexibility in their instrument as they are playing it year in and year out to practically the same people; that they require a greater variety of combination effects even if they have less actual pipes.

As a helpful example of organ specifications the following No. 1 specifications for a Robert Morton organ are given:

SPECIFICATION NO. 1—ROBERT MORTON ORGAN

Without Percussions and Traps.

This organ is operated from a detached console which can be placed in any position, and is connected by means of a 60 foot electric cable.

The different orchestral instruments for ease of manipulation are apportioned to three divisions. Those on Division I are played from the radiating and concave pedalboard. Those on Division II are played from the lower double touch keyboard, while those on Division III are played from the upper keyboard.

The different instruments are introduced or silenced

(cancelled) by means of finger keys placed in elliptical form over and around the keyboards.

The instruments are enclosed in a sound-proof expression chamber, under the control of the performer, permitting him to obtain almost unlimited tonal flexibility.

The pitch of the organ is Philharmonic, 440-A, as adopted by the majority of the symphony orchestras of the world. No difficulty should be experienced by any orchestra player in tuning his instrument, whether of American or European make.

Great Demands on School for Theatre Organists

The Bartola Musical Instrument Company, in order to meet the increasing demand for competent organists, has reorganized its player department and appointed Phoebe Jane Harvey, well known theatre organist, as its head.

Miss Harvey is known as one of the best organists in the central west and has had wide experience in "playing the pictures," having presided at the organ in New York and coast theatres, as well as in some of the important houses in Chicago territory.

She will give individual attention to all organists availing themselves of the opportunities offered by the Bartola Company's Chicago training school.

The player department of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, of which many of the best musicians now playing moving picture theatre organs are graduates, has been a great value to exhibitors.

According to Miss Harvey, the quality of the organists supplied by the school is even higher than in the past and this should be good news to exhibitors, who are demanding more of their musicians than ever before.

about sixteen feet wide judging from the fact that 100 ft. throw gives a 15 ft. 8 in. picture and the 105 ft. throw gives a 16 ft. 6 in. picture with the $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. focus objective lens. Maybe 16 ft. is near the correct answer and again it may be slightly off. However, for all around general use this method of judging by inspection gives fairly accurate results.

To test out the accuracy of the guess of 16 feet the following mathematical procedure is followed. Do not get alarmed at the word "mathematical" as it is really very simple in this case.

The difference between 100 and 105 is 5. Under the columns for 105 ft. throw and 100 ft. throw the difference in width of the pictures (with the $5\frac{3}{4}$ in. focus objective lens) is 16 ft. 6 in. minus 15 ft. 8 in. or 10 in. The difference between 100 ft. and 102 ft. throw is 2 ft.

Then using these above facts we have just secured

105—100 gives 5 ft. difference

102—100 gives 2 ft. difference

16 ft. 6 in.—15 ft. 8 in. gives 10 in. difference.

We find by proportion that 2 is two-fifths of 5 ($2/5$).

Two-fifths ($2/5$) of the difference between the size of picture under the 100 ft. and 105 ft. columns is $2/5$ of 10 in. equals 4 in.

We then add this four inches to the width of the picture under the 100 ft. throw (15 ft. 8 in. plus 4 in. equals 16 ft.) and find that the actual width of the picture is 16 ft. (Editor feels all puffed up at guessing right to the dot, but don't let him fool you, as he'll probably come way off the next time he tries.)

Try these examples for practice, using the chart, and send in your answers or inquiries if you find trouble in solving.

1. Given a picture 16 ft. wide with a throw of 120 ft. what focal length objective should be used?
2. Given a throw of 102 ft. and an objective lens of 6 in. focus what size picture will result?
3. What throw is necessary to secure picture 15 ft. 5 in. wide with a $6\frac{3}{4}$ in. focus objective lens?

Send in your answers or any questions regarding these three problems.

Let your ideas help some one else

It is recommended that the projectionists who have no lens chart cut out the one herewith shown and keep it for reference.—Editor.

Theatre Managers Know

That the curtain and draperies of the house exercise a mighty influence on box office receipts.

Harmony of design, consideration of colors, and appropriate materials decide whether a house is elegant or tawdry.

Our long experience and individual study of each theatre enable us to make draperies pay for themselves plus a profit.

Architects, owners and managers are invited to get our ideas—and we manufacture especially good equipment, too.

The Big Fight Not Yet Won!

Progress in the combat against TUBERCULOSIS is encouraging, and the death rate from that needless scourge, here in New York City, is being gradually cut down;

BUT—

The fight is far from won, and the struggle against it—both educational and remedial—MUST GO ON!

At this very moment this city holds about THIRTY THOUSAND active cases of tuberculosis, of which approximately one-half are NOT under medical care.

Thousands of CHILDREN are undernourished and are in daily contact with tuberculosis.

The public must be protected. The fight must be kept up!

If you have a cough or cold that "hangs on," see your doctor. Have a thorough medical examination once a year.

For the good of New York, we shall be glad to give helpful information, without charge, to all who may inquire of us.

securing an artistic and striking design. The sight lines throughout the house permit an uninterrupted view of the complete stage though the projection angle might be reduced to good effect.

The auditorium floor plan is well proportioned and, providing the projection screen is placed well back on the stage, no observer will find any precipitable distortion of the picture due to the angle of the sight line with the screen.

The design awarded "First Mention Placed," the plans for the theatre, "Alcazar," were presented in this department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in the issue dated June 17, 1922, page 3264.

Attention is again called to those plans as they embody a unique feature in a small "private theatre" placed in seclusion from the remaining sections of the house.

Simplex Distributors Report Business Good

Word comes from the Erker Brothers Optical Company of St. Louis, Mo., that the Universal Film Exchange are now occupying their new building located at 3322 Olive Street in the above city, and that two Simplex Incandescent Projectors are an important adjunct of the projection room of what is said to be a very elaborate review room. Erker Brothers also recently equipped the Broadway theatre, one of the oldest motion picture houses in St. Louis, with two type "S" Simplex Projectors.

The Western Theatre Supply Company of San Francisco, Cal., report that they have recently installed in the Hart Theatre, Klamath, Ore., two of the latest Simplex Projectors finished in battleship grey enamel. This firm has also equipped the Excelsior theatre, San Francisco, Cal., with several of the Simplex Projectors equipped with the Simplex Sunlight High Intensity Arc Lamps.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds good photography to picture interest—gives that truthful, accurate reproduction that is only possible when the reproductive scale of the positive material parallels that of the negative. That's why Eastman Positive Film carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

Every Theatre Uses One. Every Theatre Will Have One

We'll Pay for Our Mistakes If You'll Pay for Our Successes!

W. A. JOHNSTON, in his editorial on "Independence" in the Motion Picture News, stated our position exactly when he wrote:—

"A Good Picture is good no matter what its source."

Also he declared, "it is highly necessary that the Independent Producer get all the encouragement his product deserves."

Once again we are in agreement, as all the exhibitors who attended the Charnas banquets in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland and heard our declaration of principles and policy will testify.

But we go further and state that we believe the exhibitors should support ALL good pictures, be they produced by big companies or small companies.

The theatre man should pay the small producer as good a price for Good Pictures as he does the big fellow who has the power to force a fair return for his product.

We agree with Mr. Johnston that the word "Independent", as used in this business, is misleading. It should be abolished from the language of the picture industry.

It doesn't mean what it pretends, because the only man truly independent in this business is the one who makes Good Pictures.

Good Pictures are all that count!

B. P. Schulberg has demonstrated that he can produce Good Pictures and he will continue to demonstrate that he can.

We are willing to stand on the Preferred Pictures he produces.

IN WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

Is the most sensational hit in the history of motion pictures. All New York is talking about it! The newspapers are filled to overflowing with its praises!

Here are a few extracts from leading New York dailies:

"When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the greatest film epics ever made in America; in fact, the picture merits visit after visit to grasp all its glories."
—Robert G. Welsh, Eve. Telegram.

"The most amazingly beautiful motion picture ever screened. Moves swiftly never wearying, and leaving at the last a regret that it is over." — N. Y. Mail.

"When Knighthood Was In Flower is all that has been claimed for it; the people simply burst into applause again and again. Don't miss it." — Harriette Underhill, N. Y. Tribune.

"It seems to us that this picture is every bit as important to see as any play on Broadway. It marks a high point in the art of entertainment and in the art of the American motion picture studio. We whole-heartedly commend it to every man, woman and child to whom romance and beauty are not mere words found in dictionaries." — Daily News.

"When Knighthood Was In Flower ranks high alongside of the best in romantic screen drama with a beauty of background which has not to our knowledge been surpassed. The scene showing Marion Davies in an attitude of prayer is one of the finest moments which we have seen in the cinema." — N. Y. World.

"It has magnificent settings and costumes, and lighting effects of almost unbelievable beauty, and is acted with skill in addition." — N. Y. Sun.

"When Knighthood Was In Flower is dazzling to the eye, splendidly impressive and apparently true to the time and places of its settings. Marion Davies really outdoes herself, while Lyn Harding is a joy. Such a King!" — N. Y. Times.

"No one can afford to miss this great screen masterpiece, and you may be assured we will go again." — Evening Journal.

"Marion Davies gives a performance of the modern, stubborn, adorable Mary that is not only the best thing she has ever done, but one of the finest performances ever given by any actress." — Morning Telegraph.

"You come away from 'When Knighthood Was In Flower' as pleasantly weary as an art collector after a day among treasures, or an out-of-towner after a Sunday afternoon on Fifth Avenue." — N. Y. Globe.

"The production is one of the most massive and costly ever attempted, and Miss Davies' interpretation has made the entire effort worthy." — Edward E. Pidgeon, Journal of Commerce.

"When Knighthood Was In Flower represents the supreme achievement of the motion picture art." — New York American.

"Beautifully staged and photographed. The costuming is gorgeous." — Evening Post.

says "SCREEN OPINIONS"

"The Veiled Woman"—Class A-b. (Superior)

"The Veiled Woman" is one of the most interesting of modern screen achievements. It is distinctly not "movie stuff," but is impressionistic in style.

Character development is excellent, the story is clearly defined and its points of argument clearly set forth. Lloyd Ingraham deserves a great deal of credit for his worthy attempt at the making of an inspirational picture.

SCREEN OPINIONS

There is easily enough drama with its accompanying love story to keep the spectator firmly interested throughout the progress of "The Veiled Woman," a picture produced by H. J. Reynolds and released by Hodkinson. It is a somewhat poignant story of simple souls told appropriately in a simple manner.

An agreeable absence of the stereotyped and exaggerated small town types so prevalent in the motion pictures.

The picture is almost flawless.

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH

A very unusual picture. Contains a moral and certainly gets away from the general run of picture themes.

"The Veiled Woman" is the most out of the ordinary picture that has been shown in some time, or rather it is Myrtle Reed's story which is unusual. The theme is wholly unlike anything that has been used and is certainly a deviation from the general run of screen material.

For those who want pictures that are unusual, this latest Renco production can be highly recommended. It isn't likely that they have ever seen anything like it.

THE FILM DAILY

The offering is certain to excite considerable interest due to its unusual theme and the moral established. Again the characterization is well defined and stands out, particularly that of the title character. In its favor is the fact that it gets away from the ordinary run of photoplays and presents a line of drama which is absorbing up to the scenes which build the climax.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Screen entertainment of the best and highest grade. Exhibitors should find this production a valuable treasury aid.

American Releasing has never said that it would live up to its name and release only made in America pictures. But we have been mighty careful not to get into our channels of distribution any picture that our home market would not want.

But we found one picture that we knew would have strong American appeal—a delightful and amusing comedy equalling the best product of our own best producer—

In Canada: Canadian Releasing Corporation, Limited

VARIETY: This is a gem of a character comedy. The hand of a real artist is discernible in the picture. Betty Balfour plays her part for all it is worth. Where have they been hiding this gifted pantomimist? No more spontaneous bit of film creation has been seen in New York in a long while.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: This is easily the best British-made picture that has ever reached American shores. A human picture with many scenes that are deeply affecting in their simple pathos. Should prove satisfactory to any audience.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: A melodramatic comedy with characters of more than ordinary interest. There are bright hopes for the future of English production if this is a criterion of the new British mood.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH: This is one of the best British pictures we have ever seen. Betty Balfour is adorable, she is pretty, natural and a clever little character actress. The acting is excellent.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: A story of quite elemental passions and emotions. There are many good laughs in "Me and My Gal." Will hold its own with the good American features.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: Betty Balfour displays a most agreeable personality and an undeniable ability to act. This picture will seem a decided novelty to most people. Offer this as a change from the regular line of pictures.

MOTION PICTURES NEWS: Editorial: The American Releasing Corporation with "Me and My Gal" and First National with "White Shoulders" head the latest selected list issued by the National Board of Review. This is the first motion picture ever brought from England that has been placed on the selected list of the reviewing board.

*All of 'em Like It—
You and Your Public Will, Too*

VARIETY: Exceptionally well played and exceedingly interesting story. The film is something of a novelty. It gets away from the familiar love story triangle and is fresh in its romance.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH: The Jack London atmosphere has not been lost in translating his novel to the screen in "The Mohican's Daughter." The story has been extremely well handled with a color and picturesqueness of the half-breed love story retained. It is the kind of story that goes across with a very wide audience.

MOTION PICTURE JOURNAL, New York: An exciting Indian story with good atmosphere. The story of an Indian girl who falls in love with the white manager of a trading post.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: "The Mohican's Daughter" makes a pleasant story and affords good interest for anyone. The chief interest depends upon the love story of Jeess-Uck, the Indian girl, and the young manager of a trading post.

REELAND REVIEWS: It remains a Jack London story which is more than can be said of a great many pictures adapted from this writer's work. A well-made picture that should attract in any community.

Tender, Delightful, Heart Throbbing Story Makes Excellent Picture

"TIMOTHY'S QUEST"
American Releasing Corp.

DIRECTOR..... Sidney Olcott
AUTHOR..... Kate Douglass Wiggin
SCENARIO BY..... Katherine Stuart
CAMERAMAN..... Gene French
AS A WHOLE..... Charming, delightful. Unusual in that two extremely clever youngsters carry this all the way

STORY..... Tender, throbbing with heart-punches which will delight your women folk immensely
DIRECTION..... Fair. Missed many splendid opportunities

PHOTOGRAPHY..... Good
LIGHTINGS..... Average
PLAYERS..... Master Joseph Depew and Baby Helen Rowland practically the whole thing. No others important

EXTERIORS..... Some charming country and excellent slum shots
INTERIORS..... Good
DETAIL..... Good

CHARACTER OF STORY..... Will please all except those who look for wild excitement and thrills in their picture entertainment

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION..... 6,377 feet
Every once in a while—too seldom it seems—some comes along with a picture full of heart throbs, full of sentiment, full of charm. And it gets away from the wild thrilling line of stuff that so many think constitutes a good picture. "Timothy's Quest" is one of these. The story is slight, indeed almost meagre, but then so was the story of "Humoresque", so was the story of "Over the Hill." It isn't so much the story as the treatment and while Director Olcott has failed to take the fullest advantage of what was offered in this delightful theme, nevertheless he has turned out a mighty fine picture. It might have been improved very much, but just the same it registers very definitely and there isn't any doubt but that your women patrons are going to dampen several handkerchiefs before these two charming youngsters, Master Joseph Depew and Baby Helen Rowland, bring the story to a close.

The dominant idea of the theme is that love is after all the compelling force. The manner in which these tots bring this sort of a theme with young, cleanest things that the screen has ever known. It might seem that this sort of a theme to the city slums carrying the leads might sag, but it doesn't. From the moment you are introduced to the city slums until the final shot it holds you very strongly. Production values are quite satisfactory and the cast very good, although except for Vivian Ogden, who will be remembered as the gossip in "Way Down East," there isn't very much for anyone else except the clever children and a humanly intelligent dog called Rags.

The story tells of two tots left in a tough tenement district which has the ironic name of Minerva Court. The boy overhears one of two drunken women say that he and his little supposed sister are to be sent to an orphanage, steals away taking with them their pet dog and a funny little wagon, a feature of which is a wicker clothes basket. They board a freight car and land somewhere in New England, where they finally reach the home of a stiff, prim old maid who is soured on life because of the manner in which her neighbors regard her sister's unfortunate experience. How they obtain real heartfelt sentiment and sympathy, and how it eventually develops that they are the children of the unfortunate sister, completes the story.

Go Strong After Your Women Patrons—Forget All Else

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

Here is one of the pictures that are called "different." It is. And it's so full of charm with so many punches that keep you feeling for your handkerchief that it is a safe bet that your women folk will love it. Base all of your appeal to your women patrons. Take no chances. Circularize and otherwise inform your women's clubs and your church folk about this one and tell them it is the sort of a story that mothers love to see.

You haven't any names worth talking about to draw them in so stick to the idea of the story and the moral which is that children make the home a worthwhile place and that a home without them is incomplete.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: An Editorial: Rich characterization marks the Kate Douglas Wiggin story "Timothy's Quest" which comes to the screen singing a cheery song of love and faith. The players step into their characters so well that it seems they might have stepped right from the pages of the book.

NEW YORK TELEGRAPH: For a thing of its kind this picture is as nearly perfect as anything ever put on the screen. It has no kinship with the usual hoakumized material of which pictures are made, but to a public whose taste is still fine enough to appreciate a wholesome and touching story, beautifully acted, the picture will come as a breath of fresh air. Stories like this and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" are perhaps too sentimental for the sophisticated, but they are so typically and staunchly American that they deserve a shelf in the library and a place of their own on the screen.

EXHIBITORS' TRADE REVIEW: It is unfortunate that more stories like "Timothy's Quest" have not been forthcoming. If you have a half-way human audience to play to, "Timothy's Quest" should prove to be one of the most pleasing attractions you could put before them.

VARIETY: Two kiddies make this production stand out as a sure-fire money-getter; its comedy angles are such that this production is certain to register.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: "Timothy's Quest" is so rich in human appeal that it will reach any class of patrons. A picture that you can proudly recommend. A gentle mixture of pathos and comedy it offers delightful entertainment that scores because it is genuine.

WEEKLY FILM REVIEW, Atlanta: The thousands who loved "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Amarilly" will be delighted with "Timothy's Quest." A refreshing, tender story without being sentimental, it is in a class by itself.

MOTION PICTURE JOURNAL, New York: One of the most appealing stories told on the screen in a long time. It has the human appeal and heart interest that will go over with any audience. Give us more like this one.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: There are times when a producer's publicity and advertising is full of exaggerations and very often false representations about a picture's merits; again at other times not enough is said about a picture. Such is the case with "Timothy's Quest"—not enough has been said about it. It is one of the most appealing pictures that has been seen for some time, one with emotional appeal. This picture should give satisfaction everywhere.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: Here is American Releasing's finest achievement. A simple, homespun story filled with a great heart tug which overflows with pathos and kindly humor—a picture so faithful to its people, its environment that Kate Douglas Wiggin must feel immensely proud. A story told with a wealth of humanities. We look at this story and we find it unusual. Certain to get over everywhere.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: Special Notice: "Timothy's Quest" is a showman's answer to the demand for the type of picture that a mother will recommend to her children. Not that the appeal is limited to the younger generation, for the story is so human and sincere that anyone of any age will appreciate it. American Releasing Corporation is the distributor.

FRANK P. DONOVAN

"One of the photoplay classics of the world. A worthy achievement, excellently portrayed and sure to please in every way."—Philadelphia Record.

"Individuals who believe motion pictures are hopeless by all means should see 'Silas Marner.' If the judgment of the writer is not mistaken, it is one of the very best pictures shown in Cincinnati during the last year. It is a credit to the producer and a credit to the Lyric Theatre. If you do not see it, you will have missed something well worth while."—NIXSON DENTON in the Cincinnati Tribune.

"'Silas Marner' is the sort of film that keeps our hope alive amid the hokum of the average feature film current throughout this land of freedom. The acting is first rate. The photography is excellent. Its entertainment value is 90 per cent."—Baltimore American.

"'Silas Marner' is not 'highbrow.' It will not go over the heads of any audience. It is straight, out-and-out drama, almost melodrama."—Los Angeles Herald.

WARNER BROTHERS SCREEN CLASSICS

Our productions have been sold 100% throughout the country. Our efforts are now centered in selling the Warner screen classics direct-to-the-public. This will assure exhibitors capacity business when they show our productions.

The following pages will convince you, Mr. Exhibitor, that Fifty Million people will see our advertising and read our publicity. This is merely the first broadside of our sweeping exploitation campaign. The figures do not include the millions of people who have read the books, those who read the "fan," national and territorial trade magazines, or those who will read the newspaper stories of our float en route to the Warner west coast studios.

There will be more advertising in the Saturday Evening Post, more advertising in the Trade Papers, more publicity stunts, newspaper stories and other avenues of advertising which patrons of your theatre will see, hear and talk about!

We have pledged Exhibitors the utmost co-operation, and we are constantly striving to surpass their wildest expectations!

A FRANK STATEMENT!

In announcing a new picture for release, the conscientious producer and distributor finds it most difficult to convey the excellence of his production..... for fear he will over-rate or sometimes under-rate its real value.

We are in just this position in announcing..

S H A D O W S

The few persons at Los Angeles who have seen it pronounce "Shadows" the most unusual picture ever made, a revelation in every way!

So totally different that it just doesn't permit comparison with any other picture!

Their comments tempt us to refer to it as "the Greatest", "the Most Wonderful" motion picture ever made.

But one reads so many such claims that these adjectives have long since lost their true meaning.

So we merely wish to convey that

Florence Vidor

Marcia Manon

One of a score of thrills—a jail delivery by aeroplane, and from the swinging ladder below a leap to a racing express train.

Drama to grip you; thrills that get a gasp; mystery, romance, remarkable portrayals and a plot amazing in conception.

HERE is a picture made for the Box Office—right when you need it. Thomas H. Ince's name is a big asset, and he has eclipsed every previous success in this remarkable drama of dual lives, dual loves. Florence Vidor, Milton Sills, Marcia Manon and Frank Campeau are cast names to conjure with. They will take you through a melodrama more astounding and more thrilling than "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Surgeons, club women, police officials and judges will work with you and American Legion Posts can be interested. But above all it has the big human element and the tense melodrama that will appeal to every man, woman and child. It is literally packed with thrills, and action—swift, strange, startling—that will get under the skin.

THRILLS—THRILLS AND MORE THRILLS COME SWIFT AND FAST

Facts About This Picture

SYNOPSIS

The man: (Milton Sills as "Bud Doyle"). He was as cool as a cucumber as you could find in any big city. You will see him at the battle front with a gun in each hand, a cigarette in his mouth and all three smoking. After the war he returns to his life in the underworld and the story begins.

The woman: (Marcia Manon as "Sadie Doyle"). His wife—also a member of the gang of crooks. A wily jade, self-centered, conceited with a sneer in her smile and a devil lurking in her eye.

The girl: (Florence Vidor as "Ethel Carter"). Wholesome, sweet, charming volunteer nurse whose voice is soft and kindly and has brought strange thoughts to the injured man who does not see for many weeks, but hears only the voice.

The sinister guide: (Frank Campeau as "McQuary"). Suave, merciless, resourceful gangster and political boss, whose fawning smile hoodwinked the reform forces of a great city and whose whispered word held the denizens of the underworld in the power of fear.

How the loves, hates, jealousies, double-dealing betrayal, inspiration and encouragement of this strange quartet played and counter-played on one another, forms the theme of the Thomas H. Ince picture, "Skin Deep."

"SKIN DEEP"

Exceptional Chance For Exploitation!

YOU have an unusual lot of accessories and exceptional exploitation angles to put this picture over big. The posters shown below include several drawn by the famous artist, Henry Clive. They have pulling power. The other accessories and your ad cuts are just as strong.

One of the best ways to stir up big interest in the story is to get in touch with the American Legion Posts in your locality, and arrange for a Legion night or a special showing.

CARRIES A STRONG APPEAL

The story carries a strong appeal for the country's obligation to former service men, especially the disabled. It is one of the few pictures in which Legion officials have shown a personal interest, Hanford MacNider, national chairman, having sent his thanks to Mr. Ince for the picture. Every post can be interested in it.

Use service men in uniform for ushers. Try a short prologue or stunt by a Legionaire in uniform or a five minute talk on the Legion's campaign for better pictures teaching good citizenship.

Lobby displays could combine the service and crook elements—for instance a machine gun, hand-cuffs, a policeman's billy and the convict's ball and chain. Or a toy aeroplane and miniature railroad train.

There is a marvelous example of plastic surgery in this story. Prominent surgeons in your community are acquainted with the marvels of plastic surgery and will be glad to talk about it.

WILL INTEREST CLUB WOMEN

Your ministers and club women are deeply concerned in the problem of the intelligent reclamation of certain types of criminals.

Your police officials and police judges handle men like Bud Doyle and his gang every day.

How you can turn these various interests in your community into dollars in your box office is told in the exploitation suggestions offered here.

The "Stupid" Movies

EVERYBODY who knows anything about pictures is pretty much disgusted with the cheap articles in Collier's on "Why I Am Ashamed of the Movies."

But they are not to be taken seriously.

Some writer needed the money; and Collier's, evidently, is grasping at sensational straws. That's about all. And they are anonymous; which nullifies them in every respect.

The New York Times takes an interesting editorial view of the subject.

Granted, the editorial says in effect, that movies are stupid, what about it?

By what standards are they stupid? Who says they are? And who makes them stupid?

The Times puts the issue up to the American public. Whatever movies are today they are essentially what the American public wants—and largely what the world public wants.

And the Times is just about right.

Time and again the writer meets a group of so-called "highbrow" people, persons who admit that they have the higher standards of taste and judgment.

"Why," they always ask, "don't you make your photodrama less blatant? If you can't do better why not give us news reels only?"

Meaning, of course, why don't you give us what we want—or think we want.

And the writer always replies: "Because it is commercially impossible. The broad public doesn't want as a rule what your little coterie wants. And that's true not merely of photodramas, but, to a large extent, of stage plays, books, magazines or any vehicle of drama and fiction. The only way to satisfy right along your self elected crowd is through a self supporting agency like the Theatre Guild."

Who is to decide what is art?

We don't know, but at least we know that the public decides what is popular art.

Says the Times: "A psychologist who lately observed a fashionable and highly educated audience in raptures over Katinka and the Wooden Soldiers, vaunting "Chauve-Souris" as a supremely "artistic" production, was asked to gauge the mental age, so to speak, of the show and of the audience's enjoyment of it. Without hesitation he answered, not 12 but 8 years. He added that the mental age of the plays of SHAKESPEARE, if one judged by the audiences for which they were obviously written, and which today must somehow be made to attend if they are to be produced successfully, is 13 or 14, the age of a high-grade moron. The qualities that make them supreme as literature, even as drama, are evident to few."

No one will accuse Charles Chaplin of making "highbrow" photoplays. Yet aside from the fact that Chaplin is known today to more people than any human since time began, there are those who proclaim him as a great artist.

The appeal of the photoplay or stage play or book, if it is to be very broad, must be simple and fundamental.

We note right along that those who reiterate the charge that the American public is 47% of a mental age of 12 or less are producers whose work has failed to be popular or censors, like Mrs. Snow of Ohio, who would have everyone else see things through their own glasses.

The main trouble with movies today is their sameness.

That is what the public doesn't like. The public is hungry for novelty, as every showman knows—novelty in entertainment and novelty in exploitation.

And this sameness in films is primarily due to economic conditions within the industry.

We need to be so geared up in our economic machinery that we can encourage a lot of creative minds to produce.

In the meantime we are veering that way. We have better pictures—better by far this fall than ever before in picture history.

And things look pretty fairly bright—for pictures and for the public—despite professional space writers, psychologists, censors and what not.

GEORGE EASTMAN has been the recipient of a striking tribute paid him by Dr. Frank C. Doan, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Rochester. Dr. Doan, in the course of his eulogistic address, said that Mr. Eastman has done a daring thing in building his theatre. "He has the wit to see," said the pastor, "that the moving picture is here to stay, whether we will or no, and that it is destined, whether we like it or not, to be a great educational factor in the lives of many thousands of people. So he goes ahead and builds a moving picture theatre that looks like a Greek temple. He makes it rich and beautiful with mural paintings where other theatres are cheap and tawdry. He proposes to show only the great dramas, greatly enacted, instead of the sensational and oft-times pornographic films which hitherto have offended our good taste."

MARCEL MORHANGE, general manager of the New York Film Exchange, Buenos Aires, is in Gotham for a short stay. During the past ten days, Mr. Morhange has contracted for all the Mermaid comedies, all of the Goldwyn and Vitagraph productions for the next three years. The territory covered by these contracts is Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador. Chester E. Sawyer will hereafter co-operate with S. G. Whitehead in handling the affairs of the New York Film Exchange in New York.

OWEN MOORE skipped right over to Loew's State theatre upon his arrival in New York this week, the reason being the presentation of his picture, "Love Is an Awful Thing." Accompanying the Selznick star on several subsequent visits to the theatre was his wife, Kathryn Perry, who also appears in the production.

DID you ever stop to think of the service that motion pictures can give agriculture. A booklet issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture states:

"Thousands of extension and field workers in agriculture and allied pursuits have found that motion pictures possesses a tremendous possibility for usefulness in making common property of knowledge developed by scientific investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture and in acquainting the public with the methods and significance of important lines of work being carried on by the department and the cooperating State institutions.

"The department's films are being shown in all kinds of exhibition places, ranging from the city theatre to halls in isolated communities that heretofore have not known the 'magic of the screen.'

"The outstanding need in this work is for easier and quicker distribution of films, which can be best supplied by the State institutions cooperating with the department. To them and other distributing agencies is offered the plan of purchasing prints at manufacturing charges."

Those films available for distribution are listed under the names of the bureaus that are authority for the subject matter—such as Animal Industry, Plant Industry, Forest Service, States Relations Service, Entomology, Agricultural Economics, Public Roads, Biological Survey, Chemistry. These bureaus are all sub-divided in subjects pertinent to the general title. The films available comprise a series of nearly two hundred one, two and three reels.

next week. Aboard the Limite are Mary and, of course, Douglas Charlotte Pickford, John Fairbanks and wife. THE New Amsterdam theatre and roof, the home of the Ziegfeld Follies, is the foremost recruiting station for the screen. Take notice of the girls who have come under the spell of the camera—Diana Allen, May Hopkins, Edith Hallor, Justine Johnstone, Lillian Lorraine, the Fairbanks twins, Mae Murray, Peggy Eleanor, Kathleen Ardell, Dorothy Mackaill, Dorothy Leeds, Martha Mansfield, Ruby de Remer, Yvonne Shelton, Helen Lee Worthing, Peggy Shaw, Mildred Reardon, Bunny Wendell, Kathryn Perry, Hilda Morena, Edna Wheaton, Jacqueline Logan, and Shannor Day. The lamented Selznick star, Olive Thomas, was a Follies girl. Several have reached stardom; others are fast approaching that exalted position. Which proves that the chorus is an excellent training school. Since these girls must be endowed with beauty of face and form and possess charm, grace and poise before Dr. Ziegfeld selects them, it stands to reason that half the battle is won if they want to climb upward. Keen observation and study will attend to the rest. If they are adaptable they can quickly learn the art of make-up and the art of pantomime.

HERBERT RAWLINSON has been cleared of the charges made against him by Dorothy Clark. The district attorney of Los Angeles County has made the announcement that Rawlinson would not be required to answer the formal complaint because the investigators believed that the story told by the Clark girl and her mother was not of a nature that would be believed by any reasonable person. Will the yellow journals carry this news in headlines? They will not.

THE Fox people don't believe in taking any chances with Tony, Tom Mix's pony. They have taken out a half million dollar policy on his life. The loss of Tony would be as tragic as the loss of Fritz Kreisler's Strad.

RUMOR reaches us that Mildred Davis, the little lady who has encouraged Harold Lloyd to fall in love with her as his leading woman the past few seasons, has left the comedian, her contract having expired.

TAKE notice of what the Portland (Oregon) Telegram has to say concerning "Grandma's Boy" in its issue of September 2nd.

For four weeks one of Portland's leading theatres has played a film-comedy to crowded houses. Between seventy-five and one hundred thousand people have laughed and cried over the predicaments and trials of "Grandma's Boy," and there are probably as many more who would enjoy its intense human appeal if the management of the theatre continued to play it.

The success of "Grandma's Boy" not only in Portland, but in New York and Los Angeles, is convincing argument that the American people, as a whole, still love the clean, the true, the beautiful in life.

No salacious sex problem trails its slimy length through the film, the eternal triangle is limited in its application to two boys who vied in basking in the smiles of one innocent, wholesome girl, there is fighting enough to satisfy the most belligerent, for cause enough to suit the most sensitive. There is lack of lavish display of wealth. Vamps and villains are relegated to limbo, and freak thrills are placed on the absentee list.

The comedy appeals to everyone who still has faith in men and women. We love "grandma" because our memories still retain visions of some one who had faith in her grandchild and whose face was good for a boy to see. We laugh at the boy, and wipe away a tear, because we have not forgotten the rebuffs, the timidity, the fear, the hopes, the heartaches of our younger days.

Grandma's Boy is everyone. The film is not an expression of the vagaries of a diseased imagination, it does not represent the morbid, the debased, the fetid side of life; it tries only to tell a simple story of human faith, a story in which each of us finds some counterpart in his own life, and it tries only to make us laugh between our smiles and tears, which is life after all.

..The success of Grandma's Boy is America's answer to the film makers. Create what is pure, and sweet, and real, and the American people will open their hearts and let you in.

..Harold Lloyd, Hal Roach and Joe Reddy are registering elation as a result of this Journalistic appreciation.

WE cannot recall any summer which has ushered in such a collection of worthwhile pictures as the summer of 1922. As far as New York City is concerned, the picturegoers have been treated to rare and royal entertainment. Time was when the producers kept back their big attractions for the fall season, not daring to use their trump cards too early, for fear one of the boys would walk away with the jack-pots. They are playing fair with themselves and with the public—and everyone concerned has profited. Take a look at this summer list and see what it offers on the BIG TIME: "Grandma's Boy," "The Eternal Flame," "The Masquerader," "Blood and Sand," "Manslaughter," "Remembrance," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Under Two Flags," "Monte Christo," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Forget Me Not," "Nanook of the North," "Nero," "The Loves of Pharaoh," "Fools First," "Nice People," "The Three Must Gets Theirs," "Timothy's Quest," "Just Tony," "The Stroke of Midnight," "Sherlock Holmes," "Human Hearts," and "The Storm."

WHAT is the name of Chaplin's latest picture? We have it on good authority it will be called "The Pilgrim."

A RECENT arrival in New York from the Coast is Joe Engel, production manager at the Metro studios. After a stay of three or four weeks, Mr. Engel will return to Los Angeles.

F AIRE BINNEY, who supported ..gorgeous Georges in "The Wonder Man," and who is featured in the Eugene Walter play, "Flapper Love," has returned to her stage role in "Sally." Miss Binney has succeeded Mary Hay in the musical comedy.

HEYWOOD BROWN, in a most amusing satire gleaned from his column in the New York World, calls attention to the ideals of the National Motion Picture League as set forth in their family bulletin. According to Mr. Brown, if one followed the rules set down by this association, even "Elsie Dinsmore" would be taboo. In enumerating a few of the evils the league requests the producers to eliminate from the screen:

"All scenes depicting hatred, intense fear, jealousy, revenge, intrigue, unfaithfulness, indecency, envy, superstition, deceit, cruelty, irreverence and lawlessness."

Mr. Brown, in commenting on their brilliant pamphlet, says:

"Under the heading 'Ethical' we are amazed to find mentioned as 'extremely harmful' 'scenes depicting women proposing marriage.' This never struck us as an ethical question at all. If we were to write a caption for it we should be inclined to put it under the head of 'Sportsmanship.'

"Things are coming to such a pass in the field of censorship that the familiar adjective 'puritanical' will no longer serve. It comes as something of a shock to us to learn that Priscilla herself was no better than a vamp."

And then calling attention to another absurdity Mr. Brown remarks:

"Then there is specific prohibition of the depiction of 'Quarreling, jealousy and marriage on slight acquaintance.' We trust that Harold Bell Wright will at once blush and take a place with Rabelais and Maupassant in the ranks of the erotic. Perhaps he never realized his immorality in using love at first sight so freely."

HOLLYWOOD has lost a little quintette of head liners. Recent arrivals in New York and at the Lasky lot in Astoria include Thomas Meighan, James Kirkwood, Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan and Lila Lee.

"Showing Good Films Only" Key to Prosperity

By Peter J. Hanlon

Managing Director of Virginia and Strand, Vallejo, Cal.

MEDIOCRE pictures are liabilities to the producer, distributor and exhibitor. That is one reason why our business has shown such a great loss. We are all to blame—producer, distributor and exhibitor—for at least a great portion of this loss.

At the outset of the motion picture industry it was apparent to all far-seeing people—whom you could count on one hand—that there were great possibilities in it, both from its educational and primarily its entertaining value. Strenuous efforts were put forth by all connected with the various branches, who worked day and night for one big object—the creating of public confidence.

Figuring two years ago as the peak of our business we had, you might say, arrived at our goal. After obtaining the public's confidence we were unlike other large industries. In my opinion, after obtaining the business for which we had worked so hard, we committed a grave breach, which was that, instead of striving at all times to give the public as good or a little better pictures, we retrograded. Any and every mechanical-made picture was forced upon the public. While other industries, after obtaining the peak so to speak, in a business way, nursed and took care of what they had built substantially for the future, we did not.

In my humble estimation there are three distinct causes for the slump which was so apparent in our business. Figuring what we have lost in attendance at 100%, I would divide it into three different causes:

THE accompanying article by Peter J. Hanlon, managing director of the Virginia and Strand theatres, Vallejo, Cal., carries its own moral, which is that to bring crowds to their theatres, exhibitors must show only GOOD pictures and must eliminate the "mechanical-made" product. Mr. Hanlon is a First National Franchise holder.

- 1.—Our fault, as described above, 30%.
- 2.—Economic conditions, 40%.
- 3.—Unwelcome publicity, 30%.

Renewal of public interest in our business will require, in my estimation, a capital operation on the patient, the patient being the public, which is very sick of mediocre pictures.

I have positive information to this effect as far as my own city is concerned and know whereof I speak. This information I obtained in this way: My ushers at different times throughout each performance occupy seats in the audience with instructions to get expressions as to the likes or dislikes of the theatre's patrons for the picture being shown. They are furnished with pads and requested to make notes. These notes are handed to me in the office after each performance. That is why I am so emphatic in accusing myself for at least 30% loss.

Had I insisted upon better pictures and refused to show poor ones I would at least have helped to force an issue toward the making of better pictures.

The economic cause will eventually come back without much effort on our part.

The unwholesome, unworthy and unfair publicity which the industry gets is absolutely our own fault. We, the fourth largest industry in the United States, have been floundering around in the industrial sea like a ship without a rudder. We make no attempt whatever in defense of our people, who comprise this great and wonderful industry and for whom we are responsible.

I would suggest a clipping bureau be established and each and every unfair article attacking our industry be forwarded to a central bureau and answered in a formidable and forceful manner by the purchasing of space, if necessary, in all popular magazines. Personally I have heard remarks derogatory to some of our present actors and actresses who have not yet been mentioned in any scandal, wondering when their turn was coming.

I have discussed with different so-called big and little men in our business the possibility of an ethical method of doing business. Some say it is possible; others say it is impossible. I myself think cooperation in all branches of the industry is the first essential move. If we get together and work in a concerted way I think it is quite possible to rebuild on a sound foundation again. That, I think, can be summed down to a few words—better pictures and absolute cooperation.

The Child and the Motion Picture Theatre

By Mack Sennett

SCANNING the list of pictures released, there is a noticeable dearth of suitable screen material that could boast of any appeal for the young mind—the children.

Children and the theatre are, or ought to be, inseparable. The playhouse in respect to youth is much the same as paradise. Remember the words, "Except ye become as little children ye cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven?"

I seriously contend that no picture can become a great popular success unless it appeals with irresistible force to children.

I would not suggest limiting the appeal in pictures entirely to the comprehension of youth, for that would retard and interfere with the thought and creative genius of writers and producers. But I do think, in its fundamental values, a photoplay to be successful must touch the depths of sincere simplicity and sound a note of human interest which will find an echo in every heart, both old and young. The ability to create this appeal is essential to success.

Youth is the age of accomplishment. It must also be remembered that youth demands action, whether it be found in the home, the big out-doors or in the theatre. Considering the element of action, I try to incorporate in each of my productions enough humor to provide plenty of laughs.

Pathe Declares 8 Per Cent. Dividend on Preferred

A DIVIDEND at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on the preferred stock of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has been declared payable on Sept. 30, 1922, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Sept. 20, 1922, it was announced this week by Lewis Innerarity, secretary.

The statement explains that these are the dividends accumulated since the dates of issue to and including the 8th of September, 1922.

Childhood can hardly be too young to re-act agreeably to a certain amount of romance. A picture to make a really deep impression on extreme youth must not have too much romance, and above all it should not be "mushy" or maudlin. This is true also if such pictures are expected to appeal successfully to the wider circle of maturity. Certainly nothing is more boresome than too much sentimentality in a play whether on the stage or screen. Here, then, you see that a child's taste shall lead them, for what is popular with immaturity is also popular with maturity as well. With romance, adventure and comedy as the principal elements in a story, youth is served and old age is likewise pleased.

Pathos, I don't think, is so essential to a child's happiness in a theatre, although a certain touch of it is almost necessary at times to supply balance and contrast. The final quality which I deem necessary for proper appeal to children—a quality which should also be invested in pictures addressed to maturity, is wholesomeness.

No picture can attain popularity if it offends the finer senses of decent people or badly influences "imaginative" youth. Neither is laughter genuine unless it is caused by clean incidents of enacted humor. Coarse laughs for uncouth minds, in the presence of ugly facts has no place in the scheme of decent picture-makers' ministrations to the public. When in this regard you offend children, all right minded men and women are also offended.

I think you'll find that any appeal destined to be broad and embracing in its scope must compass a child's wishes, aspirations and faith. It must have action, it must have comedy and it must have romance. It must suggest youth with a suspense and spirit of adventure which, taken with qualities of tenderness and pathos, must be clean, wholesome and fit for the great American Kid.

Atlanta "Better Films" Week Well Received

Excellent Constructive Work Done in Southern City in Conjunction With Civic Bodies

ATLANTA'S first "Better Films Week," held last week, was a tremendous success from every angle. Increased box office receipts were only one phase of the benefit obtained. Increased civic co-operation, a wider and more sympathetic understanding on the part of the public of the problems of the motion picture industry, and the acquisition of friendship and good-will that will last far into the future, were the really important results.

The purpose of the week from the standpoint of the Better Films Committee was twofold. First, to emphasize through civic club programs the constructive side of motion pictures—that is, the correctional, recreational and educational uses of the screen; second, to bring to the attention of the public the best type of photoplays to the end that the public be given higher standards for the selection of their motion picture entertainment.

These civic club programs were formulated so as to present four important phases of the motion picture outside the theatre:

First came the recreational uses, both in the theatre and in various social welfare organizations. Two eminent speakers, R. K. Atkinson, of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Edward M. Barrows, of Columbia University, presented this phase of the subject.

Then came the consideration of the picture as a part of the school curriculum and that subject was ably covered by Ernest L. Crandall, of the New York Public School system. Dr. Crandall declared motion pictures to be the greatest educational force ever put into the hands of the people and predicted that within five years it will have revolutionized our educational system and methods. On different occasions Dr. Crandall carried the same message to the Rotary club and the Masonic club, and with his able and very persuasive arguments he succeeded in building up a tremendous sentiment for a larger appropriation for this sort of work in Atlanta. His message was particularly timely in view of the fact that the public schools of the city have with the current term introduced a department of visual education. Already the superintendent of schools for Atlanta is asking for a budget of $25,000 for visual instruction instead of the present appropriation of $5,000.

The third phase of the special programs was designed to cover the religious uses of motion pictures in the church. Rev. Chester C. Marshall, pastor of the First Methodist church at Bridgeport, Conn., was the speaker and his audience was the Christian Council. He drew the largest meeting that this body has recorded within two years, many of whom were very antagonistic to the industry. He not only made friends for the idea of using motion pictures in churches and community centers, but he won for the Better Films movement the friendship of many of the ministers and gave them a more liberal view and a more progressive conception of the theatre. Fifty-six ministers were in the audience who heard Dr. Marshall.

The fourth and last division of the general program dealt with pictures as a correctional force in custodial institutions. R. K. Atkinson, Recreation Department of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Edward M. Barrows, Associate Director of Training Service for Community Workers, Columbia University, covered that phase of the subject and found

Prizma Takes Legal Action Against Techni Color

NOTICE was served on William Travers Jerome, vice-president of Techni Color, Inc., last Friday by Prizma, Inc., through its attorney, Julian S. Wooster, not to manufacture, exhibit, lease or sell any color motion picture films made according to the process and with the apparatus described and claimed in U. S. patent to Mason, No. 1,348,029, dated July 27, 1920, and which is owned by Prizma, Inc. Mr. Jerome and Techni Color, Inc., are also requested to immediately discontinue further exhibition of the film now being exhibited at the Candler building, New York, and to account to Prizma, Inc., for all gains and advantages received therefrom.

Prizma, Inc., has been producing color film for the past four or five years, its product including "The Glorious Adventure," nearly one hundred short subjects, and many color sections, art titles and scenes for leading black-and-white producers.

According to H. G. Stokes, vice president, Prizma, Inc., is now taking steps for the immediate filing of suits through Church & Church, Washington, D. C., and Julian S. Wooster, to fully protect its interests.

very responsive audiences in the Kiwanis club, the women's clubs of Atlanta and the parent-teacher associations.

As a result of the interest that has been awakened by this special activity on behalf of Better Films Week, the Georgia Baptist convention has requested a speaker and motion picture program for its December meeting; the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Forum has made a similar request for the October or November Forum; the Christian Index has asked for a conference looking toward the development of a church film service; the Southeastern Executive Council of the Federated Women's Clubs, covering nine states, has requested a speaker; the Inter-Civic Council (a powerful body representing all the civic organizations of Atlanta) has requested a conference to formulate a definite program of work with motion pictures.

"Realizing the inestimable value of the motion picture as a recreational and educational force in our community and recognizing that its betterment and proper development are dependent upon a three-fold co-operation between the public, the theatre and the municipality, I, as your Mayor, deem it fitting and proper to call upon all of our citizens to join in a movement, sponsored by an organization which has accomplished much and promises more, for better films.

"That due emphasis may be placed upon the highest type of screen productions, and theatrical attractions in general, and that worthy standards for the selection of entertainment may be broadcasted, I, James L. Key, by and under the authority vested in me as Mayor of this city, do hereby proclaim and designate the week beginning Monday, September 18th, 1922, as 'Better Films Week,' and charge every citizen to 'Go to the Theatre' in token of the value of the stage and film art to the recreational and educational life of Atlanta.

JAMES L. KEY,
Mayor.

The program at leading houses for the week were:

Metropolitan—"Prisoner of Zenda."
Tudor—"The Trouper," "Lady Rose's Daughter" and "The Trap."
Strand—"I Am the Law."
Howard—"Nice People."
Grand—"Kisses" and "A Wide-Open Town."
Rialto—"Love Is an Awful Thing."
Criterion—"Broken Blossoms."

Stereoscopic Pictures Said to Have Been Attained

The problem of projecting stereoscopic motion pictures, in which objects stand out in relief, as in the old hand stereoscope views, is said to have been accomplished by the Fairall Trust, of which H. K. Fairall is the inventor.

This result is obtained, it is said, by the projection on the screen simultaneously and super-imposed of two positive films which have been photographed at the same time through a single camera having two lenses, separated a distance equivalent to the position of the human eyes.

The films are treated in such a way as to allow projection at any distance, and the use of viewing screens similar to spectacles, consisting of a blue and a red lens, which are complementary colors, makes possible stereoscopic vision, in that each eye sees a single picture of its own, and the one eye cannot see the picture viewed by the other, which is necessary to obtain the relief and perspective.

Furthermore, by the Fairall process of projection, it is claimed, the picture as shown on the screen has no distortion when viewed from any part of the theatre. The front corner seats are just as advantageous as the center seats, because the image squares itself to the individual.

Another peculiarity of the stereoscopic photography is that all objects either in the foreground or in the far background are in perfect focus when seen projected by this new process.

New Pathe President Not to Be Elected Now

The resignation of Paul Brunet as president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was formally accepted at the regular meeting of the board of directors, which authorized the following statement:

"No action was taken on the election of a new president nor is any such action contemplated for some time to come, and in all probability will be deferred until our annual meeting some time next year.

"The Pathe executive organization as now composed has been functioning for over a year with splendid efficiency and with entire satisfaction to all concerned. We accordingly see no immediate need of rearrangement or change.

"Furthermore, the resignation of Mr. Brunet will in no way affect the policy of the company nor its management."

Kansas M. P. T. O. Names Committees

Legislative and Censor Groups Will Combat Restrictions; Meet a Success

The appointment of a censorship committee and legislative representatives marked the introduction of a new policy of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas, at the convention in Wichita on Monday, September 25.

The censorship committee is composed of M. B. Shanberg, of the Midland Amusement Company; Richard Biechele, of the Osage theatre, Kansas City, Kan., and C. E. Cook, business manager of the Kansas organization. This committee will co-operate with the Kansas censorship board. Before a costly film is "butchered" the advice and suggestions of the committee will be heard by the censors. It is believed that in this manner many expensive productions will be saved from the scissors.

The legislative representatives, one in each county of the state, will be instructed to hold meetings and bring about conditions whereby exhibitors will have a voice in the legislative program of Kansas, which now includes several drastic measures that will be a great handicap to exhibitors if passed.

More than 150 exhibitors and exchange men were present. The principal speakers were Rev. Earl A. Blackman, Chanute, Kans., national chaplain of the American Legion; W. Y. Morgan, candidate for governor, and Richard J. Hopkins, candidate for justice of the Kansas Supreme Court.

Sentiment was against the Hoy system, and the formation of an arbitration board will be left to the executive board.

Rev. Blackman's subject was, "Jesus and the Movies."

As there was no election of officers at this semi-annual convention, Mr. Blackman's address was the "highlight" of the meeting. Virtually every exchange in the Kansas City territory, as well as every county of Kansas, was represented at the gathering, which was concluded by an elaborate free banquet, as far as the exhibitors were concerned, at the expense of the exchanges.

Prior to the convention, Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, sent a letter to every Kansas exhibitor, urging his presence at the convention, and calling attention to the new Music Department of the national organization, and to the importance of exhibitors co-operating with it.

Incorporations Take Slump for Past Week

The number of companies incorporating and entering the motion picture business during the past week took a slump, when but four companies filed papers of incorporation in the secretary of state's office, Albany, N. Y., representing a total capitalization of $32,000.

These companies included the Du-Art Film Laboratories, $10,000, Arthur Gottlieb, Ralph Pecoreli, New York City; Jack M. Jerome, Glenwood; Smart Films, Inc., $20,000, Jonas J. Smith, Fannie Smith, Rose Sherman, Brooklyn; Capitol Photoplays Corporation, $1,000, George V. Reilly, Robert K. Thistle, Harry C. Hand, New York City; American City Bureau Film Service, Inc., $1,000, Albert St. Peter, Jersey City; Arthur T. Dear, George H. Breed, New York.

New Wilmington Theatre Is Leased to H. C. Wales

The Victoria theatre, newest and largest of the Wilmington, N. C., houses, has been leased to Herbert C. Wales of Charlotte, N. C., by the Howard-Wells Amusement Company of Wilmington. This theatre has been used for legitimate road attractions, and the future policy will remain the same, so far as is known.

Webster Groves, Mo., Out to Kill Blue Law

WEBSTER GROVES, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis inhabited by home-owners and large families, has decided to throw off the yoke of a "blue law" imposed upon the community about ten years ago. At that time the city fathers put through an ordinance that forbids any theatrical performance on a Sunday, including moving pictures.

About a year ago the Ozark theatre was completed at Webster. It is a handsome house, comparing favorably with any in this section, but it has not held shows on Sundays. Webster has been compelled to come to St. Louis for Sabbath amusements.

The mothers of Webster have rebelled. They think it is silly that they must send their children so far away to be entertained. So they have gotten busy. A petition is being circulated calling upon the city council to repeal the ordinance.

It will require 750 signatures to perfect the petition, or 25 per cent of the vote cast at the last mayoralty election. But it is certain the required number will be secured. And then if the council declines to act a special election will be held on the question in November.

Stock and Notes of Empire Circuit Are Sold

Stocks and notes of the sixteen motion picture houses known as the "Empire Circuit," valued at $1,228,818.91, were last week authorized to be sold by Bank Commissioner Allen, of Massachusetts, permission being given by Justice DeCourcy in the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, the purchase price being $550,000, offered by Samuel Levovitch. The circuit covers New England from Maine to Rhode Island.

The notes and stock constituted a part of the property of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company, closed by Allen about two years ago. He has operated the chain since through a board of directors named by him, and including Samuel C. Bennett, Daniel B. Ruggles, Henry O. Cushman, Arthur K. Hunt and Guy L. Vaughan.

The petition for the sale, offered by Mr. Cushman, liquidating agent for Mr. Allen, declares that because of the intricate and numerous inter-corporate dealings among the theatre corporations, and between them and the Cosmopolitan, and with other persons and corporations, it was impossible to determine with accuracy the amount of money actually invested by the trust company in these stocks and notes. The directors immediately took steps to sell the properties, but no sufficient offer was made that complied with the required terms of sale. Finally came the offer of $550,000, of which fifty thousand was pledged to secure the transaction, $100,000 more to be paid when the court permitted the sale. The remainder is to be paid in four monthly installments, $50,000 for three months and $250,000 the final month.

The new owner, the head of a New York syndicate, intends to operate most of the theatres for the present. Many of them are moving picture houses. Louis M. Boas will continue as general manager of those in Fall River, T. T. Vetrie will manage the Bijou in Newport, and Alfred R. Commette will have charge of the Colonial. David Dugan will manage the Strand.

Pictures of Events Broadcasted as They Occur by New Jenkins Invention

A RIOT is taking place in a thronged city in the far western section of our country, yet while this disturbance is happening, while the police and authorities are fighting the mob in an effort to restore peace, people in New York, Boston, Chicago or any other section of our country will witness this riot scene while it is actually taking place. Such is the wonder and scope of the developments just completed through the mediums of lenses, telegraphic systems and wireless.

A letter recently received by a friend of C. Francis Jenkins, the noted Washington inventor, discloses these marvelous achievements. Jenkins has previously had in operation apparatus for broadcasting motion pictures by wireless. He further explains in his letter the results and prediction for his latest work.

"We are sending pictures right along day after day, the latest stunt being sending the pictures out of our laboratory, over the telephone company's wires, to a friendly broadcasting station a few miles away, where the telephone wire is hitched up to the broadcasting set and the picture comes right back to us by wireless. Within a few days we expect to send a picture out in this manner and receive it in three separate receiving stations, namely, (1) one of the Governmental Departments, (2) aboard a battleship and (3) my Sixteenth Street Laboratory, about four and half miles north of here.

"This wire extension scheme enables us to set up our sending set so that the lens looks on the scene of a wreck or other news event, and all we have to do to broadcast it, is to hitch our apparatus to the nearest telephone, after we have called up the broadcasting station telling them the picture is coming. This means that we can broadcast Pictured-News, from the scene of its happening, as promptly and as far as telegraphic news of the affair can be sent."

No film or actual photographic pictures are employed, for, as stated by C. Francis Jenkins in his letter, it is only necessary that the sending set be positioned to permit the lens a view of the scene to be broadcasted.

This apparatus for broadcasting by wireless motion pictures and new events which is now in the process of perfection for commercial use will undoubtedly exert a strong influence on modern civilization.

Rothacker to Build Laboratory Near London

Expects to Have Plant in Operation by Fall of 1923; Conditions in England Improved

A ROTHACKER laboratory on British shores to be in full operation by the autumn of 1923: That is the ambitious plan launched by Watterson R. Rothacker, who has returned to America after an extensive tour of Europe. While in England Mr. Rothacker effected arrangements for the building of a fully equipped laboratory in the vicinity of London. The construction of laboratories in Paris and Berlin was also being contemplated by Mr. Rothacker when he left the United States, but the unsettled conditions abroad are responsible for the abandonment of these plans at this time. The installation of laboratories in Paris and Berlin will be deferred at least until after the London plant is put into operation, and it may be eventually decided to confine Rothacker's European activities to the English laboratory exclusively.

Technical experts of the Chicago and Los Angeles plants are now concentrating on the details of the foreign laboratory plans, which provide for some innovations of great promise, it is declared.

Mr. Rothacker made a thorough investigation of motion picture conditions in England, France and Germany with respect not only to laboratories, but also studios, raw stock plants and theatres.

"Conditions in England were signally improved over what I found them in 1920 and 1921," related Mr. Rothacker. "And the English motion picture industry displayed an optimism regarding 1923 that was not at all simulated.

"In London I saw Joe Sehenek, Von Herberg of First National, and Earl Hammons, of Educational, then making visits to English theatres of prominence. Sam Harris of Selznick was another notable member of the London film colony.

"Mr. Smith, the British go-getter for Universal, was busy sowing seeds whose harvest will be reflected on his annual report. Tom Terris had started 'Harbor Lights,' the first of a series of European-made productions. Cecil Hepworth, the pioneer English producer, hinted at some very big plans and unusual activities which will be read about in the trade papers soon.

"Ray Long, of the Hearst organization, and Karl Kitchen, of the New York World, were displaying considerable interest in the British picture industry.

"In Paris, Raymond Gaumont showed me the first print of his big picture, 'Don Juan,' which has won much favorable comment among French exhibitors.

"Berlin meant renewing acquaintances made in 1921. Through the courtesy of Albert Kaufman and Ike Blumenthal I visited various German laboratories. I was in time to see Pola Negri and Lubitsch finishing their two latest pictures, and also saw some of the big scenes in 'Peter the Great' shot at the big outdoor studio, which reminds one more of California than of Germany.

"Saw Hiram Abrams enjoying a richly deserved recreation at Deauville after his strenuous campaign in England and on the Continent.

"The Majestic is my lucky ship, for coming back I had as fellow passengers Pola Negri, Mabel Normand, Ben Blumenthal and Roy Aitken. I'm predicting that Pola Negri will do things in America that will make the most extravagant press agent promises seem conservative."

After a short stay in Chicago Mr. Rothacker went to New York for the last week in September. Early in October he will leave to spend three or four weeks on the Coast.

Shauer Impressed with Outlook in Europe

Famous Players-Lasky Executive Predicts Good Business for Good Pictures

E. E. SHAUER, assistant treasurer and director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has just returned with Mrs. Shauer from two months trip to Europe, much impressed with the hopeful outlook for American pictures abroad.

"The most impressive thing about conditions in Europe today, in my opinion, is the hopefulness existing in the motion picture industry and its prospects for the future," said Shauer.

"While political and general conditions abroad may not be all that is desirable, there is a more distinctly hopeful outlook for the motion picture industry insofar as it applies to the distribution, exhibition and exploitation of the highest grade American films. More than ever I am convinced that American producers who are giving the highest thought and artistic endeavor to the production of the high class stories need have no fear of losing any of their world markets to foreign producers. "Everywhere I went I found the greatest popular interest in Paramount Pictures. Our business in Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and Spain is better than ever and the extensive preparations being made by the exhibitors in these countries for still better conditions in the industry give promise of another record breaking year for Paramount in these countries.

"Perhaps the most hopeful sign in Great Britain is the constant shortening of the time between trade showing and the release of productions. Two years ago this period ranged from twelve to eighteen months and at the present time nine months would be a good average. Within the next year or more this time probably will be further reduced to approximately six months, which is almost as close to our American releasing schedule as is physically possible. Several large theatres are in the course of construction and many others are in contemplation.

"One of the most promising signs of the great change for the better in film conditions I found in Belgium, where the exhibitors are showing all the alertness and aggressiveness of their American brethren in the presentation of high grade pictures. The leading houses in Brussels and Antwerp are liberal users of posters; their advertising is of the best, and their lobbies are always attractively billed. The first run house for Paramount in Brussels has been using from twenty to twenty-five twenty-four sheet stands, in addition to a liberal display of smaller paper. I found no more appreciative screen patrons than the Belgians, who are not afraid of showing their appreciation of the best American pictures.

"Our branch offices in France are all open and are doing a most favorable business; in fact, far better than any one considered possible for the first year. Prospects for the coming year were never better. This, with the fact that the exhibitors are learning the value of the proper presentation of the best screen entertainment, insures record breaking business.

"In Scandinavia, Carl York, and W. LeMat, who signed a contract some months ago for the exclusive distribution of Paramount pictures in Sweden, Denmark and Norway, have already begun their releasing program with the most satisfactory results. First run houses for Paramount in Copenhagen, Stockholm and Christiania have enjoyed unusually good business since the beginning of the new year and the prospects in these three countries were never better.

"As to Germany and Central Europe, improvement in the industry is being held back by the political and economic conditions.

"Unless all signs are abortive the film industry in Spain is on the threshold of the best business ever known. Better presentation of the best pictures and the erection of a number of splendid theatres are positive signs of the coming of a new era. In Barcelona two new theatres, equal to anything in the United States, are being erected and early next year will begin the presentation of elaborate pictures on a scale never before attempted in Spain. In Madrid leading business interests have obtained a site in the center of the most central and important section of the city for a motion picture palace which will overshadow anything in existence in that city. In Barcelona and Madrid I found many revelations in the way pictures are presented. The best American pictures are always certain of a cordial and appreciative reception.

"Signs of a similar improvement in Italy are to be found in the larger cities. Leading exhibitors are beginning to turn their attention to the proper presentation of pictures, a most hopeful sign for the coming year. Poorer pictures are not finding the market they once had, and the coming of the better pictures seems to have turned the tide for the exhibitor and the distributor who can supply this entertainment."

Michigan Exhibitors to Convene at Flint

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan will convene in Flint, October 10th and 11th. All business sessions will be held in the Grill Room of the Durant Hotel. It is expected that over 300 exhibitors of the state will be present, including National President Sydney S. Cohen and other national executives. Practical assurance has been received that Will H. Hays, head of the Producers and Distributors Association of America, will be present and will address the theatre owners at the Tuesday afternoon session and again at the grand banquet Tuesday evening.

Among the subjects scheduled to be acted upon at the big gathering are collective buying, prices of accessories, the carnival and medicine-show situation, higher type of advertising, music tax, uniform rental contract, a plan of arbitration, and matters of a legislative character.

In conjunction with the convention an exhibit will be held in co-operation with the following exchanges: First National, Paramount, Metro, Hodkinson, Robertson-Cole or Film Booking Offices, Minter United, Joe Horwitz, Universal, Standard, Select, Rex Film and Vitagraph. This exhibit will be held in the Club Room at the Hotel Durant.

Preferred to Form Permanent Stock Company

As the basis for the formation of a permanent stock company, B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., has signed Kenneth Harlan and Orville Caldwell. It is Schulberg's intention to add to this list from time to time so that he will have on tap available talent in the form of leading men and leading women for roles in future Preferred Pictures.

Black Theatre Chain Makes Change of Name

A change in the name of the Black New England Theatres, Inc., which will now be known simply as New England Theatres, Inc., was announced this week.

The company has just sold Black's theatre, Fairhaven, Vt., to Edward J. Bolen.

Goulding Resigns as Head of Eastman Theatre

The resignation of Charles H. Goulding as manager-director of the Eastman theatre, recently opened in Rochester, N. Y., was announced this week.

His successor has not as yet been appointed.

Preferred Stock Dividend Voted by Associated

A DIVIDEND of four per cent on the preferred stock was voted at the regular meeting of the board of directors of Associated Exhibitors on Tuesday, Sept. 21.

Of this, two per cent covers the dividends on the preferred stock for the third quarter of 1922, payable Oct. 1 to preferred stockholders as of record on Sept. 20, 1922. The remaining two per cent being as accrued dividends on the preferred stock for the year 1921 and is payable on Oct. 1 to preferred stockholders of record on June 1, 1921, or their successors in interest.

Golf!

THE Motion Picture Golf Association's Fall Golf Tournament will be held at the Soundview Golf Club, Great Neck, Long Island on Thursday, October 19th.

This will be the third tournament held by the Association and from present indications will be even a greater success than either of those previously held—at least 130 entries are expected. There will be some 50 prizes for the various flights which will mean that at least half of those who play will go home with a trophy of some kind.

Special cups have been offered by individuals and companies in the business for special events in addition to the trophies mentioned above.

Last Spring, Tom Moore of Washington was the star performer. It is hoped that some of the theatre owners from other parts of the country will be on hand at the coming event to challenge Tom's prestige and take the championship away from Washington.

Rumors have it that Douglas Fairbanks and others of our well known stars have gotten out their niblicks and are polishing them up preparatory to entering the lists.

There isn't much time left between now and the 19th, so send in your entry at once, accompanied by a check for $10.00, which covers greens fee, luncheon, dinner, caddy and all other of the minor golfing necessities. Entries can be made through the News, World or Film Daily.

New Independent Exchange Formed at Baltimore

Formation of a new company, to be known as Progress Pictures, Inc., of Baltimore, to distribute independent productions in Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia, was announced this week.

Progress Pictures will also finance and build motion picture theatres in the territory alluded to above and act in an advisory capacity where such services are required. The personnel of the organization consists of Raymond Roberts, J. M. Langrall, J. O. Langrall, Oscar Neufeld, Tony Luchese and Clarence Bowie. Roberts and Langrall are well known to the Baltimore business world, being owners of ten big fruit packing plants in the Baltimore district.

Neufeld and Luchese are prominent in the film industry in Philadelphia, where they conduct the De Luxe Film Company, while Bowie, member of the legal firm of Soper, Bowie and Clark, represents many of the large financial interests in Baltimore.

Branton Leaves Staff of Greater Amusements

G. Ralph Branton, for several years advertising manager of Greater Amusements, the regional journal published at Minneapolis, Minn., has resigned from the staff of that publication to enter the distributing end of the film business in association with J. F. Cubberley, well known Minneapolis exchange manager, according to word received here this week.

Mr. Cubberley, formerly Minneapolis manager for Associated First National, recently resigned to become manager of the Finkelstein & Ruben exchange in that city, and it is assumed that it is with this concern that Mr. Branton will be connected.

Chicago Theatre Owners I Now Part of State Body

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Chicago has ceased to exist as an organization and its members hereafter will owe allegiance only to the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

This move, which was made in the interest of closer unity between the motion picture theatre men in all parts of the state, and also of economy, came after a series of conference between a committee composed of Louis H. Frank, Joseph Hopp and Ludwig Siegel, representing the Chicago organization, and Samuel Abrahams, G. D. Hopkinson and S. Selig, acting for the state organization.

The agreement to disband for the purpose outlined above was ratified by the members of the Chicago organization at a general meeting, and the executive officers of the Illinois organization also have put their O. K. on the agreement, which will eliminate the necessity of Chicago exhibitors paying dues and assessments to both the city and state associations, and will also put the exclusive executive power in the hands of one harmonious organization.

Through the new arrangement, Messrs. Frank, Hopp, A. Sapperstein, Lamm, M. Siegel and John Silha, all members of the late Chicago association, become members of the state executive committee, the officers of the I. M. P. T. O. remaining as before: L. M. Rubens, president; Samuel Abrahams, vice-president; J. B. Dibelka, acting secretary and treasurer, and William J. Sweeney, organizer.

The particular grievances and interests of Chicago exhibitors will be looked after by a special committee composed of local men which will be appointed by the state executive board, so that the same protection will be afforded to Chicago members against exchanges and in other matters as in the past.

This move is declared to be particularly desirable at this time, as there will be considerable adverse legislation to combat at the next session of the legislature, and also because the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held in Chicago next Spring.

Webb Elected Head of Columbia Players

Kenneth Webb, the motion picture director has just been elected president of the Columbia Players, an office held each year by a prominent graduate of that college who was active in dramatics when at the institution.

Mr. Webb wrote and staged a number of the annual Varsity shows during his college career and since then has many times contributed to the offerings of the Columbia Players.

Goldwyn to Open Two More New Branch Exchanges

TWO more new branch exchanges have been added to the Goldwyn list, bringing the total up to twenty-six. James E. Grainger, personal representative of F. J. Godsol, president of Goldwyn Pictures corporation, now on a tour of the exchanges, has just opened up a branch office in Portland, Ore., and arranged for another to be opened almost immediately in Butte, Mont.

He had previously, on this trip, arranged for exchanges in Indianapolis and Milwaukee.

Amalgamated to Start Work Oct. 2 on First Release

"THE MADONNA IN CHAINS," the first production of Amalgamated Exchanges of America, Inc., will go into production on Oct. 2 at the company's studio in New Rochelle, it was announced this week. The Mitten-thal studio at Yonkers has also been obtained, and work is scheduled to start there shortly after.

For this first picture, E. K. Lincoln, Martha Mansfield and Jean Acker, (Mrs. Rodolph Valentino), have been engaged. Amalgamated is an independent organization composed of independent exchanges. A series of well known plays and books by such authors as Langdon McCormack, Denman Thompson, Hal Reid and Edward Owings Towne have been obtained for production.

Work Starts on "A Million in Jewels" Here

"A Million in Jewels," a William Brush production to be distributed by American Releasing Corporation, went into production this week when opening scenes were made in New York, and the company left Wednesday for Miami, Fla., where the picture will be completed.

J. P. McGowan is directing and playing the leading role in the story by Caroline Barnes, with Helen Holmes as the heroine, others in the cast being Elinor Fair, Nellie Parker-Spaulling, Charles Craig, Fred Kalgrer and Leslie J. Casey.

"A Million in Jewels" is described as a swiftly moving melodrama dealing with modern methods in smuggling valuables into this country, and the equally modern tactics employed by the Secret Service in circumventing this phase of lawbreaking.

First Nat'l Gets "Oliver Twist"

Will Be Played on Guarantee and Percentage Basis; October Release Likely

ASSOCIATED First National Pictures will distribute Sol Lesser's motion-picture version of Charles Dickens' famous novel, "Oliver Twist," in which Jackie Coogan is presented in the title role. The closing of the contract between Lesser and First National, which ranks as one of the biggest deals negotiated in recent months, terminated the original plan to road-show the production. It is understood that all engagements will be played on a guarantee-and-percentage basis and that the Eastern office of the Jackie Coogan Productions, which is in charge of Irving Lesser, will have the approval of all contracts.

According to present plans it is likely that "Oliver Twist" will have a general release date in October. A Broadway run for the production is also being contemplated.

Coincident with the announcement of the closing of the contract which gives "Oliver Twist" to First National for distribution in the United States comes word that this production will also be distributed abroad through First National's foreign exchanges. Bruce Johnson, manager of the foreign department of First National, sailed for London on last Friday aboard the Berengaria for the purpose of establishing exchanges in those countries where First National's foreign business warrants it.

Accompanying Mr. Johnson on his foreign trip is David P. Howells, president of David P. Howells, Inc., and Louis Brock, representing Joseph M. Schenck.

The following statement was issued from the First National headquarters this week in connection with the acquisition of the Coogan production and its booking policy:

"According to Sol Lesser, the exhibitor seeking a booking for 'Oliver Twist,' must first have played the other Coogan pictures, 'Peck's Bad Boy,' 'My Boy,' and 'Trouble,' and in this manner, with these products exhibited in his theatre, Jackie Coogan's popularity will be of such strength that the theatre owner will obtain the very best results from the 'Oliver Twist' showing.

"Lesser further states that the rental value of 'Oliver Twist' is not based on any national quota, but that a specially prepared schedule will be sent all exchange managers from which to be guided in their respective territories.

First National officials see in the acquisition of "Oliver Twist" another triumph for the organization. It is known that the company has been negotiating for the distribution of the picture for some time, but the elaborate plans by Sol Lesser for the road-showing of the attraction cast considerable doubt as to the outcome of these negotiations. All of Jackie Coogan's former productions have been distributed by First National.

Two "Big Four" Releases on B'way October 1st

The United Artists Corporation and its subsidiary organization, Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, have two feature pictures on Broadway the week of October 1st.

George Arliss's "The Man Who Played God," a United Artists release, goes into the New York Strand, while "A Woman's Woman," a Charles Giblyn production, with Mary Alden as a star, has been booked by Allied Producers and Distributors for the same week, at the Cameo, New York.

Pearson Finds Conditions Improved

Pathe's General Manager Back from Coast Talks of Business Revival

RAPID recovery from the recent severe period of depression, increased receipts at the box office, and improvement in the quality of coming attractions constitutes the message brought back by Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., as the result of his recent Coast to Coast tour.

"Throughout the course of my recent trip to the Pacific Coast my sojourn there and the return journey," declared Mr. Pearson, "it was everywhere manifest that the picture industry was making a rapid recovery from what has been the longest and most severe period of depression it has ever experienced. It was equally apparent that increased receipts at the box office had to maintain themselves for several weeks longer than ever before in order to convince exhibitors that good times were really on the way.

"I suppose we cannot blame the exhibitor for that attitude in view of what he has been through during the last year or more; but, of course, a regular good old-fashioned revival of patron interest in motion pictures cannot take place before the exhibitor demonstrates his own confidence in present and future possibilities by giving his public only the best, and getting behind it with his old-time fervor in advertising and exploitation.

"Likewise, the increased rentals must make themselves felt through the exchanges and back to the producers before that very essential of the industry's future gets fully active again in the production of wonderful pictures in sufficient numbers to sustain complete patron interest.

"Production activities in Los Angeles were, of course, greater than at any time during the last two years; but on every hand came the query: 'When are we going to start getting real returns on pictures made last year so that we can have real money with which to develop this big plan, or that which has been mapped out for months?'"

"Fortunately, however, it is apparent that the market just now affords a few real big pictures that will suffice for the exhibitors' immediate needs, and beyond all doubt the returns on these will act as a further spur to production activities. But surely no exhibitor should hesitate to book all the good stuff available, because there is not any too much of it, and he will need all there is, and more, to sustain patrons' revived but critical interest.

"On this trip I visited our branches at Chicago, Omaha, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Minneapolis. At each of them both managers and exhibitors with whom I talked were enthusiastic about the future outlook based upon the recovery that has already been noted. In this connection, wherever 'Grandma's Boy' was played, or had played, it was breaking house records, and will do more to re-establish theatre attendance than any picture now before the public."

New Salesmen Appointed by Associated Exhibitors

The following appointments to the sales organization of Associated Exhibitors have been announced:

Mr. John Mooney to be sales manager of the Buffalo office and Mr. V. M. Young as Associated representative in the Dallas territory, effective September 18th; Mr. C. L. Hickman, Associated representative in the St. Louis territory, effective September 11th, and Mr. C. W. McDaniels, Associated representative in the Milwaukee territory, effective September 25th.

Seal of Merit Awarded by Better Pictures Ass'n

The Better Pictures Association of the World held its second annual New York luncheon at the Biltmore Hotel Tuesday, September 26th, and awarded the organization Seal of Merit to the current George Arlis production, "The Man Who Played God," made by Distinctive Productions, Inc.

Five hundred representatives of leading church and civic organizations affiliated with the Better Pictures Association were present and listened to addresses by Dr. Robert Watson, Chairman of the B. P. A. Co-operating Committee; Dr. Clifton Harby Levy, representing the New York Board of Jewish Ministers; Lee Hammer of Will H. Hays' staff; Mrs. Harry Sternberger, representing the Council of Jewish Women of the United States and Canada, and Arthur S. Friend, producer of the film that received the Association's award.

The feature of the luncheon was an attack on present day censorship methods by Dr. Levy. Cordial approval was given his remarks by the diners, many of them affiliated with bodies that were understood to be friendly to censorship.

The luncheon was followed by the projection of "The Man Who Played God," and the presentation to Distinctive Productions Inc., of the Association's Merit Seal.

Frank Lloyd at Work on Norma Talmadge Script

Frank Lloyd has abandoned, at least for the present, plans to produce under his own name and will direct Norma Talmadge in her next subject under the auspices of Joseph Schenck. Miss Talmadge's next vehicle will be a screen version of "Within the Law." Mr. Lloyd is now hard at work on the script which will be ready for production as soon as the star returns from her European tour.

"Passion Flower" Changed to "Love or Hate"

The title of the Norma Talmadge picture, "The Passion Flower," has been changed to "Love or Hate."

These scenes are from the William Fox production, starring William Russell in "Mixed Faces"

Legionnaires Plan to Aid "Skin Deep" Showings

Extensive co-operation from the American Legion on the showing of "Skin Deep," the Thomas H. Ince special production which will be distributed by Associated First National, is expected as a result of special previews before state conventions of the Legion in all parts of the country.

The production, carrying an indirect appeal for a square deal for the man who saw service in the great war, has been received with enthusiasm by Legionnaires, and in various big centers preparations are being made by Legion Posts and departments for making the presentation of "Skin Deep" locally the occasion of great Legion demonstrations. Plans for Legion cooperation on an elaborate scale are under way now in connection with the pictures showing at the Chicago theatre, Chicago, and the State theatre, Cleveland.

The first pre-view of "Skin Deep" for the Legion was its presentation before a special sub-committee of the national executive committee in Indianapolis, arranged by the Thomas H. Ince organization. The picture was shown early in September before the delegates of the state convention of California at San Jose.

Theatre presentations were held in connection with the Legion conventions at Greensboro, N. C.; Logan, Utah; Bluefield, W. Va.; Terre Haute, Ind., and York, Neb. Previews for the state delegates were arranged at Syracuse, N. Y.; Lake Hopatcong, N. J.; Rock Island, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn.; Bartlesville, Okla., and Bristol, Conn.

"A Woman's Woman" Opens at Cameo

"A Woman's Woman," a Charles Giblyn production, with Mary Alden starring in a mother role, and being distributed by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, will have its first New York showing at Moss's Cameo theatre the week of October 1st. After this engagement "A Woman's Woman" will go round the Keith-Proctor-Moss circuit houses in Greater New York. This feature is based on Mrs. Nalbro Bartley's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name.

Elinor Glyn's Hollywood Romance Preview Given

"THE WORLD'S A STAGE," Elinor Glyn's romance of Hollywood, was given a preview this week at the California Theatre in Venice with Director Colin Campbell, Dorothy Phillips—the star—and the supporting cast including Kenneth Harlan, Bruce McRae, Otis Harlan and others present as the guests of Mike Rosenberg, secretary of the Principal Pictures Corporation, which organization is producing and distributing the film.

A number of moving picture celebrities including Allen Hollubar, Irving Cummings, Alice Lake, Ralph Lewis, Milton Sills, Harry Carey and others were also present as guests of secretary Rosenberg.

As soon as a few corrections in titling and editing are made, Rosenberg will take the production to New York to arrange for booking dates and then embark for London to consult with Mme. Glyn regarding the European premiere, which will be given simultaneously with the opening in Los Angeles.

Doug Personally to Direct Broadway Premiere

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS will personally direct the Broadway presentation of his new production, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." Both Doug and his wife, Mary Pickford, are now en route to New York from Los Angeles for this purpose. Miss Pickford will vacation in Manhattan while her husband is engaged with the details of the big premiere.

Negotiations are now under way for the rental of a big Broadway house, and it is expected that arrangements will be effected for an extended run of the new Fairbanks subject. According to present plans it is likely that the picture will open in New York within the next few weeks.

Excellent Cast Selected For Meighan Picture

Announcement was made this week of the notable cast that has been selected for Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "Back Home and Broke," George Ade's second original story for the screen, which has been put into production at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Lila Lee will be leading woman and Florence Dixon, who just completed a role in "Anna Ascends," Alice Brady's picture, will be the other girl. Charles Abbe, who played "Cappy Ricks" with Meighan a year ago, will have one of the principal roles, sharing the character honors with Frederick Burton and Eddie Borden, a comedian with a large following on the vaudeville stage. Laurence Wheat, who has appeared with Meighan in all his pictures for the last year, will have an important part. Other members of the cast are Cyril Ring, who appeared with Meighan in "The Conquest of Canaan"; Ned Burton, Gertrude Quinlan and Maude Turner Gordon. Alfred Green is directing.

Fox Picture to Have New Title Next Week

The front of the Lyric theatre, New York, will bear a new name in the electrics next week, and someone will be $1,000 richer, when the name of "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," the William Fox photoplay, is changed.

The only trouble with the name, according to many letters received by Mr. Fox, is that a great many people think the photoplay is on a biblical subject because the title is a quotation from the Bible.

Selznick to Re-Issue "Romance and Arabella"

A re-issue of "Romance and Arabella," starring Constance Talmadge, is announced for distribution by the Select Pictures Corporation. The production, re-cut, re-titled and backed by a new line of accessories, will be in the Select exchanges within the next three weeks, it is announced.

"Romance and Arabella" was made from William Hurlbut's delightful comedy under the direction of the late Walter Edwards.

Alice Brady Finishes "Anna Ascends" for Paramount

"Anna Ascends," Alice Brady's latest Paramount picture, has been completed at the Paramount Long Island studio. Director Victor Fleming will begin cutting the picture immediately.

The story deals with the problems of a Syrian immigrant girl who comes to America to gain her fortune. Robert Ellis has the leading male role and David Powell plays the "heavy," assisted by Charles Gerrard. Nita Naldi will be seen as Countess Rostoff. Edward Durand, the well-known French character actor, has the colorful role of "Siad Coury," the Syrian coffee-house keeper. Other members of the cast include Florence Dixon, Grace Griswold and Frederick Burton.

The picture is stated to have been lavishly mounted, the scenes of particular richness being the Fifty Club scene and the interior of a beautiful Long Island home. A little chunk of the Syrian quarter of New York is also realistically incorporated in the setting.

"Anna Ascends" was adapted by Margaret Turnbull and photographed by Gilbert Warrenton.

Hollander Is Minneapolis Lichtman Manager

Harry Hollander will manage the Minneapolis exchange of the Al Lichtman Corporation, according to announcement this week.

Hollander is well known throughout the Minneapolis territory, where he has been manager for Educational for two years. Prior to that he was Minneapolis manager for Realart. The Lichtman exchange is in the Loeb Arcade building.

D. W. Griffith Production Given Preview

D. W. GRIFFITH'S latest photoplay entitled "One Exciting Night" was given a preview at the Sterling theatre, Derby, Conn., the evening of September 15th. This picture made by Mr. Griffith for release by United Artists was shown at its preview in thirteen reels, but this footage will be reduced, the cuts being based on the reaction of the audience to the production. The picture was three months in the making and is based on Irene Sinclair's mystery story.

Henry Hull, featured player in the stage production, "The Cat and The Canary," is presented in the leading male role. Carol Dempster appears opposite. C. H. Croker-King, a well-known English character actor; Porter Strong, Frank Sheridan, Frank Wunderlee, Margaret Dale, and Morgan Wallace, are also seen in important roles. Others in the cast are Percy Carr, Herbert Sutch, Irma Harrison, Grace Griswold, Charles Mack and Alice Fleming.

Fifty sets built for the show are the work of Frank Wortman, and the designs are by Charles Kirk. Arrangements are being made for the opening of the picture at the Tremont Temple, Boston, early in October.

The picture was first titled "The Haunted Grange," but this was abandoned owing to the fact that this title was found to be the name of a copyrighted book published a long time ago. "One Exciting Night" has not as yet been definitely settled as the permanent title.

Four Paramount Units Start in East

Production Schedule at Long Island Studios Is Being Rapidly Expanded

PRODUCTION activities at Famous Players-Lasky's Long Island studios are steaming up. Two new production companies have arrived from the West Coast for work at the Eastern plant. Four units will begin production there this week, and a fifth company is scheduled to start work in the very near future.

George Melford's unit will start "Java Head" this week and Alfred Green will begin work on "Back Home and Broke," starring Thomas Meighan, at the same time. A few days later Dorothy Dalton will commence work under the direction of Victor Fleming in a picture that is temporarily titled "Black Fury," and Alice Brady, who has just completed "Anna Ascends," is scheduled to start another picture very soon.

Preliminary preparations are being completed now for the production of Joseph Hergeheimer's story, "Java Head," and by the end of the week the company, headed by Albert Roscoe. Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan and Raymond Hatton will be on its way to Salem, Mass., where all the exterior scenes for the picture will be filmed. Mr. Melford's production unit consists of Rudolph Bylek, technical director; Cy Clegg, assistant director; Bert Glennon, first cameraman; Charles Clark, second cameraman; and Miss Nan Herron, continuity clerk. All of these people came from the Lasky studio in Hollywood to New York to help in the production of this picture. Waldemar Young has scenarized "Java Head," which is a colorful story of Salem town in 1850 and the sea trade with China.

George Ade has completed the writing of "Back Home and Broke," his original story for Thomas Meighan. Lila Lee has been selected as the leading woman but other members of the cast have not yet been chosen. Director Green's staff includes Don O'Brien, assistant; Henry Cronjager, cameraman and Helene Warren, continuity clerk. This company also will go on location first, but the place has not been selected.

The details of the production of "Black Fury," a story by Edmund Goulding, have not been announced, except that Dorothy Dalton will play the leading role and Victor Fleming will direct.

The name of Miss Brady's new picture will be announced later.

Mid West Productions Incorporating

Shepard Evans, attorney for the Mid West Production Company of St. Louis, is expected to complete the incorporation papers and file them with Secretary of State Becker early the coming week. It is understood the company will be capitalized for $150,000, the stock being non-assessable.

Several St. Louis capitalists are interested in the venture, and have assured sufficient money for any pictures to be made. The plans are not to sell stock on the open market. The first picture to be made "The Eyes of Mystery," a serial, was started at the Creve Cœur Lake studios on Sunday, September 3.

"Nobody's Money" Will Be Wallace Reid's Next

"Nobody's Money," a comedy adapted by Beulah Marie Dix, from the play by William Le Baron, will be Wallace Reid's next Paramount star picture. Wallace Worsley has been specially engaged to direct the picture. Work will start around the 1st of October.

Scenes from the Burr-Whitman Bennett production "Secrets of Paris." Top, Lewis Cody and Rose Coghlan, over a group including Montagu Love, Walter James, Harry Sothorn and William Collier, Jr.

Florence Vidor to Star in "Alice Adams" for A. E.

Just before leaving for the coast, Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, announced that Florence Vidor will do "Alice Adams," by Booth Tarkington, as the first feature on her new contract with Associated. This novel won the Pulitzer prize for 1921 as the best American novel of the year.

Miss Vidor's next release will be "Judith, the Conqueror," scheduled for the late fall. It will be followed by "Alice Adams."

"Broken Chains" Given Preview in Hollywood

"Broken Chains," Allen Holubar's production of Goldwyn's $10,000 prize story, was shown in preview at the Paramount Theatre, Hollywood, recently. A capacity house viewed the screening, it is reported.

Lillian Gish Is Signed by Inspiration Pictures

CHARLES H. DUELL, president of Inspiration Pictures, announced this week that he had entered into a contract with Lillian Gish whereby she will star in a series of pictures for the Inspiration organization. Dorothy Gish was recently signed by Mr. Duell also and is now playing opposite Richard Barthelmess in "Fury," which is nearing completion. It is understood that Dorothy will appear in another picture opposite Barthelmess after which she will be cast with her sister.

Henry King will direct Lillian Gish in her series for Inspiration. The first of these subjects, titled "The White Sister," which was played as a stage production for seven years in the United States by Viola Allen, will be made in Italy.

With the former D. W. Griffith triumvirate—the Gish sisters and Barthelmess—now under contract, Inspiration plans to use two or more of these stars in the same picture from time to time.

Change Made in Invoice On Canadian Shipments

On and after October 1 the Canadian Customs will require that the shipper's invoice indicate the country of manufacture or production, and will require the shipper to certify that each article covered by his invoice is the product of the country specified thereon, on shipments from the United States to Canada, according to a statement by the American Railway Express Company.

Formerly the Canadian Customs required the American exporter to certify that the fair market value shown on his invoice was not lower than the wholesale price, or lower than the actual cost of production at the time or place of shipment, plus reasonable profit thereon, but that requirement has been removed from the new form of invoice effective October 1.

Both of these changes are made in forms of invoice M and N, the first covering goods sold by the exporter prior to shipment, and the latter covering goods forwarded on consignment without sale.

Pyramid Float Takes Coney Prize

The Prize Committee in charge of the Coney Island Mardi Gras announced last week at the close of the Carnival that the Grand Prize, a silver loving cup, has been awarded to the float entered in the parade by Pyramid Pictures, Inc., to represent the current Pyramid release, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge."

The float was designed by Ben Carre, Art and Technical Director of all the Pyramid productions.

First National's October Schedule Five Dramatic Features and Two Comedy Productions Listed for Release

Five dramatic offerings and two comedies are scheduled for October release by Associated First National Pictures.

The dramatic feature productions, which will be released in October, are: For October 2, Hope Hampton in "The Light in the Dark"; October 9, Richard Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy"; October 16, Katherine MacDonald in "White Shoulders"; October 23, Constance Talmadge in "East is West"; and on October 30, "Lorna Doone," a Maurice Tourneur picture, presented by Thomas H. Ince.

The comedies on First National's October schedule are: October 2, "Home Made Movies," a Mack Sennett production with Ben Turpin; and October 16, Buster Keaton in "The Electric House."

"The Light in the Dark" was written by William Dudley Pelley and directed by Clarence L. Brown. Miss Hampton is supported by Lon Chaney and E. K. Lincoln. This picture was given a pre-release showing at the opening of the big Strand Theatre in Niagara Falls, where it played to crowded houses for two days.

In "The Bond Boy" Richard Barthelmess is said to have a stronger vehicle than in "Tol'able David" and "Sonny." Presented by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., directed by Henry King, from the story by George Washington Ogden and adapted by Charles E. Whittaker, "The Bond Boy" deals with a youth of the mountains, as did "Tol'able David." Mr. Barthelmess is supported by Mary Thurman, Mary Alden, Charles Hill Mailes, Ned Sparks, Lawrence D'Orsay and Virginia Magee.

Katherine MacDonald in "White Shoulders," presented by B. P. Schulberg, is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story by George Kibbe Turner and was directed by Tom Forman. Supporting Miss MacDonald are Bryant Washburn, Lillian Lawrence, Nigel Barrie, little Richard Headrick, Tom Forman and Lincoln Stedman.

Constance Talmadge is starred in "East is West," given a preliminary screening at the Ritz-Carlton hotel by its producer, Joseph M. Schenck, the production was well received by screen experts. "East is West," supervised and directed by Sidney Franklin from the stage success by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer, is declared to be even better as a motion picture than it was as a Broadway play. Miss Talmadge is supported by Edward Burns, E. A. Warren, Warner Oland, Frank Lanning, Nick de Ruiz, Nigel Barrie, Lillian Lawrence and Winter Hall.

"Lorna Doone" is hailed by First National officials as a masterful picturization of R. D. Blackmore's famous novel. The photography, costuming, and sets are especially praised. Madge Bellamy, John Bowers and Frank Keenan head the cast.

Mack Sennett's "Home Made Movies," shows Ben Turpin in what is claimed to be one of the funniest roles of his screen career, while Buster Keaton, in "The Electric House," has an originality of humor that will register everywhere, declares First National.

"Blood Will Tell" Now "Do and Dare"

The Tom Mix picture that was originally given the title of "A Kiss in the Dark" and then changed to "Blood Will Tell" has again been given a different name, and will be re-released under the title of "Do and Dare."

Antonio Moreno Is Signed with Paramount

ANTONIO MORENO has signed with Paramount. Mr. Moreno has already started work as leading man with Gloria Swanson in Sam Wood's new production, "My American Wife," which Monte M. Katterjohn has adopted from an original screen story by Hector Turnbull.

The new Paramount picture in which Moreno will play opposite Miss Swanson is described as intensely romantic, the locale being Argentina. Moreno's role is that of a handsome young aristocrat and politician, who falls in love with an American girl from Kentucky (Miss Swanson), whose horse outraces the valued track champion of the Latin nobleman.

The supporting cast includes Joseph Swickard, Eric Mayne, Eugene Corey, Eileen Pringle, F. R. Butler, Jacques d'Auray, Loyal Underwood, Walter Long, Naden Paul and others.

Clergymen Are Guests of T.O.C.C.

Plans for Distribution of Geographic's Holy Land Series Discussed at Luncheon

AN important step toward a more friendly relationship between the New York theatres and churches was realized Tuesday of this week when the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce entertained a number of prominent clergymen of all denominations at a luncheon held at the Hotel Astor.

The dinner was more than an attempt to convince the clergymen that the policy of the T. O. C. C. is one of willingness to cooperate with churches and their pastors in uplifting the screen productions of the future. The fifty-two one-reel pictures of the Holyland sponsored by D. J. E. Holly and the Geographic Company which the American Releasing Corporation has secured for distribution and which the T. O. C. C. has contracted for as a part of their Public Service program, were the subject of discussion by the various members of the T. O. C. C. present, Dr. Holly and a number of the clergymen.

Among the principal speakers were Charles A. Steiner of the T. O. C. C., Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York State exhibitor organization, Bernard Edelhertz, Dr. Holly, Courtland Smith and Dr. Frank Crane.

Mr. O'Reilly explained the attitude of the members of the T. O. C. C. toward this character of productions and outlined the plans formulated to place the Geographic productions in the various theatres of New York state as a first step toward wide national distribution.

Dr. Holly stated that the pictures had been photographed on the actual ground mentioned in various parts of the Bible so far as the scenic sequences went and to these strips had been added Prizma process scenes photographed from paintings by Jean Paleologue, showing the Holyland as it was in Biblical times.

He also explained the care that has been taken in making the series authentic as to history, not only in the scenes shown but also in the matter of the information given in the titles.

Among those present in addition to the T. O. C. C. members were Frank Crane, Dr. Christian Reiser, Rabbi Joseph Silverman, Dr. Wm. A. Kirkwood Broadway Tabernacle; Dr. Crocker, Church of Epiphany; Father Martin Fahy, Church of Our Lady of Lourdes; Fr. G. C. Tracy, National Catholic Weekly; Dr. F. S. Idleman, Central Church, Disciples of Christ; Rev. F. B. Beal, Dr. Joseph P. Wilson, Wm. E. B. Russell and Courtland Smith of the Will Hays office. Fred B. Warren president, and John L. Hunter, sales manager of the American Releasing Corporation, who are handling the films.

Wisconsin M. P. T. O. Plans Selznick Month

A tie-up between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and Selznick Pictures Corporation has been effected whereby the month of November will be Wisconsin M. P. T. O.-Selznick month.

During that month a percentage on all business done in Wisconsin by both the Milwaukee and Minneapolis Selznick exchanges will be paid into the Theatre Owners' treasury.

As a legislative battle is in prospect in Wisconsin, members are being urged to co-operate to as full an extent as possible so that the organization may be financially equipped for the fight.

Universal to Produce "Up the Ladder"

Leon D'Usseau, New York Scenario Chief for Universal, has just completed arrangements with William A. Brady for the purchase of last year's successful play, "Up the Ladder." It will be used as the first starring vehicle for Virginia Valli, who has just completed her work at Universal City in "Bitter Sweet" in support of Lon Chaney.

"Up the Ladder" was written by Owen Davis and produced by William A. Brady. It had a successful run of six months or so, with Doris Kenyon in the lead, at the Playhouse theatre. Virginia Valli will play Jane Smith, the role played by Miss Kenyon.

Pola Negri Given Cordial Welcome in Los Angeles

POLA NEGRI was extended a rousing welcome in Los Angeles on Monday of this week which rivaled in enthusiasm her recent reception in New York. At the Los Angeles station the Polish star was greeted cordially by a large delegation from the Hollywood film colony and had to face a battery of a half-dozen news-weekly cameramen and nearly a score of newspaper photographers.

On Tuesday, Miss Negri was the guest of honor at a luncheon held at the Hotel Ambassador. Representatives from the trade press, fan publications, and the Los Angeles dailies were on hand to greet the star. Miss Negri was introduced by John C. Flinn, who accompanied her to the Coast as personal representative. Short speeches of welcome were made by Jesse L. Lasky and George Fitzmaurice.

Miss Negri is on the Coast to star in the Paramount production "Bella Donna" under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Manslaughter—

Business jumped to high. Audiences seemed to approve. (South-west.)

Holding up well on third week. (West.)

Her Gilded Cage—

Elaborate production which Gloria Swanson's popularity helped to put over in good shape. Box office receipts on this good. (Middle West.)

Nice People—

Mildly interesting—did big business. Reid always fills the house. (Middle West.)

Blood and Sand—

On second week repeated big business. It was well liked here. (West.)

Went over big on two weeks run. Great picture. (Middle West.)

Now on its second week and going great. (Middle West.)

The Siren Call—

S. R. O. sign was out every evening. One of the best pictures this house has had this season. (East.)

Called in to complete five days of a week another picture had been expected to play. It did fair business and is action type. (Middle West.)

The Valley of Silent Men—

Very good business; not so good as a picture. (West.)

Low Cody in very different role from those of past. Went over big; business excellent for this good picture. (Middle West.)

A good entertainment, but draggy at times. On the whole, it pleased. Nice receipts. (Middle West.)

Burning Sands—

Did a very good business. (West.)

METRO

Broadway Rose—

Maie Murray well liked here; picture does not differ much from those she has had before. Some were glad; some were disappointed. Good business. (West.)

Maie Murray has a loyal following. And they all came to her latest picture which is very similar to her previous pictures. The public likes her in the role she has created and doesn't look for anything very new. (Middle West.)

Forget-Me-Not—

This picture is conceded to be very fine. Nevertheless, it didn't do any better than average business during our one week run. Held special orphan performance which helped interest the public, a lot. (Middle West.)

The Prisoner of Zenda—

Doors open an hour each day and capacity business right up to close on Saturday night. (East.)

They Like 'Em Rough—

My patrons liked this one. Miss Dana appears to advantage. Drew excellently. (Middle West.)

Don't Write Letters—

Business below par. Title too weak to attract patrons and Gareth Hughes not yet much of a drawing power. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Masquerader—

Fine picturization of play and Guy Bates Post is splendid. Great box office picture for high class audiences. (Middle West.)

A great drawing card. A week of crowded houses. (Middle West.)

Rose of the Sea—

Business fairly good, not rushing. Considerable surprises in the show's business during the week. (Middle West.)

The Eternal Flame—

About the best Norma Talmadge picture yet. Big box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Did heavy business second week; a wonderful story, but not as appealing as "Smilin' Through." (Middle West.)

Hurricane's Gal—

Strong melodrama and good picture. Business very good, considerably helped out by Fashion Show. (East.)

Her Mad Bargain—

Picture and business both bad. (East.)

Domestic Relations—

Full houses all week. One reason was the popularity of Katherine McDonald. Another was a "Style Show" with settings, runway all around orchestra pit and special features by way of entertainment. Comment on picture favorable. (Middle West.)

FOX

Monte Cristo—

Wonderful business the third week of our run. Capacity matinees all the time. Evenings opened big, fell off during extreme hot spell and played to full houses every performance of last week of run. (Middle West.)

Excellent picture; good business on two weeks run. (Middle West.)

Moonshine Valley—

Fair picture and fair business. (East.)

The Fighting Streak—

The mere announcement of a Tom Mix picture is a guarantee of standing them up at this house for the week. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

Divorce Coupons—

Too Much Business—

Not "too much business" but a good business for a week's run.

ASSO. EXHIB.

Grandma's Boy—

Pulled heavy second week; considered Lloyd's best. (Middle West.)

Pleased everybody; good business. (West.)

Lived up to advance notices. Packed 'em out all week. A real picture and Lloyd's best. (Middle West.)

Business not rushing, but maintained pretty fair averages. A comedy which pleases those who discriminate. Seemed to give general satisfaction. (Middle West.)

Has closed after a three weeks' run to full houses. Usual comment that it is Lloyd's best. (East.)

AL. LICHTMAN

Rich Men's Wives—

Really a wonderful story; makes House Peters one of the big stars. Drew capacity houses. (Middle West.)

A very elaborate picture, but not suited to every audience. Went very well. Good business. (Middle West.)

Well liked and brought wonderful business all week. One of the best of its kind. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Orphans of the Storm—

This one played to a large attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Storm—

Box office receipts highly satisfactory with this one. (Middle West.)

The Galloping Kid—

Good rough stuff. We play to devotees of the melodrama. They liked this picture. Plenty of action. Plenty of romance. Business picking up every week. (Middle West.)

Confidence—

A picture that held a great audience appeal and that went over big for the week, with excellent business. (East.)

Human Hearts—

Held good houses spellbound. Effective settings. House Peters makes most of role. (East.)

The Long Chance—

A good feature in which Walshall does some splendid acting. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Married People—

Great appeal in this film, cleverly handled, amusing sub-titles, good settings and real comedy. Fine business. (East.)

Slim Shoulders—

Not much of a picture, but did average business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Head Over Heels—

A good program picture. Miss Normand has a loyal following who will like it. Fair receipts. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

More to Be Pitied Than Scorned—

Broke all records for business since the opening of the theatre under new policy which had been the showing of the bigger pictures for second run. This was the first showing of this film, and it was not strongly played up in advance, but did a surprising business with mouth to mouth advertising. (Middle West.)

What's Wrong With the Women—

Fair picture but business tremendous. (East.)

Your Best Friend—

Fair picture; drew only fair business. (East.)

A Motion to Adjourn—

Mediocre picture and business bad.

Sign Painting Stunt Exploits "Blood and Sand"

St. Louis.—Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, had the entire town sitting up to take notice recently.

He put a man in artist uniform on a scaffold on the Shafer building at Sixth street and Washington avenue, the busiest of all the retail shopping corners. Then installed another chap in a bull fighting outfit on the other end of the runway.

While the crowds gazed the man with the paint and brushes made some flourishes with his arms. A few daubs marked the canvas. Then a few more. Finally a large letter "C" appeared. When he had completed his task, and it took some minutes, there was an announcement that Rodolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand" was coming to the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theatres, owned by Skouras Brothers, commencing Saturday, September 2, to run for one week.

It did not take the fans long to recognize the bull fighter as an impersonator of Valentino, but they were wondering what it was all about until they read "Blood and Sand." Then they knew.

It went across big. No less than 250,000 pairs of eyes witnessed the performance at some stage of the week. Many were from East St. Louis, Alton, Edwardsville, Collinsville and other East Side suburban towns. Washington avenue is the river gateway to St. Louis.

Cutouts and Window Display Exploit "The Song of Life"

GREENVILLE, TENN.—The photographs show the effective use made by the Princess Theatre, during its run of "The Song of Life." The press sheet idea of playing up the catch lines: "A Drama of Dishes and Discontent" was used effectively with a theatre front table and the tub and dishes.

The obvious tie-up was made with an electric washing machine company which took advantage of the unusual opportunity given its line to tie up with a motion picture and gave its entire window to "The Song of Life."

The campaign marks Greenville's first attempt to challenge public interest through the medium of a cutout and lobby display and the maiden effort of the Princess Theatre at purloining windows.

"Trouble" Prologue For Trouble at the Marshall Theatre

Manhattan, Kans.—A kid ward, three youngsters in pajamas and the atmosphere of an orphanage supplied the settings for the "Trouble" prologue staged by Manager Glen W. Dickinson of the Marshall Theatre, in putting on the Jackie Coogan attraction. "Never Trouble Trouble Till Trouble Troubles You" was the song the youngsters used. Did it pull? Why "trouble" about asking?

Fashion Film Made as Tie-Up on "The Storm" at Seattle

Seattle.—When "The Storm" played recently at the Columbia theatre George E. Bradley, Universal exploitation man, broke all precedent by tying up for a window display and fashion show film with one of Seattle's leading department stores. The fashion parade was tied up with sidewalk movies and a prominent florist shop.

The exploiteer sold the department store, MacDougall-Southwick, on the idea of co-operation by taking to them an idea with great service value to the store. It was the making of a fashion parade picture, using the store models and the store's latest clothing designs, to be shown on a miniature screen constructed in one of the store's show windows. The Woodlawn Florist Shop offered the use of their windows for the making of the pictures.

Bradley worked up a scenario which showed Manette, the forest girl heroine of "The Storm," coming to the city and getting outfitted with city clothes. Frankie Kiolet, Seattle's prize beauty, who had received twenty-six weeks' picture experience at Universal City, was selected to interpret the role of Manette. She was shown arriving at the store in her homespun clothes and heavy boots. Her transformation as she later appeared dressed in the latest models of bathing suits, evening gowns, afternoon frocks, etc., was striking and gave interest to the film.

The front of the florist shop was jammed from 7 P. M. until long after midnight on the evening devoted to the taking of the pictures.

Illustrating tie-up with gas station, where lucky coupon holders might claim rewards, which stunt was put over in connection with advertising "The Ruling Passion," at the Cover theatre, Ft. Morgan, Colo.

Manager Vic Gauntlet of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre, Seattle, Wash., confined his exploitation on "Monte Cristo" to high class window tie-ups, three handsome examples of which are shown above

Exploitation in Keeping with Atmosphere of "I Am the Law"

Birmingham, Ala.—During the period when Stewart Bird relieved L. H. Towns as manager of the Strand theatre, he used a lobby display on "I Am the Law" which occasioned much favorable comment.

Mr. Bird's only extra method of exploitation for putting over this show consisted of a lobby display in keeping with the environment of the picture.

A stockade was built around the box office and a log cabin on either side, with trees "snow covered" here and there about the lobby. Down the middle of the lobby a rough log fence was constructed, and a drop from the top of the lobby gave the sky effect. Mr. Bird says he believes the rail fence helped more than any other part of the display.

Plenty of artificial snow was used, producing a "cool" effect. An electric sign on the marquee announced the show.

"Iron Trail" Well Exploited at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn.—When the management of the New Savoy theatre played "The Iron Trail" during "Go-to-Movie Week" special exploitation was put on for the event.

Supplementing the usual newspaper advertising and billing an automobile truck bearing a big banner, "Rex Beach's 'The Iron Trail,'" was sent through the theatre territory, and special attention was paid to lobby and theatre exploitation. The ticket booth in the lobby centre was bored in with compo board, on the front of which was an outline of a locomotive tender, a campaign book suggestion. Right in front of this locomotive cut-out stood a railway crossing signal post. The whole made a most striking showing.

V. C. Schley, manager of the Crescent theatre, Statesville, N. C., used a 24-sheet as the basis of this attractive lobby on "Nanook of the North"

Rex Theatre Ties Up With Local Wedding

SPARTANSBURG, S. C. A stunt which created interest was the tying up with the wedding of a popular Spartansburg couple with "Married Life" on the last day of the showing of the above mentioned picture at the Rex Theatre.

A benefit performance was arranged for the young couple, being a special showing from 11 o'clock until midnight of their wedding day. Only the friends of the couple who had attended the wedding were allowed to purchase tickets to this special show. Many of them had already seen the picture, but they could not miss the fun, so they came again.

Fall Fashion Show Filmed As "Crossroads" Tie-Up

Watertown, N. Y.—The "Crossroads of Watertown" movie didn't have such a strong appeal to Watertown in conjunction with "The Crossroads of New York." Perhaps Manager Charles Sessenke thought he didn't care to compare Watertown's intersections with Times Square. The fact remains that instead of a complete scenario, he made a picture of a fashion display to tie up with the Mack Sennett-First National feature when it showed at his Avon theatre.

The manager, with the aid of an exploitation man, and the cooperation of Frank Empsall Co., staged and photographed a fall fashion show in which more than $30,000 worth of gowns, embracing all the latest styles for the fall season were paraded. This was filmed on the roof of the building.

Incorporated with the opening of the fall season were shots of prominent celebrities, including the mayor, chief of police and groups of fraternal orders.

Ex-Secretary of State Robert Lansing was photographed as he emerged from a bank building and was detained in an argument during which the cameraman got 100 feet before the former cabinet officer knew what it was all about. It was a distinct scoop because it was the first time that Mr. Lansing has been interviewed or photographed since his retirement from office.

There was no question of the tie-up because when he was on foot the cameraman used a sign on a chair: "These scenes taken by Mr. Sennett's cameraman will be shown during the run of 'The Crossroads of New York' at the Avon." When he was shooting from an automobile, the car carried a similar sign.

Police Stunts Used on "I Am the Law" at Gadsden, Ala.

Gadsden, Ala.—A. L. Snell, manager of the Imperial theatre, is a close friend of the Chief of Police, a fact which enabled him to exploit "I Am the Law" in unusual fashion.

Snell dressed a young fellow in the Chief's uniform and put him to work. The traffic cop on the busiest corner was given several hours' vacation while this man handled the official "Stop and Go" sign. He had a sign on his back advertising the picture, but the autoists didn't see this until they had been stopped or signaled ahead. He managed to turn around often enough for everyone passing to get the flash.

When the possibilities of this little game were exhausted, Snell had him try another one. A motorcycle was secured and the bogus Chief turned into a speed cop. He chased and stopped autoists, took their name and number, and then summoned them to appear at the Imperial theatre to see "I Am the Law."

As an advance teaser stunt Mr. Snell photographed every policeman in Gadsden, and pasted each photo on a card. Across the top of the card above the photo was lettered, "Who Am I?" And below the photo was the officer's name and in bold letters, "I Am the Law." These cards were placed in drug stores and windows and created lots of speculation.

Ray Whitfield, manager of the Majestic theatre, Austin, Tex., arranged this attractive bower in the lobby on "If You Believe It, It's So"

This snappy front on "The Fast Mail" was prepared by the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn. The painting across the front, the large lobby frame and the railway signal could not escape the eye of passersby

Campaign Headquarters Lobby for "Our Leading Citizen"

Abilene, Tex.—Good use of the political angle of "Our Leading Citizen" was made by Manager Hugo Plath, of the Queen theatre, when playing that picture recently.

Manager Plath boxed in the lobby of the Queen theatre with beaver board so as to represent a campaign headquarters. A large opening was left in the centre of the frame work through which could be seen a cut-out of Thomas Meighan in a pose characteristic of some candidate delivering an address. The platform on which the cut-out of Meighan stood was decorated in American flags, together with a large sign that read:

"We Want Tommy—Our Leading Citizen."

Small cards representative of the type used in the election season by candidates soliciting the vote of the public were used by Mr. Plath in asking the public to come to the Queen theatre and cast their vote for Thomas Meighan, the card reading:

"Vote for Bentley for Congress—He's Our Leading Citizen."

A street ballyhoo consisting of three young boys carrying banners on which were painted signs about this candidate for Congress was helpful in building up business on the picture.

Raincheck Used as Throw-away for "The Storm"

NEW YORK.—An appropriate and novel throwaway was used recently by E. C. Emery, manager of the Sheridan theatre, during the run of "The Storm."

Permission was obtained to duplicate the American League Baseball Club raincheck, making it larger than the regular raincheck so the gate-keeper would recognize the duplication if anyone tried to use it.

On the face of the throwaway rain check was printed the wording "Rain Check issued in case of THE STORM," and the play dates of the picture at the Sheridan. On the reverse of the check was printed the following: "This YAN-KEE rain check and 40 cents will admit you any evening to the Sheridan theatre to see THE STORM, America's greatest photoplay."

Twenty-five thousand of these throwaways were distributed at the Polo Grounds during Yankee games. They proved a distinct novelty.

Theatre Capitalizes Success of Another Exhibitor's Stunt

Toronto, Ont.—The Allen theatre took a new line of exploitation in capitalizing a rival's success. When the Dominion house played "The Silent Call" the theatre's publicity staff emphasized the fact that the picture had run fourteen weeks at Miller's Los Angeles house. It asked its fans to give the reasons why the picture was able to run fourteen weeks, and the answers had to be written the first three days of the showing. The slogan was "Say it in 200 words."

The effect of such a request was to bring out all the strong points of the picture from the correspondents and inasmuch as many of the answers were published in the papers, it furnished one of the best drawing cards imaginable for "The Silent Call."

M.P. Camera Attracts Notice as Lobby Display

Fort Smith, Ark.—Realizing that people who were interested in how motion pictures are made would also be interested in a close-up of the apparatus involved, J. B. Robertson, manager of the Palace theatre, made good use of his lobby to boost the showing of "A Trip to Paramounttown."

Robertson borrowed from a local supply house a moving picture camera, which was placed in the lobby of the Palace theatre during the two-day run of this novelty short reel. This camera attracted considerable attention since it was opened for inspection and also since it was announced on a large card that this was the type of machine used in making pictures.

The Palace theatre's mailing list was brought into use. This time Robertson directed his fire to the young girls and women of the town, telling them of the opportunity of actually seeing how their favorites worked and lived.

Manager Robertson made use of the double page spread from the Saturday Evening Post of July 29th by mounting it on beaver board and then framing it for his lobby. At night a tiny spot light was focused on this frame.

Manager Cashes In on Local Gathering and Exploits His Picture to Crowds

La Crosse, Wis.—Despite the fact that all sections are said to have merged into one with the end of the Civil War, Manager William Freise of the Rivoli Theatre, knows his audience.

He had an old fashioned surrey and a farmer couple, the man dressed up in the type of the old time, now infrequent country squire. A tall plug hat adorned his head, the country boots made his legs shine like a sunrise and a fan kept the flies off as he jogged along with his team.

This is the stunt Manager Freise worked—with a trick to it.

The surrey drove to the Elks Carnival Fair where 15,000 spectators were assembled. To all outward appearances the surrey was part of the show and as such attracted considerable attention. The exploitation angle was revealed only when the sign on the rear faced the audience: "I am off for The Crossroads of New York at the Rivoli."

The man stopped before different sections of the stand and addressed the crowds; and his humorous remarks won their fancy.

Manager Freise did have a trick to it, knowing his audiences. The addresses were made in Swedish!

Ottawa Theatre Ties Up with Jockey Club Meet

OTTAWA, Ont.—Programs at Ottawa, Ont., theatres during the week of August 28 were of a decidedly "horsey" nature because of the presence of the ponies for the fall meeting of the Connaught Park Jockey club. Manager Ben Stapleton of the Centre theatre came out with "Queen O' the Turf" as the attraction for the whole week and the whole city was liberally placarded with appropriate posters.

Manager J. C. Kennedy of Allen's Regent theatre played "Chain Lightning" for the first half of the week and boosted this feature by issuing a "special sporting extra" of The Ottawa Journal, which consisted of a regular edition of the paper with the front page over-printed with an announcement of the result of the race as depicted in the feature. This was done in red ink over the regular page and down at the bottom was a reference to the theatre. These papers were distributed free in front of the theatre and they were quickly grabbed up.

Manager Harry Brouse of the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, specialized with a comedy, "Horse Tears," in which appeared "Queenie," a trick horse.

Campaign Over Four Counties to Announce Coming of "Way Down East"

Atlanta, Mo.—The management of "The Picture House" under direction of J. Greene-Mackenzie, reports gratifying results on a campaign for "Way Down East," which entailed little expense in heralding the coming of the picture. A "flivver" was painted white, then lettered with black, spelling out New England phrases, the name of the picture and advance play date. The machine was driven over adjoining counties, from which a boy threw out handbills. Stops were made long enough to tack up pole cards. On Saturday, the day the picture was scheduled for Atlanta, an aeroplane was hired to go from the park where the skydome is located to a neighboring town where there was a large crowd assembled for a free automobile drawing. The plane dived down low over the crowd and threw out hundreds of handbills.

Police Co-operation Helps Exploit "In the Name of the Law"

Cleveland, Ohio.—When Loew's Park Theatre played "In the Name of the Law" recently, the city was informed that it depicted the inside story of a policeman's life. Mr. a Malanay, publicity manager for Loew's Cleveland theatres, interested the public in the picture by the full size "STOP" cut-outs placed at prominent downtown street intersections, and by getting a lot of newspaper notices. He interested the police force in the picture by giving away a pair of passes to every member of the force. Special complimentary tickets were printed for the occasion. Ordinarily, officers of the law have free access to any theatre. Their uniform does not admit their families however. Malanay worked out the "complimentary ticket" idea so that the men could see the picture on their off-duty day and take the Mrs. along. The tickets were given to Chief of Police Graul to distribute.

The Chief also publicly endorsed the picture, thus giving it a tone of authenticity that could not otherwise have been secured. One of the features of the prologue during the engagement of "In the Name of the Law" was Frank Hunt, Officer 37 of the Traffic Squad, and known as the "Caruso" of the force. Hunt sang several selections. He was a great drawing card and added realism to the production.

This illustrates a trailer to an automobile that served as a ballyhoo in exploiting "Our Leading Citizen," when scheduled for the American theatre, Sterling, Colo.

Frank J. Miller, manager of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., made use of cut-outs, in arranging unique exploitation for "Polly of the Follics"

Unique Graveyard Lobby Helps Put Comedy Across

Anniston, Ala.—Manager Roy Smart of the Noble theatre used an out-of-the-ordinary lobby recently to create interest in "The Idle Class."

The Savoy theatre, just down the street from the Noble, is closed during the summer and he frequently makes use of the lobby for an advance display on some picture that is coming to the Noble.

In this case he created in the lobby of the Savoy several days in advance, a "One-Man Graveyard." There was a nice white tomb stone, inscribed "A. Grouch." The "grave" had a row of white rocks around it, after the fashion so much approved in country graveyards. And the mound was nicely rounded over and covered with sod.

In a 1-sheet frame sitting alongside the "grave" was a formal looking card worded as follows:

Here lies beneath this sod of green, A grouch who drew no happy breath, Until he saw "The Idle Class." And then he laughed himself to death. Rest in Peace.

In the lobby were also two cut-outs of Chaplin and a card announcing that "The Idle Class" would be at the Noble on Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Smart reports that he expected this display to attract attention but he didn't expect it to stop traffic, which was just what it did.

Boys With Goat Team Ballyhoo for "School Days"

LAKE LAND, Fla.—Manager B. B. Garner of the Casino theatre, used a ballyhoo on "School Days" which he reports as extremely effective. This consisted of a goat team and wagon, the necessary banners, several small boys and a school bell. When this outfit paraded around town, with the school bell ringing and the boys whooping it up, everybody had to look whether they wanted to or not. It was used both days of the engagement.

On the day before opening, Mr. Garner used a different type of ballyhoo on the streets for three hours. Two 6-sheets were mounted on a truck and a xylophone concealed between them. The xylophone was played all the time the truck was on the streets.

Old Time Stage Coach Exploits "Buffalo Bill" in Brooklyn

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A real old time stage coach was used to exploit "Buffalo Bill," the chapter-play, when it opened at Weingarten's Parthenon theatre, Williamsburg, Brooklyn.

After a long search, Herbert Weingarten, the theatre owner and manager, aided by the local Universal exploiter, found an old stage-coach, such as was used fifty years ago. This was dressed up according to the best methods of the stage coach era. A colorfully costumed cowboy was put on the box, an Indian in full regalia was mounted on the back of the coach, and the equipage driven through Williamsburg during the several days preceding the showing of the first chapter of the picture. Banners and signs on the coach announced the showing.

The ballyhoo not only advertised the chapter-play for the Parthenon theatre, but also for the Belvedere theatre, a new Weingarten house which opened Saturday, August 25, with "In the Days of Buffalo Bill" as a headline attraction.

In addition to the street ballyhoo, the Parthenon theatre obtained a stuffed horse and set it up in the lobby, caparisoned in true western accoutrements and bearing streamers calling attention to the various high-lights of the Buffalo Bill picture.

Lobby Display Sells "Fighting Streak" in Spartanburg

Spartanburg, S. C.—Manager Charles H. Amos of the Strand theatre sold "The Fighting Streak" with a flashy lobby display that they couldn't get by. The arch front of his lobby was completely closed in with a banner, 24-sheet size. In the center of the banner was name of star and title in bold display letters. On each side of the banner the picture section of a three sheet was mounted and across the banner, under these 3-sheets was the line, "He stood for Peace—but—was ready for War." The lithographs used were very appropriate for this wording.

On each side of the lobby a four-foot strip of beaver board extended from the bottom of the banner down to the floor of the lobby. At the bottom of each strip was mounted a 1-sheet cut-out. One of these strips was worded, "Did you ever see Forked Lightning hit a tree or a house? . . . It reminds one of Tom Mix in 'THE FIGHTING STREAK.'" The other strip read, "He could shoe a horse, meet a foe, or woo a girl with equal success."

The lobby as a whole was neat and attractive and the sales copy used was snappy and forceful. And it certainly sold tickets, as attested by the fact that business was fully 80 per cent above normal. The cost was almost $25.00, but it is not fair to charge this all off against this picture because practically all material used can be worked over several times.

Unique Tie-up For "The Prisoner of Zenda" Interests Ladies of Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio.—C. C. Deardourff, exploitation manager for the Cleveland office of the Metro Film Company has proved the fact that the city folks fall for the big exploitation stunts just as hard, if not harder than their country cousins. He worked out one of the most widely advertised campaigns ever executed in Cleveland in connection with the Stillman Theatre engagement of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Deardourff secured the co-operation of the Stone Shoe Company, the largest retail shoe dealers in the state, to pull the Cinderella Slipper stunt. Over 1000 women tried on the Alice Terry Slipper which was on exhibition in the largest display window of the Stone Shoe Company. The newspapers carried daily stories on the slipper and its connection with the picture. The Window display carried, in addition to the slipper, a window card detailing the prizes to be awarded to those whom the slipper fitted, and also a full sized painting of Alice Terry and Lewis Stone as they appeared in "The Prisoner of Zenda." To the first three women who could wear the slipper, which was of diminutive size, was awarded a handsome pair of made-to-order slippers. The next three winners received passes to the show. The exploitation was also of value to the Stone Shoe Company, as the letter from the president of the company testified.

Windshield Stickers Used for "In the Name of the Law"

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—With the hearty co-operation of the police department of San Diego, Stout & Weir, managers of the Rialto theatre, in their outside publicity for "In the Name of the Law," had placed on the windshields of hundreds of automobiles pasters reading, "In the Name of the Law drive carefully during the week of September 9 to 15." The name of the picture and the date appeared in larger letters than the other portion, and this stunt, tying up with the heavy newspaper advertising served to keep the film well before the public during the week, which was dedicated to the police department of the city. Special films showing the chief of police in familiar poses were also offered as a part of the program. Life-size cut-outs, mounted on supports, showing traffic cops in action, were placed about the street intersections in the congested district, as part of the outside publicity.

Each week, as a special appeal to their patrons, Stout & Weir, in their big opening display advertising, run a small letter addressed to "Dear Mr. and Mrs. Public," set in a box in some prominent portion of the page, in which they give a brief story of the play that is to be shown, telling, in a few words, something about the members of the cast and giving a report of how the picture is being received elsewhere. Other items on the program for the week are also mentioned.

Artistic Decorations Exploit "The Eternal Flame"

Hartford, Conn.—In connection with an exploitation campaign on "The Eternal Flame," the Princess theatre employed a unique tie-up in securing a window display, the entire decorative scheme designed with "Norma" pearls. The background was draped with huge strings of the pearls, while others were worked to the foreground and composed a framework surrounding a large painting of Norma Talmadge, center. White satin covered tiers graduated from the back to the floor level of the window. On these were displayed strings of the pearls in blue plush cases, the lids open, each with the reproduction of a fine etching of Miss Talmadge worked upon the lining of the box. The pearls, which come in different sizes and lengths, composed an attractive decorative scheme. A rose-colored flood was thrown on the entire display, the glow seeming to come from the light of huge candles, which were kept burning constantly.

In addition, the cooperation of the Hartford Courant was secured in creating interest among the debutantes. A coupon was run each day, providing for the name and address of the applicant, who accompanied same with her photograph. The society editor received the applications and a committee of judges was formed to decide which of the Hartford girls showed the most marked resemblance to the star. To the young lady whose likeness was considered nearest to that of Miss Talmadge, a present of a string of pearls was given.

Builds Egyptian Temple Lobby For "Loves of Pharaoh"

Dallas, Tex.—Prior to the showing of "The Loves of Pharaoh" at the Palace theatre, Manager Raymond Willie decorated the lobby to represent an ancient temple on the River Nile.

A large shadow box with purple satin background occupied a position of prominence. In this shadow box, seated on an imitation throne, was a cut-out of Pharaoh, and lying at his feet was a slave girl dressed in Oriental style, smoking a cigarette. Around the lobby stood incense burners, whose incense permeated the air of the theatre. The entire effect on the audience was mysterious and representative of the Orient.

Resemblance Contest Tied Up with Department Stores

Birmingham, Ala.—Unusual effectiveness was given to a Gloria Swanson resemblance contest by tying up with local merchants to offer prizes in the form of garments to the winners by Manager L. R. Brown, of the Strand theatre.

Beginning four days in advance of the opening the newspaper each day carried stories under a two-column head stating that they wanted to locate four Birmingham girls most nearly resembling Miss Swanson, who was to appear at the Strand theatre next week in her latest picture, "Her Gilded Cage." The prizes offered were: First, a Rosemary frock; second, a "Swanson hat"; third, a three months' pass to the Strand, and fourth, one month pass to the Strand.

The gown and hat were on display in prominent windows of the stores supplying them. The hat was a special model, and it was stated that, following the run of "Her Gilded Cage," it would be sent to Miss Swanson with the request that she wear it in a forthcoming production. The exhibitor had to pay for the hat and gown, but the publicity and the window were worth it. The stores let him have the garments for the cost.

Arrangements were made with a local photographer to take photographs of all girls wishing to enter the contest. The prints were displayed in frames in the lobby of the theatre. The regular lobby display consisted of a large wooden cage, gilded, with lights inside reflecting on a cut-out of Miss Swanson. Six decorated stills were also used.

Want-Ad Stunt Exploits "Monte Cristo" in Erie, Pa.

ERIE, PA.—The management of the Perry theatre used a newspaper contest on "Monte Cristo" recently which proved effective. The tie-up was conducted in conjunction with a local newspaper and the expense amounted merely to 25 pairs of seats.

In the want ad columns of the paper were inserted extra letters which when discovered and assembled spelled the words, T-H-E W-O-R-L-D I-S M-I-N-E. The first twenty-five contestants finding the extra letters, arranging them properly, and submitting them to the management of the theatre received the passes.

Kids Get Pencils and Tablets In "Top of New York" Tie-Up

Amarillo, Tex.—Manager Ross Rogers, of the Mission theatre, based his campaign on "The Top of New York" on the fact that he had a picture especially suited to women and children.

Neat cards were printed calling the attention of all the ladies and children in town to the fact that there was a picture to be shown at the Mission theatre made especially for them. The cards carried a neat cut of May McAvoy and a special offering to the young people attending the theatre during the run of the picture.

This special offer was through the courtesy of the city drug store, which tied up with the theatre in giving out pencils and writing tablets free to any school boy or girl attending the Mission theatre Monday afternoon. Mention of this stunt was made in the drug store windows and also in the lobby of the theatre.

In order to secure the full co-operation of the schools, Mr. Rogers visited each one personally, telling the faculties of the idea of allowing him to distribute these cards at the recess periods.

"Forget-Me-Not" Given Special Showing at Washington

Washington, D. C.—Special showings of "Forget-Me-Not," given to prominent citizens of Washington and to orphans from the city's asylums, aided materially in putting that picture over at Loew's Columbia theatre.

Lawrence Beatus, director general of Loew's Washington theatres, extended an invitation to leading figures in the ecclesiastical and lay worlds of Washington to witness the photoplay several days before it was scheduled to begin its regular run. The special performance took place at 11 p. m. after the regular show, with a full orchestral accompaniment. Notwithstanding the hour, the playhouse was crowded with important personages, all of whom expressed great satisfaction with the film.

Even greater publicity was given to the series of performances for orphans, in which the Washington Times figured prominently. More than 300 youngsters from various Washington orphanages attended the showings, which began on Monday and continued through to Thursday. The children were called for by busses provided by the Rapid Transit Company, which also deposited them at their institutions at the close of the performance.

Each orphan received a box of candy, furnished gratis by Walter Brownley, proprietor of a leading sweets shop in the capital. George C. Shaffer, who maintains one of the city's finest floral establishments, distributed flowers to the young guests of the theatre.

Manager Finds Valuable Complications in Penrose Stunt

Hillsdale, Mich.—Livewire Manager Larry Hayes, who operates the Dawn theatre and is always on the lookout for any idea that promises box office profits, found himself in a queer complication recently because of his aggressiveness. He was playing "Penrod" and had the usual "Freckles" count competition.

In addition he had an ice cream cone matinee for the kids. He hooked up with a cream manufacturer and, ready to take any opportunity when it came, staged the two events at the same time.

Have you ever seen a healthy, red-headed urchin (most freckled boys are red-headed) really dig into a dish of ice cream?

That's what happened to Hayes. When they started to count freckles it was all a salve of ice cream and they had to bring out the towels and sponge before the judges could get the information necessary for a decision. It created a cracking good story and worked wonders in a newspaper publicity way for the picture.

Tampa Exhibitor Builds Castle of Wall Board in Lobby

TAMPA, FLA.—To help sell "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," to the fans of Tampa, Fla., C. D. Cooley built quite an elaborate lobby display in his Strand theatre.

Clear across the front of the lobby a frame work was built. This was covered with wall board. Turrets were cut out along the top, with open spaces for the entrance and exit. In the center the box office peeped out through a barred window. The whole thing was then painted to represent an old stone castle and the effect was very striking.

It was rather an expensive display, but it pulled the business, for no one could pass the Strand, during the four days showing of the picture, without stopping to see what it was all about.

Impressive Prolog Precedes "Knighthood" at Criterion

NEW YORK.—A fitting and impressive prolog precedes the picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," now showing at the Criterion theatre. Court attendants in scarlet livery move about the stage snuffing out the candles which light it up. Next two great bronze doors in the middle of the stage are slid back noiselessly and the photoplay immediately flashes upon the screen.

Novel Use of Cut-Out Made on "Fascination" at Augusta

AUGUSTA, GA.—Effective use of a cut-out from the 24-sheet on "Fascination" was made by Manager Frank J. Miller when that picture played the Modjeska theatre. A fan-shaped background, 12 feet high and 8 feet wide at the top and 3 feet wide at the bottom, was constructed of beaver board. This was painted a deep red and covered with figures in orange and blue. A row of 25 alternate red, orange and blue lights were placed in sockets around the edge.

This background was mounted over a reflector box, the front, ends and top of which were made of painted, decorative glass. Inside the box was placed a large bunchlight with twelve sixty watt lamps dyed red, orange and blue. Gelatin of the same colors was placed across the top.

The 24-sheet cut-out was mounted directly over this box and in front of the background, so that it was bathed in the vari-colored glow coming up from below.

Repeats Newspaper Serial to Boost "The Masquerader"

Louisville, Ky.—It can be done and it shall be done!

That was the slogan behind the campaign that the Mary Anderson theatre put behind its campaign for the week when it played "The Masquerader." Despite the fact that a serialized version of the story was used in the newspapers less than a year ago when Guy Bates Post appeared in Louisville in the stage play, the theatre "sold" the Louisville Times on the idea of repeating it before the picture began its run.

The Times used the serial as a circulation builder also, offering awards to the masked newsboys who, coincidentally with exploiting the picture, sold the greatest number of Times.

Making a cage out of the lobby was reported by Manager W. D. Drumbar of the Riviera theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., as having the desired effect in attracting attention and stimulating business. The "stunt" was used for the play date of "Her Gilded Cage"

The Strand theatre, Far Rockaway, L. I., sent these five kids with hoops among the throng at Rockaway Beach, securing valuable publicity for "Human Hearts." The heart-shaped cut-out was placed in the Strand lobby

Rising and Falling Pearls in Lobby Attract Attention

Abilene, Tex.—Manager Hugo Plath, of the Queen theatre, attracted no little attention to "The Man Unconquerable" recently through a unique lobby display, consisting of a large jar of carbonated water and a number of imitation pearls. What attracted the public's attention about the display was the rising and falling of the pearls through the water, caused by gas bubbles collecting around the pearls, causing them to rise to the surface. Then as soon as this gas was freed at the surface the pearls would sink to the bottom of the jar, to undergo a similar process.

Plenty of posters and photographs of Jack Holt artistically arranged around the display helped to further sell this picture to people passing.

Hoop Rolling Stunt Boosts "Human Hearts" Showing

FAR ROCKAWAY, L. I.—An effective bit of exploitation was put over by Manager Harry Thomas of the Strand theatre during the showing of "Human Hearts" at that theatre recently.

Five youngsters were engaged and supplied with hoops in which heart-shaped cut-outs advertising "Human Hearts" has been attached by strings. The boys rolled the hoops in the streets of Far Rockaway.

The stunt was pulled on Saturday, when thousands of New Yorkers flood the Far Rockaway beach, so the boys made frequent trips to the beach and rolled the hoops along the sand, in and out among the beach paraders. The stunt attracted much attention and drew a full house. Fred V. Green, Universal exploiter, helped with the stunt.

Thomas had a distinctive lobby, the central effect of which was a big heart cut-out upon which stills from the production had been mounted.

Criticism Contest on "Gilded Cage," at Allentown

Allentown, Pa.—Dr. B. H. Stuckert, manager of the Strand theatre, and Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiter, lined up the leading newspapers of Allentown for a criticism contest to stir up interest in "Her Gilded Cage."

In asking the public its opinion, Dr. Stuckert realized that persons would have to see the picture first, so the stunt built patronage for all days of the run. The initial announcement was made in the form of a four-column reproduction of a telegram from Gloria Swanson, paying a few complimentary remarks to Allentown, and stating that she, personally, was anxious for a nation-wide criticism contest for "Her Gilded Cage." The star offered $25 in gold for the best essay.

Orowitz secured the telegram from John P. Goring, Paramount exploiter in Los Angeles, who sent the message from there. The winner received the award on the stage of the Strand the last night of the run. The house was jammed to the doors, for, since there were nearly a thousand contributions, the interest ran high.

Poem Writing Contest Used on "A Fool There Was"

Altoona, Pa.—Manager Russell, of the Capitol theatre, used heavy newspaper exploitation on "A Fool There Was" during the recent run of that picture.

In addition to an elaborate newspaper campaign, the feature of which was constant description of the modern vampire, her lure for the modern business man and the disruption of the modern home, an unusual number of 24-sheets were stationed about the city and the lobby and front of the house were adorned with 6-sheets, hand painted posters and framed stills.

A poem contest was inaugurated in all the newspapers a week prior to the opening of the engagement. The contestants were to write a poem, the initial letters of each line to be an acrostic of the words "A Fool There Was." Many of the upper grade of the grammar schools and the high schools entered their contributions, with the result that several thousand school children first came to see the production and then went home to write their poetic piece. The prizes to the winners were in cash.

Tie-up with Clothing Men Made on "Tailor Made Man"

Los Angeles, Cal.—Widespread interest in "The Tailor Made Man" was created in Los Angeles recently during the run of the picture at the California theatre, according to Frederick Miller, managing director, by means of an advertising tie-up arranged with the clothing men of the city by Monroe Lathrop, exploitation manager of the Ray organization.

Lathrop arranged with absolutely every merchant tailor, department stores who have custom or merchant tailoring departments, and with the Los Angeles Evening Express, to tie up their merchandising sales with the opening run of the picture.

Window displays, with production stills, were also arranged, and the mailing lists of these merchants obtained.

With the special merchant mailing lists the management of the California theatre sent out post cards, telling them that good clothing had a great deal to do with the making of a progressive man, and that this fact was proven beyond a doubt in the Ray picture, and that the place to get that type of clothing was at Mr. So and So's store.

Oiled "Bonded Woman" 6-Sheet Made Highly Realistic

FORT SMITH, ARK.—Manager J. B. Robertson, of the Palace theatre, made use of an unusually effective oiled six-sheet to sell "The Bonded Woman" to his patrons.

In the lobby of the Palace theatre, Robertson built a shadow box, large enough to carry a six-sheet which had been oiled, giving a transparent effect when the electric lights inside the shadow box were turned on. The six-sheet carries a picture of a tropical setting and to make the picture look more realistic, small strips of paper were pasted on the inside, also a silhouette of a parrot cut out from cardboard. A small electric fan placed in the bottom of this box, invisible from the front side, caused the paper streamers to move in the breeze, the streamers casting a shadow on the oiled six-sheet, making it look as if real foliage was blowing in the breeze. Around this box was draped vines and Spanish moss.

"Masquerader" Tied-Up with New Game in Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—An unusual tie-up on "The Masquerader" was staged in this city recently for the benefit of all theatres playing the picture, through the craze for the new game, "Mah Jong," which is having a great vogue in the West.

So great a hold had the game on the population on the Western coast that the department store of Ofroos Brothers decided to put a window display of the game in to boost its sales.

A live exchange manager or exploitation man—we're uncertain which—got wind of the idea and sold the store on the idea of having one of the figures masked. The masked man wore one of "The Masquerader" disguises. He played "Mah Jong" with three chic Chinese maidens several afternoons and the stunt drew thousands to the windows.

Egg Admits Children to "Old Nest" at Anderson, S. C.

ANDERSON, S. C.—For his showing of "The Old Nest," P. E. Osteen, owner and manager of the Strand theatre, used a stunt that helped wonderfully in putting over the picture. Mr. Osteen placed a huge nest in his lobby and admitted every child under a certain age that brought an ordinary hen's egg. After checking up, Mr. Osteen found that he had over seven hundred eggs—many of them fresh, and much talk and good will for his house, because the kiddies naturally had to tell "Mamma" what they wanted to do with the egg.

Matinee, DeLuxe Theatre, Utica, Brings Them In

Utica, N. Y.—How an exploitation campaign can always skirt the ends when the center of the line is a stone wall was demonstrated in the "Trouble" campaign conducted by the De Luxe Theatre.

Nathan Robbins, manager of the De Luxe, has the theatre situation in Utica pretty well in hand. Also, he has a tremendous prestige with the press; but in this particular instance the papers were adverse to competitions, features or any of the newspaper tie ups usually available on "Trouble."

Consequently Mr. Robbins decided to give his patrons a real innovation—to make them wait for children. Under the auspices of the Utica Press, the most conservative of the local papers, an orphans' matinee was staged. Passersby and regular patrons were compelled to wait in line while the youngsters, headed by a band and a fife and drum corps, paraded into the theatre. They were regaled with ice cream cones and candy bags, provided by Utica manufacturers through a tie up with the Press, and it was announced that this was their day at the De Luxe.

By this drastic change in policy Mr. Robbins turned defeat into victory and won exploitation success where it had appeared as if he would be turned back empty handed by the press.

Lobby of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., transformed into appropriate display for exploiting "The Loves of Pharaoh"

Snow Scene in Lobby Exploits "I Am the Law" at El Paso

El Paso, Texas—Manager J. M. Edgar Hart of the Palace theatre, built a most attractive miniature lobby display representing a Northern snow scene to exploit "I Am the Law" to the people of El Paso.

The display was made of beaver board and small pieces of wood. When erected it resembled closely one of the tense scenes in the picture, showing the log cabin, frozen stream, the trees all covered in snow and several miniature cut-outs of the characters. In the background and setting off this snow scene was a large, circular display of the Aurora Borealis.

The lobby frames carrying the regular stock accessories were covered in beaver board, which was painted to represent snow and ice around the frames. Across the top of his lobby stretched a fifteen-foot banner cut in a zig-zag style, representing icicles, with the wording: "Kum Keep Kumfy Kool." He also used imitation snow together with salt on the floor of the lobby to further this wintry atmosphere.

Leading Citizens of Richmond Given Showing of "Pharaoh"

RICHMOND, Va.—With a view to offsetting any opposition on the part of Virginia's Board of Moving Picture Censors, Manager Harry McNiven, of the Bijou, one of Wells' chain of theatres in Richmond, sent out invitations to about fifty of the leading citizens of this city to view a special showing of "The Loves of Pharaoh."

The private presentation was given last week and practically all of those invited were present, comprising men and women prominent in both business and church circles, the latter including representatives from nearly every denomination in the city.

Every one of the distinguished audience were loud in their praise, as was attested by the printed expressions in the big three-column ad that was carried in the daily newspapers.

Advance Efforts Exploiting "While Satan Sleeps" Prove Helpful

Jacksonville, Fla.—By a clever display on his stage, Manager A. B. Hill of the Arcade Theatre, sold each audience on his coming attraction, "While Satan Sleeps."

On each side of the Arcade stage is a small bower hung with plush curtains. On one side he built an entrance to a cave out of stiffened canvas and wall-board and painted by his house artist. In the entrance a cut-out devil stood, one eye closed, and the other focussed on the bower on the opposite side.

In this other bower was a cut-out of a man and woman in each other's arms. The bowers were in complete darkness while the current picture was projected. After the show, slides advertising "While Satan Sleeps" were flashed on the screen and at the same time red lights illuminating the bower came up. The orchestra played the familiar air, "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now."

One Cent Matinee a Novelty in Pittsburgh, Kans., For Showing of "Sonny"

Pittsburgh, Kan.—Manager Ed Frazier is responsible for the exploitation plan by which he roused intensified interest in motion pictures and the new season when he initiated a one cent matinee for "Sonny" at his New Grand Theatre.

The rules were that children could buy a ticket for ten cents and bring in one companion for a penny. Adults bought tickets at the regular admission price but could bring in another adult or child for a penny. The trouble came when children tried to buy admission and then bring in an adult for a penny.

Frazier had to explain the rules in person. It gave him the opportunity to become acquainted with a lot of his patrons, and inasmuch as they were getting a bargain matinee they took his explanation in good nature and went "smiling through." The Pittsburgh Daily Headlight carried a feature story on the penny matinee because of its novelty.

Making use of a giant cutout, mounted on beaver board, was one of the "stunts" used by the Rivoli theatre, La Crosse, Wis., for "One Clear Call"

Effective use of the sidewalk was made by the Merrick theatre, Jamaica, L. I., in exploiting "The Storm." Attractive signs were also placed across the front of the house, and a telephone cut-out reading, "Call off all dates, 'The Storm' is coming," will be seen at the left.

Two Wave Lines, Cutout and Motor Made Display For "The Boat"

Astoria, Ore.—Manager S. Danz, manager of the Liberty Theatre, believes in simplicity and economy and Thomas C. Grindley, his operator and display manager, is an effective agent for putting these principles into practice.

Two wave lines, a six sheet cutout and a motor were all the equipment necessary to build a very attractive lobby display for "The Boat." In exploiting the comedy the manager installed an electric motor to rock the boat and illuminated the craft with a dozen colored Christmas tree lights. Buster Keaton stared gloomily down from the top of the "Damfino."

The boat was built by Mr. Grindley's two young sons; but the display manager himself conceived the idea.

Gets Police to Guard Print of "Blood and Sand"

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Space for "Blood and Sand" was gotten in an unusual manner recently by Manager Ed Helmts of the Strand theatre and John J. Friedl, Paramount exploiter.

Friedl innocently wrote a letter to the chief of police telling him that the print of "Blood and Sand" was of inestimable value and that neither he nor Mr. Helmts cared to let it lie around unprotected.

The big chief didn't scent publicity and made a personal call at the Strand assuring Mr. Helmts of his hearty co-operation and offering the big safe in the police station for complete security. Making sure that the police reporters were hanging around the print was loaded into an automobile and taken to the station.

Then they kidded the chief to pose for a photograph with Mr. Helmts, Harry Hunter, Paramount branch manager, and A. W. Nicholls, special representative, together with the print.

The reporters wanted to know what it all was about and Friedl very reluctantly spilled the news and the young journalists ate it up and asked for a print of the photograph. After working hard, they got Friedl to give in and the picture was published the next day together with a half column story.

Newspaper Dodge Given New Twist in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O.—An old newspaper dodge was given a new application when "Trouble" played at the Allen theatre, Cleveland, O. Five hundred copies of the Cleveland Press appeared with the red caption:

"Jackie Coogan in trouble at the Allen theatre."

Believe it or not, but the Press received telephone calls throughout the day inquiring what kind of trouble Jackie was in and if it would reflect upon the industry, although they didn't say the last half in just those words. The absurdity of the question helped to show up some of the fanatical reform theories.

Wallpaper Used for Herald on "The Wall Flower"

DENISON, TEXAS.—Manager E. E. Collins of the Rialto theatre used a novel herald announcing "The Wall Flower" recently. The stock for the heralds was ordinary wall paper, which Mr. Collins got for a small sum since he used old samples that were no longer in use by the paper house.

This paper was cut into sheets about the size of ordinary heralds and on this paper was printed sales copy about the picture, the name of the picture and the theatre playing it.

Tying up directly with this idea was his lobby display which consisted of beaver board one sheet frames painted to represent wall paper which carried stills from the picture and a large photograph of the young star, Colleen Moore.

Moon and Stars Dress Lobby to Herald "Chasing the Moon"

South Pittsburg, Tenn.—Manager E. C. Ogg started ten days in advance to let his patrons know that "Chasing the Moon" was coming to the Imperial theatre.

The lobby was dressed up several days in advance. Numerous small tinsel stars were hung from the ceiling. A large pumpkin was used for the moon, eyes, nose and mouth being cut in. Inside the pumpkin was a 10-watt white lamp. All other lights in the lobby were blue.

For three nights in advance a pony with rider stood in the lobby during rush hours. The pony's front feet were on a platform and his head was reined up as though he were looking at the moon.

On play date Ogg completed his display by putting a large banner across the front of the theatre.

Ratings on Features Explained

Exhibitor Reports in Percentages is the result of giving figure ratings to word box office and entertainment value reports from exhibitors, and by arithmetic reducing the total number of reports to percentages.

The key ratings accepted for use are:

Poor	Fair	Average	Good	Big
20%	40%	50%	70%	100%

To arrive at the rating of a picture, the number of reports at each individual rating are multiplied by the key rating percentage, the whole is totaled and the sum obtained divided by the total number of reports received.

The rating is applied separately to the box office and entertainment value related by each report.

No picture will be included in the list which does not receive at least ten reports except on features just released.

"June Madness"

Metro—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HIS picture is acted in Viola Dana's best spirit. Which is to say that Metro's dynamic star fairly bubbles over with vivacity, vitality and peppery enthusiasm. Miss Dana is a way of dominating a story. She can't help it because hers is a personality which can't be suppressed. Here she plays a June bride who deserts the groom at the altar because she happens to be in love with another man. This idea is a favorite one with the comedy producers, and if the sponsors of feature length pictures find it adaptable for a five or six reeler, it is not our place to stand back and criticize them, providing they keep moving with creditable high jinks.

"June Madness" is entertaining even if it is pettish in some of its action. However, Larry Beaumont has kept it going. If you remember, it was this director who made Skinner's Dress Suit such an enjoyable treat. The star frolics about cutting up papers until she has her way. Mother can't do a thing with her. The girl stumbles in walking toward the altar, receives a black eye, and disappears. Then she is locked in her room and escapes through the window. This is an old device, a good deal shop-worn now, but it suffices in keeping the pep in the picture. We next see the young flapper pursuing the right man, who happens to be a jazz orchestra leader at a road-house. The following scene calls for a rich cabaret set and the star showing her talent as a dancer. The regular artist is absent so she executes a few original steps of her own.

So it is on with the dance until mamma arrives—at which moment the climax appears with a deal of frenzied rushing around the place. In the end the girl elopes with the musician—who has applied cave-man tactics to make her submit to his scheme of romance. The picture is cleverly mounted, every detail being in harmony with the plot and characters. A society comedy-romance, it sparkles with paprika without exacting any demands upon the spectator's imagination. Bryant Washburn under the guidance of Beaumont again, makes a good impression. The piece will be enjoyed by your patrons.

The Story—Rich society girl is sold to highest bidder by mercenary mother. She rebels when walking up the aisle to the altar and escapes. When she is locked in her room, she escapes and joins her romantic lover who leads a jazz orchestra in road-house. They succeed in eloping and eventually receive the family blessing.

Classification—Polite romantic comedy cut according to the Viola Dana pattern.

Production Highlights—The society sets, giving an atmosphere of good taste. The cabaret scene when star and leading man hold the spotlight. The elopement. The scene at altar when bride runs away.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the romantic angle. Get out teasers telling of the pep and vivacity of the modern girl who delights in having a good time.

"The Cub Reporter"

Ph. Goldstone-State Rights—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IF they hadn't put on such an obvious title for this picture it would carry more suspenseful value. No sooner are the opening scenes flashed than you know just how everything will develop. The picture does not carry so much story interest as it does a series of stunts which the athletic Richard Talmadge executes with speed and precision. It is nothing but a vehicle for the display of this acrobatic talent.

We first discover him attempting to obtain an interview with the owner of a famous jewel. He commandeers a taxi and pursues the girl—and the action is off. Traffic regulations hold up his cab, so he jumps to the roof of a passing trolley, and follows with a leap into the tonneau of a passing machine. It is no time at all before he succeeds in hopping into the girl's cab. His feats of agility keep on apace, balanced here and there with some fair comedy touches. The reporter has trouble getting into the girl's house where a social event is occupying her attention. He uses several methods but finally gains admittance with a set of false whiskers.

The plot works itself out when a couple of Orientals are determined to gain possession of the jewel for a mandarin. Finding their work becoming hot and heavy they kidnap the heroine. But the reporter follows, captures the gem and rescues the girl. And so it is over. Since it is only a vehicle, it lives up to the stunt idea. Consequently Talmadge will likely win admiration for his acrobatic exploits. There being no suspense, the spectator is always ahead of the story. And since the star formerly doubled for Fairbanks, you can readily discover that he is following Doug's style of keeping things lively. Jack Dillon did as well with his direction as the story permits. The cast is capable. The picture will possibly appeal to a certain type of audience.

The Cast

Dick Harvey.....Richard Talmadge
Marian Rhodes.....Jean Calhoun
Harrison Rhodes.....E. B. Tilton
Underworld Crooks.....Lewis Mason and Ethel Haller
Mandarin.....W. Hummel

Directed by Jack Dillon.

The Story—Cub reporter on newspaper is assigned to big scoop which concerns locating a valuable jewel. His work is cut out for him, and after hazardous exploits he succeeds in his task—recovering not only the gem from a pair of Oriental crooks, but winning the girl in the bargain.

Classification—Melodramatic vehicle for display of star's acrobatic talent. Follows familiar plot—the crook story and recovery of a valuable jewel.

Production Highlights—The acrobatic work of Richard Talmadge who strives hard to please his patrons. Fairly good action.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the title and use it for a teaser campaign. Link up with the dailies. Play up star as erstwhile "double" for Douglas Fairbanks. Feature his athletic prowess.

Drawing Power—Will likely please type of audience patronizing small downtown house or the neighborhood theatre.

"Do and Dare"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

LIKE the well advertised shoe polish, Tom Mix has Two in One here. And for two or three reels he is in there fighting and executing thrills in dare-devilish fashion. Then the picture sags while he turns his attention to the comedy. And as a comedian Tom Mix is a good tragedian. The forepart of "Do and Dare" starts out like an old-fashioned western, with the Indians on the rampage, and you begin to sit up and take notice. After a while you discover that it is a narrative within a narrative, told by an old man to his grandson, the former being Kit Carson Boone, an Indian fighter.

The aged veteran relates how he rescued the boy's grandmother from the redskins and married her. This is told in the flash back style and the action is punctuated with plenty of punch and excitement. Particularly well done is the Indian sequence—at the time of the attack on the fort. Again the raid on the Wells-Fargo coach stands out as extremely vivid. But the moment that the old man is finished with his story and the grandson resolves to hunt adventure, the picture loses its punch and develops into pretty weak comedy.

In the first place the comic-opera revolution has long since outlived its usefulness. Only the slapstick comedians can make use of it now. Yet it is employed here for some reason, probably to give Mix a chance to show his versatility. We have seen him in the mythical kingdom plot before, but not without plenty of melodrama. In this secondary plot one sees some helter-skelter action which reveals aimless fighting and considerable chasing. And to give it breath, there are the usual assortment of blood-thirsty revolutionists and facetious sub-titles. Yes, he saves the ruler's daughter. And her name is Juanita. That's all there is; there isn't any more.

The Story—Old Indian fighter relates stirring adventures of his youth to his grandson—of the days when he fought Indians and rescued the girl who later became his wife. The boy, inspired to fill his grand-dad's shoes, hunts for adventure, too, and finds it in a Southern Republic. He is arrested as a spy but escapes to save the ruler's daughter from the enemy.

Classification—Really two stories in one. The first being an old-fashioned western, the other a farcical tale of a mythical kingdom. The western is told in narrative style.

Production Highlights—The Indian scenes. The raid on the fort. The pursuit of the stage-coach. The fine exteriors. The thrills and suspense in the western.

Exploitation Angles—You can mention that this is an old-fashioned western in the first part. Tell them that it carries plenty of action, excitement, punch and suspense. Play up Mix as offering several new thrills.

"Deserted at the Altar"

Ph. Goldstone-State Rights—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a melodrama of yesteryear—which toured up and down the country in the heyday of the gallery gods winning for itself a generous amount of plaudits, hisses for the villain and tears for the heroine. Transferred to the screen it makes a fair entertainment because the sponsors have had the foresight to humanize it in every way possible. As the title indicates the story hinges upon the desertion, which is reached at the climax. Interspersed with the truly rural touches, the back country characterization, are some melodramatic scenes typical of the old school type of heroics. But they don't intrude with too much fire-works. The story simply goes along on its theme, building interest with a fair degree of suspense and emphasizing the triumph of virtue over villainy.

It is old stuff, to be sure. But there is always an audience for this type of plot. Perhaps the highlights are the acting by a well chosen cast, and a goodly array of picturesque shots which compose the exteriors. The harassed heroine will remind you of a day when Lincoln J. Carter, Hal Reid and their contemporaries vied with one another to bring "sorrer" into her life—that she might conquer in the end and find happiness. Here she is, folks—a little orphan, whose inheritance is sought by the village skinflint and his scapegrace son. She is in love with a city youth. What follows is the wedding ceremony and the disastrous plight of the girl at the altar when a strange woman with a baby in her arms accuses the groom of being the father.

Thus to a deal of plotting before the village squire and his worthless son are made to pay and pay and pay. The villagers do not ring true in their vengeful scheme to punish the city chap. But the scene serves in pointing the melodramatic conflict. The skinflint is exposed as a shyster and the girl finds happiness. You know the plot. How many times have you seen it? It's been a favorite formula with Bertha M. Clay and others of her sentimental school for many, many years. The cast includes the dependable Tully Marshall who certainly can act up "mean" as the squire, Bessie Love as the pathetic orphan, Barbara Tennant and Eulalie Jensen.

Adapted From Pierce Kingsley's Stage Play and Grace Miller White's Book. Directed by William K. Howard and A. Kelley. Photography by Glen McWilliams and John Meigle.

The Story—Orphan girl's inheritance is sought by squire and his worthless son, with whom she lives. Along comes city chap and girl falls in love. When she is about to be married, a strange woman confronts the youth as the father of her babe. The angry villagers becoming wrathful, seek to punish him, but the woman exonerates him and accuses the squire and his son. Happiness for the girl.

Classification—Old-school melodrama of triumph of virtue over villainy. Pathos, romance, hate and love dished up here.

Production Highlights—The scene of the desertion at the altar. Scene when squire is exposed. Work of Bessie Love and Tully Marshall. The exteriors.

Exploitation Angles—Most of the old timers have doubtless seen this picture as a play. Get after this crowd. Tell them that a human interest story is coming. Play up the title and the cast.

Drawing Power—Sophisticated city audiences may not like it. But get after the old timers.

Scene from "In the Night," released on the independent market through Producers Security Corp.

"Head Hunters of the South Seas"

Associated Exhibitors—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

SEEKERS after novelty, something different, in film entertainment, stop here. All praise to Martin Johnson and his plucky little better half for these startling pictures of life in the darkest of the South Sea Islands. As an educative as well as entertaining offering, these 5,000 feet of film are just about the best we've seen in many months. To be taken into a land where life is at the same stage of development as it was in our own race thousands of years ago, and there shown its wonders, thrills, yes, even horrors, without dangers attending the "shooting" of these remarkable views, is an experience indeed.

The pictures show us again old Chief Nagapate, who a few years ago was host to the Johnsons, holding them in captivity as a special mark of favor and almost putting them on the menu for the tribe's next meal. Undaunted by the former experience the couple re-entered the land of the Big Numbers tribe and then penetrated Malekula, the darkest of the islands. The result of the visit is a series of films that picture for modern day audiences scenes which prove beyond a doubt that Darwin was right. We are also shown some unusual views of the inhabitants of the island of Santo, strange diminutive people with a mental development that is just about zero.

Hair dressers will delight in the styles for women as adopted by these dark skinned maidens of jungland. But they will probably have difficulty in getting them popularized with our flappers. The scenic backgrounds are a treat in themselves. The picture closes with a view of a volcano eruption.

The photography, considering the difficulties under which the cameraman worked, is marvelous. Exhibitors should encourage this sort of work by hanging up new booking records on the picture. It certainly deserves support.

The Cast

Chief Nagapate
Tribesmen
Martin Johnson
Mrs. Martin Johnson
Jungle Maidens

Edited and Titled by Arthur Hoerl.

The Story—No story in a sense of being fiction. Treats of the explorations in the jungle lands of the South Seas by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson.

Classification—Instructive novelty of life in the darkest of the South Sea Islands.

Production Highlights—The strange people—their manners and customs. The scenic backgrounds. The fine photography. The educational value.

Exploitation Angles—Play this up as a distinct novelty—something entirely different. Go after the schools and colleges and women's clubs. Put on your atmosphere suggestive of the picture.

Drawing Power—This will draw if people want to see a real novelty—if they are "fed up" on story plays. Deserves support. The crowd, once in the theatre, will likely advertise it by word of mouth. The thing is to get them in.

"The Long Chance"

Universal—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS plot covers familiar ground, taking you back to a favorite pattern which features the attempt of an unscrupulous man—wealth to stake a claim on a dead prospector's lost mine. The story is well told, covering a generous sample of human interest, a note of romance and some melodramatic moments which concern an exciting pistol duel on the street, and the attempt at assassination of the hero. Perhaps the path is over-emphasized, for we see an elder mother dying and placing her daughter in the care of a so-called bad man, whose sense of protection is so strong that he eventually becomes involved in the above-mentioned duel and dies from his wound.

The picture is deserving of patronage for no other reason that it brings Henry Walthall back to the screen in a role which he plays with his customary finesse and poise. No actor is better equipped to express pathos. And with whitened hair and sensitive features, he makes the gambler truly picturesque—not a blustering gambler but a man who quiet manner and determined look bespeak evil for anyone crossing him. The hero is played so well. Ralph Graves uses a read-made smile, although when he gets into his work he gives a good account of himself. He saves the girl from a group of thugs and is injured. This paves the way for the romance. Meanwhile he is being shadowed by an emissary of the wealthy villain—whose purpose is to use the youth to win the good graces of the girl so as to gain easy title to her property. The boy is unaware of such duplicity. So, it is a fight to stave off the brutal thug who shadows him. The hiring of a strong man, strong words derogatory of the girl's character. And this brings forth the street duel—a thrilling moment. Walthall does this magnificent fashion—without the least display of heroics.

In the end the girl is placed in the youth care and happiness is before them. A straightforward story, building well to its conclusion—not releasing a great amount of action, but rather relying upon the heart interest as a human incident. Margery Daw makes an appealing heroine and Jack Curtis, a heavy who compels your attention. A better type of western is "The Long Chance." We are inclined to think you'll agree with us.

The Cast

John Corbaly.....Leonard Clapham
"Boston".....Boyd Irwin
T. Morgan Carey.....Boyd Irwin
Sam Singer.....William Bertram
Harley P. Hennage.....Henry B. Walthall
Bob McGraw.....Ralph Graves
Kate Corbaly.....Marjorie D. Davis
Dana Corbaly.....Marjorie Davis
"Borax" O'Rourke.....Jack Curtis
Soft Wind.....Grace Mary
Dr. Taylor.....George A. Williams

By Peter B. Kyne. Scenario by Raymond Schrock. Directed by Jack Conway. Photographed by Benjamin Reynolds. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Widow of prospector dies, leaving her daughter in care of town gambler. The latter promises to watch over her carefully. Youth, a young miner, arrives in town and falls in love with girl. He protects her and is shot. Gambler resents insults directed toward the heroine and engages the villain in a duel. Both men die. Girl finds happiness and her property is saved.

Classification—Western melodrama revolving around fight to obtain title to mine. Strong gunplay and considerable romance.

Production Highlights—The fine acting. Henry B. Walthall. The duel scene. The pathos and heart interest. The local color.

Exploitation Angles—Use your western quota to sing "Jim Along Josie," etc. Play the author and tell that Walthall makes his appearance in fine role. Use advance notes and display lines for a teaser campaign.

"Pink Gods"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A RATHER unusual picture is this "Pink Gods," which Penrhyn Stanlaws produced for Paramount from the novel, "Pink Gods and Blue Demons," by Cynthia Stockley. The plot shows the lure of diamonds and the ruination they bring members of her sex if they allow the impulse for glittering gems to control their better selves. The subject matter is well thought out and developed by the director in such a graphic manner that you instinctively feel something dreadful is going to happen.

Mr. Stanlaws has achieved better results with the pictorial side of the story—the reproduction of the actual locale looking genuine. The plot shows the conflict between an unscrupulous man, the diamond king who becomes a knave of hearts, and a couple of women, one of whom invites disaster and meets a terrible end through her love for display. The owner is so determined to retain his precious jewels that if he discovers any of his kaffirs swallowing the diamonds he sends them to the operating room to have the "cracked ice" removed from their stomachs. This is an uncanny touch indeed.

While you are waiting for the climax the story takes up a love conflict. The woman who is favored looks coldly upon the diamond king when she discovers his brutality. So he turns to the other woman, whose strength of character is not so apparent. Down in his underground palace he plays at love using the jewels as bait. Meanwhile a vengeful foreman who has experienced an operation dynamites the place with the result that the woman who discovers her soul suffers a tragic death.

There is a lesson in this stark drama and it grips you during its unfoldment. Yet there are scenes which are unusually long drawn out—particularly the building of the climax. But take notice of the photography—the play of lights upon the silhouetted derricks, the atmosphere of opulence in the interiors, and the artistic scheme to make it genuine. James Kirkwood plays the diamond kind with quiet force and dignity, while Bebe Daniels has never contributed a better performance as the woman whose love for display brings her an untimely end. Anna Q. Nilsson is the other woman, Raymond Hatton the vengeful foreman. It holds the interest—because you don't know what's coming.

The Cast

Lorraine Temple.....Bebe Daniels
John Quelch, owner of diamond mines.....James Kirkwood
Lady Margot Cork.....Anna Q. Nilsson
Jim Wingate.....Raymond Hatton
Louis Barney, a diamond broker.....Adolphe Menjou
Mark Escher.....Guy Oliver
Col. Pat Temple, Lorraine's husband.....George Cowl
Dick Cork, Lady Margot's son.....Arthur Trimble
By Cynthia Stockley. Scenario by Sonya Levien and J. E. Nash. Directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Treats of love for diamonds among the feminine sex. Diamond owner in Kimberley is a harsh employer. He stops at nothing to prevent theft. The women come under his domination, and one nearly succumbs to his blandishments. A vengeful foreman dynamites his palace bringing death to the weaker woman, while the other is purged of his sin.

Classification—Unusual melodrama laid at Kimberley diamond mines. Owner using his gems as bait to win love.

Production Highlights—The pictorial effects achieved by director. The atmosphere of Kimberley, looking like the genuine locale. The details. The sets. The acting of Kirkwood and Bebe Daniels.

Exploitation Angles—This plot is unusual and you can link up with jewelers and department stores in advertising their wares and the picture. Play up the lure of diamonds. Mention the cast.

Drawing Power—Good for high class houses.

"Rags to Riches"

Warner Bros.—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a photoplay combining all the elements which build smashing returns at the box-office. There is plenty of fun, a good dash of romance, some first rate melodrama, plenty of spirited action and suspense, and slice of rural humanity—which all assembled make it a picture of quality. It is not a misstatement to declare that it is Wesley Barry's best feature, eclipsing "School Days" in its power of appeal. It is a picture which never loses its grip upon the spectator—because it is honest, straightforward in its telling, sympathetic in its heart interest, and seasoned with sufficient humor.

Hail to the young star who has not reached that stage where he must dominate every scene. There is opportunity here for all. Hail also to the title writer who has caught the true perspective of youth. He thinks in terms of his own boyhood apparently, because not a slip is made to show this pampered son of the rich a genuine boy at heart, eager and willing to rough it—to live down the fact that he is occasionally called a sissy. Young Wes has a rotten time living within proximity of his mother's apron strings. There is rich humor in the palatial home particularly when the youngster is practising his violin lessons. The music pages are wide enough to hold a copy of "Diamond Dick." Then the boy disappears.

He sees a burglar enter his home and accompanies him to the secret den, and the parents are prostrated over the fact that he is kidnapped. We next discover him in the country where the sun and outdoor work brings out his freckles—the well known Barry freckles. Wes has gotten by in the earlier reels by using an extra heavy portion of the "yellow." The rural touches are rich in mirth and heart interest. The romance enters here when his burglar guardian falls in love with the adopted daughter of the sheriff. And a good time is being had by all when the detective enters and threatens to arrest the youth. But he turns out to be a Federal agent assigned to capture the crooks who have been spreading terror throughout the city. There is some hokum here. Don't hesitate. Get this picture. Then take your money to the bank.

The Cast

Marmaduke Clarke.....Wesley Barry
Dumbell.....Niles Welch
Mary Ward, an orphan.....Ruth Renick
The Sheriff.....Russell Simpson
The Sheriff's Wife.....Mrs. Mina D. Redman
Blackwell Clarke.....Richard Tucker
Mrs. Blackwell Clarke.....Eulalie Jensen
Marmaduke's Governess.....Jane Keckley
Tony, the Wop.....Sam Kaufman
Bull.....Dick Sutherland
Louis, the Dope.....Jimmy Quinn
Purist's League Members....."Snitz" Edwards
Elaine Manning

By Grace Miller White. Scenario by William Nigh and Walter De Leon. Directed by Wallace Worsley. Produced by Warner Bros.

The Story—Pampered son of rich family rebels in the restraint placed upon him and runs away with burglar who enters the house. Finds refuge in hiding place of crooks and eventually finds a retreat in the country with family of a kindly farmer. His parents locate him and he returns with them. But he has brought romance and happiness to everyone and has the satisfaction of feeling like a regular boy.

Classification—Human interest story colored with melodrama and romance. Typically Wesley Barry story. Plenty of juvenile appeal.

Production Highlights—Work of star. His appearance with and without freckles. The scene when he practices his violin lessons. The barn dance. The rural comedy and sentiment. The fine titling and direction.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests all kinds of advertising. Get out the youngsters. Stage children's matinees. Play up the title and run feature stories. Use a teaser campaign. Play up the cast.

"Under Two Flags"

Universal-Jewel—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SOME of the sting has been taken out of desert pictures since Valentino exchanged one of his four horses for an Arabian steed, yet this venerable play which once served Blanche Bates upon the stage, carries such an array of picturesque scenes—such a dashing romance, such color and atmosphere, such stirring incident and compelling characterization, that it is bound to be met with public approval. Tod Browning has not failed.

All the spirit of Ouida's book and play is brought forth in terms which exact the utmost interest. What if we are familiar with the design—those of us beyond the first throes of adolescence.

The point is the desert picture has become the universal favorite. And if you want to find a feminine Valentino you need look no further than Priscilla Dean, whose zest and enthusiasm for playing a part for all it is worth, makes not only her performance conspicuously successful but enhances the play in the bargain. She is the daughter of the regiment, this girl of a French father and an Arab mother. And it is a delight to watch her put color in her scenes. The moment she sees the outcast, Victor, the picture travels on, exuding a vigorous romance which builds to a divine love through her magnanimous spirit of self-sacrifice.

The scenes are lavish—all well conceived and executed. There has been no stint to make the offering a real achievement of its kind. If we have seen a girl from the East rescue her lover from sure death—at least we never have seen it done better. Follow her mad flight over the burning sands—with the Arabs in hot pursuit—those Arabs followed in turn by a troop of French cavalry. The Orient is ever suggested—not only in the intimate details of life in Algiers but in the barracks of the soldiers. It is a stirring sight—this pursuit over the desert—as fine a sample of compelling action and photography as has been revealed on the screen. And Miss Dean makes this vivid daughter of the regiment a dynamic personality, indeed.

It is spectacular in places, thoroughly in character and rich detail. And the direction is well nigh perfect. Perhaps James Kirkwood should have enlivened his scenes a trifle more. John Davidson is a crafty, cunning sheik—more genuine in appearance than the study of a well advertised star. The picture is similar to "The Virgin of Stamboul," though it carries more dynamics, more color, more romance. There is no doubt of its getting over. Priscilla Dean sees to that.

The Cast

Cigarette.....Priscilla Dean
Corporal Victor.....James Kirkwood
Sheik Ben Ali Hammed.....John Davidson
Marquis de Chateauray.....Stuart Holmes
Princess Corona.....Ethel Grey Terry
Rake.....Robert Mack
The Sheik's Aide.....Burton Law
Captain Tollaie.....Albert Pollet
By Ouida. Directed by Tod Browning. Produced by Universal.

Classification—Romantic drama adapted from Ouida's novel of same name.

Production Highlights—Work of Priscilla Dean. The pursuit of girl over the desert. The charge of the Arabs and the French cavalry. The scene when girl saves her lover from death. The color and atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Go after this one and bill it as adaptation of big successes as a novel and play. Play up the star's personality and the fact that she is one of the real genuine actresses of the screen. Use the title. Put over a colorful prologue in harmony with scenes of picture.

MEN AND EVENTS IN THE FILM CENTRES

With "News" Correspondents

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

St. Louis Personals

Fred L. Cornwell, owner of the Delmonte Theatre, will turn over his theatre during the week of November 12th to 18th to assist Father Caesar Spigardi's School for Italian Children. The institution is badly in need of funds to continue its good work among the Italian children and Cornwell has kindly come to the rescue. Every cent over and above actual expenses will be handed over to the Italian padre, it is stated. A special program is being arranged.

Eli Gory of Dorchester, Ill., plans to rebuild his theatre at Wilsonville, Ill., which was destroyed by fire on September 10, with a loss of $25,000. The new house was about ready to open. It was a severe blow to Gory but he pluckily declines to be discouraged.

Messrs. Tom Reed and J. Yemm of the Reed, Yemm & Hayes Circuit, which operates a number of houses in the vicinity of Duquoin, Ill., were St. Louis visitors of the week. Tom motored up Monday to see the Little World Series between the New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns. With some 29,000 St. Louisians he was heartbroken when the invaders rallied in the ninth and snatched a 3 to 2 victory by scoring two runs.

Vernon Coffman, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Mowequa, Ill., was a caller at Enterprise during the week.

F. J. Pratt of Fulton, Mo., dropped in for some sure-shot features and real comedies.

Bob Cluster of Johnston City, also was in during the week.

Henri Chouteau, wealthy St. Louis capitalist, has purchased the Odeon Theatre and office building from James Wilson for a consideration not revealed. Revenue stamps indicated that Wilson's equity in the structure and ground was in excess of $300,000. The Odeon is located on Grand boulevard near Finney avenue.

In front there is a five story office building used mostly by music schools, Masonic lodges and other fraternal bodies. There are several small recital and lodge halls in the structure. The theatre, which accommodates 1,937 persons in the parquet and balcony, is on the rear of the lot. It is the home of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and is also used for concerts and recitals by the better-known singers and musicians.

With Cleveland's Branches

NAT BARACH, recently appointed local Goldwyn branch manager, has been using his time to good advantage. In the week that he has been in Cleveland he has closed with Loew's Ohio Theatres for "Sherlock Holmes" to play the Allen theatre the week of October 9th, and for "Remembrance" to play the Allen the week of October 22nd. "Remembrance" is also booked to play the Pantheon, Toledo, and will be sold solid to all the key cities by the end of the week.

H. W. Starrett has risen from the Goldwyn ranks of salesman to the position of assistant manager of the Cleveland office. Formal installation took place last Monday.

Charles Loewenberg has come out of the effete East, where he was associated with the Fox Film Corporation, to ally himself with the Cleveland Goldwyn outfit.

Mark Goldman, late manager of the Cleveland F. B. O. exchange, has just been appointed manager of the local Select exchange. Goldman got right into harness and has spent the week visiting exhibitors out in the territory.

Al Kaufman is another New Yorker, who has joined the local film colony. Kaufman now answers to the description of Universal sal exploitation specialist covering the northern Ohio territory.

E. V. Lister thinks its easier to sell Universal film product than Velle automobiles. That's why he's joined the Cleveland Universal sales force.

Matthew Schiesel has resigned as office manager of the local Hodkinson office. L. B. Solether, one-time prominent exhibitor of Toledo, has been named to succeed Schiesel. Solether formerly owned three prominent picture houses in Toledo. He has sold them all, and is now interested only in the sale of celluloid.

Henry Fleming has transferred his duties from the Cleveland Pathe office where he was booker, to the local Hodkinson office in the same capacity.

J. L. Kempner of Kempson Pictures, and Paul Bush, vice-president of the same organization, were in Cleveland several days during the week just passed. They are handling reissues on Norma and Constance Talmadge pictures, Alice Brady and Clara Kimball Young.

Helen Bell, private secretary to Hodkinson manager E. C. Holah, is now signing correspondence to the left of the oblique line for F. B. O. manager C. E. Penrod.

In St. Louis' Film District

UNIVERSAL plans to re-open the Rivoli theatre, 6th St. near Olive St., about October 22nd. The house, which has been known for years as the Royal theatre, was purchased recently from Harry Koplar. The price and remodeling totaled $75,000. The entire front has been changed while the auditorium has been greatly enlarged. The Rivoli will be used as a first run house for Universal pictures. The Rivoli Theatre Company, a $30,000 corporation, has been organized by Barney Rosenthal, R. G. Taylor and Nat Steinberg to operate the Rivoli. Nat Koplar is building a new film exchange to house the Film Booking Offices St. Louis branch in the 3300 block on Olive St. It will be ready for occupancy about December 1. To acquaint the clients of F. B. O. with the new location Tom McKean, city salesman, has taken desk space in the Fulco-Schaefer Supply House, 3301 Olive St., across the street from the new exchange.

The W. W. Hodkinson exchange will move into the old Metro quarters in the Plaza Hotel Building in about ten days. The office is being entirely remodeled and redecorated. New vaults are also being installed. With changes and improvements being made in the Goldwyn office adjoining the work will cost approximately $5,000. Under the changed plans Goldwyn and Hodkinson will have the same front stairs leading into Lindell boulevard.

Nat Steinberg of the Universal organization has been laid up for several days with a severe cold.

George Ware, Vitagraph manager, attended a meeting of the central district branch managers at Kansas City Sunday, September 24. J. M. Duncan, division manager, presided.

F. J. McConnell, general manager of the serial department for Universal, spent the early part of the past week in St. Louis. He departed Wednesday evening for Cincinnati. His special mission was to boost "In the Days of Buffalo Bill."

District Manager Le Beau of Paramount, whose headquarters are in Kansas City, dropped in on R. J. McManus, local manager, during the week.

Cleveland News

M. B. Horwitz, head of the Washington Circuit of theatres in Cleveland, announces a change in policy at the Globe theatre, Woodland Ave. and East 55th St. He has secured the T. O. B. A. franchise, and beginning next week will show five acts of colored vaudeville and feature pictures. Prices will be 25c for adults and 10c for children. The Globe has 1,000 seats. It has been variously a straight picture house and a Yiddish theatre. The changes of policy have been due to a constant change in the neighborhood population. It is thought that this latest policy will add other nearby motion picture theatres.

Andrew Cobe, manager of Universal's Central theatre, New York, paid Cleveland a flying trip this week, and stopped in to give Universal's Standard theatre, Cleveland, the once-over.

Announcement was made this week that Shubert vaudeville has been booked to show at Loew's State theatre, Cleveland. The change from big feature photoplay productions to big time vaudeville becomes effective immediately. Shubert vaudeville opens at the State Sunday, September 23, and will continue during the entire season.

Loew's State theatre was built a year and a half ago, at a cost of several million dollars. It has 3,700 seats, and every latest equipment for the proper projection of motion pictures. At the time it was opened, it was said to be the finest picture house in the country.

The State theatre has always maintained a straight picture policy. It opened the present fall season under a picture policy. It is now announced that all pictures booked to appear at the State will be shown at Loew's Park theatre, Euclid Ave. and East 105th St.

The Stillman and Allen remain under control of Loew's Ohio theatres. The Stillman has approximately 1,200 seats and the Allen 3,800 seats.

This shifting of policies also entails a change of personnel. Kenneth Reid, house manager of the State has been made house manager of the Allen, succeeding Gene Ochs.

Loew's Liberty has also changed its policy. The former vaudeville and picture policy has been changed to a straight picture policy.

Buffalo Briefs

Michael Shea, James Franklin, Thomas D. Powell, William H. Northrup and Harry Zimmer are the directors of the newly incorporated Shea's, Inc., capitalized at $100,000 for the purpose, according to papers filed in the office of the Erie County clerk, of owning and operating motion picture theatres, theatres and opera houses. Thomas D. Powell, attorney for the organization, says that the new incorporation will not result in a change of interest in the Shea-McNaughton theatres. The Shea Amusement company, the former name of the organization, has now been changed to the McNaughton Realty company, which will handle all of the real estate in the company. Shea's, Inc., will operate the theatres. There will be no change in the financial interests. E. S. Kramer has resigned as treasurer of the company, effective October 1.

William McKenna has resigned as manager of the recently opened Olympic theatre on Lafayette Square, Buffalo, and has returned to the Shubert theatre in Detroit.

Buffalo exhibitors are starting a determined offensive against the local daylight savings ordinance, which will come up for referendum at the election this year. At a meeting held in the Majestic theatre, the western New York unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., plans were discussed for putting the power of the screen behind a campaign to mold public opinion against the measure, which the theatre men declare is harmful to their business. Representatives of 42,000 seats were present at the meeting and these men voted to give five cents a seat toward a fund to pay the expense of the fight.

New officers for the ensuing year were also elected as follows: President, George Williams, Linden theatre; vice-president, James Wallingford, general manager, General Theatre corporation; treasurer, Al Beckerich, Loew State; secretary, Bruce Fowler, Elmwood. The following were named members of the advisory board: Frank Nowak, George Haney, Henry Carr, Jules H. Michael, Charles Higgins, Barney Wohwinkle and George Keating. These exhibitors together with the officers will constitute the board of directors. A chairman of the board will be elected at the next meeting.

J. H. Michael, retiring president, presided at the meeting. Dr. Peter C. Cornall, manager of the Majestic, offered the use of his theatre for all future meetings of the exhibitor organization. The offer was accepted.

The principal topic of conversation along Buffalo's Film Row is the resignation of Charles H. Goulding as managing director of the Eastman theatre in Rochester, N. Y., and who his successor will be.

Arthur L. Skinner has installed a beautiful new stage setting in the Victoria theatre at West Ferry and Grand streets in Buffalo.

Buffalo Film Row News

BOB WAGNER, former manager of the Educational exchange, has been engaged as a member of the Universal sales staff by District Manager M. A. Chase. Jess Kaufman is back in Buffalo handling the company's special attractions. Charles Charles, formerly a member of the local sales force, was in town visiting old friends last week. C. E. Goodwin, former salesman, is now in charge of the short subject department in the Buffalo district.

Harry Dixon has resigned as city salesman for Vitagraph and has accepted a similar position with F. B. O. He has been succeeded at the Vitagraph office by Leo Murphy, formerly booker at the Fox exchange.

Joe Daly, formerly office manager for Hodkinson, has returned to Buffalo and is now in his old job at the same old office. George Canty has resigned from the Hodkinson office force to accept the position of booker at the Fox exchange, succeeding Leo Murphy.

Walter Bengough, who was assistant to the late Harold Edel when the latter was manager of the local Strand and who has been connected with the sales forces of several of the local exchanges, has joined up with F. B. O. and will cover the Syracuse territory. J. N. Kline, who was in the Syracuse district for the company, has returned to the home office in New York.

Sherman Webster, one of the best known knights of the leaping tinnies in western New York, is now peddling Goldwyn product through the territory.

R. H. Clark, First National general manager, was in town Tuesday, September 26, conferring with E. J. Hayes, branch manager. J. S. McHenry, legal representative, has gone to the Albany territory.

Bob Murphy of Filkins & Murphy put in a busy week escorting Franklyn Farnum on a tour of Buffalo and western New York theatres. Mrs. Farnum accompanied the star. The Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association gave a dinner for Mr. Farnum and he, was also received by Mayor Frank X. Schwab.

Homer Howard, formerly with Nu-Art Pictures Corporation as well as several other Buffalo exchanges, has been engaged by Manager Chester A. Saunders as a salesman for United Artists. He has been assigned to the Syracuse territory.

J. Emerson Dickmon, salesman deluxe on the main line, won the Fox week sales drive contest. He has been awarded a pair of electrically heated socks. Charlie Johnson has blossomed forth in a new fall suit. Yes, Charlie still has them made to order. They don't make em that large in the regular store line, Mawruss!

The boys at the Paramount office are still going "on high," in an effort to retain their place at the top of the list of exchanges in the Paramount week sales drive. Ray Powers, assistant manager, has already picked out a car and is awaiting his check to pay for it.

With Kansas City Exchanges

KANSAS CITY newspapers blared forth an account of the robbery of C. H. Burkey, member of the executive board of the M. P. T. O. Missouri and owner of the Summit Street theatre, who was a victim of a daring hold-up this week. A motor car, $400 and a watch was the total loss.

With the theatre receipts of Saturday and Sunday placed in the rear of his car, Mr. Burkey drove to his home to get his wife to accompany him to the bank. As he was waiting in front of his home, a man approached, jumped on the running board of the car, covered Mr. Burkey with a revolver and ordered him to drive on. Another bandit joined the first one a few blocks from Mr. Burkey's house, and the exhibitor was driven ten miles from the city where he was robbed of the money, his watch and his car, a Buick roadster.

C. M. Parkhurst, office manager of the Kansas City Hodkinson branch, no longer can be classified as the "baby" executive of the Kansas City film colony. Following in the footsteps of his species, he stepped out last week and betook a bride unto himself, incidentally robbing the Pathe exchange of one of its best looking (and working) employes in Miss Lucia Jennings. The Pathe employes supplied the silverware.

Exchange managers of Kansas City last week received the hearty thanks of Mayor Cromwell and J. J. Larkin of the board of public welfare for their liberality in supplying the city with films that have been shown in city institutions such as the poor farm, the woman's reformatory and the tubercular hospitals. No charge whatever has been made for use of the films.

A. A. Fenro, the latest addition to the sales force of the Standard Film Company, Kansas City, set forth in a wee Ford last week to conquer the apparent unconquerable—and he did. It was thirty-two new weekly accounts that he presented Bernard C. Cook, branch manager, upon his return.

Obtaining a whole page tie-up on a picture in the Kansas City Star is about as simple as creating perpetual peace in Turkey. But Howard Jameyson, formerly of the Liberty and Doric theatres, Kansas City, and now exploitation manager of the Kansas City Universal branch, "pulled the trick." Jameyson's physical efforts consisted of writing four ads for the Star, each bearing the cut "The Storm Is Coming," and the best part of it is that the space was sold by the Star's solicitors.

Kansas City Flashes

Questionnaires have been sent out by Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel and secretary of the M. P. T. O., Missouri, to each member of the executive board of the Missouri, in an effort to "feel out" the most popular selection, for a place of holding the semi-annual Missouri convention, October 19 and 20.

The chamber of commerce of St. Joseph has made flattering offers to the Missouri exhibitors in the hope of landing the convention, while extended overtures also have been made by the Commercial Club of Excelsior Springs, as well as several other cities and towns. One of the largest attendances in years at the convention appears inevitable, as the presence of President Sydney Cohen and many leading men of the State has been assured.

Kansas City motion picture patrons need no other indication that the winter season is here. The Doric, the playhouse of the banking district, has opened for the winter. The Doric is peculiarly located; in the midst of banking and business during the day and in a deserted section of the down town district at night. But when winter comes, so do the crowds. Samuel Harding has found this out, especially by showing good productions. So once again, the Doric makes its annual debut to filmdom.

A select gathering, including Lewis J. Selznick, president, and Jack Woody, general manager, of Select Picture Corporation, and a large group of exhibitors and newspapermen, will witness the preview showing Monday of a farce-comedy, "Love Is An Awful Thing," at the Liberty theatre, Kansas City. Select salesmen in Kansas City, therefore, are preparing for a record business on the picture after next week.

Branch managers of the Film Booking Offices of America attended a conference at Kansas City last week, presided over by Harry M. Berman, general sales manager. Mr. Berman announced that new exchanges would be opened in Des Moines and Oklahoma in the near future. Those attending the meeting were J. H. Calvert, district manager; S. W. Fitch, Sioux Falls, S. D.; Milton Simon, St. Louis, Mo., and Roy E. Churchill, Kansas City.

Among the changes in ownership and opening of new theatres in the Kansas City territory during the week are the following:

Orpheum theatre, Parsons, Kas., opened by J. A. Hardin; Liberty theatre, Cherryvale, Kas., sold by T. L. Wolf to Dorris & Smith; St. John theatre, Kansas City, opened by S. A. Underwood.

E. Clifford Green, former Universal salesman out of Chicago, now is representing the National Film Releasing Company's Kansas City office in the western Missouri district.

New England Paragraphs

A collection of several hundred French war posters is attracting a great deal of attention these days at the Boston theatre, the foyers of first and second balconies literally covered with them. The collection was made by A. Paul Keith while in France during the World War, and will remain on the walls for an indefinite period, to the obvious delight of patrons.

"Down to the Sea in Ships," the whaling picture which has been in the making at New Bedford for some time will have its world premiere in that city on Monday night, to the great delight of residents, many of whom took part in the play and who appreciate being given the first opportunity for seeing the film. Marguerite Courtot starred in the picture, the production of which was assisted by leading citizens and state and city officials, and was backed by prominent Boston and New Bedford men. President Harding, Governor Channing Cox of Massachusetts, presidents of all New England colleges, and many others have been invited to witness the premiere. The film will come to Boston after the New Bedford showing.

Boston has been notoriously backward in the matter of picture exploitation, but now at least one circuit seems to have awakened to the possibilities lurking in playing up a picture with publicity of that sort. Hardly a week goes by but most of the houses of the Olympia Theatres, Inc., the Gordon houses, are the most colorful spots in the city.

The Quincy theatre, closed for several months, and run by a New York concern before the closing, has opened its doors again, this time under a company composed of Quincy men. It has been very successful and the management has been showered with congratulations over making it a strictly Quincy venture. All city officials were guests at the opening night, Fred B. Murphy, and his manager, William De Wolfe, being the recipients of numerous floral remembrances which filled the stage and lobby.

Several reels of motion picture film showing the work of the Boston Fire Department are going back to France shortly with Major Paul Vanginot, chief of the Paris Fire Brigade. He has been in Boston this week as the guest of the city, and the local department's methods of attacking and quenching a blaze have so impressed him that he is taking the best possible way of showing his Parisian smoke eaters how the job should be done. He hopes that exhibition of the films before the proper authorities in Paris will result in the adoption of American methods of fire fighting.

James J. Maginnis, of the Olympia Theatres, Inc., counts about 25 hours in each working day at present. Two of his right hand men are on the sick list and he is shouldering their jobs temporarily in addition to his own multitudinous duties of looking after the chain.

John Egan, manager of the Broadway (South Boston) theatre, two or three days ago brought to the attention of the police an original idea in "movie" swindles, one that concerned itself chiefly with scouts and possible child actors. Many parents in that district were mulcted out of sums ranging from $10 to $20 by a man and woman who worked on the pride of mothers and fathers in seeing in their offsprings future "Jackie" Coogans, it is stated.

Manager Egan had been besieged with demands from foud parents who wanted to know when pictures of their youngsters were going to be shown at his theatre. He investigated and finding the cause of the trouble reported to the police.

The woman worker paved the way by stopping to speak to a mother or father walking with children, and declaring that the child was good material for a screen contest to be held at a local theatre, would obtain the name and address in most cases.

Within a few days a man carrying a box supposed to contain a camera called at the houses, worked on the parents' pride in speaking of the "crying shame" of having such talent lost to the screen, all with the result that the parent parted with $10 or more to have the future star properly registered. Both workers were described as being about 30 or 35 years old, the woman being dressed in latest modes, and slow spoken.

Albany Slants

Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, one of the vice presidents of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, who has been on the sick list for some time, has recovered and was in town this week. Mr. Buettner owns two houses in Cohoes, one in Mechanicville and another in Hudson Falls.

George H. Roberts, managing the Colonial and Hudson theatres here and president of the Albany exhibitors, received a letter this week from Will Hays in regard to the coal situation. Mr. Roberts wrote Mr. Hays to the effect that dealers had assured exhibitors that they have nothing to worry about over coal for the coming winter.

After October 1, William Berinstein, owner of the Colonial here, and two houses in Elmira, will make his home in New York City, although continuing his upstate theatrical interests.

Albany exhibitors and operators are still quibbling over the year's contracts. The exhibitors will probably have a meeting next week and adjust matters. They are willing to concede as to wages, but differences exist relative to hours.

Charles and Bob Lynch, who assist Bert Moran in handling Pathe's Pittsburgh exchange, dropped into Albany this week on an auto trip to New York City. They informed Mr. Moran's many friends here that he was continuing the same excellent record which he established in the Albany territory, and which resulted in his capturing many prizes.

Charles H. Moyer, who now controls the motion picture situation in Herkimer, by his purchase of Linton's Theatre, made a round of the Albany exchanges this week.

Schenectady's new theatre, one of the Strand chain, and which will be known as "The State," will open next month with "Grandma's Boy."

L. C. Moxhan, who has been connected with Pathe's office here, has just been transferred to northern New York and G. G. Sutton, who has been looking after that section for Pathe, will be brought here.

Baltimore Items

Samuel S. Robbins has been named director of the orchestra on the Century theatre roof, and his brother, Frederick Robbins, has taken charge of the musicians on the Garden theatre roof. Both theatres are controlled by the C. E. Whitehurst interests.

The "Robbins boys" are sons of Joseph Robbins, now manager of the New Gem theatre, who was for six years manager of the Comedy theatre.

Another shift of managerial chairs in the Whitehurst chain was reported last week, announcement being made that Eugene N. Daley, long connected with the Howe companies, had become manager of the Century and the New theatres. Mr. Daley also will have charge of the advertising and publicity for the Parkway theatre.

George A. McDermit, who has been manager of the Century, becomes manager of the Garden theatre and the roof of that and of the Century theatres. William E. Stumpf, who for a time was stationed at the Garden, has returned to the New theatre as house manager.

An innovation in the shape of a female orchestra has been established at the Belnord theatre by Frank H. Durkee, manager, who also is president of the Exhibitors' League. The orchestra, which has been organized for some time, has begun an indefinite engagement at the Belnord.

San Francisco Items

Eugene Roth, associate managing director of the California, Granada, Imperial and Portola theatres, has left for a combined business and pleasure trip to New York and other Eastern centers to confer with some of the large motion-picture operators regarding pictures and general conditions.

Miss Groce, advertising director at the Granada, has been honored by the Women's Advertising Club of this city as she has been placed on some of the club's important committees and her advertisements have received favorable comment by the members.

Manager I. E. Phelps of the Tivoli has returned from his combined vacation and business trip to the Turner & Dahnken picture houses in Southern California. While in the studio centers he was the guest of many of the stars, among them Mary Miles Minter, Agnes Ayre and Baby Daniels. He was also entertained by C. L. Langley, general manager for Southern California of the T. & D. interests.

Thursday night, Sept. 14th, at 10:15, the "Royal," one of San Francisco's most popular motion picture houses, was robbed of several hundred dollars. Over 700 people were viewing the picture at the time of the robbery and it was done so rapidly that manager A. C. Karskie does not believe it took more than three minutes. The Royal is on an uptown business street. Thursday night a large machine stopped in front of the theatre, from which three men alighted and two stayed in. One of the three stood on the sidewalk on which people were passing and the other two walked to the box office and purchased two tickets. Mr. Karskie, who had just taken the cash from the girl at the box, was holding it under his arm and walking inside. One of the thieves walked up to the doorman, placed the ticket in the box and told him to drop his hands and not to say a word, showing him the revolver. The other thief followed Mr. Karskie a few steps and told him the same. They grabbed the bag, ran to the machine. The number of the machine was obtained, but it was a stolen one and was abandoned on a corner the next morning. The money was insured.

Seattle Brevities

Henri C. Le Bel, formerly an organist at the Rivoli Theatre in Portland, Oregon, has just been engaged by Manager John Hamrick as head organist at the Blue Mouse theatre in this city. Mr. Le Bel takes the place of Frank Leon, who left the Blue Mouse a few weeks ago for a Brooklyn theatre.

Several hundred persons were guests of the Strand theatre management, Strand employees and Select Pictures exchange managers and employees for a pre-view of "Love Is An Awful Thing" at eleven in the evening, September 8th at the Strand.

The pre-view was put over by Phil Selznick, who brought the picture to this territory, and was arranged through the kindness of Manager H. B. Wright and the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit.

Frank Jacobs, local photographer, returned to Seattle last week, and is again making the Liberty News reel for Manager Leroy V. Johnson's house. Jacobs has been official photographer at Rainier National Park for the past several years. According to theatre gossip, Jacobs is preparing to make several reels of scenic film from the pictures that he took during the summer.

Albert Hay Malotte, for the past several seasons head organist at the Liberty theatre, and for the past five years in the employ of Jensen-Von Herberg as organist in their Seattle houses, is leaving the Liberty about the middle of September. After a short vacation, Malotte will become head organist at Shea's Hippodrome, in Brooklyn, when that house opens around the first of October.

Wallace Rucker, salesman for Educational Film Company's Seattle exchange, spent the past week-end in this city, after an absence of practically a month spent in covering his territory in Washington and Oregon. Rucker left Seattle again on September 18 for Spokane.

Omaha Gossip

Upon the acceptance of an invitation to Will Hays to attend the Nebraska and Iowa Motion Picture Theatre Owners' convention in Omaha will depend the dates of the conference which has been postponed from September 18-19-20, according to A. R. Pramer of Omaha, president of the association.

Mr. Hays told Mr. Pramer in Minneapolis several weeks ago that he would be able to go to Omaha in October.

G. E. Ellison of Minneapolis has been assigned manager of the Omaha branch of the American Releasing Corporation.

Arthur Phelps, manager of the Open Air theatre, Henderson, Ia., was in Omaha last week.

Howard Pendergast of the Air-dome theatre, Hancock, Ia., was an Omaha visitor last week.

L. B. Seymour, formerly operating a show at Glenwood, Ia., has taken over the town theatre at Tabor, Ia.

Hobart Swan, manager of the Empress and Crescent theatres at Kearney, Neb., announced the purchase of the Sun theatre, at York, Neb.

Out-of-town exhibitors who visited film exchanges in Omaha last week were: C. J. Robinson, Blair, Neb.; J. H. Ebersole, manager of the Majestic in Avoca, Ia.; Swan Olson of the Swan theatre, Walthill, Neb.; L. W. Bichel, manager of the Opera House, Mineola, Ia., and W. V. Fauber, manager of the Pastime theatre, Logan, Ia.

Indianapolis Close-Ups

By a change which became effective Sept. 25, the name of Loew's State theatre in Indianapolis became the Palace. The policy was switched from movies to a feature movie and six acts of vaudeville, the house going on the Keith family circuit. Prices range from 15 to 35 cents matinees and 25 to 50 cents evenings. The stage and dressing rooms were remodeled to handle vaudeville acts.

Part of the interests of Marcus Loew in the theatre became property of the Keith interests, it is understood, although Loew still has some stock. Local capitalists also retain their holdings. They with Loew built the theatre two years ago. The cost was in excess of $600,000. It is one of the most beautiful theatres in Indiana.

Herbert Jennings, manager for several months, still is with the house, with G. Claude Miller, representing the Keith interests in the management.

Part of the machinery of the change was the organization of the Indianapolis Operating Corporation, incorporated in New York and qualified to do business in Indianapolis with $10,000 capital listed here and G. Claude Miller as agent.

The move leaves the Circle, Colonial, Apollo and Ohio as the chief downtown exclusive movie houses.

The Internal Revenue department announced it would sell the furnishings and mechanical equipment of the Meriden theatre at Anderson to collect $1,423.43, it alleged, was due for failure of C. John Predary, to pay admission tax and penalty.

Addressing the Mothers' Council at Muncie, Ind., Miss Maude Aldrich, widely known lecturer, said: "The motion picture may be made a great educational factor and an ideal builder of character, but the appeal of the moving pictures as now presented is largely to the physical, not to spiritual and intellectual."

The Mothers' Council is urging movie houses of the state to run pictures it considers morally high class and educational.

An Indiana branch of the Anti-Blue Law League of America has been opened in Indianapolis with offices at 540 Consolidated Building. Mark E. Archer is state secretary, and Karl W. Hoffman, Indianapolis secretary. A periodical to be known as Anti-Blue Law Freedom, will be published.

City authorities rented the high school auditorium at South Bend to a syndicate promoting lectures and band concerts on Sunday afternoon. The regular theatrical interests objected. This started a little war which, according to press reports, may result in application of the blue laws. One side is reported to have threatened an injunction suit to block the use of the public building and the other to close up the theatres on Sunday.

Des Moines Notes

Ray Cooper and Slater O'Hara, interested formerly in the Auditorium at Clarinda, sold their holdings and invested in the Orpheum Theatre at Fairfield. This theatre was formerly owned by Mr. Luneman. The Orpheum will show pictures, and it is probable that a vaudeville program will also be billed.

Mr. Alex Frank, the manager of the Rialto and the Waterloo Theatres at Waterloo, is the proud daddy of an eight pound boy.

Mr. Prosser, formerly affiliated with Goldberg of Omaha and manager of the Muse Theatre for three years, has become a salesman for Universal. He will have charge of the southwest territory in Iowa, headquarters, Des Moines.

George Stevenson, who came from St. Louis to work in the shipping department for Famous Players, has shown the pep and after six weeks was promoted to head shipper.

Harry Hunter, manager of the Famous Players exchange is to be transferred to the Washington, D. C. office. He will act as branch manager from that office while A. W. Nichols, formerly salesman in Iowa, will take the managership of the Des Moines exchange.

F. L. Davie, manager of the Universal exchange, made a trip over the territory, returning on Saturday, and reported that conditions looks very favorable.

The Colonial Theatre at Grinnell opened on September 11 with "The Storm" and did the biggest business ever.

Washington Brevities

The first fall meeting of the board of directors of the Crandall Theatre Company, operating Crandall's Metropolitan theatre, was held at the executive offices last Wednesday.

Herbert I. Krause, popular manager of Famous Players-Lasky Paramount exchange, resigned and Mr. Rothman is acting manager at the new home of Paramount in Washington. Mr. Krause leaves here with the full knowledge that he has made the Paramount here one of the strongest cogs in the Famous Players organization.

A fire last week at Proctorville, O., near Huntington, W. Va., wiped out most of the town, including the Masonic opera house, on Monday. The town will have to have a new picture theatre when it rebuilds.

A unique tie-up between a Charleston, W. Va., theatre and the Boys Shop operated by Abe Boiarsky, gave every boy in town a chance to see the Tom Mix picture, "Just Tony," Saturday morning, September 16. All boy patrons of the store were requested to call there, and register for the free tickets admitting them to the theatre.

The Strand theatre there cleverly says "Ford cars at $23.50 would not cause half as big a furore as will Harry Carey in 'The Kick Back,' shown there September 14.

The first local release of the 80th Division Reunion pictures were shown at the Strand.

Norfolk, where Otto Wells makes his headquarters, had circus competition last week for its film theatres. The Granby was showing "Smilin' Through" with a musical prologue, arranged by Arthur A. Penn, introducing Oneida Sullivan Colson as soprano, and with Douglass Crawford, the Granby Concert orchestra organist, rendering Balfe's "Then You'll Remember Me" as an organ overture.

R. C. L. Moncure of the Virginia film censor board was mentioned for a position on the Industrial Commission, but indicates that he wishes to remain as a film censor.

Children's Saturday morning five-cent matinees seem to be the rule of Portsmouth and other Virginia communities. The Tivoli gave a special one-day showing of the Paramount production, "The Shiek," recently.

Florida Chips

The Rivoli theatre, which is located in Ybor City, the Latin portion of Tampa, Fla., is having its weekly programs printed in both Spanish and English. E. J. Walton, the manager, is a hustler and not afraid to spend money, as his having lately installed an $8,000 photo-player proves. Mr. Walton also rigged up an automobile with one of those electric bells piano for his street ballyhoo.

C. D. Cooley, the general manager of the Consolidated Amusement Co., of Tampa, Fla., is going to give his Grand theatre a complete overhauling. Mr. Cooley says that he does not like the chairs in that house, they don't seem as comfortable as they should, and so he is going to pull them all out and put in new ones.

The Victory theatre of Tampa, will open the vaudeville season on October 2. During the winter months the Victory plays Keith vaudeville on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and feature pictures, of the de luxe kind, on the last three days.

The Maceo theatre, which is the only house for Negroes in Tampa, has added Negro Tab Shows to their regular feature program. The Maceo Amusement Company, who own the house, have theatres in St. Petersburg and Ocala also. They have tried out the Tabs in these houses as well and say that their patrons seem to like the added attraction. They say they will continue the Tabs for several weeks yet.

'The "rainy season" is on down here now, and when the bottom drops out of the clouds about show time it spells loss for the showman. Sure would be a poor place for one of those open-work airdomes at this season, but why don't the rain insurance men get busy?

C. D. Cooley put on a minstrel show as an added attraction at his Strand theatre in Tampa. After a song about banana trees, one of the end men said, "There ain't no more banana trees down here now, for Mr. Cooley done used 'em all up making lobby displays at the Victory." Some of these special banana tree displays have been described in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau.

And that reminds me that Mr. Cooley put on "Blood and Sand" at the Victory for a four-day run, and "The Queen of Sheba" at the Strand for the same four days. The houses are but a block apart, the prices advanced in both houses, and still he "stood 'em up" every night in both houses.

Providence, R. I., Notes

"Jewel" Carman, who was formerly an assistant manager of the Shubert-Majestic theatre, has become assistant manager of the Rialto theatre.

Judging from the way the managers of the theatres this week (week of Sept. 27) booked in their shows it looks like Providence is coming back to the single feature bill. The Strand hoped to make a big cleanup with "Manslaughter," the Modern was looking for a tremendous business with "The Eternal Flame," while the Rialto is quite sure of success with "The Storm." The Providence motion picture theatres from indications have been trying to outdo each other in the line of pictures, and for a long while have been giving the public two five-reel features, besides a comedy, a weekly and an educational reel.

Carolina Chatter

The Howard-Wells Amusement Company, controlling all theatres in Wilmington, N. C. have closed the tabloid shows that opened in their Royal Theatre Labor Day and have announced that feature pictures will be shown there at 15 and 20 cents with three changes a week. The Grand Theatre will present the biggest of the specials that can be secured, changing bills twice a week. Feature pictures have been cancelled from the Victoria Theatre which is to be used exclusively in the future for legitimate attractions.

J. T. P. MacDonald, a newcomer in the film business, is now selling the Vitagraph product in the Carolinas out of the Atlanta office.

O. H. Brannon, Eltabran's Carolina salesman out of Charlotte, visited with his brother in Atlanta last week.

W. T. Kennibrew of Southern States Film Company was in Charlotte for a few days last week visiting friends.

L. S. Hollingsworth, assistant manager of Vitagraph in Atlanta is spending his honeymoon in Asheville, N. C. He married an Atlanta girl September second.

H. B. Wells of Newberry, S. C. has returned from a pleasure trip to the West Coast and Canadian Rockies. He is now preparing for a bumper season.

"Jim" McCormick, Select manager in Charlotte, is out in the territory with a print of "Love Is An Awful Thing" for screenings and is also selling the new fall product.

Another exchange manager giving screenings is "Doc" Koch of Goldwyn, who has "Remembrance" in the Carolinas this week.

C. E. Peppiatt of Southern Enterprises Charlotte and Sam MacIntyre of Metro in Atlanta are traveling the Carolina territory this week and are said to be cleaning-up some big contracts.

Fritz Friend, well known salesman in the Carolinas, lost his wife last week. Mrs. Friend's death came unexpectedly, although she has been in ill health for some time.

Herbert C. Wales, lessee of the Victoria Theatre, Wilmington, N. C. has arrived from Charlotte and is now getting acquainted in his new home.

Southwestern News

Saul Harris is again at the helm of the Arkansas Enterprises, Inc., theatres in Little Rock, Ark., consisting of the Gem, Kempner, Crystal, Royal and Capitol theatres. Other officers are Ike Kempner, Little Rock, president, Y. F. Freeman, Atlanta, vice president; C. E. Holcomb, Atlanta, Treasurer; Harris will be the manager and will handle the bookings.

Associated First National announces the appointment of W. E. Callaway as district manager, having supervision over offices in Oklahoma City, Dallas, Texas, Louisville, Charlotte, Atlanta, Mexico and Cuba.

H. J. Bayley, formerly with Vitagraph, has been named as manager at Dallas, Tex.

Announcement has been made that the R. D. Lewis Film Co. of Dallas, Texas, has taken over both the business and the quarters of the Quality Film Company, located at 1810 Main street, Dallas. The quarters will be renovated and decorated before Lewis moves in.

All theatres and moving picture houses in Sherman, Texas, have gone open shop. Scale demanded by the union operators was $35 per week and overtime. Manager H. O. Jones, Washington; H. C. Houston, Gem; C. J. Musselman, Travis; and Billy Batsel, Queen, have been running open shop for more than a year. Eight operators are affected.

Dye Fors & Rogers theatres at Wichita Falls, Texas, are among others in Texas at odds with union operators. The operators walked out last week and have not returned. The Wichita scale has been $40 for 48 hours work. The operators refused a reduction proposed by the managers, and non-union operators were installed. Houses affected are the Empress, Majestic and Olympic. Strand and Gem, opposition houses, remained union.

Pickets were stationed at two neighborhood theaters at Houston, Texas, when the operators had walked out upon failure to get an increase of 10 per cent. The operators were asking for a reinstatement of a scale they had voluntarily cut last year when business began to slump.

During the Dallas, Texas, Palace engagement of Wallace Reid's "Leading Citizen," the Palace management conducted a balloting to determine Dallas' most prominent man, and the choice went to L. B. Remy of the Goldwyn office, who received a plurality of 3185 votes over his nearest competitor. Many other prominent men in Dallas were entered in the contest.

Short Subjects and Serials

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Blue Ribbon Winner Enlist as Canine Actor

WHEN Abe Stern, Vice-President of Century Comedies, returned recently from his annual European trip, he brought back with him a full blooded police dog. Now that the animal has become a bit acclimated, his name has been Americanized to "Cap."

"Cap" is now being trained by Thomas Wade, an animal trainer of note, and will appear in Century Comedies when his education is perfected. The dog should take to acting naturally, as he is the son of "Rolf" who has an international reputation on the other side of the pond. "Cap's" grandsire was a many time blue ribbon winner, and three of his brothers are at the present time in the government employ tracking European criminals to their lair.

Pathe Announces "The Ropin' Fool"

Announcement of Pathe's forthcoming release of two characteristic comedy novelties starring Will Rogers are reported to have been received by exhibitors with great interest.

The two titles announced—"The Ropin' Fool" and "Fruits of Faith"—plainly conveyed to exhibitors' minds, says Pathe, that the screen is shortly to reveal Will Rogers in at least two of the aspects which have established the celebrated comedian of "The Follies" in his unique position on the American stage. "The Ropin' Fool" calls to mind a newspaper article still current throughout the country in which Will Rogers is referred to as "the world's best paid cowboy—$75,000 a year."

New Talent Secured for Baby Peggy Comedies

Baby Peggy, the tiny star of Century Comedies, is again being directed by Alf Goulding, who made "Peg of the Movies." This is the picture in which Peggy plays the part of a little country girl who comes to Hollywood to break into the movies.

Joe Bonner is again supporting Baby Peggy, and after playing with her in "The Little Match Girl."

Abe Stern recently purchased two ring tailed monkeys, trained animals, formerly the property of the Singer Midget vaudeville act, which will be used in Baby Peggy's pictures.

Pathe's Oct. 8 Releases Ready

"Fire Fighters," "Our Gang" and Reel of Snapshots Announced

THE list of releases announced by Pathe for Oct. 8 begins with the two-reel Hal Roach "Our Gang" comedy called "Fire Fighters." This is the second of the new kiddie and animal series, the first of which was "One Terrible Day." In "Fire Fighters" the screen comedy patrons are promised another rich batch of laughs over the irrepressible small boy doings of "Sunshine" Sammy, tiny but tough little Jackie Conlin, miraculously freckled Mickie Daniels and their conspiring four-footed friends, assisted by other capable urchins and several hopelessly out-classed grownups.

"Screen Snapshots" No. 10, presents obviously cordial meetings between Will Hays and a score or more film celebrities in West Coast Studios and at Film Colony occasions.

On Oct. 8, the Pathe serial "The Timber Queen," with Ruth Roland, reaches its thirteenth episode, "The Rim of Eternity."

In the one-reel comedy called

"The Upper Cut" of this release schedule, Paul Parrott, with Jobyna Ralston, is compelled to make good at the manly art, or lose his best girl.

Pathe Review No. 176, presents exquisite Summer landscapes and fields as the ancient Greeks saw them—ruled by the goddess of the season—"An Interpretative Idyll in Motion Photography." There is a series of scenes at the N. J. State Game Farm dealing with pheasants, another series made in China showing the "Djinn Maker," his produce and his eager audience, and another "Novelty in Clay." The Pathecolor section is devoted to the sacred Grotto of Lourdes.

The Harold Lloyd re-issue presents the comedian as the punishment-avoiding hero of "Never Touched Me."

"None but the Brave Deserve the Fair" is the moral of the Aesop Film Fable release for Oct. 8 called "The Fable of the Hated Rivals."

Christie's Schedule Progressing

Many Stars to Appear in Extraordinary Offerings

THE Educational-Christie Comedy program for 1922-23 is already well under way. Two pictures in this series have been released, two more have been delivered to Educational and are being prepared for release in October, the fifth is nearing completion at the Christie Studio, and the sixth has been started. "That Son of a Sheik" which began the new and greater series of Christie Comedies and in which Neal Burns and Viora Daniel poke fun at the deluge of Sheik dramas, has had its first run showing in most big key centers. At the Granada theatre in San Francisco, a prologue was staged, the first time such a thing has ever been done for a comedy in this big theatre.

At the Newman theatre in Kansas City the orchestra which provides music for the big feature pictures was taken off the feature picture and played for the comedy instead.

"Pardon My Glove," the second release of the season, featuring Bobby Vernon and Vera Steadman, in a college and prize fight story, is getting under way in the theatres.

"Let 'Er Run," featuring Dorothy Devore and marking the introduction to Christie Comedies of George Stewart, will be the third release. It will be followed in turn by "Ocean Swells," featuring Neal Burns with Charlotte Merriam, in a story about life on a house-boat. In the supporting cast are Bebe Blackburn, Sylvia Ashton, Don Bailey and Henry Muddock.

Bobby Vernon is working on and has nearly completed "Choose Your Weapons," a Granstarkian satire under the direction of Al Christie. He is supported by Charlotte Stevens as the "Princess," Earl Rodney as "Herman," Maude Truax as "Mrs. Herman" and Lincoln Plummer as the "Prime Minister."

The sixth picture on which work has just been started has not yet been titled.

Dan Mason a "Skipper" in Toonerville Comedy

"The Skipper's Sermon" will be the October release in the series of Toonerville Comedies by Fontaine Fox. It features Dan Mason as the Skipper of the Toonerville Trolley that meets all the trains, an Educational release.

A Record on Short Subjects Claimed by Educational

THE NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE LEAGUE, in the latest issue of its Bulletin, lists "The Speeder," the new Hamilton Comedy, under "Family Films," recommended for people of all ages.

"Toonerville Trials," featuring Dan Mason as the Skipper, is also listed as a "Family Film." Educational may also point to a gratifying report that since the opening of Loew's State Theatre in Newark last December, every comedy that has been shown in this house has been selected from Educational's program of Short Subjects.

For forty-five weeks these have been represented at the State Theatre with a two-reel comedy every week.

These comedies have included fifteen Christie Comedies, five Mermaid Comedies, nine Torchy Comedies, seven Campbell Comedies, six Toonerville Comedies by Fontaine Fox, and three Punch Comedies.

Hallroom Boys Have "New Mama"

"The New Mama" is the second release on the new Hallroom Boys Comedies series.

This is instead of "A Tailor Made Chauffeur," which was previously announced as the second release by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, which is State Righting this series of two-reelers.

Featuring Sid Smith, the redoubtable Percy of the series, "The New Mama" was directed by Al Santell. George Williams is Ferdie. Harry Cohn supervised the production.

Sportsman Praises Century Comedies

At the close of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, Canada, the manager of the Sportsman's Show, C. H. Gibbons, expressed his approval of Century Comedies and wrote their offices a letter expressing his appreciation of the loan of their comedy, "Chums," a print of which was contributed to the show.

Especially did Mr. Gibbons declare in favor of "The Radio Hound," a two-reeler starring "Brownine," the dog, which, according to the showman, scored a decided hit.

Burr Inaugerates Novel Production Plan

R E P O R T S emanating from C. C. Burr's Glendale Studios indicate that big things are being done by Ray McKee, Mary Anderson and Charlie Murray in the production of the new All-Star Comedies, now being made at the rate of one each month under the direction of Gregory LaCava.

What is particularly important is a novel cooperative plan originated by Director LaCava, in which each of the three stars enters into a conference each morning with the director to make a thorough study of those parts of the scenario that are to be "shot" during the day.

A private screening of the first of C. C. Burr's "All-Star Comedies" has been arranged to take place early next week, at which time the trade in general, through the reviewers will be acquainted with the calibre and importance of C. C. Burr's new All-Star series.

Gerson Company Starts Eighth Picture

Director Robert Eddy, with his company of Plum Center Comedians headed by Dan Mason, started work on the eighth of a series of twelve comedies at the Paul Gerson Studios in San Francisco recently.

The new picture deals with a business rivalry between Pop Tuttle and Nosey Nichols, prominent character of Plum Center. Nosey starts up a new bus line in opposition to Pop's old established depot bus, and the conflict and competition that arises furnished the comedy action.

Pop Tuttle, in the hands of Dan Mason, is a lively and virile character and equal to any emergency. Eddie Harris has the part of Nosey Nichols, a character that runs through a number of the Plum Center Comedies, F. B. O.

A. H. Geibler furnished the scenario and continuity, and Roy Vaughan is doing the camera work.

Short Subjects Gaining in Popularity

"Blazes" will be the third subject in the new series of Mermaid Comedies, following "The Steeplechaser," which is to be released by Educational early in October.

The third of the new Jack White Productions will feature Lige Conley and Don Barclay, supported by Elinor Lynn, Jack Lloyd, "Sunshine" Hart and Otto Fries. Like "The Steeplechaser," "Blazes" was directed by Del Lord and Harry Edwards under the supervision of Jack White.

"The First Flivver" will be Educational's third release of Tony Sarg's Almanac. It will be released in October, following "The First Barber" and "The Devilish Dragon."

"Twin Husbands" Released

Second DeHaven Offering on F. B. O. Comedy Schedule

"TWIN HUSBANDS" is the second Carter DeHaven comedy to be released through the Film Booking Offices of America, following "Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen" on the F. B. O. program.

This presents Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven in two reels describing the difficulties of a young man who tries to be himself and his twin brother at the same time. It is said to be filled with novel situations and built around a logical plot.

Carter DeHaven's popularity on the screen was made certain immediately upon the release of "Their First Vacation," which introduced him as an F. B. O. star. This comedy played in the New York Capitol theatre and has been booked for early showings in many of the largest first run houses in the country.

"Twin Husbands" was directed by Mal St. Clair, who is responsible for the first six DeHaven comedies which have already been completed. It is based upon a young newlywed, who, in order to aid an old friend of his wife, poses as her husband, assuming the role of a twin brother to himself. In order to gain an inheritance the young lady must present a husband at a certain hour, and Carter finds plenty of embarrassing moments in being husband to two women at the same time.

Fighters In "Leather Pushers"

Reginald Denny Meets Well Known Pugs in Latest Series of Boxing Episodes

I N D I C A T I O N S of the extent to which Universal is going, in order to make the new edition of "The Leather Pushers" series unique among pictures of the prize ring, are contained in reports from the coast concerning the fights staged for rounds seven and eight of this series.

Ring gatherings comparable only to championship bouts are being held so that Reginald Denny, the star, can swap punches and knock-out blows in the proper settings.

Harry Pollard, who directed the first six rounds and who also is making the last six rounds, caused the construction of a large ring and arena at Universal City. For atmosphere he uses regular fight fans, invited especially from Los Angeles and other coast sporting circles.

Universal says there is little trouble in filling the amphitheatre when Denny is scheduled to fight before the camera. Word of the event is spread around Los Angeles and a horde of "fans," eager to see Denny and some west coast favorite in a stirring mill, hurry to Universal City. Denny himself is a title holder, having captured the championship belt of his brigade in the British Royal Air force during the war. His opponents in "The Leather Pushers" are well known "pugs."

Fox News Plans Celebration

Camera Representatives in Field Third Year of Success Finds 1008

O C T O B E R F O U R T H will be the third anniversary of the organization of Fox News. The history of the several outstanding successes achieved in that brief interval and promising possibilities for the future, which are under exploitation at present, are formulated in a statement issued by the director in chief of the news reel, who says, in part:

"As Fox News enters into the fourth year of its existence, it seems to me appropriate that a survey of its accomplishments, with an outline of the plans that have been made, as well as the prospective pictures that are now being planned, is in order.

"In October, 1919, after a three months' period of organization, Fox News became a part of the program of the hundreds of theatres that had housed Fox features in the past.

"Starting with a complete list of staff cameramen and a goodly number of field representatives, following several campaigns, conducted for the increase of its service, the result is that today, our camera representatives number 1,008. Before an operator is even accepted as a field representative, he must first procure and submit a sample subject to be passed upon.

"New York staff cameramen, highly trained in their selected work, are continually leaving on trips abroad, there to film the wonders, unusual events, novelties and features found in foreign countries. Staff cameramen throughout the globe are continually in touch with their executives. The list is continually being increased, and endeavors are being made to place operators in practically every city of the United States of over 25,000 population and when necessary to train men who are in valuable territory who have not as yet taken up the moving picture idea, to become efficient cameramen and members of this staff.

"The pleasure of increased efficiency, more good subjects, more features and exclusives and a continued devotion to work are being received daily from our representatives throughout the world.

Charles Urban Returns From Europe

C H A R L E S U R B A N, president of the Urban Motion Picture Industries, will return to New York next Saturday (Sept. 30) after a six-weeks' business trip to Europe.

This crossing will complete his eightieth round trip across the Atlantic since his first sailing in 1896. Then he went to London on a three months' trial trip as resident manager for the organization which at that time was distributing Edison films. That three months' trial trip developed into a stay of more than 20 years; a period which developed him as the biggest motion picture man in all Europe and among the foremost producers of educational films in the world.

In 1917 Mr. Urban transferred his headquarters to New York. Recently the organization of which he is president built Urban Institute at Irvington-on-Hudson, where all his projects are now housed under one roof.

Three New Ones for Federated

The second Federated Film Exchange release in which Joe Rock stars, supported by a selected cast and Billie Rhodes, is ready for the market. It is a two reel comedy entitled "Aladdin."

Ben Wilson has completed the second comedy of the series which he is producing for Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., in which Eddie Barry appears as the poor unfortunate who is penniless and is found in many amusing situations vainly trying to collect a life insurance policy without cashing in his life. "Money or My Life" is the title of this production.

Under the direction of Ben Wilson, Monty Banks has completed the second of the series of two reel comedies which he is making for Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., the title of the production being "Love Taps," Monty appearing as the pugilistic lover.

Good Comedy Always Welcome, Opines Century Executive

A B E S T E R N, Vice-President of the Century Comedies, and director of that company's studio activities, offered sound theory regarding the universality of the comedy subject.

"I am optimistic enough to firmly believe," says M. Stern, "that the comedy subject is acceptable to all of the public all of the time. In times of depression, the public wishes to be cheered up. In periods of prosperity, it welcomes a chance to reflect that condition of mind. I only know one human being who really doesn't enjoy a good, clean comedy, but as he is the same pessimist who first hit upon the idea of wearing both suspenders and a belt, I guess he deserves neither your sympathy nor my censure."

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"Twin Husbands"

(Carter De Haven Comedy—F. B. O.—Two Reels)

HERE is an amusing little story telling a tale of domestic troubles as they develop around a pair of newlyweds. In fact there are two couples who have listened to the parson and answered his questions in the affirmative. It is quite complicated but so definite in outline that a moron could follow it. One of the brides is on her way to introduce her hubby to her father, while the other is journeying home to collect an inheritance left by her dad.

Here is where the trouble starts, for the wife provides that she shall have a husband and that the two shall spend their honeymoon in the old homestead. What do you think follows? Certainly you can guess the substitution. The scene reveals that the husband of the heiress is missing, which complicates matters so much that the other hubby doubles for him. It gets real involved when you consider that his father-in-law happens to be the lawyer in charge of his wife's inheritance. So he finds a way out by doubling as twins. And this calls for some dextrous footwork on Carter's part to appear in two places at one and the same time.

The hokum piles up, but a happy ending is in sight for all concerned—even for the program of your house, provided you run the comedy. The piece travels right along, kicking up considerable pep and high jinks.—LAWRENCE REID.

"Wonderful Water"

(Prizma—1 Reel)

SHOWS the sculpturing power of water as liquid gas and solid. Based on a lecture by Mr. George H. Sherwood, of the American Museum of Natural History, entitled, "The Wonderful Work of Water." Includes remarkable scenes from Borneo, Alaskan Icefields, and other parts of the world. Includes new scenes of Yosemite Falls, Vernal Falls and Niagara.

"Bird Dogs Afield"

(Prizma—1 Reel)

A NEW dog picture, showing pointer and setters, made with the co-operation of the English Setter Club of America. Shows how thoroughbred bird dogs are trained for the field, bench and show. Includes actual training in the field with remarkable close-ups of a setter on point and other scenes illustrating the unusual intelligence of thoroughbred dogs.

"The Village Sheik"

Fox—Two Reels

HERE'S a funny one, surely! Al St. John does the Sheikin', and while the title really hasn't a jot of bearing on the film, the audience forgets that in an instant and holds on frantically to the seats in an effort to keep from rolling on the floor. There is a fault; perhaps the film is somewhat too long. It appears that in the last half reel the interest lags, as if funny ideas had been used up or maybe as if the audience had grown satiated with laughter. But the early part of the picture makes one of the best series of mirth-producing incidents strung together for some time. Likewise there are particularly clever subtitles.—STUART GIBSON.

Scene from "The Young Diana" starring Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan-Paramount production

"The Radio Hound"

(Century—Two Reels)

HERE is one that will delight the young folk, amuse adults and interest radio fans of all ages. The star is "Brownie," a dog, but Johnny Fox and Jackie Morgan make the situations likely and possible to show "Brownie" off to advantage.

The boys are spending their vacation on the farm of their hard-hearted Uncle, who is a radio enthusiast, with a dislike for dogs and children. Naturally, their pranks irritate him, especially when "listening in" on his radio apparatus, he hears the boys instructing "Brownie" to "swipe some pies" off the kitchen window-sill. Uncle starts out to punish the boys, but finds that it is more difficult to catch them than he expected, especially since "Brownie" seems to have human intelligence in preventing the grown man from getting near enough his pals to do them harm.

After the first reel, the "radio" is second in interest. The boys and the dog find new friends, who join in their fun, with the result that the vacation is a success after all. A satisfactory, well constructed comedy of its kind, the boys and the dog winning new laurels as young comedians and actors.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Fresh Fish"

(Educational—Two Reels)

A NIMATED cartoon, with direct appeal to children, who is all about a youthful aspirant to become a motion picture camera man and puts his toy camera into use by making a picture with an imaginary master and a faithful "Fido." They go on a fishing trip, but in the middle of the activities, the producer runs out of film, so while he is filling his camera, the imaginary characters devise their own way of making the scenery realistic. There are a few laughs in the sub-titles and it is a reel of considerable "pep."—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Impi"

(Prizma—1 Reel)

A NOTHER exclusive picture of native warriors of South African tribes secured by Prizma's South African Expedition. Shows training, drilling and actual fighting by native regiments, how native equipment is made and many of the strange methods of "The Impi"—the native regiment of the Swazis.

"Starland Revue No. II"

(F. B. O.—One Reel)

JAMES WATTS, a more or less gifted female impersonator opens this latest Starland Revue. If you were in New York and saw "Spice of 1922" you doubtless remember his portrayal of the modern girl. Watts makes his exit—to be followed by Taps, the talented child drummer of the "Pin Wheel Revue," an attraction which featured novel acts. Hamtree Harrington, a colored comedian comes forth to do an imitation of Bert Williams' famous poker hand. Ham looks as if he might have stepped out of a story by Octavus Roy Cohen. He burlesques the bit and gets away with it with all the picturesqueness of his race.

Gentlemen, we next invite you on a journey to Coney Island, where you may experience the sensation of "shooting the chutes." This calls for some tricky camera-work for the boats are propelled back to their starting point with all possible speed. Ted Lewis, the jazz leader who makes the clarinet talk, is introduced. Unfortunately we are unable to hear his crooning tunes. We will have to wait for the talking and singing movies. The conclusion introduces us to the cast of the Theatre Guild production, "He Who Gets Slapped."

If you know your New York attractions and follow them, you will like these numbers. At least your patrons can see them without paying the carfare to reach the town of the big lights.—LAWRENCE REID.

"The Steeplechase"

(Educational—Two Reels)

WHILE this will appeal to the followers of what is known as "low comedy," it will hardly do better than pass as a "slap-stick" of the variety that bore rather than amuse the better class of patrons. There is a good cast, some splendid exterior views, and above the ordinary photography, but the comedy is absent except that which is forced by unnatural and far-fetched situations. There is considerable worth-while material wasted, seemingly due to carelessness in having the humorous situations worked out before starting to take the scenes. The second reel improves upon the first to some extent, but not sufficiently to recommend the two reels as a comedy sure to get laughs. It would seem that it aims at travesty upon plays which hinged upon a plot wherein the race horse, the jockey and the crooked make-believe nobleman played prominent parts.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Castaway"

(Bruce Scenic—One Reel)

EXQUISITE photography of even more exquisite scenes on the coast of a desert island and on the deck of a ship in heavy weather mark this little production as one of the loveliest scenic novelties produced for some time. Each of these Bruce pictures really is a whole Burton Holmes travelogue in itself and their brevity prevents them ever from even leaving the impression of the monotony of beauty. One never sees enough to cause a jumbling of impressions afterward, and these views stick in the mind when sometimes feature photoplays and more elaborate attempts at novelties fade.—STUART GIBSON.

Longfellow Epic To Be Ray's Greatest

CHARLES RAY'S determination to film "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and make the famous Longfellow epic the high water mark in his artistic career, rather sharply marks his transition from the mere "movie" material to which until recently he devoted his talents, to the higher planes of subject and character.

Believing that time and thought are what make superior pictures, Ray has announced that under his contract with United Artists he will make but two productions a year, expending not less than $300,000 on each. He spent this much on his recently released United Artists production, "A Tailor Made Man."

Two Leading Men for Viola Dana

Viola Dana is a very fortunate young woman. In "Miss Emmy Lou," her new Metro picture, she is going to have two handsome leading men. Both John Bowers and Allan Forrest have been engaged for leading parts in this story, written especially for Miss Dana by Bernard McConville. Harry Beaumont is directing it.

Mr. Bowers has just recently completed enacting the title role in the Metro-SL production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer." He returned to Hollywood from location in Northern Washington in advance of the other members of this company in order to play with Miss Dana in "Miss Emmy Lou."

Mr. Forrest has appeared in several Metro Pictures during the past year. He was Miss Dana's leading man in "Seeing's Believing," one of her recent releases.

Theda Bara Story Is Near Selection

The selection of a story for the Theda Bara production which is to be made by the Selznick Company under the personal supervision of David O. Selznick has been narrowed down to one of two or three of the scores of offerings which have been examined.

The selection of a director for the picture has also been given a great deal of attention and the announcement of a big name in this connection is expected within the next few days.

As has been previously announced the Bara picture is to be made in New York City. Actual production work will begin within the next four weeks.

"Under Two Flags" at Strand

Priscilla Dean Lauded As "Cigarette" In Browning's Universal Picture

"UNDER TWO FLAGS," Priscilla Dean's latest Universal-Jewel production, had its New York premiere last Sunday at the Mark-Strand theatre. Crowded houses hailed the Broadway advent of the new film and acclaimed it Miss Dean's greatest vehicle. The picture was adapted from Ouida's classic novel, and was directed by Tod Browning, creator of many Dean successes.

Manager Joseph Plunkett of the Strand added an elaborate presentation to the showing, including a colorful prologue. He used twenty-four presons in the prologue cast.

Newspaper critics who saw the opening of the new Universal-Jewel picture, gave due credit to its bigness and to Miss Dean's interpretation of the colorful Ouida role.

"Two of our greatest favorites are at the Strand this week," wrote Don Allen in the Evening World. "One is 'Under Two Flags,' and the other is Priscilla Dean. We are glad to greet both."

The Evening Telegram reviewer wrote as follows:

"Ouida's most famous novel, 'Under Two Flags,' makes a marvelous, vivid motion picture drama, which is now at the Strand theatre, with Miss Priscilla Dean in the role of Cigarette, which once served Miss Blanche Bates and other famous actresses on the speaking stage."

Miss Harriette Underhill, reviewing the picture for the New York Tribune, said:

"We have seen many Priscilla Dean pictures but in our opinion Cigarette is the best thing Miss Dean has ever done on the screen."

Pola Negri Will Have Strong Support

PARAMOUNT evidently is leaving nothing undone to make Pola Negri's first American picture, "Bella Donna," which George Fitzmaurice is to start soon at the Lasky studio, a production worthy of the talents and prestige of the famous Polish star.

Close upon the announcement that Conrad Nagel will have the leading role opposite the star, comes word that Conway Tearle and Claude King have been cast for two of the most important characters in the Robert Hichens story. Mr. Tearle will have the picturesque role of Baroudi, the Arab, with whom Bella Donna becomes so infatuated that she attempts to kill her husband by slow poisoning, while Mr. King will portray the physician-friend who discovers the plot and convinces the husband of his wife's perfidy.

"More to Be Pitied" Scores

C.B.C. Registers Success at Opening of Run at Broadway Theatre

"MORE TO BE PITIED" established itself a success when it went over with a bang and registered a hit at the New York premiere run at the Broadway Theatre, New York, during all of this week, says C. B. C. Sales Corporation.

Big premiers are being given this first of the C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation series and in every territory it is going into the best theatres, establishing thereby records for an independent picture, according to the C.B.C. offices. A few of the big openings on it are being given at the Victoria Theatre, Altoona; the Rialto Theatre in Des Moines; the Boston Theatre in Boston, and many first runs throughout New England. Apollo Exchange, which handles Greater New York rights, has tied up some of the finest bookings through New York and vicinity, it is stated.

May Tinee, film reviewer of the Chicago Tribune, found great merit in "More To Be Pitied" and praised it highly.

Big first run exploitation is being given this feature in every territory. Exchanges handling it are more than enthusiastic. Jack Cohn, who was in Boston this week, reports great enthusiasm on it there and quotes one exhibitor as saying:

"I can make more money on an Independent feature of this kind—gripping, intense, with an excellent cast than on any program picture I have played in a long while."

Exhibitors throughout the country, on the strength of the way "More To Be Pitied" is going over, are already tying up for dates on the entire series of the six pictures, and are asking exactly when they can secure the second feature "Only a Shopgirl," on which a remarkable cast including Estelle Taylor, Richard Dix, Wallace Beery, Mae Busch, Tully Marshall, Claire Dubrey, Willard Louis, Josephine Adair, and Billy Scott has just been announced.

"The Christian" Shows Real Race Scenes

If you can't get to Tijuana, Pimlico or Churchill Downs, you might look over the Goldwyn production of "The Christian."

In it you will see an exciting horserace on one of the most famous old tracks in the world, Epsom Downs near London, England, on Derby Day. You will notice several things in contrast to American customs: Epsom is a turf track, for one thing, and bookmakers ply their trade openly instead of secretly.

You will see Richard Dix, in the title role, exhorting (in vain) the heedless pleasure-seekers to turn from their worldly ways. You will see racing where it is, truly, the "sport of kings" with a king's horse among the starters, and you will see an English holiday crowd at its favorite pastime.

Maurice Tourneur is directing, and the cast includes besides Mr. Dix and Miss Busch, Phyllis Haver, Gareth Hughes, Claude Gillingwater, Mahlon Hamilton and others as well known.

French Exhibitors Await Pyramid Picture

Word has been received from Guilleme Fervier, French representative of the American Releasing Corporation, from Paris, France, that the French exhibitors and fans are awaiting the receipt there of the prints of the Ray C. Smallwood production of the "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," for Pyramid Pictures, Inc.

Owing to an active advance publicity campaign by Pyramid, the foreign rights of "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" have called for considerably more than the usual amount of exhibitor attention. Mr. Fervier is authority for the statement that few American productions have caused so much keen anticipation as has the Paul M. Potter story upon which the musical comedy of the same name was based.

Changed Title Explained by Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg, producer of "Shadows" from the story "Ching, Ching, Chinaman" explains why he decided to change the title of the picture which uses as its basis a story read by some 2,000,000 readers of the Pictorial Review. He says:

"We decided on 'Shadows' because it incorporates the suggestion of mystery which is the keynote of the plot. I am confident that in our faithful interpretation of Wilbur Daniel Steele's story we have retained its finest element. I feel that by changing the title we are aiding exhibitors in conveying to their patrons just what the true nature of the picture is."

Cast Announced for Three New Christie Comedies

DOROTHY DEVORE is featured in Al Christie's "Let 'Er Run," his third picture of the new season which includes a comedy horse-race. George Stewart plays the leading supporting role while another important part is played by Lincoln Plumer who was prominent in the cast of "That Son of a Sheik."

Neal Burns will be featured in "Ocean Swells," Christie's four picture. This has been assigned to Scott Sidney's direction. Charlotte Merriam, who played leads in Christie Comedies some time ago, has been re-engaged to play the lead in this comedy of house-boating. Sylvia Ashton was borrowed from the Famous-Players Lasky studios for the "Mother" role, while Bebe Blackburn, a child prodigy of three-and-a-half years, has been engaged for some sensational diving and swimming.

Bobby Vernon is the featured player in "Choose Your Weapons," a Graustarkian satire. Charlotte Stevens has been assigned to the Princess role, and Lincoln Plumer to that of Prime Minister Zenda, the Chief Fixer of the mythical kingdom. Earl Rodney plays the comedy role of the King, who used to be in the delicatessen business, all released via Educational.

Lowe Joins "The White Flower" Cast

Edmund Lowe, noted Broadway leading man, was engaged by wire to play the male lead opposite Betty Compson in "The White Flower," a new Paramount picture which will mark the return of Mrs. Julia Crawford Ivers to the ranks of women directors.

Lowe accepted the contract by telegraph in New York and had only sufficient time to pack and catch a transcontinental train connecting with the Steamship Wilhelmina, en route for Honolulu. For "The White Flower" is to be made in and around Honolulu, "On the Beach at Waikiki" and at the brink of the volcano, Kilauea.

Others in the cast include Edward Martindel, Arline Pretty, Sylvia Ashton, Arthur Hoyt, Leon Barry and Lily Phillips.

South America Sold on Goldwyn Product

Goldwyn's foreign department has just entered into a contract with the export department of the New York Film Exchange for the handling of its sixth year product—the season of 1922-1923—for the greater part of South America.

The countries in which the New York Film Exchange will control the distribution of Goldwyn's "big twenty" photoplays for the new season are: Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia.

Among the pictures covered by this contract are "Remembrance," John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes," "Hungry Hearts," "The Sin Flood," "The Bitterness of Sweet," "Brothers under the Skin," "Gimme," "A Blind Bargain," "Broken Chains," "The Christian," "Passions of the Sea,"

"Nero" Repeating N.Y. Success

Fox Super-Feature Is Confirming Reputation Established on Broadway

"NERO," the William Fox super-feature which is now being shown in the leading theatres of the country after a long engagement at the Lyric Theatre, New York, is confirming the reputation it made on Broadway, where press and public pronounced it the finest historical picture ever produced, according to the Fox offices.

As the first move in securing this high position for the screen drama the Fox organization decided to have it made in the Eternal City itself, and to obtain the services of the best foreign actors. A glance at the program shows that the cast is largely made up of Italian artists, the best known name on the list being that of Alexander Salvini, grandson of the great Italian tragedian who toured this country forty years ago and was regarded as the foremost "Othello" of his time.

J. Gordon Edwards, the celebrated director who had charge of the making of "Nero," took full advantage of his opportunity, and, wherever possible, used the actual locations referred to in the story. Nero's palace, which was built expressly for the picture, is an imposing example of ancient Roman architecture that looks as if it was inspired by the painting of some famous artist. There are other stately structures all through the feature.

The outstanding scenic effect is the burning of Rome. This historical blaze has been reproduced in a wonderfully realistic manner, the size of the mob of frightened inhabitants being the largest ever used for the screen, it is claimed. The scene where the wicked emperor, who gave orders for the conflagration, stands upon a balcony of his palace and gloats over the destruction of the doomed city, puts the finishing touch upon the horror of the situation.

Editors Invite Picture Showing

Southern California Association Sees "Remembrance" Goldwyn Special

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has just received a telegram from its studios in Culver City, Cal., that a signal honor has been paid to its first release for the season, the new Rupert Hughes photoplay, "Remembrance."

The Southern California Editorial Association, consisting of editors of 300 newspapers in that section of the country, asked that the picture be shown to them after their banquet on Monday night last at Los Angeles. Their recollection of Mr. Hughes' former super-feature, "The Old Nest," was responsible for their petition to be allowed to see "Remembrance" in advance of its release date.

The author of the film was invited to attend the banquet and address the assembled editors. After the screening, Mr. Hughes was the recipient of congratulations on all hands for the delightful humor and the realistic humanness of his new picture, which many predicted would rival "The Old Nest" in popularity.

"Remembrance" was shown in preview at the studios on the following Tuesday night to the press representatives of Los Angeles, who were as enthusiastic in praise of the film as the editors had been the previous evening. Before the screening dinner was served to sixty of the various film and theatrical publicity agents in and about Los Angeles.

"Remembrance" is receiving its first screening this week at the California theatre, Los Angeles, and beginning next Sunday, Oct. 1, it will be shown for a week at the Capitol theatre, New York. Its national release date is Sunday, Oct. 8.

Philly Officials See Police Picture

"IN the Name of the Law," the F. B. O. police picture received a fine official send-off in Philadelphia on Sunday, Sept. 24th, when it was privately presented at the Stanley Company's Victoria Theatre, to Mayor J. Hampton Moore, Director of Public Safety James B. Cortelyou, Chief of Police William B. Mills, the heads of the various city departments and the entire Police Force of the city of Philadelphia.

Admission to the private showing was by special invitation personally issued by the Director of Public Safety, to a list of guests made up entirely by Mr. Cortelyou himself.

Bull Montana Finishes "A Punctured Prince"

Bull Montana has completed "A Punctured Prince," the second of a series of screen comedies, produced by Hunt Stromberg and distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. The first production of the series, "A Ladies' Man," is now being shown in leading motion picture theatres.

"A Punctured Prince" is an original story by Hunt Stromberg, and in it the star is seen as a successful chef in a "short-order" restaurant. After a succession of humorous events, the erstwhile food-preparer finds himself ascended to a position enabling him to rub elbows with royalty.

In support of Montana are many comedy players of prominence, among them being Maryon Aye, Harry Lamont, Eugene Burr and Helen Broneau.

"Prisoner of Zenda" Opens Eastman

Ten thousand persons crowded Rochester's new Eastman Theatre on the first day this unique, university-owned theatre was thrown open to the public. Although the doors remained closed until one o'clock in the afternoon, crowds began to gather in front of the theatre's box office as early as nine o'clock in the morning. The throngs that tied up traffic on Main and Gibb streets were all eager to witness the first presentation in Rochester of Rex Ingram's production of the world's most famous romance, "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Anthony Hope.

Exhibitor Lauds Ray's "Tailor Made Man"

W. H. Kemble, manager of the Empire theatre, Long Beach, Calif., a city of 100,000 who made the second showing in the country of Charles Ray's first United Artists production, "A Tailor Made Man," has written to Mr. Ray as follows:

"While it was necessary for me to pay a rental for 'A Tailor Made Man' far in excess of what I ever paid for any of your previous pictures, nevertheless in the same proportion it is proving a bigger box-office attraction than any other. We opened Monday night turning away hundreds of your admirers."

"Prisoner of Zenda" Praised

Exhibitors Wire Congratulations to Ingram and Metro Corporation

SUBSTANTIATING the tremendous impression registered by the first public showing of the Rex Ingram production for Metro of "The Prisoner of Zenda," which took place on July 31 at the Astor theatre, New York, come expressions of congratulations to Mr. Ingram and to Metro Pictures Corporation from exhibitors throughout the country, wherever pre-release showings of the photoplay have been held, according to word from the Metro office.

The enthusiasm of the showmen for the new triumph of the young director of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Turn to the Right," "The Conquering Power" and other notable productions, is indication that they share the opinion of the producers that "The Prisoner of Zenda" is certain to become a phenomenal success.

An example of the reception which the photoplay is receiving is expressed to Metro in a telegram from P. F. Schwie, general manager of the Duluth, Minn., Theatre Company, where an advance showing of the play is now taking place. "We expected much and got even more," says Mr. Schwie. His telegram to E. M. Saunders, general sales manager for Metro, reads as follows:

"I wish to add our voice to the chorus of praise which is going up everywhere for Metro's new Rex Ingram production. 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' We expected much and got even more from this picture, which is worthy in every way of the creator and distributors of the 'Four Horsemen.' There may be better adventure romances than 'The Prisoner of Zenda' but they surely are difficult to think of with this perfect screening of Anthony Hope's novel at hand."

Associated Release Has Thrills

Stirring Adventures of Johnsons in

THE current release of Associated Exhibitors is "Head Hunters of the South Seas," scheduled for October 1st. This is a five part attraction depicting Martin Johnson's thrilling adventures among the wild tribes of Malekula, an island in the South Seas. Two years ago, Martin Johnson and his wife were captured by cannibals at Malekula, but escaped and returned some time later, attracted by the opportunities for remarkable adventure pictures offered there.

On the way to and returning from Malekula on their second trip, the Johnsons are said to have met with many thrilling experiences, and have pictured in a fascinating manner the customs and habits of the wild tribes of man-eating savages. Even nature performed for them, permitting them to photograph an earthquake and an erupting volcano. They also secured some remarkable shark pictures, as well as photographing for the first time a strange tribe of people who lived in trees, climbing aloft with the dexterity of monkeys.

Particularly interesting are said to be other shots of the Head Hunters of Malekula, revealing in detail the life of the fiercest and cruellest man-eating savages in the world.

Associated Exhibitors states that a special array of posters and accessories has been prepared for this attraction as well as a campaign book which includes in its suggestions several methods of cooperative advertising and commercial tie-ups of practical worth to theatres.

George Arliss Picture Wins Praise

"If you show high-class pictures, don't fail to give your patrons George Arliss in 'Disraeli.' They will thank you for it," says Thomas L. Haynes, proprietor of the Town Hall theatre, Old Lyme, Conn., after playing this United Artists release.

"George Arliss is the greatest dramatic actor before the screen today. Book 'Disraeli' and you will not regret it. It is a picture that will stand a raise and you will draw the best class in town."

Henley in East to See Play He Is to Film

Hobart Henley, Universal director, has just been brought east by the company to see the stage play, "Up the Ladder," now playing in Philadelphia, which he is to film.

Feeling that the Owen Davis play, "Up the Ladder," lends itself particularly well to direct translation to the screen, it was deemed advisable to have Henley see it in its original form. It is to serve as the first starring vehicle of Virginia Valli.

"Passions of the Sea" Being Edited

DIRECTOR R. A. WALSH this week finished photography on Goldwyn's first Carey Wilson photoplay, "Passions of the Sea," formerly known as "Captain Blackbird." All of the scenes for this South Sea romance were photographed in Tahiti with the exception of a few interiors which were filmed at the studios after the return of the company.

Director Walsh is now engaged in editing and titling the picture with the assistance of the author, a member of Goldwyn's editorial staff. It will soon receive its initial complete showing for production officials at the studios.

"Sherlock Holmes" to Open New House

"Sherlock Holmes," the Goldwyn picture starring John Barrymore will be the opening attraction at the New Princess theatre in Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands. It will begin a pre-release showing at that new million-dollar theatre on Tuesday, October 26.

James R. Grainger, personal representative of F. J. Godsol, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who is now making a tour of the Goldwyn exchanges, arranged for the Honolulu booking of "Sherlock Holmes" when he was in San Francisco recently.

Fitzmaurice Finishes "Kick In"

"Kick In," George Fitzmaurice's production for Paramount Pictures, has been completed and it is believed that this will prove one of the most exciting modern crook dramas of the year.

Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and May McAvoy are featured in this picture, which was adapted by Ouida Bergere from Willard Mack's stage play. Meanwhile, George Fitzmaurice is preparing for his next production, "Bella Donna," in which the Polish actress, Pola Negri, will be starred.

Stars Join Universal Picture Cast

June Elvidge, stage and screen celebrity, and David Torrence, New York character star, have been added to the cast of "Forsaking All Others," being filmed at Universal City as an all-star special production.

Colleen Moore, Cullen Landis, May Wallace and Sam DeGrasse have other big parts in Universal's adaptation of Mary Lerner's story, which appeared originally in Collier's and was a sensation in the literary world.

Emile Chautard is directing the production.

New Leading Woman for Rawlinson

Claire Adams, leading woman of many high class western features of the Hamptons and other producers, has been signed by Universal to play the feminine lead opposite Herbert Rawlinson in "The Kidnappers," a picture which has just been started at Universal City under Stuart Paton's direction.

"The Kidnapper" is one of the "Scarlet Car" stories by Richard Harding Davis and was prepared for the screen by George Randolph Chester, of "Wallingford" fame.

"Dusk to Dawn" Booked by Loew Circuit

"Dusk to Dawn," the Associated Exhibitors feature starring Florence Vidor, which recently played a big week at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, has been booked for the entire circuit of Marcus Loew theatres in Greater New York.

Lester W. Adler, in charge of the New-York exchange of Associated, conducted the negotiations with the booking department of Loew's enterprises.

Powers Returns to N. Y. Office

F. B. O. Managing Director Lines Up Splendid Product for Future Release

T. A. POWERS, managing director of the Film Booking Offices of America, returned this week to the F. B. O. Home Office in New York after several months spent in supervising the production activities of F. B. O. units at the big R-C Studios in Los Angeles. Powers having lined up an excellent array of future product for F. B. O. release, will remain for the present in New York to watch the work of his sales organization.

Powers left three producing organizations hard at work at the Coast studio. Harry Carey, having completed his second F. B. O. release "Good Men and True" is now well under way with "The One Man," adapted from the story "When a Woman Wills," by Elizabeth DeJeans, which appeared originally in the Blue Book Magazine. Carey's supporting cast includes Vola Vale and Cullen Landis. "The One Man" is directed by Val Paul.

Johnnie Walker has half completed his second starring picture "Captain Fly-By-Night." Walker appears in the picturesque role of a gentleman adventurer, and is supported by Shannon Day, Victory Bateman, Francis McDonald, Eddie Gribbon and Ashley Cooper. William K. Howard is directing.

Under the direction of Chester Bennett, Jane Novak is completing her third F. B. O. release, "Thelma." This screen adaption of Marie Corelli's famous novel is said to be the most pretentious production of Miss Novak's career.

Larry Semon's Latest Unique Vitagraph Comedian Claims Picture Most Successful in Whole Career

"THE SLEUTH" Larry Semon's latest comedy is said, by those who have seen it, to be among the best of the output in the comedian's long and successful career. It is a story of the unexpected, with everything occurring but the one thing for which the spectator is looking and by the time that happens, it carries a surprise for the audience is then expecting something else.

This idea was accomplished after considerable study and deliberation on the part of Semon, although it has been his aim to produce a comedy of this sort for some time. However, months of experimental work was required before the thing could be accomplished.

The difficulty was mastering the psychology of the audience and a print was projected before a typical audience to note the effect, which brought about a few necessary changes. Larry found that in two or three places the audience anticipated the action. These were eliminated, with the result that it is said to be practically impossible to anticipate the action from one scene to another.

Among the costly sets built for this two-reel production is one representing the interior of a cafe across the Mexican Border.

Lucille Carlisle is the leading woman and the supporting cast employs Oliver Hardy, Al Thompson and other favorites of the Semon organization.

Texas Joins Universal Publicity Staff

Paul Wakefield, prominent Texas newspaper man, and dramatic critic, has been engaged as the publicity manager in Texas for Universal. He will have his headquarters in Dallas, in the offices of the Consolidated Film & Supply Company, Southern distributors of the Universal product. Wakefield's services were obtained by Ned E. Depinet, general manager of the consolidation.

"Rich Men's Wives" Is Booked in Philly

In what is considered one of the hardest towns in the country for an independent to break in, B. P. Schulberg's "Rich Men's Wives" has secured an immediate booking date. The city is Philadelphia and the theatre the Aldine. Ben Amsterdam, Lichtman franchise holder in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey has closed the deal with the Stanley Company of America for a week's run beginning September 25.

Novel Cafe Built For "The Lonely Road"

The Cafe of the Deep, a dance palace unique for its beautiful mural decorations, the character of its patronage and the fact that the clink of a cash register never marred the pleasure of its guests, came into being at Los Angeles a few days ago, sparkled for one brilliant assemblage and then closed its doors forever.

The luxurious resort was designed, erected, used for a day, and dismantled under the supervision of Victor Schertzinger for Katherine MacDonald's latest picture for First National, "The Lonely Road." When B. F. P. Schulberg, head of Preferred Pictures, Inc., undertook the filming of the Charles Logus story he sent for Hernando G. Villa, artist, architect and designer, and told him of the necessity for building the unique cafe.

Hollywood Picture Is Going Well

"Night Life in Hollywood," the Arrow special which has just started its career, is slated for a tremendous success, if its two preliminary engagements may be accepted as a standard, according to word from Arrow.

When the picture was given its premier presentation at Woods theatre, Atlantic City, during the week of September 10th, it achieved results which were entirely satisfactory, playing to more than capacity audiences during the entire week, with packed houses every afternoon and evening.

That the picture would repeat its triumph at H. C. (Doc) Horater's Alhambra theatre was a foregone conclusion. After the opening day Mr. Horater wired as follows to Dr. Shallenberger:

"'Night Life in Hollywood' opened to biggest business since 'Ten Nights' last Easter. Held them out from 7 o'clock until closing."

Feist Books Singers with Picture

Leo Feist Inc., have arranged a special advertising campaign through their Canadian office, of their latest fox-trot ballad, "Human Hearts," written by Milt Hagen and Victor Nurnberg, with a special arrangement by Paul Specht.

Feist will furnish singers who will travel with the Universal Photo-play "Human Hearts" and will render the song wherever the picture is exhibited in the Dominion.

Featured Players Meet After Ten Years

Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone, who with Kathlyn Williams and Harrison Ford are featured in the new production just being started by William de Mille for Paramount, are playing together for the first time in ten years. The previous occurrence took place when Miss Daniels was a child actress. She played the part of Little Hal with Mr. Stone at the old Belasco Theatre, Los Angeles, in that player's production of the famous old success, "The Squaw Man."

Metro Closes Large Foreign Deal

METRO Pictures Corporation closed this week a contract with Chipman, Ltd., whereby this firm will have distributive rights for Metro releases in Cuba, Porto Rico, San Domingo, Haiti, Trinidad, the Windward Islands and British Guiana for two years.

This is the largest contract ever closed for this Caribbean territory, according to an assertion this week by Harry J. Cohen, foreign manager of Metro, who was actively instrumental in the consummation of negotiations, and who made the result public.

While no information was forthcoming either from Mr. Cohen or from Roy Chandler, representing Chipman, Ltd., some idea of the magnitude of the amount involved may be estimated from the figures for the rights in Porto Rico alone. The Porto Rico Times said: "The deal is said to involve a matter of $150,000, and it insures, for this island, the early presentation of such famous film stories as 'Fascination,' 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' 'Forget-Me-Not,' Clara Kimball Young's latest productions and Rex Ingram's 'Trifling Women,' and many still in the making."

"Jacqueline" to Have Strong Cast

Dell Henderson, who has begun work on "Jacqueline," a James Oliver Curwood story to be released by Arrow as one of their fall specials, has assembled an unusual cast for the production.

Heading the all-artist aggregation is Lew Cody, fresh from his triumphs in "The Valley of Silent Men."

The ingenue lead is Marguerite Courtot. Paul Penzer, one of the real veterans of the screen, has also been engaged by Director Henderson for an important role. Sheldon Lewis and Kate Bruce are important members of this unusual aggregation.

Louisville Puts Over Arrow Month

Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville is assisting materially in putting "Arrow Month" across in a big way. They have made a special drive on the various Arrow subjects which they control in Kentucky and Tennessee and results have been highly gratifying. According to a letter just received at the home office of Arrow from E. K. Rice, sales manager of the Big Feature Rights, they have done an infinite amount of business on Arrow pictures thus far and expect to roll up a tremendous total in the remaining days of the month.

"Hearts Aflame" Is Completed

Reginald Barker Finishes Picture After Three Months Production Work

AFTER three months of actual production work, Reginald Barker has completed the making of "Hearts Aflame" as his first all-star special for Louis B. Mayer. In order to secure the proper atmospheric background for the big timber country scenes, a large part of the picture was filmed in Canada where the director and his staff and some of the principals were trapped in a forest fire in their efforts to secure some realistic shots in the conflagration.

Upon the company's return from the north, a pine forest covering six acres of ground was transplanted in the San Fernando valley for the special purpose of being sacrificed in a terrific blaze while Anna Q. Nilsson and Craig Ward, two of the stars, drove a locomotive through the flames.

Seven weeks were spent in the preparation for this episode alone, while five days and nights were required for the making of the main fire scene and the close-up shots which followed.

A strong all-star cast is one of the features of the picture. Frank Keenan and Anna Q. Nilsson head the list with Craig Ward, Richard Headrick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Stanton Heck, Martha Mattox, Walt Whitman, Joan Standing, Ralph Cloninger, Lee Shumway, John Dill, Irene Hunt and Gordon Magee in the other main characters.

The story is based on the Harold Titus novel, "Timber," and was prepared for the screen by J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby.

Mack Sennett Completes Pictures

Producer Editing and Titling Two Two-Reelers and One Five Reel Comedy

DURING the past six weeks strenuous efforts have been made by Mack Sennett, comedy producer, to complete the editing and titling of two promising two-reel comedies and one five-reel feature comedy, scheduled for early fall release through the distributing hands of Associated First National Pictures.

The two reelers are "Bow Wow," a rural comedy featuring that triumvirate of world famous fun makers, Louise Fazenda, John Henry, Jr., and Teddy, the inimitable canine star with almost human intelligence. The other, "When Summer Comes," directed by Roy Del Ruth, is a broad farce in which Billy Bevan is the featured player with Mildred June in the leading feminine role.

The feature comedy, titled "The Shriek of Araby," has in it Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire. At a preview given "The Shriek of Araby" prior to shipping it to New York, the discriminating audience in the Paramount theatre, Hollywood, is said to have accorded it a most enthusiastic welcome. It is claimed for the picture by those qualified to judge, that Mack Sennett has uncorked a new vein of screen entertainment which, if he continues will entitle him to the name of "King of Satirists" as well as that he now enjoys, "King of Comedy."

Berman on Tour of Exchanges

F. B. O. Distribution Manager Will Supervise Establishment of Branches

HARRY M. BERMAN, general manager of distribution of the Film Booking Offices of America, is leaving on October 1st on another tour of F. B. O. exchanges, which will take him as far as the Pacific Coast, where he will supervise the establishment of a new branch in Portland, Oregon, to serve the exhibitors in that territory. Mr. Berman's trip will also result in the opening of the new F. B. O. branch in Salt Lake City.

Since the enterprising distribution manager took office with the F. B. O. no less than seven new exchanges have been announced by that company. In addition to Portland and Salt Lake City, branches will open shortly in Charlotte, N. C., and Des Moines, Iowa; while in Albany, N. Y.; Sioux Falls, N. D., and Oklahoma City F. B. O. exchanges are now operating, having been established by Mr. Berman. This present tour of the F. B. O. general manager will complete the reorganization of the sales forces of that company, accomplished by Mr. Berman in the unusually short time of three months.

This large expansion of the F. B. O. selling organization will enable this company to live up to its motto of service to the exhibitor. Mr. Berman's activities in the distribution of F. B. O. productions are keeping pace with the extension of the producing activities which have been made by P. A. Powers, managing director of F. B. O. since he assumed control of the company.

"More to Be Pitied" Des Moines Hit

The premiere showing of "More to Be Pitied" in Des Moines, which took place last week at the Rialto Theatre, went over big and established the picture in that territory, according to the C. B. C. offices.

According to a wire from Walter F. Davis, manager of the Rialto, the C. B. C. feature drew like a circus,

Song Writers Engage for "The Flirt"

MILT HAGEN and Victor Nurnberg, Broadway song-writers who wrote "Human Hearts," the popular tie-up song for the Universal Jewel picture of that name, have been commissioned to write a tie-up song for "The Flirt," the new Universal Jewel picture recently completed by Hobart Henley, with Eileen Percy and Helen Jerome Eddy as featured players. "The Flirt" is one of Universal's late fall releases.

Leo Feist, the music publisher who put out "Human Hearts," was besieged with requests for copies of the song.

Closing Shots Taken on Desert Picture

Ray C. Smallwood, who directed "My Old Kentucky Home" and "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., has just completed his third Pyramid picture, "When the Desert Calls," with an all-star cast headed by Violet Heming, Robert Fraser and Sheldon Lewis.

The closing "shots" were taken last week on a location in Long Island, where Art Director Ben Carre and his technical staff had built a barracks for British troops after the manner of an African military camp. Here Director Smallwood worked with Robert Fraser and J. Barney Sherry, and fifteen hundred extras, crowding a mass of camera work into the limitations of one working day.

Marion Davies Latest Nears Completion

Robert G. Vignola's first production since "When Knighthood Was In Flower," entitled "Adam and Eva," is rapidly nearing completion at the Cosmopolitan studios in New York. This latest Marion Davies starring special, adapted from the Guy Bolton-George Middleton stage success of the same name, is a comedy vehicle of a different type from "When Knighthood Was In Flower."

"Adam and Eva" is a story of modern life with settings of the present day. In undertaking to do this production Director Vignola is following out his policy to do a variety of stories rather than stick to one particular type.

Honolulu Setting For Betty Compson

Within a short time Betty Compson will leave Hollywood for Honolulu where she will be directed by Julia Crawford Ivers, in the latter's original story for Paramount Pictures, "The White Flower." This story was written expressly for Miss Compson and is said to give her a powerful role in a modern drama with beautiful backgrounds in the Hawaiian Islands.

Edmund Lowe, well known New York actor, has been engaged to play the leading male role and others in the cast include Edward Martindel, Leon Barry, Sylvia Ashton, Arthur Hoyt, Arline Pretty and Lily Phillips.

Effective Billing for Christie Comedies

TWO more examples of a most effective way to bill the current Christie Comedies were shown by the State Theatre at Minneapolis, of which C. P. Murphy is manager, and by the Strand theatre, Akron, Ohio, owned by James Dunlevy.

In both cases, the Christie Comedy was advertised by electric lights on the sides of the marquee sign, leaving the front of the theatre signs for the main feature attraction. In the case of the State theatre at Minneapolis both feature and comedy were advertised on the end of the signs, while added attractions occupied the front space.

"Pink Gods" Paramount Release

Penrhyn Stanlaws Production Tells Strong Tale of Lure of Diamonds

PARAMOUNT will open the month of October by releasing on the 1st the Penrhyn Stanlaws production, "Pink Gods," with Bebe Daniels, James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson and Raymond Hatton, and the Hamilton Theatrical Corporation's production, "Above All Law."

The age-old lure of diamonds, for women, and the lengths to which some women will go to acquire the precious stones, is the theme of this Cynthia Stockley story which was published under the title, "Pink Gods and Blue Demons." The story deals with a young couple and a widow who go to South Africa and there meet "the man who made Kimberley." The young widow feels the lure of the diamonds but is strong and well balanced enough to resist. The wife, however, is not so strong and allows herself to be drawn, during her husband's absence, into an intrigue with a notorious dealer in smuggled stones and it eventually results in her tragic death.

The varied and ingenious methods of smuggling uncut stones used not only by the native miners but by white overseers and illicit dealers, are graphically shown on the screen.

Bebe Daniels plays the role of the girl victim of the "pink gods," James Kirkwood is seen in the strong character of the South African. Anna Q. Nilsson is the young widow who resists temptation and Raymond Hatton is seen as a diamond thief. Others who have important roles are Adolphe Menjou, Guy Oliver, George Cowl and Arthur Trimble. Miss Stockley's original story was adapted by Sonya Levion and J. E. Nash and the scenario was written by Ewart Adamson.

"Scaramouche" Rights For Metro

Rex Ingram Will Produce Picture From Famous Novel by Farael Sabatini

METRO Pictures Corporation announces the purchase by arrangement with Charles L. Wagner, of the screen rights to the highly successful novel, "Scaramouche," by Farael Sabatini, to be produced as a motion picture by Rex Ingram, director of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and other big screen triumphs.

The young director to whom has been allotted the task of screening this vividly dramatic story is at present in Miami, Florida, where he and a company of players arrived a few weeks ago to begin the production of a new photoplay "The Passion Vine," based on the short story by John Russell. Whether "Scaramouche" will follow immediately after "The Passion Vine" or whether the filming of Victor Hugo's novel, "Toilers of the Sea" will next engage the director's attention, has not yet been decided.

A stage version of the story has already been completed by its author, and it is scheduled for production on the New York stage in the fall. Charles L. Wagner will produce the spoken play, with Sidney Blackmer in the title role. It is expected that the stage presentation will take place at about the same time as the photoplay is released.

When Mr. Ingram read "Scaramouche," shortly after its published appearance, he was immediately attracted by its exceptional motion picture possibilities. He expressed his desire to produce a film version of the novel, and, accordingly, negotiations were entered into looking towards this end.

"Fast Mail" Going Well, Fox Says

"The Fast Mail" is said to be making a record breaking run in the picture theatres around the country since its release last month. This melodrama founded in Lincoln J. Carter's stage success is proving one of the big hits of the William Fox list of feature pictures it is claimed.

The Dixieland Steeplechase, the steamboat race and explosion on the Mississippi river and the hero's race with an express train are a few of the big moments in the picture.

Goldwyn Adopts New Press Book Style

For its big twenty super-features for the new season, Goldwyn has adopted a new style of exhibitors' press and service book. The first press book is for the Rupert Hughes picture, "Remembrance," and is the size of an ordinary newspaper and contains sixteen pages. The covers are printed in two colors on both sides, red and black. Four pages are devoted to matter for the exhibitors' newspaper service, containing briefs, advance notices and stories, brief critical reviews, feature stories and many cuts.

The main body of the press book is devoted to exploitation suggestions, cuts of the features and advertisements of a unique and appealing nature.

Special Accessories for Cabanne Picture

Associated Exhibitors will provide a special line up of accessories on "Till We Meet Again," the William Christy Cabanne production of Dependable Pictures, scheduled for release October 15th. Associated Exhibitors will handle the distribution of this special production.

The posters will include one 24-sheet, six sheets, two styles of three sheets and two styles of one sheets. These have been done by a famous poster artist and will supplement a special array of colored lobby photographs in large and small sizes. It is said that in "Till We Meet Again," Mae Marsh has the best role she has ever enacted away from Mr. D. W. Griffith's direction.

Beatrice Burnham Back at Universal

Beatrice Burnham has returned again to Universal City. A few months ago she came back to the scene of her earliest training to play a small part with Priscilla Dean in "The Flame of Life." Today she is back to play opposite Hoot Gibson in "Kindled Courage."

Miss Burnham started her motion picture career at Universal City only a few years ago. She developed remarkably fast and became a leading woman, playing opposite Harry Carey in several features.

Orville Caldwell Signs For New Role

Orville Caldwell, the handsome giant, who will be seen in the leading male role in Katherine MacDonald's new picture, "The Lonely Road," has signed a contract under which he will appear in a similar capacity in the next production in which she will be starred, "The Scarlet Lily."

The actor-athlete was named for this new part because of his brilliant work in "The Lonely Road." Those who have seen the early runs of the picture declare that his characterization as the young husband mark him as one of the most promising of the younger male players on the screen.

'Grandma's Boy' Makes Notable Record

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS have issued a lengthy statement on Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy."

A summary of their article discloses that during the week ending Sept. 23rd, "Grandma's Boy" achieved several notable records, perhaps the most remarkable being that of the Symphony of Los Angeles, where the attraction played its nineteenth week, with no word from the house as to a closing date.

During the same week it played its third big week at Jake Laurie's Park Theatre of Boston, its second week at Charles Olsen's Apollo Theatre of Indianapolis, second week at Jensen & Von Herberg's Liberty Theatre of Seattle, second week at the Main Theatre, Uniontown, Pa., second week at the Wilmer and Vincent's Colonial theatre, Allentown, Pa., as well as starting its first week day and date in St. Louis at Skouras Bros., three famous houses, the New Grand Central, the West End, Lyric and the Capitol.

In the Independent Field

Conducted by CHESTER J. SMITH

Notoriety' Is Cut to Final Form

DIRECTOR WILL NIGH'S first production for L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, "Notoriety," has been cut down to its final form and will be eight reels long, it was announced this week. It has taken five weeks to eliminate excess footage from the 100,000 ft. that were originally shot on this feature production.

The feature which was screened privately for the executives of L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North is said to be a model of smoothness and dramatic interest.

It is predicted by all concerned in the making and distribution of the picture that "Notoriety" will add new laurels to the already famous director, Will Nigh.

Warners Complete Big Foreign Deal

Gus S. Schlesinger, general manager of the Warner Brothers foreign department, successfully negotiated a big deal last week with Juan Kunzler, Sociedad General Cinematografica, Buenos Aires, for the entire series of Warner pictures.

Mr. Kunzler purchased the exclusive rights for Argentine, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador. The pictures secured include "Rags to Riches," "Little Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry; "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost; "Brass," also with Miss Prevost; "Main Street," "A Dangerous Adventure," and "Little Church Around the Corner."

C. B. C. Cast Approved By Buyers

Expressions of congratulation have been pouring into the offices of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation this week since the announcement of the names of players assembled for the cast of "Only a Shopgirl."

With only one or two exceptions every territorial buyer of "More to Be Pitied" and the other five pictures on the series has wired, telephoned or written Jack Cohn at the New York distribution offices or Harry Cohn at the West Coast production centre commenting on the extraordinary strength of the cast.

In this cast are Mae Busch, Estelle Taylor, Wallace Beery, Tully Marshall, Clair Dubrey, William Scott, Willard Louis, James Morrison and Josephine Adair.

Amalgamated Unit Is Assembled

Cast and Staff Selected for First Production, "A Madonna in Chains"

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week that the first production of Amalgamated Exchanges of America would be "A Madonna in Chains."

Edgar Owings Towne, author, playwright, lecturer and lawyer, is the author of "A Madonna in Chains," which book will be published within the next thirty days and released at the same time that the picture is released throughout the United States.

Mr. Towne has devoted a great deal of time in the assistance of the selecting of the cast.

In the selection of E. K. Lincoln as the artist, the leading male role, the Amalgamated Exchanges are confident of the success of this most important part. Mr. Lincoln can well be remembered in his work in "The Light in the Dark."

Martha Mansfield has been engaged as one of the co-stars in "The Madonna in Chains," and Jean Acker (Mrs. Rodolph Valentino) has been engaged to play the leading feminine role in their first production, "The Madonna in Chains." Mrs. Valentino has youth, charm, and beauty which will fit her for the part she is to portray.

William Burt has been engaged to take charge of one of the producing units. Mr. Burt is a recognized stage director which well fits in with the technical direction of motion pictures. Mr. Burt has directed pictures for Pathe for the past four years and was one of the original directors for Thanhouser during the time of its greatest success.

Thornton Freelang also joins the production department. Mr. Freelang, who acted in the capacity of assistant to J. Stuart Blackton for three years and one year as assistant to Roland West, has acquired a knowledge of editing pictures that is most valuable.

Bernard P. Arons has also been engaged. Mr. Arons has been assistant to studio manager at Universal Coytesville Studio, casting director at Universal Studio, Leonia, N. J., casting director for Selznick, collaborator of scripts for dramatic features, scenario writer of comedy scripts, assistant director, also connected with Pathe.

The A. H. Fisher studio has been leased for a long term, where production has started. Mittenhal Brothers studio has been leased as the smaller set studio.

Levinson to Distribute Napoleon Picture

JESSE A. LEVINSON has acquired for distribution throughout the United States and Canada "The Plaything of an Emperor," a spectacular costume picture based on the celebrated affair between Napoleon Bonaparte and Countess Marie Walewska.

Their famous liason, which occurred in 1807 and resulted in Napoleon's changing his military plans in order to be near the Countess, is well known to all students of history.

The photoplay, which is six reels in length, is said to contain many elaborate settings and scenes, including such high lights as the royal ball in Napoleon's honor and the grand banquet at his headquarters. Against this background of splendor a human and touching love story is developed by Rodolph Lettinger as Napoleon and Margorie Verlaime as the Countess. The direction is by Arthur Rippert.

New York to Know Why Men Marry

Unity Pictures, Inc., of New York City, announces that it has sold the rights of "Why Do Men Marry?" for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey to the Atlas Film Distributing Company.

This is the production featuring Edy Darceia, who created somewhat of a sensation in the Fox special, "Nero," when this picture was shown at a New York theatre recently.

"Why Do Men Marry?" is said to be a society and domestic drama

Warner Announces Big Campaign

With Entire Series Sold, Will Acquaint Public With Each Picture's Value's

WITH the entire series of the Warner Brothers' seven productions sold solid throughout the country to first run theatre owners and prominent exchangers, Harry M. Warner announced that a sweeping campaign has been inaugurated to sell these pictures direct to the public.

Mr. Warner's two-fold plan is to interest the motion picture public in the meritorious value of each picture, and to aid exhibitors booking the features to derive the maximum box-office results. In order to drive home the entertaining phases of the pictures, one quarter of a million dollars has been appropriated to be used in motion picture "fan" magazine advertising, according to Mr. Warner.

"Our efforts from now on will be centered in selling the entertainment values of our pictures direct-to-the-public," said Mr. Warner. "As has been announced our pictures have been purchased by the most prominent theatre owners and exchangers in the country. To aid both these men and exhibitors who book our pictures, we have planned to acquaint the public with what I believe to be the greatest array of attractions that have ever been produced by an independent organization.

"Our campaign is not mere talk. It is an actual fact. And those pessimists who always read and take matters with a grain of salt will be firmly convinced when we show them what results have been obtained by selling our series of pictures direct to the public."

The series of seven pictures to be advertised include "Rags to Riches" and "Little Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry; "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost; "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel also featuring Marie Prevost; "Main Street," the Sinclair Lewis novel; "A Dangerous Adventure," starring Grace Darmond, and "Little Church Around the Corner," written by Marion Russell.

Work on the "Fatty" Karr Comedies Begun

AFTER signing a contract with Franklyn E. Backer, president of East Coast Productions to distribute his product in the State Rights field, Bruce Mitchell departed for the West Coast. He has just sent word that work on the first of the two-reelers starring "Fatty" Karr has begun.

Bruce Mitchell is also clearing through Mr. Backer a series of two-reel Crescent Comedies, which have received very favorable reviews in the trade publications. The first two of these comedies are now ready for release, namely: "West is Worst," and "Easy Pickin'." Others in the series are: "Follow Suit," and "Nobody There." "Fatty" Karr has been seen in such productions as "Human Hearts," and "Omar the Tentmaker."

Another Two-Reeler with Juvenile Star Completed

THE second release of a series of "specials" for the short subject field, in which little Arthur Trimble is being starred for independent release, has been completed under direction of Frederick G. Becker.

Bessie Love, who headed the supporting cast of the first release, will also be seen in the second.

The third production will be started as soon as the editing and titling of the second of the series is finished.

The Trimble Productions also announce that the series will be marketed as "The Strange Adventures of Prince Courageous."

A unive preview of the first of the series was held at the Granada theatre in Hollywood, Cal., Wednesday, September 6th. The picture was shown at both evening performances and the patrons were asked to cast prepared ballots as to their individual preference. This is the first time, states advices from director Frederick G. Becker, that an entire audience was detailed as a jury.

The vote showed ninety-five per cent of the combined audiences as being pleased with the first picture.

Frankie Lee Starred in Series of Comedies

ASERIES of two reeler comedies, reflecting the attitude of "the American boy," will be made under the direction of Clarence Bricker, sponsored by the East Coast Productions, of which Franklyn E. Backer is president.

The first story will be a screen adaptation of Bess Aldrich's well-known American Magazine story, "Last Night When I Kissed Miss Thompson." The release title will be announced later.

Though only seven, Frankie is a screen veteran. He has appeared with such stars as Charles Chaplin, William Farnum, Agnes Ayres.

"Sure-Fire Flint" Goes Big

Johnny Hines' Feature Well Received
As Tryout Showing In Jersey Theatre

"SURE-FIRE FLINT," Johnny Hines' latest feature comedy-thriller, produced by C. C. Burr, was tried out at Flagg's theatre in Westfield, New Jersey, last Saturday night, and throughout its entire performance received the plaudits of an enthusiastic audience, it is reported.

Manager Flagg, at whose theatre "I Am the Law" was also given its first public performance was reported so enthused with "Sure-Fire Flint" that he expressed himself as of the opinion that it was the best feature comedy drama he had witnessed. "The audience in general took to this latest Hines feature as they have never done on any picture that has played my house," commented Mr. Flagg, and both Mr. Burr and Johnny Hines are to be sincerely congratulated for this remarkably excellent photoplay.

"The supporting cast was excellent also," added Mr. Flagg, "and it could not have been otherwise with such stars as Doris Kenyon, who in my opinion surpassed her work in 'The Ruling Passion' with George Arliss, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson and Effie Shannon. 'If I could run two months like 'Sure-Fire Flint' concluded Flagg, 'I would be forced to build an additional wing to my theatre to make room for my patrons."

The audience at the Flagg Theatre received a pleasant surprise when Johnny Hines, who was present at this, the first showing of "Sure-Fire Flint," was called to the stage to make a personal appearance. Hines is reported to have taken them all by storm, and at the conclusion of his talk relative to the making of "Sure Fire Flint," he called Doris Kenyon to the stage. Miss Kenyon carried off her honors lightly and pleased the audience with a few stories that happened during production on the feature.

C. C. Burr was highly elated at the success of the showing and decided not to make a single change in the continuity or titles. "Ralph Spence who wrote the titles for "Sure-Fire Flint" was at his best," quoted Burr, "for the audience laughed from the first sub-title right through to the finish."

Lester Scott, Jr., sales manager for C. C. Burr will leave this week for a swing around the whole circuit with a print of "Sure-Fire Flint" which he will show to all exchanges who have bought territory on this feature. He will probably be gone about eight or nine weeks.

"Rags To Riches" Wins Praise

New York Critics Commend Rapf Picture
After Showing at Capitol Theatre

THE premier presentation of the Warner Brothers picture, "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry, was accorded unusual praise by the New York newspaper critics, following its showing at the Capitol theatre during the week of Sept. 24.

It is declared by the critics to be a photoplay of rare quality, combining fun, romance, heart interest and excellent dramatic composition, and that it will be as big a hit with motion picture fans as the stage version was with legitimate theatre-goers.

Here are some criticisms:

New York Telegraph—"Rags to Riches" that good old melodrama that we used to laugh, cry, applaud and hiss over, has at last reached the screen, thanks to the Warner Brothers, and is being presented at the Capitol this week. It's going to be just as big a hit as the stage version."

World—"Here, we think, is a photoplay of rare quality, combining fun, romance, heart interest and excellent dramatic composition. This young Wesley Barry, the freckle-faced boy who was seen last in 'School Days' does, perhaps, the best work of his career."

Telegram—"The story is told in an entertaining and human manner. Young Wes gives a bright and entertaining performance."

Sun—"The photoplay ranks as good entertainment. Wesley Barry Penrods about the screen at the Capitol this week in an entertaining filmization of a melodrama."

Mail—"Whenever Wesley Barry forgets that he is a motion picture star and remembers that he is just a boy and acts like one, he is a most likeable chap and his pictures are more than likely to prove interesting. He has accomplished this desirable end to a marked degree in 'Rags to Riches' at the Capitol theatre this week."

Journal—"A more delightful and wholesome comedy than 'Rags to Riches' has not been seen in New York in many months."

Klubrie Cooper, Choice Productions, Inc., Star.

"Mysteries of Paris" Ready for Market

THE Charles C. Burr-Whitman Bennett production of "Secrets of Paris," the motion picture version of the most famous of all Eugene Sue's works, "The Mysteries of Paris," is practically ready for the Independent market.

Of all the pictures he has produced, Bennett claims that "Secrets of Paris" is by far the best. For years he had this work in mind but he did not hurry its production as he wanted to give much time to the scenario and be sure that none of the big scenes were left out.

The cast consists of Lew Cody, Montagu Love, Gladys Hulette, Rose Coghlan, Dolores Cassinelli, Walter James, William Collier, Jr., J. Barney Sherry and other well known people.

Minister Associated with Fox Educational Division

THE Rev. Dr. Lincoln H. Caswell, who has been associated with the Fox Educational Division since its inception, first attracted the attention of the film industry by his activities against political censorship of motion pictures. He was the only minister to address the Legislative committee at Albany urging the defeat of the censorship bill.

Dr. Caswell's experience in relating the motion picture to the church has been of a high and thorough character, and he is one of the pioneers among those who have put the motion picture into the progress of the church. As a progressive pastor, he saw the tremendous advantage that would be gained by the church through the use of motion pictures.

Dulcie Cooper to Appear in Series of Two Reelers

THE first of a series of twelve two-reelers, entitled "Now and Then" is said to delineate action from start to finish, with heart throbs, laughs and memoirs of the past sprinkled through the carefully photographed offering, which will be released about Oct. 15.

"New Ideas and New Ideals," from a motion picture standpoint, is the slogan of the Choice Productions, Inc., one of the latest additions to the Independent Producing Companies. This unit is engaged in producing a series of twelve two-reel subjects, which will incorporate both the factors of the slogan mentioned above.

Every departmental head of the active organization is experienced in the work from production to exhibition and the knowledge gained by years of experience will be taken advantage of by the Choice Productions, Inc., as a whole.

Will Nigh Is Titling "Notoriety"

AFTER one month of cutting the 100,000 feet of film shot on Will Nigh's coming special—"Notoriety," the independent director has begun titling. The captions will be written by Nigh himself, who wrote the original script.

All titles will be colored, and artists have already been engaged for the purpose. Instead of photographing a scene from the picture and coloring it for the sub-title illustration, Will Nigh will have original paintings in colors.

It is estimated that "Notoriety" will be entirely complete and ready for its pre-release showing in two weeks.

Plum Center Series For Eastman Theatre

ACCORDING to reports received this week at the Paul Gerson Studios in San Francisco from Film Booking Offices of America, New York the entire series of Plum Center Comedies, now in course of production at the Gerson plant have been booked by the management of the new Eastman theatre of Rochester, N. Y.

This theatre was built by the Eastman Kodak Co., at a cost of five million dollars and donated by George Eastman to the University of Rochester. The building is a monument of Art, and the theatre has a seating capacity of 3,400, maintains an orchestra of sixty pieces, and changes its program of motion pictures twice a week.

The Plum Center Pictures are declared to be a new departure in rural comedies, depending on humorous characterizations and situations rather than an action that borders on the bizarre or the slapstick.

Dan Mason, of "Toonerville" fame is featured in these pictures and Wilna Hervey, who created the role of Katrinka in the same series is leading woman.

Robert Eddy, director of the first of the Toonervilles, and with a goodly number of comedy successes to his credit, is directing the Plum Center series.

"Rich Men's Wives" Is Sold in Mexico

FELIPE MIER, New York representative of German Camus and Co. of Mexico City, has purchased "Rich Men's Wives" for distribution in Mexico. The deal was closed with Al Lichtman, whose company distributes the picture, which was made by Preferred Pictures.

Last week, Millard Johnson of Australasian Films, Ltd., bought the production for Australia and New Zealand and a short time before that, David Tebbitt secured the production for Great Britain.

Strong Staff Backs "Notoriety" Weber-North Perfect Organization to Cooperate on Night Picture

WHEN Will Nigh's first feature production for L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, "Notoriety," is ready for distribution, it will find that progressive firm of independent producers ready to meet the demands of exchangemen and exhibitors.

For three months Weber & North have been concentrating on the release of their first Will Nigh special. While the director himself was perfecting the artistry and strength of the picture, the producers and distributor were paving the way for 100 per cent cooperation with the exhibitor and the local distributor, after the picture has been disposed of.

The first step in strengthening their organization was taken when Sam Sax, recognized as among the leading sales managers in the independent field, was engaged to give every assistance and cooperation to the State Right buyer. The field staff was further enlarged by assignment of William Kraft, as Mr. Sax's assistant and as advertising manager. Expert publicity cooperation was assured by the engagement of Charles Cohen.

Independent exchangemen throughout the country received the news of the independent release of "Notoriety," as well as the forthcoming Will Nigh releases with enthusiasm. It was first thought that Weber & North might accept the offer of a national distributor to release "Notoriety" nationally, but this was definitely denied when the picture was announced as an independent State-right offering.

The accessories, advertising matter, press books and exhibitors' aids that have been lined up on "Notoriety" are said to set a new pace for cooperation along this line, and for ingenuity in public appeal.

Senor Ingenito Has Ambitions Young Actor in "Secrets of Paris" Would Become Argentine Valentino

WHEN Whitman Bennett announced that in the production of "Secrets of Paris," the movie version of Eugene Sue's famous novel "The Mysteries of Paris," which he and C. C. Burr have just completed, that in one of the scenes he had employed seventeen different nationalities, little did he think that from out of that label of tongues would emerge a young man from Argentina who frankly admits that he is out to seek the popularity and praise of one Rodolph Valentino.

Senor Benjamino Ingenito is his name. The handsome young gentleman comes from Buenos Aires, and is a member of one of Argentina's best families. He is a graduate of the University of Buenos Aires, taking his degree as an M. B. He then went to Paris and Vienna, and last March came to the United States to finish his studies at Johns Hopkins. It was in Baltimore that he and some of the students took part in the making of a picture. Dr. Ingenito became so interested that he immediately began to look with favor and decided to make a profession of the work.

A few weeks ago he happened to play a small part in the Burr-Whitman Bennett production. It was in the cabaret scene taken from the Rat Hole. The young Argentine dressed his part so well, danced with such ease and grace and conducted himself in such fine bearing that he soon became a big favorite among the members of the studio.

Visitors who came to the studio watched this young man, and no sooner had he finished with Mr. Bennett than another company snapped him up. Dr. Ingenito hopes to show that Argentina is a land of the near future. He points with pride to the achievements of his countrymen playing on the Argentine Polo team. He also much interested in the boxing feats of his native townsman Luis Firpo, and now he hopes to become the South American Rodolph Valentino.

Stills Sell Territory on Burr Picture

Word comes from the offices of C. C. Burr, who with Whitman Bennett produced the famous melodrama, "Secrets of Paris," taken from Eugene Sue's novel, "The Mysteries of Paris," that fully 80 per cent. of the territory had been sold long before the picture was finished. The cause for this is attributed to the fact that the numerous exchange men that daily come to Mr. Burr's office were so wonderfully impressed with the excellent stills that were being sent daily from Mr. Whitman's studio in Yonkers.

Second Arthur Trimble Release Finished

The second release of a series of "specials" for the short subject field, in which little Arthur Trimble is being starred for independent release, has been completed at the Hollywood Studios. Frederick G. Becker directed.

Bessie Love, who headed the supporting cast of the first release, will also be seen in the second. The third production will be started as soon as the editing and titling of the second of the series is finished.

The Trimble Productions also announce that the series will be marketed as "The Strange Adventures of Prince Courageous."

Unity Lays Stress On Picture Titles

UNITY PICTURES INC., announce a definite policy of titling their pictures in a way that will help the exhibitor to bring the people in. This policy is clearly manifest, they claim, in their first production "Why Do Men Marry?" starring Edy Darceia.

Their second offering, now in the mill, will present another picture under the title of "A Woman's Story." It is believed that "A Woman's Story" will strike a timely note, now that there has been a series of front page news stories largely composed of the diaries of disillusioned women who have figured sensationally in the news of the day, as "A Woman's Story," is told in diary form.

This picture will follow "Why Do Men Marry?" It will be available for the independent market by December 1st.

Greater New York and Northern New Jersey territory has already been closed on "Why Do Men Marry?" although the market has only been open to this independent production since the first of the month.

Fox Educational Division to Launch Six One Reel Specials

Fox Educational Division of Fox Film Corporation, which has been in the process of organization during the summer, will launch its campaign in the theatres throughout the country on September 4th with six one-reel specials.

These are the first of a wealth of subjects to be released during the coming season and will cover every variety of topic that can be imagined. A staff of over 300 motion picture photographers in all parts of the globe are culling the world for unusual pictures. The subjects released on September 24th include "Alligators, Hunting and Farming." To get this film cameramen penetrated into the wilds of Central America and into the everglades of Florida at the risk of their lives.

Many Important Papers Scheduled for S. M. P. E. Convention

MOTION PICTURE NEWS cannot urge too strongly upon the members of the motion picture industry associated directly or indirectly with the production of motion pictures to attend the coming convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers on October 9th to 12th, inclusive in Rochester.

The progress made by the society in the years since its organization has been very remarkable. It now numbers among its members some of the leading scientists in the country. The Transactions of the Society, issued semi-annually after each convention, have become the authoritative source of information both in this country and abroad.

The scientists of the Eastman Kodak Company, Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, etc., have contributed data in papers presented to the society which contain information which is available in no other one place. All of this data is written with motion picture problems alone in the minds of the authors.

At the Fall convention in Rochester we have the following subjects to be presented:

Accurate Methods for Expressing the Performance of Lenses.....by W. B. Rayton
A Split Aspherical Condensing

Lens by Frank Benford
A Film Waxing Machine.....by John G. Jones
Pedagogical Motion Pictures, by Carl Anderson
A Motion Analyzer....by Dr. Herman Kellner
A New Sensitometer for the Determination of Explosure in Positive Printing

by L. A. Jones and J. I. Crabtree Practical Effects of Distance of Projection and the Projection Angle on the Screen Image

by F. H. Richardson
A Demonstration Model for Showing Lens and Condenser Action in the Motion Picture
Projector.....by Sander Stark
Heat Absorbing Glasses.....by D. E. Sharpe
Photographs and Motion Pictures by Radio

by C. Francis Jenkins
Printing Exposure and Density in Motion
Picture Positives.....by L. A. Jones

After presentation of the various papers open discussions will be participated in by the members, all of which will be reprinted in the Transactions covering the meeting.

It might be interesting to know that from information just received from Mr.

C. Francis Jenkins, one of the founders of the society that he is now actually transmitting motion pictures by wireless. In a letter just received from Mr. Jenkins he states that he can set up his taking machine, attach it to an ordinary telephone switchboard, send the picture over the wire to a general radio broadcasting station and have the pictures relayed by it to receiving instruments located aboard battleships, land stations and other points at considerable distance from the seaboard.

A year ago Mr. Jenkins stated at a meeting of the society that such a thing would be done within a very short time. It is now an accomplished fact. A paper on this subject, as stated above, will be presented by Mr. Jenkins at the October meeting.

Producers, studio experts of every kind, laboratory men, lighting engineers and others interested in all the allied branches of the industry should join the society and should become active in it, and in this way help toward the promotion of a larger and greater motion picture.

The Palladium theatre, operated by A. B. Scandinavian Filmcentral, is the largest and is considered the most beautiful of modern motion picture theatres in Sweden and the immediate surrounding countries. Modified lighting is employed to bring forth the many striking appointments of the house. The admission prices range, in equivalent American money, from 50 cents to $1.25. These views are presented through the courtesy of S. A. G. Swenson, American buyer for the owners of this theatre, who also own a large portion of the houses in Scandinavia

Difference Between Inflammable and Non-Inflammable Film

Essential Characteristics and Materials Used in Manufacture of Two Types

THE Department of Commerce, Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., has made an investigation with reference to the safety and recommendable practices for motion picture projection. One division of the report takes up the subject of film, both the inflammable and non-inflammable stock as follows:

"As it developed from these examinations that the principal hazard is inherent in the film itself, a brief statement of the characteristics of motion picture film will be given.

Preparation of Raw Film

"In the manufacture of motion picture films, it is customary to distinguish between the raw film, and the same film after it has been coated with a photographic emulsion. For present purposes we shall consider briefly the preparation of the raw film. It is a flexible, water-resistant transparent material prepared from cellulose nitrate, commonly called nitrocellulose, or from cellulose acetate. Films are prepared by pouring a solution of the film material upon a moving belt or revolving drum, and allowing the solvents to evaporate. It is customary to recover the solvents used. The steps involved consist of the preparation of a suitable solution, filtering and removing air bubbles from the solution, formation of the film, removal from the belt, and the drying of the film.

The common type of motion picture film is made from cellulose nitrate, an inflammable material prepared by treating cotton or cellulose with a mixture of concentrated nitric and sulphuric acids. The product must be thoroughly washed and stabilized, and is subsequently dissolved with the addition of camphor in suitable solvents and diluents. The solvents commonly used are amyl acetate or "banana oil," ethyl acetate, and acetone; the diluents are generally benzene (benzol), and denatured alcohol. The film obtained consists of an intimate mixture of cellulose nitrate and camphor, and is essentially celluloid. Substitutes for camphor have been proposed from time to time, and a few of these are occasionally used. Camphor however, appears to produce maximum strength, transparency, and elasticity. The prepared film must be carefully dried and seasoned, before it is ready to be coated with a photographic emulsion.

The second type of motion picture film is the so-called non-inflammable film. It is prepared by treating cotton with acetic anhydride in the presence of a catalyst such as sulphuric acid, zinc chloride, or sulphuryl chloride, and the product is

Prediction for Future

THIS article on inflammable and non-inflammable motion picture film is presented as it brings forth the various materials used in the manufacture of these two types of film and also the variations in their essential characteristics.

As there is caused a great amount of discussion concerning the advantages and disadvantage of these two general types of film, there should be an interest in their qualifications. It may be predicted with a fair degree of certainty that in the relatively near future a much larger percentage of non-inflammable film will come into use.

In case the cost of the manufacture of non-inflammable film is reduced to that of the inflammable stock and its few other limitations are overcome, then in all probability a general adoption of non-inflammable film will be made throughout the motion picture industry. Such a course would be exceedingly welcome.

known as cellulose acetate. The temperature must be carefully controlled, as slight variations in temperature during acetylation give rise to brittle films and products of low viscosity, particularly when sulphuric acid is used to catalyze the reaction. The product of acetylation is soluble in chloroform and as a rule insoluble in acetone. It must be carefully hydrolyzed to a hydroacetate which is insoluble in chloroform, but soluble in acetone.

Brittleness of Non-Inflammable

"Cellulose acetate (non-inflammable) is inherently more brittle than cellulose nitrate (inflammable film), and the brittleness is overcome by incorporating in the film so-called plastics. These have a function analogous to that of camphor in the inflammable films. Cellulose acetate may be combined with a great number of plastics, with the production of varying degrees of hardness and elasticity. Camphor is not suitable for the purpose. Triphenyl phosphate is commonly used. It possesses the advantage of reducing the combustibility of the acetate film. Other useful plastics are calol, benzyl benzoate, benzyl acetate, diethyl phthalate, and triacetin. These are but a few among many which have been proposed. The most important solvents of cellulose acetate consist of tetrachlorethane, generally used in combination with alcohol, ethyl lactate, diacetone alcohol, methyl ethyl ketone, acetone, methyl acetate and ethyl acetate.

The ordinary (inflammable) type of film is that prepared from cellulose nitrate. It contains oxygen, the element of its potential destruction, in a highly available form. The readiness with which it burns is too well known to require comment. The gases resulting from combustion of celluloid consist chiefly of oxides of carbon and nitrogen, methane, hydrogen and nitrogen, together with volatilized camphor, which under certain conditions may form an explosive mixture with air.

Films prepared from cellulose acetate (non-inflammable) do not contain available oxygen. They are combustible but not inflammable. When subjected to temperatures higher than 150° C., (302 F.) cellulose acetate melts and is decomposed. The gelatin emulsion used on all films has some fire-proofing action. However, the amount of this used is insufficient to produce any marked effect. For all practical purposes, films of cellulose acetate containing triphenyl phosphate may be considered safe as used in motion picture projectors. A film of such material (non-inflammable), if ignited while being used, will cease to burn as soon as the source of heat is removed.

It is claimed that such films become brittle more readily and have proven less durable than films of cellulose nitrate. Acetate films are said to possess or develop a "grained" surface. These defects may have been caused by faulty methods of manufacture.

Advancement Expected

The manufacture of cellulose acetate plastics is a more recent development than the manufacture of cellulose nitrate or pyroxylin plastics. Cellulose acetate admits of a variety of combinations with other compounds. As new combinations become known, it may be expected that films will be developed which present none of the disadvantages of present-day acetate films, assuming that such disadvantages exist. Future developments should make possible a non-inflammable film with qualities equal to those of the nitrate film, and the product should practically compete with the nitrate film in price.

Discussion by Projectionist Brings Up Procedure For Recommendation

THIS department has had the good fortune of securing a discussion on some vital subjects pertaining to projectionists which was carried on thru correspondence between an enterprising projectionist and the Nicholas Power Company.

These letters, which are reprinted, we hope will suggest a most commendable course for projectionists in general to follow.

In writing his original letter to the Nicholas Power Company, A. C. Smith of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, asks some questions which show his interest and intelligent grasp of his work: Messrs. N. Powers Co., Gentlemen:

I have recently had forwarded to your firm one framing carriage with instructions to fit same with Roller Pin Movement, etc.

You will admit that it is quite a distance to send a framing carriage to be repaired.

Putting in New Intermittent

Now comes the question. (1) Can an operator successfully put in a new intermittent movement? My answer is "No," as I am under the impression that the intermittent movement is adjusted at your factory by means of special instruments. Am I right?

(2)—The second question. How long should a factory adjusted intermittent last, the machines running eleven hours a day, which would mean 5 1-2 hours on one machine, the same receiving proper care and attention? And would it not wear longer, than one adjusted by the operator himself?

My opinion is that it would be more economical to send the framing carriage to the factory and would result in getting a steadier picture which of course is of greatest importance.

From the foregoing remarks, you may probably think that I am just an amateur at the business of operating. However, I might say that I have had the pleasure of installing quite a number of your machines and recommend them for their rigid construction and above all, the solidity of the intermittent movement and the reason I am asking the above questions, is that I would like your reply in order that I may show the same to owners and managers of theatres when I am trying to convince them of the necessity of having a spare framing carriage for one or two machine combination, so that the one that is worn out can be properly repaired at the factory.

Suggestions Worth Considering

Now comes a suggestion which I think would be worthy of your attention. In removing the aforesaid framing carriage, I experienced some difficulty in removing framing carriage sliding rods, and my suggestion is that a small hole be placed in the lower end of the rod so that the operator could insert a hooked piece of stiff wire or other such like arrangement and by a twisting motion easily removed the rods.

Another suggestion is that your company secure a proper kind of oil can, which could be supplied along with a little pamphlet on "How and When to Oil Your Projector," the oil can being of solid construction with a seven inch bent nosed spout and made to drop only one drop of oil for each bearing.

I think the above suggestions of great importance as I have gone into operating rooms and have seen a dozen different oil cans with the result that the machines have been literally covered with oil.

Please excuse my omitting the term projectionist, but I have run into so few real projectionists that I have decided to style myself and others just as operators.

Trusting to have the pleasure of receiving your answers to my questions,

Yours very truly,

A. C. Smith,
335 A 11th Ave. West
Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

P.S. Kindly send your latest catalogue.

Reply by Engineer

In replying to this letter, Lester Bowen, Designing Engineer of the Nicholas Power, brings to attention the degree of extreme accuracy of intermittent movements; also due to this fineness of adjustments the limitations met with in the adjustments of this mechanism unless the proper methods and tools are employed:

Mr. A. C. Smith,

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of August 7th, we wish to say in the first place that the only thing we object to in your letter is referring to yourself as an amateur because you so thoroughly realize that no matter how good a projectionist a man may be, he has limitations when it comes to making certain repairs.

There are many excellent mechanics among the thousands of projectionists now operating machines, but you are absolutely right when you say that the manufacturer of the machine can make some repairs better than anyone else.

We have men, who have been with us for years, working solely on certain parts of the machine and anyone must realize how expert such men become. In addition to the skill these men have acquired, they also have the advantage of special tools and facilities for testing and repairing which even a large circuit of theatres could not very well afford.

Need of Proper Tools

The mechanism parts, and particularly the intermittent and framing carriage parts manufactured by us, are very accurate and should be interchangeable in all cases. Due to this fact, it is quite possible that the projectionist—having the proper equipment to make replacements of parts—could make a perfect adjustment, but certainly this cannot be done without the proper tools and equipment.

Our factory is always open to visitors and in special cases we have allowed projectionists to spend a few days in our factory working with our men in order to get a better knowledge of how to make some of the repairs. These men have invariably expressed themselves as being astonished at the great care taken and the exactness in the manufacture of parts of Power's projectors.

In reply to your second question, we wish to say that when an intermittent movement leaves the factory it is set up as close as we dare set it up but after being in use for about

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Twice the light on the screen with the same current consumption

The G-E High Intensity Projection Arc gives twice the illumination on the screen that can be obtained by use of the older styles of low intensity lamps, with no increase in current consumption. Also the quality of the light is almost the same as daylight lessening eye-strain and giving, in the case of colored films, full color values. After the arc is struck, operation is automatic, there being only two hand adjustments (for regulating size of spot). The focus is fixed making adjustments when changing carbons unnecessary; carbons are merely slipped into place without requiring any clamping or fastening of nuts.

All these features are embodied in this lamp which is offered to motion picture exhibitors only after two and a half years of successful operation in actual service. You get the finest films for your theatre—show them to best advantage.

two weeks the intermittent pin cross should be set up close against the outside cam ring. This is done by turning the large eccentric bushing—UP A TRIFLE—never down. After this no further adjustment is necessary for a period of several months, when the pin cross should be again set up against the cam.

If the intermittent movement is given this attention at proper intervals, it should give excellent service for at least a year and we have known instances where they have been giving splendid results after two years' operation.

Of course, various conditions, such as speed at which the machine is run, the nature of the film used, and proper lubrication, all will have a considerable influence upon the length of time the mechanism should last without being returned to the factory for repairs and replacements.

Space Framing Carriage Needed

Your remark in reference to having a spare framing carriage on hand is so very correct it seems too bad there should be any doubt in anyone's mind regarding this matter. Every motion picture theatre should have a spare framing carriage on hand and this will be sufficient if the theatre is close to the factory. If, however, the theatre is any such distance from the factory as yours is, there should also be a spare mechanism and some parts.

Regarding the framing carriage guide rods and special oil can, your ideas are excellent and some time in the future we may be able to act upon these suggestions.

It is very gratifying to receive such letters as yours and a great pleasure to be able to reply to them. We trust we have fully covered the points you have made, but if not, please let us hear from you. In any event, we shall be very glad to hear from you from time to time and if you ever have occasion to come to New York we certainly hope you will pay us a visit. We will be very glad to show you through the factory and extend any other possible courtesies.

Very truly yours,
Nicholas Power Company, Inc.

Lester Bowen,
Designing Engineer.

A. C. Smith makes a few additional remarks concerning his opinions as to the proper procedure in keeping a projector in A1 condition. It is most gratifying to know that there are projectionists who take their profession to heart and feel a real pride in the quality of their work.

Additional Remarks

Nicholas Power Co.

Dear Sir:

In reply to your letter of August 25th, I wish to say that I did not wish to infer in my last letter to you that a projectionist could not make repairs on a Powers machine. But I wished to convey the idea, rather, that to insure the best results, such as steadiness of picture, economy, etc., that it is wisest for all projectionists who take a pride in their work to have a spare framing carriage and have the repairing of same done at the factory. I might add that the intermittent movement has been the source of most of the projectionist's worries and no doubt through the overlooking of small things.

Kindly convey my thanks to Mr. Lester Bowen, your Designing Engineer for his very interesting and instructive letter and should I ever come to New York City, I shall certainly call on you.

Again thanking you,

Very truly yours,

A. C. Smith.

Drawing submitted by Kurlander to supplement his explanation

Another Set of Answers

Another letter answering the list of questions asked by R. Harrington concerning screens and Mazda equipment in a comprehensive manner has been received from S. H. Kurlander of Reading, Pa.

Dear Editor:

I have been patiently waiting for some one to answer Brother Harrington's questions as published in the September 2d issue of the NEWS, as I wanted to find out whether or not I have the right dope myself. I am afraid, however, that all of the members are thinking the same as myself, so in an attempt to get them to throw off their handcuffs I am going to open up the argument in the hope of getting a wheeze from some Brother "Mazda-ists."

Here goes:

Some Good Dope

1. Bulging of the lamp is a pretty rare occurrence. I have only had this happen to me once. The reason I have for this is that the glass was a little weak in that spot and the heat of the lamp, coupled with the great pressure inside the lamp, over that outside, due to the gas expanding, forced the glass at the weak spot out in the form of a blister. This however, as I said before, does not often happen.

2. The pinhole in the dowsing should never be used for centering the filament and condenser in the aperture. If the pinhole were exactly on the optic axis (do you know what I mean?) this would be permissible. This, like lamp bulging, however, doesn't happen often as no effort I guess is made to center it. This is shown better by my sketch. The pinhole should only be used for setting the mirror with relation to the lamp filament.

3. The crystal beaded screen is what I call a medium screen. That is, it is neither highly reflecting (such as used for long, narrow houses) or highly diffusing (such as used for wide, shallow houses).

From the above, a one-eyed man could see that the crystal beaded screen should be used for medium width houses; for example, one about 50 ft. wide and 80 or 100 ft. long. (Refer to Sept. 23 issue for Editor's comments on this particular screen. It has peculiar characteristics.)

Let your ideas help some one else

There are two grades of crystal beaded screens, No. 1 and No. 2. The first has medium glass beads and is better for narrow houses and the second has fine glass beads and is better for houses a little wider.

The Mazda lamp manufacturers have got bulletins describing these points and I advise all wide-awake fellow projectionists to write in to a lamp manufacturer for a copy as they are free—gratis.

Talks of Lumen

4. Large screens should not be used unless they are absolutely necessary. The Mazda outfit, when operating under normal conditions, gives about 800 lumens, according to the lamp sharks. "What's a lumen," do I hear? (See Editor's remarks.) A lumen is a measure of the quantity of light. So 200 lumens represent twice as much light as 400 lumens. Do you follow me? When I said 800 lumens I meant on the screen. Naturally, if a large screen is used these 800 lumens are spread over a larger area and the brightness of the screen is reduced. If a small screen is used these same 800 lumens are spread over a smaller area and the screen brightness is increased.

Of course, it must be understood that the screen should not be too small. The size of the screen should be determined by the last row of seats (their distance from the screen). The longer the house, the bigger the screen. With the Mazda outfit, the screen size, for good results, should not be bigger than 16 ft.

This size of screen is big enough for throws up to 120 feet. I know of several houses that have a throw around 85 feet and a screen 19 feet wide is used. These theatres are all owned by the same outfit. They also own about sixteen other houses with throws ranging from 80 to 150 feet, and the same size screen is used in each one!!! Can you beat that!!!

Well, Ed., I've spoken my piece and no doubt I ought to loosen up a wheeze or two out of some of our tongue-tied brethren, but if they don't come through I wish you would check me up as I certainly want to get the best out of my outfit because I've already found out that it takes a damsite more headwork to run this dingus intelligently than was ever needed for the arc.

Yours for the cause,
S. H. KURLANDER.

Kurlander must have studied up on light when he begins to talk on lumens. A lumen is the technical term used in expressing a certain quantity of light, just as we express water in terms of gallons. In following Kurlander's explanation it is only necessary to understand that the lumen means a given quantity of light; think of it as a pound of light if the word lumen tends to confuse.

Not in Agreement

Referring to Answer 1 in the letter: The reason for the bulging of the lamp bulb was explained in detail by the Editor in last week's issue. It is due to the softening of the glass in the bulb due to incorrect focusing of the light from the reflecting mirror on the glass of the bulb when it is not at its correct position of focus—i. e., at the filament of the lamp.

Excepting for this one point, the rest of the answers are correct and clearly explained, though the peculiar characteristic of the beaded screen is not explained.—Editor.

Says Italy Offers Good Motion Picture Equipment Market

Of interest to American manufacturers of movie equipment is the fact that virtually all material used in the Italian movie studios is made in Germany, and this is also true of laboratory equipment, says Charles Rosher in the American Cinematographer. Price arrangements conceded, the American equipment manufacturer would find a ready market for his product in Italy, declares Mr. Rosher.

American productions are admired by Italian film attaches and apparently they welcome their exhibition in their country, writes Mr. Rosher, who recently returned from Italy, where he had the opportunity of analyzing many aspects of the Italian film industry. On the other hand, they are at daggers' points with the German product, as indicated by workers' demonstrations staged in the streets before the Parliament Building while the writer was in Rome.

The movie acting profession in Italy is on a very high plane, according to the writer. An able American director would find very responsive material there, but while it is the ambition of some of the players to come to this country some day, a great many of them, like some of the most distinguished Italian opera singers, prefer to concentrate their abilities in their native land, strange as this may seem with the art in its present condition there. As a rule the Italian actors are very sincere and painstaking with, perhaps, a tendency to overact. Their make-up is usually flawless.

Mr. Rosher on his trip through Italy observed that the Italians have a hobby for building their studios on hillsides, as they do their other buildings, so that every time a level ground set is required, a portion of a hill must be cut down and graded. In the construction of sets, Italians are far behind Americans, he says. Their preparations for the erection of a simple set are as elaborate as if they were building an office structure.

New Lincoln Theatre Opened in Troy

The Lincoln theatre, costing a matter of $200,000, owned and operated by Symansky Brothers, and which has been nearly a year in course of construction, was officially opened with "The Masquerader" the past week, in Troy, N. Y. The house, which has a seating capacity of about 1,100 persons, is located almost directly across from the city hall, and occupies a most advantageous point in the business center of the city. The theatre will be managed by Edward H. Crawford of New York, formerly associated with the Loew interests. An admission price of 35 cents will be charged and the programs will be made up of first run feature pictures. With a view to making it one of the best ventilated theatres, particular attention was paid during construction to this feature. A duct cooling system has been installed and the air can be changed within a few moments.—Grant.

No expense has been spared in any way to make this theatre comfortable for its patrons. One of the pleasing features of the house is the mezzanine or lounge. The walls are glazed in gray over ivory and touches of polychrome colorings of red and blue have been added. A new organ has been installed which is operated from the console which has been placed in the orchestra pit. The lobby is wainscoted with white Italian marble and the walls are paneled with gold moulds. A new electrical system has been installed. The architectural and interior decorative work has been under the direction of Mr. Kiehler of the firm of C. Howard Crane and Associates with offices in Detroit, New York and Chicago.

Throughout our electrically-operated laboratories we utilize wonder machines—machines of highest mechanical perfection.

But, machinery is brainless—chemicals are fickle—so at the points where mechanical devices fail, stand guard our skilled artisans whose verdict against the less-than-perfect is: "they shall not pass!"

So, by proper use of scientific implements combined with the best human equation, we obtain results not otherwise possible.

If it is screen quality you desire, plus a personal service feature of priceless value, you will protect the exhibitor and your own peace of mind by specifying Rothacker Prints.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

FREDERICK J. HASKIN, an authority on advertising and scientific merchandising, writes:

"The expert business man today will not consider placing an advertisement until he has made an investigation showing him his opportunities for selling people the kind of goods they want and can use."

In the motion picture field, Motion Picture News not only invites, but urges just the sort of investigation that Mr. Haskin states the expert business man demands.

In a field where intelligently written copy is productive of greater results than in almost any other line, the News offers 100% opportunities. It will sell the kind of goods exhibitors want and can use.

DON'T BE DELAYED

THE time a film laboratory can save a producer frequently amounts to a lot of money. A producer not only wants the best prints possible from a negative, but he wants his daily work done with speed and accuracy. He wants his directors to see their "rushes" immediately, so they may proceed with other scenes. He sometimes wants a quantity of release prints in a hurry, delay might cost him thousands of dollars.

LABORATORY delay adds useless overhead expense by keeping players on the payroll and keeping costly sets standing after they have served their purpose. It sometimes holds up the timely release of a picture when time means everything. The size of our plant, the completeness of our equipment, and the efficiency of our organization not only assures the best possible printing and developing, but precludes the possibility of unnecessary delay. Prove this in your next emergency.

"THE Young Rajah" is a worthy successor to "Blood and Sand." Valentino the magnificent again proves himself the master of exotic roles and passionate romance.

The story is fascinating, unusual, full of thrills, of mystery, and of mighty drama. The settings bewilder in their beauty and luxury. The cast is one of the finest ever assembled.

Some of the high points are the boat race, the weird temple scenes, the battle of Arjuna, the young Rajah's fight for life with the plotters, the re-incarnation ball, the poignant love scenes.

It has all the elements that make for one of the year's big successes.

Announcement

To the Motion Picture

Consider now with us in thoughtful amazement the crowning achievement of the cinema art—even the reproduction in motion pictures of

“The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln”

After more than a year of intensive research, directed by Dr. Gilbert Ellis Bailey, Ph.D., of the University of Southern California, in co-operation with Ray R. and Albert L. Rockett, and Miss Frances Marion, the ROCKETT-LINCOLN FILM COMPANY announces that the preliminary work for the production of the dramatic life of Abraham Lincoln in motion pictures has been completed and that actual shooting will begin upon final O.K. of the working script, a product of the matchless genius of MISS FRANCES MARION.

This research, covering a period of two hundred and fifty years, from the origin of the Lincoln family in England to the present time, embraces hundreds of interviews with relatives, friends, neighbors, associates and acquaintances of our Martyr Chief Magistrate; also authors, educators, government officials, army and navy officers and the custodians of all the great collections of Lincolniana in America, thus exhausting every imaginable remaining source of contact with Abraham Lincoln and his times—THE LAST WORD FOREVER IN LINCOLN LORE AND EXPRESSION. SUPREME IN ENTERTAINMENT AND EDUCATIONAL VALUE.

The broad scope of this picture will compel the most sumptuous production and the largest cast in the history of the cinema, while the quality of the cast will be limited only by the genius of the American screen.

Extraordinary

Exhibitors of the World

Without prejudice to any section, race, class or party, and in twelve reels of the most compelling drama since Calvary, this greatest of world stories, will be told with the WAR BETWEEN THE STATES as a background and with the strictest historical authenticity.

"The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln"

The producers believe the time has come to make history live again in action and to tell in animated scenes the great stories of the progress of humanity in order that the lessons may be better understood by all the people and at a sick world may be made to feel the healing inspiration of America's undying ideals.

Of this NEW ERA in pictures this Lincoln film is the herald and archetype and you are invited to share with us in the fruits of it, for no conceivable subject can more quickly or more largely be transmuted into box office returns.

"MARRIED PEOPLE"

featuring
MABEL BALLIN

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

Mabel Ballin's beauty, charm and fine acting are the outstanding features of this production. Also the gorgeous clothes she wears will make a distinct "hit" with feminine fans. There are several magnificent interior sets that form a fine background for Miss Ballin's beauty. There are several angles besides the appeal for feminine spectators that Miss Ballin's fine raiment will exert, from which exhibitors can draw inspiration and exploitation.—MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

It is a picture in which Hugo Ballin has ample opportunity to create attractive rooms and interesting compositions of which he is a master. It also gives Mabel Ballin a role of variety and a reason for wearing some beautiful gowns. As the petulant wife she conveys just the right impression.

Percy Marmont is excellent as the husband, he seems to be just the kind of a man such a woman would impose upon.

The picture holds the interest and has the quality that will attract the average audience.—THE MORNING TELEGRAPH.

It offers the star quite a suitable role and plenty of good opportunities to be appealing.

Director Ballin has provided his usual finished and artistic production. There are many splendid interior sets and he has handled the story effectively, on the whole.

The star is very pleasing and wears a fine array of pretty new gowns that will easily attract her feminine admirers. She makes the most of the role of the piquant young wife, who is transformed from a simple country girl into a spoiled and extravagant woman. Percy Marmont is a good choice as the husband.

Audiences will be pleased with "Married People," and you have a title with good exploitation possibilities.

—THE FILM DAILY.

Percy Marmont as the husband is very good.

Mr. Ballin's direction soars high above any of his other directorial efforts in this piece.

—EXHIBITORS' TRADE REVIEW.

"MARRIED PEOPLE"—Class A-C

"Married People" is an alluring title which should prove a valuable box office asset in conjunction with the name of the beautiful and talented star, Mabel Ballin.

The production may be classed among the best of the year. It is clean, entertaining, beautifully set and has the power of inspiring thought. The splendid acting of Mabel Ballin stands out beyond all else, for Dorothy Cleur, the extravagant, petulant, negligent wife, is a living person as portrayed by her; and she has made an intelligent distinction between the two phases of character described in the same woman under different circumstances.—SCREEN OPINIONS.

Hugo Ballin has done pretty well by this story—a story which might have been easily ruined had he not embellished it with deft touches here and there. He has provided a number of compelling scenes all of which are enhanced with handsome settings.

The star gives a pleasing performance assisted by Percy Marmont.—MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

My dear Mr. Marin:

to the Distinctive Pictures Incorporated to know that their film THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD starring George Arliss has been a great success in the new EASTMAN THEATRE this week and has been played to a full house at practically every performance.

Comments of warm approval have come to us from many people and my own personal opinion is that it is a wonderful picture from the standpoint of photography and acting and plot.

This type of picture should help greatly to elevate the standards of the industry and it should find great favor with any audience because of its strong human element.

I regard this production as one of the best so far produced.

CRITICS PRAISE

"Rags to Riches"—Warner's offer a human interest knockout that promises gold mine for exhibitors. Here's a production that is that big and that promising to warrant cancellation of any contract in order to show it at the best houses anywhere.

Motion Picture News :—

Here is a photoplay combining all the elements which build smashing returns at the box-office. Don't hesitate. Get this picture. Then take your money to the bank.

Film Daily :—

Barry's latest is another sure-fire box-office hit that you don't want to miss. Put in your order as early as possible and start getting them interested as soon as you are sure of it. You can't beat this for clean entertainment and a really "family" picture.

Exhibitors Trade Review :—

"Rags to Riches" is rare entertainment. It a wholesome story, a story for the whole blessed family, filled with laughs and many alternating chokes. A peach of an audience picture.

New York World :—

Here, we think, is a photoplay of rare quality, combining fun, romance, heart interest and excellent dramatic composition. See "Rags to Riches." It is highly amusing and intelligently constructed.

Evening Journal :—

A more delightful and wholesome comedy than "Rags to Riches," the principal attraction at the Capitol Theatre, has not been seen in New York for many months.

Morning Telegraph :—

"Rags to Riches" has something to please most everybody and ought to create as fine a cinema record as it did as a speaking stage production.

"RAGS TO RICHES"

Mail :—

"Rags to Riches" is a human picture, one in which you can warm up with a personal feeling toward the characters. It is interesting, and it is delightfully played by the cast which Wesley Barry heads.

Globe :—

There is rarely a dull moment and this is due both to comic incidents introduced and capable acting.

Telegram :—

An interesting picture and Wesley Barry is its juvenile hero. The story is told in an entertaining and human manner.

Herald :—

Barry's best film to date.

American :—

Wesley Barry is amusing in "Rags to Riches" at Capitol.

Post :—

"Rags to Riches" brings smiles in an interesting film at Capitol.

Sun :—

Good Entertainment. The clever youth is surrounded by a thoroughly competent cast.

Times :—

"Rags to Riches" has a good measure of amusing moments, which are due to Wesley Barry.

Zit's :—

"Rags to Riches" is rich in comedy. The film is always interesting and amusing, and the blending of comedy and adventure makes "Rags to Riches" a good picture.

Variety :—

"Rags to Riches" gives promise of being another "School Days." It's a great film for the youngsters and an amusing one for their elders. A wholesome picture of this kind deserves support.

SURE FIRE FLINT!

The local newspaper reported "the picture went on cold" and "warmed the house"

BIG SURPRISE AT PLAYHOUSE.

Saturday night, in the face of new opposition, the Playhouse was crowded to the doors to see Johnnie Hines in "Sure Fire Flint." It was a wonderful laugh-getter, as it kept the audience in laughter throughout the entire seven reels. Then the surprise. Manager Flagg escorted Johnnie Hines himself to the stage, where the people were given an opportunity to see and hear him in person, and from the comments of the audience it is one of the best comedy dramas they have ever seen. There were also with Mr. Hines the producer, C. C. Burr, Lester Scott, general sales manager

Such an attraction may be recognized by:

A box-office title that combines seat-selling power with exploitation possibilities.

A fast-moving, true-to-life story that begins like a squall at sea and ends like a tornado.

A dainty, sympathetic star whom the girls will like and the boys will love—

A well-balanced cast, striving with each other to contribute to the picture rather than to “steal the lens.”

A line of dynamic, colorful posters that definitely promise entertainment—

MICHELSON

IN PARIS

A Rippling Rollicking 5 Part Comedy

Old boy Bluebeard may have been the original lady-killer, but our hero could knock 'em dead, too!

In Paris—home of pleasure and play, beauty and lure—with girls, girls, everywhere.

Until it got to be too much of a good thing.

So he ran away—straight into the arms of the only girl he ever really wanted to marry.

You've been looking for a novelty feature. Unusual, enticing, possessing the appeal which gets attention and attendance.

This is it. Five reels of romantic adventuring along the boulevards of Paris.

The posters match the sparkle of the action. Exploitation and advertising copy in the campaign book like this:

SMART as a gown designed by Poiret.

INVITING as a demoiselle's wink.

SPICY as a whispered scandal.

What a play you can make on "One Night in Paris"!

If you had a buzzer on your desk—and just the pressing of it—would bring in an assistant who would rattle off:—

“Yessir—here’s the picture, date of release, star, director, cast, story!”

“Here’s what the reviewer says about it—what the producer says about it—what the paper is—how other exhibitors have advertised it—what first runs it had—what its box-office percentage is—etc., etc., etc.”

Well—you’d pay a lot for that service.

Every exhibitor today has just such an assistant.

Right on his desk. In his pocket if he likes.

It’s a bookkeeping index to all the booking and exploitation service any exhibitor anywhere needs on any picture.

He can be without press-books or any other such aid whatever.

But once he uses this unfailing assistant he’ll never trust another.

A Story That Offers New Complications"

The Exhibitor's Trade Review says: "Katherine MacDonald's picture, 'Domestic Relations,' runs along like a regular double header. At all times the audience is witnessing the domestic relations in the rich man's home and close after follows the showing of similar happenings in the less elegant home of the laborer. The story offers new complications and affords good entertainment. Katherine MacDonald does well and looks lovely."

Percentage

SEVERAL years ago this paper came out editorially in favor of the basic principles of percentage playing.

We added, too, the argument that advertising must play a prime part in any percentage scheme.

The editorial aroused considerable opposition from exhibitors; and since then a number of resolutions against percentage playing have been adopted at state and national conventions—unanimously and without discussion.

The main objection—made strenuously—by the exhibitor at the time we broached the matter was that the producer was after theatres or at least wanted to pry into his business; consequently the exhibitor would enter into no agreement that would make him show his books.

There was never, however, a cool-headed and specific discussion of the subject—though we frequently offered our pages for that purpose.

It is interesting to note that a similar situation exists in the British trade at this date.

The September issue of the Kinematograph says editorially:

“As lately as twelve months ago, anyone who had suggested that Percentage was ever likely to be generally employed in this country would have been written down a very careless student of Trade developments. Even today, the word has only to be mentioned at C. E. A. meetings to create so violent a reaction of opposition and contempt as to prevent anything like a full discussion of the principle. We believe, nevertheless, that Percentage will eventually become a live issue within a much shorter time than its present unconditional opponents imagine, and if eventually it finds acceptance in the Trade, it will be at the instance, not of distributors anxious for bigger profits, but of exhibitors desirous to show the best films on the market on terms which will allow them to retain a reasonable proportion of the money which the films bring to the pay-box.

“This may sound a wild prophecy at a moment when the exhibitor's problem is simply to make ends meet, and when he is much more concerned to get cheaper films than to contemplate a possible increase in the price of programs, but the reason is not hard to find if one looks a little below the surface of the Trade situation.”

The British situation has become acute because of the special showings given big pictures in special theatres.

“The Exhibitor,” says the Kinematograph, “thinks the flat rates demanded for supers exorbitant; the distributor thinks the theatre man is trying to get the masterpiece at the price of a fill-up.

“There is only one way out of the deadlock that we can see apart from the policy of direct exhibition. It is percentage.”

In the same issue H. D. Wood, a seasoned showman, says:

“There are many sides to the sharing principle, for and against. I do not advocate it as a general rule, because I think it is better for the exhibitor to make up his mind what he will pay for a film and finish with it. But there are some films which one should like to run but cannot do so, on account of the price asked by the renter. It is such cases as these that make one think that it would be worth while playing on the percentage basis. Providing your theatre is capable of taking the big money in the town, I am inclined to think that the renters handling the super stuff would be willing to share with you, so long as they were sure of a straight deal, and if the percentage scheme was tried out it may be possible that the renters would find out exactly what their super-films were really worth. Which, in the long run, would cause them to rearrange their ideas on the exhibition value of any given film.”

In this country percentage is going steadily ahead. Like the flat rental system, it has its evils; it is also a buyer and seller proposition and the regular buyer and seller troubles arise. But basically it is sound. It establishes picture values at the only point where values can be established—and that is at the box office. It goes far to eliminate the distrust and animosities and recriminations that poker game rates always bring about. It is cooperative and that point alone puts it at the very basis of the healthy progress of an industry that has become a big and basic one.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

REX INGRAM'S recently completed motion picture, "Trifling Women," succeeded "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the Astor theatre last Tuesday night. Two factors—public demand for a view of Mr. Ingram's latest production, and stipulations in contract for the theatre—have influenced Metro to present the picture for an engagement limited to four weeks.

A large and appreciative audience, representative of the screen, the stage and society, attended the premiere—an audience comprising such celebrities as David Warfield, Richard Barthelmess, Hope Hampton, Raymond Hitchcock, Doraldina, Betty Blythe, Anita Stewart, Hugo Ballin, Mabel Ballin, Paul Scardon, Mary Hay and Rodolph Valentino. The theme of "Trifling Women" is aptly implied in the title; it is a drama, singularly weird and sinister in places, of the sort of woman who takes all from the men, and gives nothing in return.

The new Ingram picture brings to the screen again many of the players who became so extensively liked for their appearances in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "The Four Horsemen." In the leading woman's role—incidentally the play is unique in having but one feminine character—is Barbara La Marr, the Antoinette de Mauban of "The Prisoner of Zenda." The director's most recent screen discovery, Ramon Navarro—the dashing "Rupert of Hentzau" in "The Prisoner of Zenda"—has an important role in "Trifling Women." Lewis Stone, who also appeared in a prominent role in the Anthony Hope story, is in the new feature, while Pomeroy Cannon, the lusty Madariaga of "The Four Horsemen," is also in the cast. Others include Edward J. Connelly, Hughie Mack, Gene Pouyet, John George, Jesse Welton and Hymen Binunsky.

The locale of the picture is France and the time the present and that period in the past when men carried rapiers beneath black cloaks. The story, scenario and staging are all Mr. Ingram's work.

GEORGE EASTMAN played host to Will H. Hays and Courtland Smith this week on the occasion of a visit of the two M. P. P. D. A. executives to the Eastman stronghold at Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Hays and Mr. Smith left New York on their up-state trip on Wednesday evening and spent Thursday as the guests of the manufacturer. The program for the day included an inspection of the great Eastman plant.

WE are going to envy Mrs. Sidney Drew, whose artistic appreciation of what represents the BIG LANDSCAPE has moved her to take up her permanent residence in a villa near Lake Como, Lombardy, Italy. Immediately following the completion of a six month vaudeville tour of this country, Mrs. Drew will make a special eight week appearance in London, following which she will go directly to Lombardy.

PARAMOUNT is feeling highly elated over "The Old Homestead," which can be truly put down as another milestone in the picture industry. The exhibitor may read the review in this issue of the News. He will agree with the verdict rendered. It is one of the greatest (if not the greatest) audience pictures which Paramount or any other company ever released. All the technique and mechanics of motion picture production have been used to make it a shining example of the silent drama. All the vital elements which have made Denman Thompson's play so endurable have been retained. And Theodore Roberts as Uncle John Whitcomb gives the greatest performance of his long and varied career.

When such a picture comes along—who is it that dares stand up and inquire—"What's Wrong with the Movies?"

EXHIBITORS in Canada are optimistic according to Vincent J. McCabe, Canadian Manager for First National, who is in New York looking over the market. He tells us that the business outlook in the Dominion is bright, and that exhibitors in some instances are paying higher prices than ever before, and making more money. What a contrast, such optimism, to what was uttered a year ago, when nearly everyone identified with motion pictures was registering black despair.

WITH all the ado that is being made over the Bankers' Convention and the World Series we must not overlook the fact that Doug and Mary are here. The stars dropped into New York and the Ritz-Carlton Tuesday after an extensive trip through Canada. They will remain a month, Doug to begin work getting his mammoth picture ready for presentation, while Mary looks over the Fifth Avenue shops.

EVERY now and then a producer comes forward with an earnest expression that the screen needs new faces—that the public has become tired of the "favorites" who bob up in every other picture. Well, Rex Ingram has been following their advice for some time. Valentino appeared on the screen for several years, but it took the Metro director to discover him. What of Alice Terry? And now he presents Ramon Navarro and Barbara La Marr as his newest discoveries.

This fellow Navarro made his first impression in Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda." Miss La Marr had her first big role in the same picture. And in the director's newest opus, "Trifling Women," they have the most important positions, Navarro seems to be a distinct "find." He has screen personality, poise, manliness and is of the same general appearance as Valentino. Even at this early day he is beginning to make an impression. Another year and Rodolph may have to watch his step. Miss La Marr is a very arresting type. Watch her and see if she doesn't scale the heights to stardom before next year's harvest moon.

HOW are you going to differentiate between two editors whose mail is continually reaching the wrong desks? Here is William A. Johnston, editor of the News, being confused with William Johnston, editor of the New York Sunday World, simply because the mail is misdirected. Perhaps the carriers think the A stands for Adipose Tissue instead of Allen, since the World Johnston is a rotund man who tips the scales at 250 pounds. He is now writing what is called "a masterpiece of humor" entitled The Fun of Being a Fat Man, published by Little, Brown & Company. William A. Johnston may some day write a book titled The Fun of Being Mistaken for a Fat Man.

CLYDE COOK recently visited "Bonesetter" Reese in Youngstown, Ohio. No, he wasn't suffering from a headache, just a sprained knee.

WARREN LEWIS has faded out of the picture insofar as publicizing screen stars is concerned. The erstwhile Hodkinson press agent is now writing "copy" for the Shuberts.

ROBERT L. OWEN, the Senator from Oklahoma, in a speech before the Senate, September 14th, declared that there is no danger of communism or bolshevism in America because the motion pictures alone would make it impossible. Senator Owen emphatically states that we should encourage in every way possible this the greatest agency ever conceived by man. "Moving pictures," says this Commoner from Oklahoma, "speak a universal language and the impressions through the eye have been proven to be over four times as powerful and enduring as the impression through the ear by the spoken word. Both the States and the Nation should multiply the vocational reels and give them free circulation as a means of multiplying the productive powers of the people. It would be the most valuable investment ever made by a government."

This expression uttered by one of our lawmakers is indicative of the potent force of the screen in establishing itself as a power for "government of the people, by the people, for the people." It is high time that some of our would-be serious thinkers who scoff at the screen should stop their vituperative attacks and accept the screen as one of the highest mediums of expression. It is here to stay and it covers such a wide field with its instructive and entertaining possibilities that anyone attempting to defame it makes himself ridiculous.

THEY are doing a lot of talking in England. Rudyard Kipling and Lloyd-George have had their say. Now Matheson Lang, an actor of parts for both stage and screen, rises to remark that "regular stage work is the best preparation for film acting." This announcement clashes with what D. W. has often expressed—that with the voice silenced stage experience cuts no figure.

RICHARD STANTON, following a long affiliation with Fox Film Corporation, took a pleasure trip to Europe, came back, gathered a crew and went over again, to make pictures. After an absence of almost a year, Mr. Stanton returned this week, expressing all good wishes for the continuation of success of production in Europe, but stating that the Statue of Liberty looks better to him coming in than it ever will again, going out.

IT must have taken a good-sized van to move Ernest Shipman's papers and things from 44th Street to Fifth Avenue, where he is now located in the Strauss Building. He represents thirteen Canadian film enterprises, and one of Italy. The papers, contracts, telegrams, et al are in charge of Claude H. MacGowan, the New York manager.

FELIX ORMAN of London has something to say about screen and stage acting, too. He fully believes that acting before a camera is infinitely more difficult than acting on the stage. "The artist in the theatre has his lines, the music and fascination of his voice, the magic of his personality in himself being there, besides the stimulating influence of the audience. The studio actor has none of these helps or influences; there is no audience; there is no voice. He is called upon to concentrate. And the camera is relentless."

Mr. Orman is very careful to point out that he is speaking of the type which really stands out as art. Here is a true champion of the silver sheet and its art. We stand up and sing "Rule Britannia" for he obviously must have been thinking of Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Barthelmess, Theodore Roberts, John Barrymore, Lillian Gish, Lloyd, Peters, Walthal and Ray—Americans all—to say nothing of two artists born in England who now call this country HOME—Arliss and Chaplin.

Lila Lee will tell you that the family monicker is Apfel, June Caprice was known up Boston way as Betty Lawson. The family name of Theda Bara is Goodman. Kid McCoy will tell you that he votes as Norman Selby. Franklyn Farnum's real name is James Smith.

THOMAS BRIERLEY has a big task to accomplish and he must feel highly elated to be loaned by the Christie people to the Actor's Fund of America. The art director will build the sets for "A Midsummer Night's Dream" which is to be staged in the Hollywood Bowl, today, for the Fund. Under the direction of Frederic Sullivan, the settings will cover the entire natural hillside and valley facing the bowl, the natural advantages making possible the most elaborate presentation of the popular Shakespearian play which has ever been staged. And they talk about the art of ancient Greece!

WITH exhibitors swarming into New York to look over the latest samples in celluloid, we would advise them to carry back "The Old Homestead," "Timothy's Quest," "Remembrance," "Rags to Riches," "The man Who Played God," "Grandma's Boy," and "The Eternal Flame."

Court Holds Mary Astor Contract Binding

Harry Durant's Contention Sustained Under Old "Master and Man" Act

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE McCOOK has decided that Mary Astor, a seven-year-old motion picture actress, is legally the indentured apprentice of Harry Durant, and has sustained a contract existing between them whereby he was to receive 25 per cent of all salary received by her from the time her weekly salary exceeded $100. The case was decided in accordance with the antiquated "Master and Man" act, which, according to Philip Wittenberg, Durant's counsel, has not been tried since 1804.

Durant, who is an official of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, claims to have made a fair contract, under the terms of which he was to instruct the girl and develop her as a star.

Mary Astor's name off the screen is Lucille Langhanke, and she lives with her parents at 44 West Tenth street, New York City. Her present contract is said to call for $1,000 a week, out of which Durant will share to the extent of 25 per cent on $900.

Mrs. Langhanke explained the indenture was signed by the girl's father, who thought it only another form of managerial contract, because he believed Durant's connections in the picture industry would provide great opportunities for the girl. The mother contended that no instruction had been given and that the girl had already been schooled in dramatic technique and pantomime before being presented to Durant. She contended Durant was not entitled to one-fourth of the girl's salary until she was twenty-one years of age, as provided for in the agreement.

In sustaining the agreement Justice McCook's decision said:

"Plaintiff, a minor and motion picture actress, has sued defendant, a playwright and motion picture producer and director, for the cancellation of a certain agreement between them and for an injunction to restrain him from asserting the same as a binding obligation or interfering with plaintiff in the unrestricted disposition of her services.

"The motion before the Court asks, apart from cancellation, substantially the same relief pendente lite as that prayed for in the complaint.

"The instrument under consideration is on its face an indenture of apprenticeship, reasonable in effect and in form complying with the statute. The plaintiff claims that it is not such—indeed, cannot be, because it does not in truth concern a trade or craft nor create the relation of servant or clerk in any profession, trade or employment—but is at most a contract of agency, voidable by the infant plaintiff.

"In my opinion the art in which the defendant by this indenture undertakes to instruct plaintiff brings the agreement within Section 120 of the Domestic Relations Law. For the rest, the best that can be said of plaintiff's authorities is that they hold (as, for example, the English case of James vs. Knauth, 26 T. L. R. 240 Kings Bench Division) it may be a question of fact whether the minor is a servant or an apprentice. In other words, if the designation or description of plaintiff as an apprentice is a subterfuge she may well be entitled to the relief sought.

"With this viewpoint it becomes essential to examine the relations and acts of the parties, as bearing upon intention. The

Exhibitor Builds Good Will by Quizzing Townsfolk

AN effective good will builder was used recently by the Grand theatre, Thomasville, Ga., as described by Hobson S. Johnson, assistant manager. The white population of Thomasville is about 5,000, and Johnson reports the plan as having been remarkably successful.

The cashier, a popular young lady, canvassed every white family in town, filling in a blank with the following information:

What type pictures liked best? Mostly clean drama.)

Favorite actors and actresses? (Leaders were Reid, Valentino, Norma Talmadge, Gloria Swanson, Meighan and Lloyd.)

Do you like comedies or news pictures? (About fifty-fifty.)

How many in family? How often visit theatre? (Varied from once a month to once a week.)

Do you like music with pictures? (Yes.)

Have you any objections or suggestions to make? (Most families thanked girl for interest shown.)

Any other comment? (Canvasser's idea of their sentiments.)

qualification of defendant to act as instructor is by him asserted, with supporting proof, and by the plaintiff denied. Defendant's failure to instruct plaintiff is alleged in the moving papers, while the answering affidavits tend to prove the contrary. None of the relevant facts set forth by the one party is admitted by the other.

"I conclude that plaintiff should not have the relief she asks, except as these issues may be determined favorably to her after a trial."

Harry Durant has issued the following statement in part:

"The question at issue is whether or not a fair contract made in good faith by all parties concerned shall be lived up to. More than that, it will probably establish the precedent whereby legal contracts may be entered into with safety by theatrical and motion picture producers with minors. It is time we had something of the sort. Heretofore producers and managers have developed and established stars who were under age, and then the star could be taken away by some other grasping producer.

"In this Mary Astor case, the ingratitude and unfairness of the parents has been astonishing. They brought their fourteen-year-old daughter to me, unheard of and unknown. Everyone had turned her down. They were poverty-stricken. The girl had great pictorial and photographic values. Moreover, her face had a distinct spiritual quality, a unique type for the screen, in my opinion. I undertook to put her over, and I have.

"Meanwhile, I advanced a good deal of money to keep the family going until she began to earn something. I have never received a penny for the money I advanced, nor have I ever received a penny due me from her earnings.

"I even gave her the name of Mary Astor, instructed her and directed her work, personally established her in the industry by publicity, made her a Broadway star entirely through my own moving picture connections and finally secured for her a contract by which she will earn $117,000 in the next three years. All this has been accomplished for a fifteen year-old girl in a little over one year.

"The judge has decided it was a fair contract. Whether or not I was qualified to enter into such a contract is answered by the record in the case, which has affidavits by Marc Klaw, Lee Shubert, William A. Brady, George Melford, Hugo Riesenfeld, John Golden, Sam H. Harris, Edgar Selwyn, George C. Tyler and others, which state specifically that I am so qualified.

"Furthermore, the trade papers, the Authors' League, magazine editors, in fact every person of prominence in the motion picture industry knows exactly what I had to accomplish personally in order to teach this girl and put her over successfully. It couldn't possibly have been done by her father, Mr. Otto Langhanke. Scores of prominent people in the movie world and a bushel of letters prove the contrary beyond question."

Ohio Exhibitors Relate Accomplishments

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a pamphlet just issued, call attention to the purpose of their organization, their accomplishments and future prospects.

The purpose of the organization is given as the protection of its members against the advances of opposing forces and destructive elements both within and outside the industry.

Among the accomplishments are an increased membership, the recall of passes and credentials issued by the former censor to volunteer inspectors throughout the state, and the completion of arrangements between the Division of Film Censorship, the Cleveland and Cincinnati Film Boards and the organization whereby violations are reported to the headquarters of each and no prosecutions take place unless a breach of confidence or cooperation is made.

The organization is preparing now for concerted action before the State Legislature next January against all forms of legislation adverse to its patrons and itself.

Sydney Cohen Starts Tour of Middle West

A somewhat extended trip, which will take in a number of places in the middle-west and may ultimately be made to reach the Pacific Coast, has been arranged by President Sydney S. Cohen of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' of America.

Mr. Cohen will leave New York on this tour Saturday, October 7th. He will be accompanied by M. J. O'Toole, Chairman of the National Public Service Committee; President W. A. True, of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners; Mr. M. E. Comerford, executive head of the Comerford circuit of theatres and a member of the National Board of Directors, and others.

The itinerary of the party will include state conventions of Motion Picture Theatre Owners in different states and meetings with Exhibitor Organizations in many of the large centers.

Berlin Faces Exhibitor Strike in Tax War

Houses May Be Closed in Protest Against 50% Levy on Receipts; Distributors Back Move

By Jerome Lachenbruch

A CONCERTED action by the Berlin Association of Film Distributors and the Association of Theatre Owners threatens to close all German motion picture theatres unless the government decides to reduce the high amusement tax which the theatres are compelled to pay. At the present time this tax amounts to fifty per cent of the gross receipts, which, together with increased cost of electric light, increased wages and other expenditures, makes it difficult for theatre owners to show pictures at a profit.

Recently the government of the state of Bavaria reduced the amusement tax for cinema theatres to thirty per cent, and the motion picture theatre owners in the other German states are demanding a similar reduction.

The American M. P. T. O. may learn from its German counterpart which is in complete alliance with the Association of Distributors. So close is their understanding that the Distributors have refused to deliver pictures to any theatre owner who opens his theatre in defiance of the agreement of the theatre owners to launch a protest strike and close their theatres either for one day or indefinitely. The duration of the strike has not yet been decided upon.

All the theatre owners are incensed not only because of the large amusement tax which cannot be entirely passed on to their patrons, but also because of the fact that their plea to state their case has been ignored by the civic authorities. Recently a delegation from the Association of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Berlin visited the Chief Magistrate in order to apply for a reduction of the amusement tax. The delegation was allowed to cool its heels in the Magistrate's ante-room, but he would not consult with it. Now the organization has applied to the Minister of the Interior, and should the request for redress be ignored, the theatre owners will strike.

A closing of the theatres will throw a large number of employes out of their jobs. The St. Louis Recognizes Screen Advertising

THE City of St. Louis has officially recognized the moving picture industry as the most approved method of advertising the advantages, good-will and past glory of a modern community to the world at large.

At a conference held in the office of Mayor Henry W. Kiel Thursday, September 28, and attended by leading clergymen, historians, civic leaders and big business men of St. Louis, arrangements were made with D. D. Rothacker, vice-president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, for that company to produce under the supervision of a committee of St. Louisians a motion picture to be known as "The Spirit of St. Louis" which will tell the history of St. Louis from the time LaCade founded the French trading post almost two centuries ago up to the present time.

This move marks a distinct advance for the moving picture industry. It is said to be the first time in history that a community adopted this means of advertising itself throughout the world.

Another of the Series on Foreign Conditions

THE accompanying article is another of the series being written exclusively for MOTION PICTURE NEWS by Jerome Lachenbruch on conditions in the foreign film markets. Mr. Lachenbruch, who was formerly associated with the Goldwyn home office staff, is at present in Europe engaged in work that puts him in intimate touch with the conditions that he describes so interestingly. His present article deals largely with a threatened strike on the part of German exhibitors in protest against the high amusement tax levied upon them by the government. And what will undoubtedly appeal to many as highly remarkable is the news that the Distributors are solidly behind the Theatre-Owner in his organized protest—backing him even to the extent of refusing service to the recalcitrants. Then there's some advance "info" on Lubitsch's latest production with Pola Negri. Watch the NEWS for additional articles forthcoming from Mr. Lachenbruch's typewriter.

public will undoubtedly sympathize with the theatre owners, for their tax is proportionately greater than that paid by almost all other industrial enterprises; and on these grounds the case of the theatre owners seems favorable. This means, of course, that not only will native films be held from presentation, but also imported American films. The latter, as I have heretofore reported, are, on the whole, the best money-getters in Germany, though the best recent American pictures have not been shown.

The culmination of the tax pressure in a protest has come about through the rise in the cost of films to the theatre owner. Before May, 1922, the theatre owner purchased or rented his pictures at a definite figure, stated in marks. But as the value of the mark began to depreciate, a clause was inserted in all contracts made by the renting organizations to the effect that future prices of pictures will increase as the value of the mark decreases. As a consequence, the actual price of films to the theatre owner is now eighty per cent more than it was up to May of this year. When one considers that the American amusement tax is less than one-third of what the Germans have to pay their government, it is evident that they cannot pay large prices for American pictures. Perhaps that is why so much of our second-rate stuff is being shown.

I have at last seen a photoplay made in Germany that, from the standpoint of handling, story and acting, might have been produced in California. This is the latest Lubitsch-Pola Negri production, which was made in the Berlin studio of the European Film Alliance, the German branch of Famous Players. The picture is the photoplay version of a well-known play by Hans Muller, "The Flame," and is the first straight dramatic production that Lubitsch has made. It is a powerful love story of a street girl and an inexperienced musician, with absolutely all suggestion of vulgarity removed, and remarkable character work by the six leading players.

Lubitsch has obtained a tremendously heightened dramatic effect by placing the actors in a corner of a room instead of shooting them with a whole roomful of scenery around them. The result is that attention is concentrated on the actors rather than the setting. The effect is that of close-up work without the ugly, over-emphatic results which that type of photography presents. The handling is absolutely direct, with no digressions, and shows the influence of the American idea in continuity writing.

Lubitsch's next production is to be a farce, a satire on court manners and on people's love of titles.

A short while ago Goldwyn's "The Penalty" was forbidden to be exhibited by the National Censorship Board. Lon Chaney's work as the legless king of the San Francisco underworld was too much for the sensitiveness of the censors.

Jackie Coogan Helps N. Y. Safety Week

Safety Week starts in New York October 7th and under the leadership of Judge Elbert Gary, a whirlwind campaign will be entered into which will last throughout the entire week.

Little Jackie Coogan has made a two-reel picture in which he demonstrates how children in large cities such as New York can avoid accidents and death. The picture was made at Jackie's Los Angeles studio under the supervision of his father, Jack Coogan, Senior.

In addition to this film Jackie posed for some special photographs which show him dressed in the uniform of a New York police officer. These photographs are to be used in poster form, and it is understood that over 200,000 of these colored one-sheet posters will be placed in prominent parts of New York this week.

Hartford Club Women are Own Censors

CLUB women in Hartford, Conn., have taken the matter of censorship into their own hands, headed by Mrs. C. H. Barrett, president of that city's Council of Women's Clubs. She declares she got started by: "the sneers of the cheap and thoughtless howlers against the phantom they have labelled the 'Blue Laws.'"

After lining up a few thousand women for the cause, she asked the exhibitors if they wanted to cooperate in the movement.

Mrs. Barrett, in outlining her semi-public censorship said:

"Our committee will see the pictures at the try-outs. The council will encourage attendance at the showings of the many pictures that are fine and moral in tone, and will use its influence to encourage a greater output of educational films.

"Our membership comprises thousands of mothers as well as business women who come into close association with the large numbers of girls and heads of the various organizations that are doing educational work. We expect by a united stand to create a new public opinion. In other words the women of Connecticut have decided to approve of all 'movies' shown and have better pictures or bust."

$2,000,000 Organization Formed

Associated Pictures Corporation Will Produce and Market Features

ON his return to New York this week, following an absence of several months, Herbert Lubin announced the formation of a new $2,000,000 picture organization to be known as Associated Pictures Corporation. The business of the new company will be to produce and market motion pictures in feature length.

The first production under the auspices of the new organization has just been completed, a picturization of the famous novel, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." This feature was made in the Metro Studios in California under the supervision of Arthur H. Sawyer, directed by Clarence Badger, formerly of Goldwyn, and employs a long list of stellar names, including Blanche Sweet, Elmo Lincoln of Tarzan fame, Barbara La Marr, one of the outstanding figures of the current Broadway screen success, "Prisoner of Zenda"; Lon Chaney, John Bowers, Louise Fazenda, June Elvidge, Hank Mann, Joseph Dowling, Victor Potel and a host of other players.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," which will be released by Metro Pictures Corporation as one of the outstanding specials of the year, will be followed by a series of productions adapted from the pens of famous authors and employing large casts comprising the most famous names obtainable from the ranks of present day film stars.

In the formation of Associated Pictures Corporation, Herbert Lubin has associated with the new enterprise some of the leading figures in the world of finance and banking. The President of the company is Marcus Jacobowsky, a man of vast financial and banking experience, and his advent in the film industry is looked upon as a marked step in the advancement of the motion picture business to a staple goal.

Herbert Lubin needs no introduction to the world of films. During the past ten years his connection as holder of the Metro franchise for the entire Dominion of Canada, his work as organizer of S-L Pictures, which has produced a series of excellent feature successes for Metro Pictures Corporation, including "Without Limit," "Garments of Truth," "Love, Honor and Obey," etc., and his forming of Petrova Pictures Corporation, which made a series of features starring Madame Petrova for First National, has established him as one of the leading figures in the world of production and distribution.

Arthur Sawyer, supervisor of production for Associated Pictures Corporation, has been intimately connected with studio work for a period of several years and the series of S-L special pictures for Metro is being made under his direct supervision, as well as the first big special of the new company, "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Missouri Agitators Are Again Busy

Missouri filmdom is preparing for another show-down battle with the fanatics, professional agitators and "blue-nosed" reformers when the next Missouri legislature convenes in January, 1923.

The opening skirmish was fought last August when the Republicans and Democrats nominated candidates for the state senate and house of representatives and another important engagement will take place on the first Tuesday in November, general election day.

The motion picture exhibitors of Missouri are alive to the situation. They have information that the reformers who were defeated at the last session of the legislature and who have unsuccessfully attempted to control the Missouri Constitutional Convention now in session at Jefferson City, have already laid their plans for next January. Questionnaires have been sent to candidates for the state legislature to ascertain their views on sumptuary laws, such as state censorship of moving pictures, Sunday closing and similar measures.

Kansas Candidate for Governor Against Censors

"I DON'T think much of this censorship thing!"

Simple words though they are, they are as important to Kansas exhibitors as a Supreme Court decision. That was the utterance of W. Y. Morgan, Republican candidate for governor of Kansas, at the M.P.T.O. Kansas convention at Wichita, Kas. In these words Kansas exhibitors see a handwriting on the wall—freedom, eventually, from the yoke of censorship.

In well informed political circles, Mr. Morgan is a 3 to 1 shot for election. In the same circles, Richard J. Hopkins, candidate for justice of the Kansas Supreme Court, is a 2 to 1 favorite. Both men are staunch believers in freedom of the press and speech, the former being a newspaper man and the latter the counsel of the M.P.T.O. Kansas. If these candidates are elected—draw your own conclusions.

Seven New Companies Launched in N. Y.

Seven companies incorporated in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, showing the following capitalization and directors: Milton Productions, Inc., $10,000, Henry A. Friedman, Marton M. Mandel, Fanny H. Edelman, New York; Autopitcou, Inc., Buffalo, $1,000,000, Otto E. Enell, George White, Buffalo; Donald McGiliverary, Port Colborne, Ontario; Children's Matinee Service Co., Inc., $100,000, Marie Louisa Fulton, John D. Fulton, New York; Oscar W. Lindquist, Boonton, N. J.; Edward Dillon Productions, $500, Edward Dillon, Girard S. Wittson, Joseph Edelson, New York; On The Stairs, Inc., $5,000, William H. Hurlbut, William G. Lovatt, David Schmeer, New York; Kings Park Theatres Corporation, $15,000, St. Clair Walsh, Garden City; Rosalind Sattler, Mildred Traum, New York; Mystic Enterprises, Inc., $8,000, Henri Clayton, John Rahner, Janet L. Dienstag, New York.

Remove Embargo, Plea in France

French moving picture theatre proprietors have decided to petition the government to remove the embargo on the importation of American films, because of a decline in their business, according to word from Paris.

The institution of the high tariff eighteen months ago has resulted in the importation of but few pictures. These have been exhibited first in the big houses and then in the smaller ones. When they have completed the round once, they are started over again, and because of this there has been a decided falling off in patronage.

The French output is said to be nothing like sufficient to meet the demand.

Damages Are Asked on Contract Breach

Innovation Films, through its attorneys in New York, are proceeding against Exhibitors' Fund for the purpose of collecting damages for alleged breach of contract. Charges of delays and misrepresentation are the causes of complaint, according to word from Innovation Films. All relations between the two have been abrogated.

American Bankers Association Convening in N. Y. Receives Hays' Message at Capitol

THE CAPITOL THEATRE, New York, was taken over by the American Bankers Association on Tuesday evening, October 3rd. The A. B. A. held their national convention at the Hotel Commodore, New York, during the current week, and the presence of six thousand delegates from all parts of the country in New York was made the occasion of a special performance at the big Broadway cinema palace. A special program was presented, including a message from Will H. Hays, which was flashed on the screen before the delegates. Mr. Hays was unable to appear in person.

Mr. Hays's message set forth the tremendous finances involved in the operations of the motion-picture industry and called attention to the three-fold influence for good exercised by the screen in the way of entertainment, instruction, and the promotion of international understanding.

"The motion picture will sell America to the world," declared the message. "The motion picture frontier has become a business thoroughfare. The business is seeking and finding a firm anchor in the same strong rules that govern banking and manufacture. The motion picture may be the most potent force for entertainment, education, moral influence and general usefulness in the world."

The special performance started at 8.30. Following the regular performance at 7.00, the theatre was closed to the public and the house made ready for the reception of the delegates. In addition to the elaborate musical program, S. L. Rothafel added the Fantasy from the "Queen of Sheba" with orchestra, ballet, soloists, and ensemble. The regular film program was presented with Goldwyn's "Remembrance" as the feature attraction.

Goldwyn Completes Exploitation Staff

Carefully Selected Force of Experts Are Being Assigned to Each Exchange

ASSIGNMENTS of exploitation men to each exchange are being completed this week, according to announcement from Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. While personnel of the force has been determined, general names are withheld for the present on account of the fact that the men have not completed their engagements with other organizations.

Each field man will be known as a Goldwyn man and arrangements are being made to provide a force so large and so mobile that every exhibitor who desires the service can be given attention.

The exploitation force will be conducted as a part of the Department of Advertising and Publicity, Howard Dietz, Director, and under personal supervision of R. E. Pritchard, Exploitation Manager.

True to its promise, Goldwyn has required every man named for this work shall have either actual exploitation experience or have served as a theatre manager.

The announcement includes these names: W. R. Ferguson, who for the past two years has been attached to the home office and ended in unusual exploitation assignments, will be special representative and will devote his time largely to pre-release showings at the Capitol theatre and other work under the direction of the home office.

L. D. Barclay, general manager of the Grand Amusement Company, Johnstown, Pa.

Charles C. Perry, who has just left the post of managing director of the Capitol theatre, St. Paul, and the State theatre, Minneapolis.

Phil Gersdorf, manager of theatres in Jacksonville, Fla.

William Robson, one of the original members of the Famous Players exploitation staff.

J. D. Stewart, former director of publicity for the E. H. Hulsey theatres in Texas.

Saul Silver, who has been attached to several New York City theatres.

Frank Burns, publicity director for the Southern Enterprise theatres in Orlando, Fla.

H. H. Niemyer, publicity director for the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, having recently returned from Europe to that post.

Richmond Dorman, who comes to Goldwyn from the management of the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

James Carrier, general manager for the Harry Koplar theatres in St. Louis.

Eddie Carrier, who has been associated with his brother in the greater part of their exploitation work.

R. J. LaVoise, who leaves the management of the Camera-phone theatre, Pittsburgh, to become a Goldwynner.

Howard J. Phillips, who comes from the management of the Sigma theatre, Lima, Ohio.

Robert H. Clemmons, who has been manager for S. A. Lynch theatres and who has just come from the management of the Tivoli theatre, Beaumont, Texas.

Howard G. Carroll, who leaves the management of the International theatre, Niagara Falls.

Earl Payne, who has been in the publicity department of the California theatre, Los Angeles.

John Wilstach, who comes of probably the most famous family of theatrical advance men and who has had experience in handling road companies for big theatrical and motion picture successes.

W. A. Burke, who leaves the post of publicity director of the Rialto theatre, Butte, Mont.

William H. Branch, who comes to Goldwyn from the management of the Princess theatre, San Antonio.

Edward F. Finney, who is attached to the home office for the present.

Cleveland Survey Shows Conditions Improved

Three-Fold Study by Cinema Club Brings Out Many Facts Regarding Theatres

THAT the character of motion picture films, as a whole, is good, and that conditions are improving, at least so far as Cleveland, Ohio, is concerned, is indicated by the results of a survey made by the Cleveland Cinema Club, copies of which reached Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week.

The survey was undertaken by the Cinema Club with a three-fold purpose: First, for its own information, to find out conditions in regard to children's attendance, programs and prices; second, for the Better Business Commission of the Cleveland Advertising Club, facts pertaining to the truthfulness, or lack of it, of the poster advertising; and third, for the Better Films Council, as to general conditions, vaudeville and the exhibition of the censor's seal on all pictures.

At the time of the survey there were approximately ninety-three theatres open in the city of Cleveland out of 170 previously in operation, due to poor business conditions. Twenty-seven theatres, in all, were surveyed in Cleveland and nearby towns, ninety-seven performances being seen.

Of the features seen, eleven were rated as artistic, eight as uplifting, fifty-five as entertaining, five as trash, seven as harmful and three were shown without the censor's seal.

Of the comedies, twenty-one were adjudged as good, thirty fair, eight as bad and four were shown without the censor's seal.

Seven educational pictures were shown without the censor's seal.

Thirty-four of the theatres visited ran clean bills.

Of the sixty-seven houses, forty used lithograph posters, seventeen used photographs, and of this fifty-seven, fifty-one used both. One poster was rated as not truthful and three as exaggerated.

The lighting of fifty-nine theatres was rated as good, nineteen as fair and twelve as poor.

Ventilation ran in nearly the same proportion, fifty-one being rated good, twenty fair and fifteen poor.

Twenty-six of the houses showed entertainment other than pictures, and ten ran vaudeville. About ten per cent of the vaudeville was rated as suggestive or vulgar.

Attendance was good in forty-five houses, fair in twenty-two and poor in twenty-two.

At twenty performances the attendance was 100 per cent adult; at five performances it was 95 per cent adult and 5 per cent child; at five performances it was 90 per cent adult and 10 per cent child; at nineteen performances it was 75 per cent adult and 25 per cent child; at two performances it was 66 2-3 per cent adult and 33 1-3 per cent child; at thirty performances it was 50 per cent adult and 50 per cent child; at one performance it was 33 1-3 per cent adult and 66 2-3 per cent child; and at three performances it was 25 per cent adult and 75 per cent child.

The attention given the performance was rated as follows: Interested, sixty-nine; indifferent, eight.

The behavior was, in seventy-six cases, good; in seven, fair; and in three, bad.

Under the heading of "Remarks," it is noted that the programs were too long in some cases, and that there was an excessive amount of advertising of coming attractions.

Certain theatres were rated as dangerous fire hazards, or unsanitary. One of these has been condemned and razed, after investigation by the M. P. T. O. A. The others are under investigation.

Four theatres were holding children's contests with prizes, and the effects of these are being studied.

The general conclusions drawn were as follows:

"From this general study of the character of motion picture films shown in Cleveland and Northern Ohio it will be seen that they are, on the whole, good and that conditions are improving. There is evidence of effort on the part of the exhibitor to attract the public with long programs, introducing other forms of entertainment in addition to films, and a somewhat increased effort to attract children through contests, prizes, etc., all of which, it would appear, is due to the unusual economic conditions.

"The novelty of the screen having passed, there is evidence that the public of Cleveland and Northern Ohio are becoming educated, discerning, picking and choosing their entertainment with greater care—becoming more critical. The makers of pictures are recognizing this condition generally, as evidenced by the employment of the best story writers of the country, and furnishing ample funds for the use of skillful directors in securing the highest artistic results. Thus we seem to have a healthy, all-around growth of the maker, the exhibitor and the public."

Selznick Sells "Smile Week" Idea

Claims Washington Governor Inaugurated Week After Seeing Select Picture

GOVERNOR HART, of Washington, has issued a proclamation designating the week beginning October 9th as "Smile Week." Newspapers throughout the state, among them the leading dailies in Seattle, Tacoma, and Spokane, are publishing daily editorials commenting upon the movement and there is a tremendous drive on to make the week one long to be remembered.

With becoming modesty, Select Pictures Corporation makes a bow and claims considerable credit for the entire affair—and is prepared to prove their claims. Here's how it happened:

When the Selznick special, "Love Is An Awful Thing," starring Owen Moore, was sent out to the branches General Manager John S. Woody, of Select, prodded his field men considerably with the idea of making them put on some regular trade showing in their respective cities in order that they might interest a wider circle of people than are commonly attracted to a new photoplay.

Phil Selznick, special representative working out of the home office, happened to be in Seattle, Wash., and dipped into the showing there, working with Branch Manager Paul R. Aust. Seattle city officials, including the Chief of Police, accepted invitations to the screening. The Chief was particularly pleased and contributed a rather humorous letter in which he said that he was seriously considering the idea of showing the comedy to refractory prisoners in order that they might laugh themselves into being better boys.

Right away Phil Selznick got the idea that possibly the Governor of the state might be interested in prescribing laughter and smiles as an antidote for some of the troubles of his people. He took his idea to Governor Hart at the state house in Olympia and the governor liked it. Hence "Smile Week"—not to help "Love Is An Awful Thing" alone but to help everything wholesome and pleasant on the screen, on the stage, or in the more common pursuits of life.

Actors' Fund Benefit in Hollywood Bowl

A big benefit for the Actors' Fund of America is to be held in the Hollywood bowl this Saturday night under the auspices of the Motion Picture Directors' Association. It will be supported by the entire industry. The feature will be a presentation of "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream," with a stupendous cast.

"Notoriety" Given Trade Showing at Boston

A TRADE showing of "Notoriety," William Nigh's production, to be handled by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, was held at the Copley Plaza hotel in Boston on Tuesday evening.

The showing was attended by a large number of prominent New England exhibitors, trade paper representatives and film men.

Full details of the showing, together with a review of "Notoriety," will appear next week in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Governor Hart, of Washington (state), who has claimed a "Smile Week" for the week beginning 7 as explained by the accompanying story, being photographed by a Selznick camera man in connection with the event

Italian Pictures for U. Market

The Unione Cinematografica, Italiana, an American interests of which are cared for by Count Thaon Di Revel, has several big productions in preparation for the American market. Count Revel, who has been making an intensive study of the American market, has his offices in New York City.

He states that the Unione Cinematografica Italiana has ready for release this year several big specials "Cyrano di Bergerac," played on the American stage for four years by the late Richard Mansfield, and "The Betrothed," and twenty-six normal productions. Other big specials are now in the making.

Fox Denies Practically All Federal Charges

Corporation Files Brief; Trade Commission Complains Against State Right Firms

TWO matters of interest to the motion picture industry came up at Washington this week before the Federal Trade Commission; first, the filing by the Fox Film Corporation of an answer to the commission's charges in regard to reissues, denying practically all of the charges set forth; and second, a complaint was entered by the commission against a group of state right distributors in connection with reissues, more particularly the Triangle reissues and "The Three Musketeers."

The Fox Film Corporation, through its attorney, Saul E. Roger, denies every charge in paragraph one of the complaint, except as to the facts descriptive of its incorporation, etc., and its similarity to other distributing and producing organizations. Under this clause it admits that its patrons agree to use only such paper as will be furnished by William Fox to exploit Fox productions.

It denies each and every allegation in the second paragraph except that it admits the reissue in 1920 of "Sink or Swim," "The She Tiger" and "Camille of the Yukon."

The second case, in regard to state rights distributors, involves the following: Films Distributors' League, Inc., New York; Eastern Features Film Company, Boston; Favorite Players Film Corporation, Chicago; Lande

Film Distributing Corporation (of Ohio), Cincinnati; Lande Film Distributing Corporation (of Delaware), Cleveland; Supreme Photoplay Corporation, Los Angeles; Favorite Film Company, Detroit; Friedman Film Corporation, Minneapolis; Alexander Film Corporation, New York; Supreme Film Company, Los Angeles; Quality Film Corporation, Pittsburgh; Leo G. Garner, doing business under the trade name and style Reliance Film Exchange, Washington; M. Brown, doing business under the trade name and style Capital Film Exchange, Philadelphia; William Alexander, New York; Maurice Fleckles, Chicago, and Herman Rifkin, Boston. The charge is that these respondents "have been and are using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said Act, etc."

The claims set forth in the complaint are as follows:

That these distributors, prior to the incorporation of the Film Distributors' League, about November, 1920, severally entered into contracts with the Triangle Film Corporation for the so-called "Triangle reissues," and organized the league for their mutual convenience and aid in getting proper posters, advertising matter, etc.

That about April, 1921, the Douglas Fairbanks Picture Corporation commenced the production of a photoplay entitled "The Three Musketeers," in which Douglas Fairbanks played the star role, and which cost approximately $700,000. The exhibition of this to the public began on Aug. 28, 1921. This was extensively advertised in advance.

That the respondent league and respondent distributors, with the intention of deceiving and misleading the public, chose from among the Triangle reissues a photoplay produced by Triangle in 1915 at a cost of about $150,000, entitled "D'Artagnan," which was then leased under the title, "The Three Musketeers," with posters featuring the new title in large type and qualifying statements, such as "Adaption of D'Artagnan," and the like in inconspicuous type.

That the respondent distributors suggested to, advised and counseled exhibitors to rent this picture to advertise it in such a manner to lead the public to believe it to be identical with the Douglas Fairbanks photoplay, and in some cases furnished an old Douglas Fairbanks picture to be shown on the same program, with the star's name featured prominently, so as to lead the public to believe he was appearing in "The Three Musketeers" at that theatre.

Hearing on the complaint has been set for Nov. 7, 1922, at 10:30 a.m.

National Tie-ups for "Remembrance" Made

BY arrangements made between Goldwyn and the United Cigar Stores and also between Goldwyn and the Victor Talking Machine Co. "Remembrance," which is playing at the Capitol, New York, this week, will receive effective exploitation.

A one-sheet card effecting a tie-up between the picture "Remembrance" and the Ricoro cigar has been placed in the windows of 750 United Cigar stores in Greater New York this week. The card will be used in the Philadelphia stores when the picture is shown there. United Cigar stores in all other cities where the picture will play will also display the window card, according to word from the Goldwyn offices.

The Victor Talking Machine organization is arranging to get in touch with all its dealers throughout the country so that tie-ups may be arranged between them and local exhibitors who play the picture. The tie-up is being developed around window displays of records of old-time songs. The Goldwyn office has been asked to acquaint the Victor organization of the bookings on the film.

Netter Resigns as N. Y. Exchange Head

Leon D. Netter who has been managing the New York Exchange for Educational Films for the last eight months, has resigned, effective October 14th. Mr. Netter has been identified with the Educational Film Exchanges, Incorporated, for the past two years, being successfully put over the Seattle office, after which he was promoted to New York. He will announce his future plans in near future.

Five Universal October Releases

Company Officials Claim Group Strongest Put Out in Single Month

A GROUP of five five-reel Universal Attractions, featuring such stars as Gladys Walton, Ed (Hoot) Gibson, Henry B. Walthall, Ralph Graves, Marjorie Daw, Frank Mayo, Lois Wilson, Jack Mulhall and Ralph Lewis are being made available to exhibitors during the month of October. In addition, "Human Hearts," a Universal-Jewel production, starring House Peters, is being booked for immediate showings.

The Universal Attractions include "The Long Chance," "The Girl Who Ran Wild," "The Lone Hand," "Wolf Law" and "Broad Daylight."

"Human Hearts" is proving itself a worthy successor to the previous House Peters picture, "The Storm." Adapted by King Baggot from Hal Reid's celebrated rural drama of the same name, "Human Hearts" has been accepted with wide open arms by the picture lovers of the communities in which it has received a pre-release showing, Universal claims.

"The Long Chance," was written by Peter B. Kyne. It was directed by Jack Conway. It features a trio of popular stars—Henry B. Walthall, Marjorie Daw and Ralph Graves. William Bertram, Boyd Irwin and Jack Curtis also are in the cast. The picture was released October 2.

"The Girl Who Ran Wild," Gladys Walton's October special, was adapted from Bret Harte's celebrated story, "M'liss." Universal changed the name as an act of courtesy to another company which released a picture by that name a number of years ago. "The Girl Who Ran Wild" was directed by Rupert Julian.

"The Lone Hand," Universal's release for October 16, is a new Edward (Hoot) Gibson picture, directed by Reaves Eason. Supporting Hoot is Marjorie Daw, William Welsh, Jim Corey, Jack Pratt and Bob Kortman.

"Wolf Law," Frank Mayo's latest feature, will be released October 23. It is a stirring story of the Ozarks written by Hugh Pendexter and directed by Stuart Paton. Sylvia Breamer plays the leading feminine role.

Universal's last October release will be "Broad Daylight," a feature production made by Irving Cummings, with Lois Wilson, Jack Mulhall and Ralph Lewis in the featured roles.

Associated Acquires Film Based on "Eili, Eili"

Associated Exhibitors has completed arrangements with E. S. Manheimer for the distribution by Associated of "Breaking Home Ties," a six-reel feature inspired by the song, "Eili, Eili." The cast includes Lee Kohlmer, Rebecca Weintraub, Richard Farrell, Arthur Ashley, Betty Havill and Jane Thomas.

"The Face In The Fog" Oct. 8 Release

PARAMOUNT announces for release on October 8 the Cosmopolitan production, "The Face in the Fog," which shares that date on the season's schedule with "The Old Homestead."

This is one of the best stories from the pen of Jack Boyle, writer of tales of crime and intrigue and their detection. The scenario was written by John Lynch in collaboration with the author, and Alan Crosland directed. Lionel Barrymore and Seena Owen are featured, with Lowell Sherman heading the supporting cast.

The plot involves the smuggling into America of some of the Russian crown jewels by a Count and Grand Duchess at the outset of the revolution, and the murder of their servant and accomplice by Terrorists who have followed the couple to this country.

Fox Names Releases for October

"Lights of New York" and "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" Head Schedule

"LIGHTS OF NEW YORK" and "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" head the October release schedule announced by Fox Film Corporation this week. Six feature productions, four special comedies, three Sunshine Comedies, three Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons and the Fox News issues complete the list.

"Lights of New York," the sixth Fox special on the 1922-23 program, is set for general distribution on October 22. It was directed by Charles Brabin. The cast is headed by Marc MacDermott.

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them," the seventh special, which was adapted by Paul H. Sloane from the story by the mysterious "Mr. X," will be released October 29th. The picture is now in the fifth week of its engagement at the Lyric theatre, New York. The title will be changed at an early date. In this connection the Fox Film headquarters announces that a prize of one thousand dollars will be offered for the best suggestion.

The William Farnum release on October 15 will be "Beyond Compromise," from the story by Lilian Bennet Thompson. It was directed by Emmett J. Flynn from the screen version by Bernard McConville. This will be Farnum's first picture made at the West Coast studios since his return from Europe last fall.

Tom Mix comes on October 1st, in "Do and Dare," a tale of the American plains and a South American revolution. The story is by Marion Brooks, and the direction by Edward Sedgwick.

"Calvert's Valley," from the pen of Margaret Prescott Montague, will be the October vehicle for John Gilbert. Jack Dillon directed the film, which goes to distribution on the 8th.

Charles Jones will be starred in "Bells of San Juan," adapted from Jackson Gregory's novel of that name. Scott Dunlap directed. October 15th is the release date.

The youthful Shirley Mason is presented in "Youth Must Have Love." This five-reel adaptation of Dorothy Yost's story was produced under the direction of Joseph Franz. This picture will be released October 1.

Rowland V. Lee has directed William Russell's October 22nd release, "Mixed Faces," which is based on a story by Roy Norton.

The second of the series of special comedies by Lupino Lane will be ready October 8. The title is "The Pirate," and the film was directed by Jack Blystone.

Clyde Cook's next special comedy will be "High and Dry." It is said to contain many new comedy situations.

"The City Chap," starring Al St. John and directed by the actor, will be released October 15th.

A Lee Kid reissue, "Double Trouble," re-edited by Ralph Spence; three Sunshine Comedies, "Dandy Dan," "Step Lively, Please" and "The Haunted House"; three Mutt and Jeff Cartoons, "Red Hot," "Fallen Arches" and "Cold Turkey," and four editions of Fox News complete the month's output.

Massive Set Is Built for Paramount Production

What are declared to be the biggest hotel sets ever constructed at the Famous Players-Lasky West Coast studios serve as the setting for "Making a Man," the Paramount picture starring Jack Holt and directed by Joseph Henabery. This hotel, a replica of a prominent Eastern hostelry, is described as having three enormous elevators, a mammoth staircase and back stairs. Stage number two, one of the biggest at the studio, is said to be almost entirely covered by the set.

In "The Head Hunters of the South Seas," Martin Johnson expeditionary subject, released by Associated Exhibitors, it would seem cannibals are plentiful as extras.

Foreign Deal Closed by Lichtman

A transaction in the foreign field that involves a considerable amount of money has been closed between Al Lichtman, representing the Al Lichtman Corporation, and the Sociedad General Cinematografica, through the latter's local buyer, Juan Kunzler.

The entire release list of the Lichtman organization will be distributed in Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador by the Sociedad for one year.

The deal carries an unusual significance, perhaps, in that only one of the pictures involved has been generally exhibited. That is "Rich Men's Wives." Two others, "Shadows" and "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," are ready for release, while "Are You a Failure?" and "The Hero" are now in production at the B. P. Schulberg plant in Los Angeles, where the Preferred Pictures are produced.

Belasco Productions Enters Field

A NEW producing organization, known as Belasco Productions, Inc., and headed by Edward Belasco, brother of the famous stage wizard, has just finally completed organization.

This announcement was confirmed in New York this week by George H. Davis, Eastern representative of the new company, and now in New York engaged in getting releasing activities in motion.

The company started actual production this week on its first picture, an original story by Lois Zellner, called "Her Price," with an all-star cast headed by Miriam Cooper, and including Forrest Stanley, Mitchell Lewis, Richard Tucker Maude Wayne, and Kate Lester, and directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald.

Select Will Distribute Read Picture

"PAWNED," the J. Parker Read, Jr., production which has excited interest since it was brought on from the Coast some weeks ago, is to be distributed by Select Pictures Corporation. Negotiations between Mr. Read and Lewis J. Selznick, president of Select, were completed a few days ago and "hurry-up" instructions which have been issued all along the line are expected to land prints in Select branches throughout the country within the next three weeks.

The scenario is from a story by Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man," which appeared not long ago in Munsey's magazine. The direction is by Irvin V. Willat. Tom Moore and Edith Roberts are featured in the cast which also includes Charles Gerard, Josef Swickard, Billy Elmer, and others.

Talmadge Sisters Hobnobbing with Celebrities

Norma and Constance Talmadge are kept busy meeting celebrities in their tour abroad, according to dispatches being received at the First National headquarters. During their recent sojourn in Paris, Mlle. Paulette Goddard, the French head-liner, and the American team in the International Pistol Tournament were among those who paid their compliments to the Talmadge sisters. The schedule for their English itinerary includes their presentation to the King and Queen and a meeting with Lloyd George. They have also received an invitation to dine with the Lord Mayor of London and his wife.

Joseph Schenck will confer shortly in Berlin with soviet officials for the purpose of arranging the details of a proposed trip through Russia. Plans are also being made for the reception of the Talmadge party in various cities of Italy, Germany and Austria.

F. B. O. Expands Exploitation Staff

Thirty Representatives to Be Placed to Render Service to Exhibitors

BEFORE the end of the present month there will be an exploitation representative stationed in thirty Film Booking Office branches throughout the country. This announcement, one of the most important to emanate from the F. B. O. Home Office since its reorganization and change of name from Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation several months ago, was made this week by J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of the corporation.

Heretofore eight exploitation men have been working in the field for F. B. O. They have been exploiting mainly "In the Name of the Law," duplicating and in many cases adding to the remarkable results obtained in New York during the pre-season run of that picture. Under the new plan an exploitation man will be attached permanently to each F. B. O. branch to do general exploitation on all Film Booking Offices releases and to tender a comprehensive service to all exhibitors. This will occasion the employment of twenty-two exploiters in addition to those already serving F. B. O. in that capacity. These men are Jesse Weil, in Buffalo; Frank Leonard in New York; Charlie Giegerich in Philadelphia; Harold F. Wendt, in Cleveland; Louis Kramer, in Chicago; Hal Horne in Omaha; Preston Hickey, in Minneapolis; and Monte Rice in Seattle. The first to be added to this exploitation talent is Gilbert P. Josephson, who has been assigned to the Albany exchange.

The enlarged exploitation staff will be under the supervision of Al Boasberg, director of exploitation. Mr. Boasberg became associated with F. B. O. several months ago, having come from the exploitation force of Famous Players. The basic idea of the new department will be exhibitor cooperation, and each exploiter is being instructed not only in the essential elements of successful exploitation, but in the various ramifications of exhibitors' service which it will be his duty to thoroughly execute.

The establishment of a permanent and nation-wide exploitation force is another of the constructive movements made by the reorganized Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation in the past four months. It was the announced aim of P. A. Powers, managing director, to establish his organization as a highly specialized sales and exploitation medium through which the independent producer of high standard would find a proficient agency, and the independent exhibitor an organization eager to serve him with practical showmanship methods. This latest expansion is in line with Mr. Powers' policy and its announcement awaited only a final conference with him upon his return from the West Coast, where he has been supervising the production activities of F. B. O. at the R-C Studios.

Foreign Distributor for Paramount Here

Max Glucksmann, Paramount distributor in Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia, arrived in New York on Monday, Sept. 25th, to spend a few weeks in connection with his business interests as one of the largest film distributors in South America.

In an interview with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Mr. Glucksmann told of encouraging conditions in the Argentine film industry and predicted a prosperous year in the film trade.

Mr. Glucksmann states that he released "The Sheikh" simultaneously in five theatres in Buenos Aires, where it repeated the enormous hit this Paramount production has made in every part of the world.

Pathe Shows Smyrna Holocaust

Camera Visualization Shown On New York Screen In Remarkable Time

WHILE the ashes of Smyrna are still warm, Pathe News is flashing on the theatre screens of this country a complete motion picture report of the frightful scenes of the first great conflagration in the Turkish invasion of Europe.

Exactly two weeks from the date of the Smyrna holocaust which shocked the civilized world, rushed from the blazing center of the new great war through the air and over six thousand miles of ocean and land, this faithful camera visualization was given to motion picture patrons in New York and other big Eastern cities of the United States.

The Pathe News exclusive film marking this "scoop" in screen news reporting, reached New York aboard the Aquitania on Saturday morning, September 30. It was immediately developed at the Pathe News laboratories, where prints were made while Editor Emmanuel Cohen and his editorial staff prepared and photographed the titles. The completed prints were distributed to New York theatres in ample time for their evening performances on that same day.

When the Turco-Greek controversy began to look dangerous, George Ereole with a roving Pathe detail was in Vienna. Rome, with its Pathe News Office and camera staff, was nearer; but Ereole, with his special experience and knowledge of conditions in the disturbed area, was the logical choice for the important mission which the foresight of Editor Cohen had created.

Ereole's sensations, and the personal perils he encountered, in "close up" cranking of his camera in streets crowded with frantic Christian men, women and children trying to reach the water front and escape in ships, can only be imagined from the moving scenes transmitted to the picture screen.

Educational Experts on Palmer Staff

An announcement that presages much benefit and encouragement to the student of photoplay technique has just come from the offices of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation in Hollywood. It is to the effect that Clayton Hamilton, lecturer, editor, playwright and photodramatist, has been appointed Educational Adviser to the Palmer institution, and that Douglas Doty, former editor of some of the country's biggest magazines and renowned as a discoverer and developer of new writers, has become Associate Editor of the Palmer Corporation's Department of Education.

"The Power of Love" Given Pre-View

Perfect Pictures held their world's pre-view of the feature production, "The Power of Love," with their stereoscopic method of exhibition at the Ambassador Hotel theatre, Los Angeles, September 27.

This pre-view was attended by the leading film executives, stars and directors, and members of the press.

Fairbanks' Production in First Showings

Arrangements have just been completed for the special presentations of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," to be shown simultaneously in New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles.

H. D. Buckley, Fairbanks' theatre representative, has just closed negotiations for the Lyric Theatre, in New York, and the George M. Cohan's Grand Opera House, in Chicago, for the showing of the big Fairbanks special. Grauman's new Hollywood theatre, in Los Angeles, will open with "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" and all three engagements will be presented almost simultaneously about the middle of October.

The arrangements made for all three theatres are for extended runs, playing at regular theatrical scale of prices.

Associated Exhibitors' Force Enlarged

W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, has just announced several additions to the organization's large and rapidly-growing sales staff.

A. M. Van Dyke and W. L. Merrell have been added to the force working out of the Minneapolis office, making three men in that territory.

Abe Frankle becomes Associated representative in the Des Moines territory. Harry Wellington, formerly American Releasing Company's Kansas City manager, is now an Associated salesman at that branch. Nat Marcus has been appointed a sales representative in Albany territory, and C. A. Molte has rejoined the Pittsburgh staff after a six months' leave of absence because of illness.

Warner Brothers Float Is Paraded Down Broadway

The Warner Brothers float, a large replica of a shelf of seven famous novels to be produced by that firm, was paraded down Broadway, New York, on Tuesday night during the theatre hour, and stopped before the Capitol theatre to demonstrate to the bankers in attendance at the forty-eighth annual convention of the American Bankers' Association just how pictures are sold to the public. The Capitol theatre had been turned over to the bankers for the evening.

The float was preceded by a touring car containing a motion picture camera, and was followed by a sight-seeing bus with a fifteen-piece band, which played during the entire time of the parade. Sun-light arcs were stationed on the roof of the Mecca building and the Capitol theatre, which illuminated the float and made the taking of motion pictures possible. The bus bore large banners reading: "Welcome, A. B. A.," and the like.

Broadway was densely thronged at the time, and the float, brilliantly lighted, together with the music, attracted great crowds.

Immediately following, Frank A. Cassidy and Herbert Messmore started the float on its cross-country trip to Los Angeles.

F. J. McGinnis, Universal exploiteer in the Pittsburgh territory, has arranged a striking tie-up for exhibitors who play "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," Universal's latest chaptered thriller. He has arranged with Captain Stanley Lewis, veteran Indian fighter, to lecture on the life of Buffalo Bill, on the life of President Lincoln and on the building of the Union Pacific railroad.

Captain Lewis bears credentials from the Secretaries of War and the Navy, and from the president of the National Educational Society.

Cast Is Announced for "The Hero"

The following have been cast for "The Hero," a New Preferred Picture placed in production in Los Angeles last week by B. P. Schulberg: Barbara La Marr, Gaston Glass, John Sainpolis, Doris Pawn, David Butler, Frankie Lee, Ethel Shannon and Martha Mattox. Gasnier is directing the picture, which will be his second Gasnier Production for Preferred. "Rich Men's Wives" was his first.

Miss La Marr is under contract with Sawyer and Lubin, but Schulberg succeeded in securing her services for this picture only.

Famous Players-Lasky Changes Made

THE resignation of Oscar A. Morgan as assistant to E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and the appointment of Joseph H. Seideman as his successor, were announced at a luncheon given in honor of the former at the Commodore Hotel on Tuesday, September 26, by Mr. Shauer. The entire membership of the foreign department joined Mr. Shauer in extending farewells to Mr. Morgan and in giving an official welcome to Mr. Seideman.

Clarke Made Assistant to Vice-President

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces the appointment of Victor H. Clarke to the position of Assistant to the first Vice-President. It is explained that the necessity for the creation of this new office arises from the tremendous increase in productional activities at the Paramount West Coast studio.

It is Mr. Lasky's desire to maintain closer contact with writers, directors and stars and also to be able to devote a greater amount of time to the consideration of the big productions which are now being made and which will be made in the future. The immense amount of detail has made it difficult for Mr. Lasky to give the attention to these matters that he would like to give, and the appointment of Mr. Clarke will relieve the situation considerably.

It is made clear that the advancement of Mr. Clarke in no way affects the position of Charles Eyton, General Manager of Lasky Studio.

Ray Productions Will Enlarge Quarters

Prosperity among the established motion picture studios is indicated by the decision last week of the officials of Charles Ray Productions, Inc., to erect a new administration building bounded by Commonwealth avenue, Sunset Drive and Fleming street, Hollywood.

This structure, which will be ornate Spanish type, will run 200 feet on Sunset Drive and 100 feet on Commonwealth, and is to be the first unit of continuous series of buildings encircling the Ray properties.

Marshall Neilan to Produce Famous Novel

Marshall Neilan will produce "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" in conjunction with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

The rights to Thomas Hardy's famous novel have been acquired by Marshall Neilan and Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and it will be produced shortly as one of Goldwyn's Big Twenty.

Goldwyn has arranged with Dorothy Farnum to write the continuity for "Tess."

James Englander to Direct Hyperion Publicity

James Englander has been appointed publicity and advertising director of Hyperion Pictures Corporation, an organization for distribution of films in the independent field. Mr. Englander has had wide experience in film publicity, coming to that field after a number of years in newspaper work with big New York dailies.

"My Friend the Devil" Has Fine Cast

William Fox picked a fine cast for his picture, "My Friend the Devil," which is based on Georges Ohnet's novel, "Dr. Rameau."

In this cast are Charles Richman, Barbara Castleton, Peggy Shaw, William Tooker, Benny Grauer, Robert Frazier, Alice May, Myrtle Stewart, Adolph Miller, Mabel Wright, John Randall.

Paramount Pictures in Broadway Houses

Next week will establish a new record for Paramount on Broadway when five of the six leading picture houses in the Times Square district will be presenting Paramount Pictures as their feature attractions.

"The Old Homestead," with Theodore Roberts, George Fawcett, T. Rey Barnes, Harrison Ford and Fritzi Ridgeway, will have its New York premiere at the Capitol. At the Rivoli, the attraction will be the Cosmopolitan production, "The Face in the Fog," with Lionel Barrymore and Seena Owen. Cecil B. DeMille's "Manslaughter," after three weeks at the Rivoli will move down to the Rialto for a week. Cosmopolitan's big success, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, will continue at the Criterion, while "Pink Gods," with Bebe Daniels, James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson and Raymond Hatton, will be shown at the Cameo and Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt in "On the High Seas" at Loew's State.

Goldwyn Will Protect "Sherlock Holmes"

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, distributors of John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes," announces that it will fight all competing companies from issuing motion pictures under the title of "Sherlock Holmes" or "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

A motion for temporary injunction has been filed in the Supreme Court by William Gillette, Charles Frohman, Inc., and Alcey Enterprises, Inc., restraining the Stoll Film Co., Ltd., and the Education Film Exchanges, Inc., from using the title "Sherlock Holmes" or "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" in connection with any motion picture.

David A. Levy Resigns from Educational

The resignation of David A. Levy, who has been identified with the New York Exchange of Educational Films for the past two years, severs his connection with that company in the capacity of Assistant Manager.

Through his consistent endeavors and long experience, Mr. Levy has acquired a host of friends in film circles, who will be interested in his new affiliation, which will be announced following his return from a short vacation to be spent in the Adirondacks.

Ralph Block Signed as Production Editor by Famous

Ralph Block, former dramatic critic and special feature writer on the staff of the New York Tribune and more recently scenario editor for Goldwyn, has signed a contract with Paramount.

Goldwyn Announces New Staff Changes

GOLDWYN announces that J. A. Koerpel will have supervision of its new Indianapolis branch exchange as well as being district manager for the territories embraced by the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Indianapolis exchanges.

G. A. Hickey, formerly manager of Goldwyn's Buffalo exchange, has been made district manager of the Washington, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh exchanges, with headquarters in Washington.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

Exhibitors and Personals

L. M. Rubens is making a rapid trip on the highway to recovery and expects to return to his home in Aurora this week, from the Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, where he has been confined for many weeks. Mr. Rubens, who besides being one of the most popular exhibitors in the state, is president of the I. M. P. T. O. He has planned an active campaign for the big exhibitors' organization this Fall and promises that the work of this association will make theatre men sit up and take notice.

It is reported that arrangements have been completed for opening "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" on October 15th at Cohan's Grand Opera House, and Pete Smith, the well known publicity expert who is in charge of the exploitation and road shows for this important Douglas Fairbanks production, already is in Chicago preparing for the run.

W. Remington Welch, who classifies himself as "exponent of music for the film," is the latest member of the new McVicker's staff to arrive in Chicago, and is watching the final work on the installation of the great Wurlitzer organ, over which he will preside at the new Jones, Linick & Schaefer house. He was brought on from the Rialto Theatre, New York, where he enjoyed an unusual reputation as an organist who builds splendid musical setting around pictures. During the last ten years he has accompanied motion pictures in Newark, New Jersey; Cleveland, Ohio; Rochester, New York; Terre Haute, Indiana; Detroit, Michigan, and as before mentioned, New York City. He is a member of the "new school" of organ players and has gained his knowledge direct from the organ builders, having been employed by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company for seven years as a factory expert instructing new organists and demonstrating organs.

McVicker's will be "manned" with girls, according to the decision just arrived at by Jones, Linick & Schaefer. There will be girl ushers and girl directors, who must have the following qualifications: White, between five feet and five feet four inches, weight not over one hundred and twenty pounds, with dark bobbed hair and, most important, they must be able to smile naturally. Managing Director S. Barrett McCormick evidently intends to make patrons of McVicker's happy and at home.

Edward L. Klein, of the company bearing his name, motion picture distributors, with headquarters in New York, was in Chicago last week. It is understood that he is negotiating to handle the world's distribution of pictures for a well known coast producer, and expected to close the deal while in Chicago, but would not reveal the name of the producer. Mr. Klein states he will handle the foreign rights himself and the American territory will be handled by a national distributing corporation, whose headquarters are in New York.

Ray Swan, formerly publicity director for Ascher Brothers, has joined the Rapid Printing Company, for whom he will handle all theatrical printing. This company does a large business with Chicago motion picture houses.

Joe E. Tabor, well known to motion picture men as the president and manager of the Majestic Theatre Company, which operates the Majestic Theatre at Belvidere, Illinois, has retired from the motion picture business after fourteen years as a theatre owner, and will, hereafter, give his entire attention to his newspaper. One of his latest acts as a member of the industry, was to send his check to the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners to help them "carry on."

The Malone theatre, Sikeston, Missouri, has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. McCormick, owners of a moving picture theatre at Charleston, Missouri.

W. B. Kneeder has sold the Gem at Litchfield, Illinois, to Dominick Frisini, owner of theatres at Taylorville and Kincaid, Illinois.

Norma Talmadge's latest picture "The Eternal Flame" had plenty of first runs in St. Louis this week. The West End Lyric, West End Airdome, New Grand Central and Capitol Theatres all ran first run day and date. Harry Weiss, manager of the local First National Office, put over this deal and five or six of the current First National releases will be shown this way.

George De Kruif, of Exhibitors Supply Company, is in the west on company business and will spend several weeks in Salt Lake City, Utah and Denver, Colorado, before returning to Chicago.

Chicago exhibitors have been requested by the Safety Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, to co-operate in the observation of Fire Prevention Week, starting next Monday, by showing of slides appropriate to the occasion.

Ike Von Ronkel was in the city this week after spending several weeks fishing, and expects to depart at once on a duck shooting expedition to Gras Lake.

Film Row Brevities

W. K. Lendon, traveling auditor for Universal, was at the Chicago exchange this week working on the installation of improved book-keeping and record systems, which are aimed to make the office run even more smoothly than it has been.

Phil Dunas, popular First National salesman, is in a southside hospital recovering from a severe operation which he underwent last week. He hopes to be back on the job before the middle of the month.

Harry Danto has arrived in Chicago to assume the duties of local manager for Goldwyn Pictures, in place of Harry Lorsch, resigned. Mr. Danto had been manager of Famous Players-Lasky's New York exchange for eight years and is regarded as one of the ablest exchange men in the country. Goldwyn executives prevailed on Mr. Lorsch to reconsider his resignation from Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and he will remain with the organization doing special work, starting with the opening of a new exchange at Milwaukee. Mr. Lorsch is one of the most popular picture men in the territory, and has been connected with the Goldwyn organization for several years, starting his service in St. Louis as publicity representative when Cecil Maberry was manager there. He came to Chicago two years ago with Mr. Maberry, taking position as sales manager and in September 1921 was made manager of the Omaha branch, coming back to Chicago in March as manager, when Mr. Maberry became vice-president of the Goldwyn organization.

Frank Mantzke, of the American Releasing Corporation, has arrived and taken up his duties as manager of the local exchange. Mr. Mantzke has been manager of the Minneapolis exchange of the American Releasing Corporation since its organization and is enthusiastic over the outlook for this independent distributing concern.

Clyde Elliott has bought the state rights for the Illinois territory for a series of four special film features, starring Betty Blythe, from BB Productions, Inc. These features, which are advertised as "superbly presented dramas of life and luxury in the great cities of the world," are reported to be of unusual merit.

The executive committee of First National was in session at the Drake hotel throughout the week, and it is understood that matters of great importance to the organization were taken up for discussion. Among those who participated in the meetings were: Messrs. Lieber, Williams, Schwalbe, Katz, Blank, Mark and Richards.

Irving Mack & Company have removed their headquarters to 802 S. Wabash Avenue. They have secured more commodious and convenient offices.

Plans have been completed for a big billboard campaign to exploit "Rich Men's Wives," the Al Lichtman picture being released in this territory by Celebrated Players. More than one hundred and twenty of the largest sized billboards have been contracted for.

C. John Predari, formerly of the Meridian Theatre, Anderson, Indiana, has become connected with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's Chicago exchange as salesman and will cover the territory formerly covered by Charles Heede, who has been transferred to Wisconsin territory, working out of Milwaukee.

A. Platzman, who departed for Europe a short time ago, to become European auditor for Universal, is back in Chicago again and has resumed his former position as auditor of Universal's Chicago exchange. Mr. Platzman was glad when he saw the statue of liberty once again, but doubly joyous when he arrived at 831 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and walked into his old office.

Maurice Hellman has appointed E. A. Sipe as manager of the Reelcraft exchange at Indianapolis, to take the place made vacant by the resignation of G. C. Parrish, who has joined the Goldwyn organization. Mr. Hellman tendered Mr. Parrish a farewell dinner, which was greatly enjoyed by the guests of honor and staff of Reelcraft's Chicago headquarters. The latest addition to Reelcraft's growing program is The Richard Talmadge Pictures, contract for which was closed last week with Phil Goldstone, of Goldstone Productions, when he arrived in Chicago from the coast.

At midnight October 6, on special invitation issued by Harry Weiss of the First National Office of St. Louis, nearly two hundred Post Commanders and their wives will be the guests of Manager Weiss at a special showing of "Skin Deep," the latest release of the First National which has quite a heart interest in it for the American Legion boys. Besides Mr. Weiss, speakers on the program will include Mayor Kiel of St. Louis, a representative of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Spyros Skouras who served in France and is a member of the American Legion.

EAST AND WEST COAST PRODUCTION NOTES

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

With Paramount Units

"The Covered Wagon," from the Emerson Hough novel, adapted by Jack Cunningham, was put into production this week, under the direction of James Cruze, which is promised as one of the most important subjects of the season from a standpoint of production. Five hundred covered wagons are now being built and one hundred and fifty yoke untamed steers being trained. Locations in nine States have been visited and the Baker Ranch, consisting of two hundred thousand acres in Snake Valley, Nevada, will be used almost entirely. "Westport Landing," later renamed Kansas City, is being rebuilt at Baker Ranch. More than five thousand people will take part, one thousand of them Indians from the Shoshone, Sioux, Kaws and Pawnee reservations. Mammoth Lake will furnish water for the river being built to order for many scenes. The right to use a herd of five thousand wild buffalo on Antelope Island, Salt Lake, has been secured from the Government. J. Warren Kerrigan has been engaged for the lead, with Lois Wilson opposite, and the cast includes Charles Ogle, Ethel Wales, Ernest Torrence and Allan Forest.

The cast for C. B. DeMille's next production includes Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pauline Garon, Clarence Geldart, Lucien Littlefield, Robert Brower and Kalla Pasha.

Julia Crawford Ivers, directress, Betty Compson, star, Edmund Lowe, lead, and company have left for Honolulu to film "The White Flower." The script calls for scenes showing Diamond Head, The Pali, Volcano of Kilauea and Beach at Waikiki.

William H. Powell, who plays Duke Francis in "When Knights Were in Flower," has been added to the cast of Elsie Ferguson's latest Paramount picture, "Outcast." He will play the role of De Valle, a South American. John Davidson was originally announced for this part but owing to a vaudeville engagement was unable to play it.

Robert Ellis has been engaged to play opposite Dorothy Dalton in her next picture to be put in production next week at the Long Island studio. This picture, temporarily titled "Black Fury," is an original story for the screen by Edmund Goulding and will be directed by Victor Fleming.

J. Clarkson Miller has been added to the scenario staff at the Paramount Long Island studio. He is at present at work putting into continuity form George Ade's original story, "Back Home and Broke," in which Thomas Meighan will be starred.

Spencer Charters, who played the "what's all the shootin' for" character in "The Tavern" on Broadway, has been added to the cast of Thomas Meighan's forthcoming picture, "Back Home and Broke." Charters will play an eccentric policeman in the Ade story.

A sequence in "Singed Wings" featuring Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nogel, contains a great deal of double exposure work that will delay finishing the production some time. Meanwhile Miss Daniels has started in William DeMille's production "Paths of Glory."

Wallace Worsley has been engaged to direct Wallace Reid's next picture "Nobody's Money," adapted from the play by William Le Baron and Beulah Marie Dix. Wanda Hawley will play opposite Reid.

In production are "Sacrifice," starring Mary Miles Minter, under the direction of Charles Maigne; "My American Wife," starring Gloria Swanson, a Sam Wood Production, with Antonio Moreno in the leading masculine role and Geno Corrado, the heavy; "Paths of Glory," an all star William DeMille production; "Singed Wings," with Bebe Daniels supported by an all star cast, under the direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws.

Leon Gordon, who was featured in "Watch Your Neighbor," has been engaged to play the part of Clinton DeWitt in Cosmopolitan's picturization of "Little Old New York," Mr. Gordon played stage leads with Florence Moore, in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" and "Breakfast in Bed." Last season he supported Mme. Petrova in "The White Peacock."

Adolphe Menjou, "king" in "The Three Musketeers" has been chosen to play Robert Townsend, the portrait painter, in the William DeMille production, "Paths of Glory."

Warner Brothers Items

New interior and exterior stages are to be built by the Warner Brothers company to carry out their production plans. Two mammoth sets are being built, one to represent the Gopher Prairie of Main street, the other, a mining town for Marion Russell's story, "The Little Church Around the Corner," adapted for the screen by Olga Printzlau.

Julien Josephson has completed the continuity for "Brass," a Harry Rapf production which Sidney Franklin will direct.

William Seiter has completed scenes for "The Beautiful and Damned," with principals numbering Marie Prevost, Louise Fazenda, Kathlyn Key, Harry Myers, Walter Long, Frank Kingsley and George Kuwa.

On the Goldwyn Lot

R. A. Walsh has completed photographing "Passions of the Sea."

F. J. Godsol left for New York Thursday after three weeks at the studio.

The 300 members of the Southern California Editorial Association visited the Goldwyn studios on Tuesday of last week and saw Rupert Hughes direct the filming of a motion picture and experiment with new lighting effects.

Five photoplays are now in the editing and titling stage at the Goldwyn studios—some of them nearly completed and others just through the photographing stage. These pictures are "Broken Chains," "The Strangers' Banquet," "Gimme," "The Christian" and "Passions of the Sea."

Here and There

Harold Shaw, director in this country eight or ten years ago, and who has since been producing in London, is in Los Angeles to make independent productions. He has just completed "Cupid and Cunard," with scenes made in London and New York.

Irving Cummings has taken all scenes for "Chicago Sal," from story by Harvey Gates for Principal Pictures Production. Cummings and Al Kern are editing. The complete cast includes Alice Lake, Milton Sills, Ralph Lewis, Gertrude Claire, Ben Bewlitt, and Richard Headrick.

The first Frank R. Adams production will be an adaptation of his Cosmopolitan story "Miles Brewster and the Super Sex," adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer. The cast includes Robert Gordon, Tully Marshall, Charlotte Pierce, Stanhope Knott, Gertrude Claire, Stanhope Wheatcroft and Kenneth Gibson. It is to be distributed by American Releasing Corporation.

Henry Sharp, who had charge of the photography of Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone," has returned to the Thomas H. Ince studios after being 'loaned' for a month's work on a Robertson-Cole Production.

The last shot has been made in Jackie Coogan's newest picture, the working title of which is "Fiddle and I." The story was written by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan, and was directed by E. Mason Hopper.

"An Old Sweetheart of Mine," independent Harry Garson Production of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, is nearing completion. Elliott Dexter and Helen Jerome Eddy head a cast of featured players including Lloyd Whitlock, Arthur Hoyt and Barbara Worth.

Hernando G. Villa has joined B. P. Schulberg's art forces for special commissions for Preferred Pictures, Inc.

Rowland V. Lee bears the honor of directing the largest scenes made at the Fox studios this season as the result of filming of the circus episodes for "A Circus Story," which, starring Shirley Mason, is being directed by Lee from an original story by Robert N. Lee, his brother.

At Universal City

The two Herbert Rawlinson subjects "Another Man's Shoes" and "One Wonderful Night," have been completed by the editing department.

"The Hot Head" by Lillian Chester, scenario by George Randolph Chester, is the next vehicle in preparation for Frank Mayo, who is now working in "The Summons," under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

Emile Chautard has completed "Forsaking All Others," with an all star cast.

Robert Hill is beginning "Wolves of Society," a serial in which Jack Mulhall and Margaret Livingston play the leads. The story and continuity are by Anthony Coldway.

Edward Laemele and Art Acord will begin "The Trail Blazers," a serial of the Oregon trail history, this week.

Jane Sherman, who played in "The Devil's Pass Key," has been cast for a role in "Merry Go Round."

The supporting cast for William Desmond in "Around the World in Eighteen Days," includes Laura LaPlante, Boyd Irwin and Spottiswoode Aitken. Reeves Eason is directing.

Nat Ross is to direct the all star production of "The Ghost Patrol," from the Sinclair Lewis story. The cast embraces Ralph Graves, Bessie Love, George Nichols, Max Davidson, Lydia Titus and Dan Crimmins.

The cast for an all star production of "The Power of a Lie," to be directed by George Archainbaud, includes Mabel Julienne Scott, June Elvidge and David Torrence.

William Worthington has completed "Kindled Courage," starring Hoot Gibson, with Beatrice Burnham opposite.

The Second Annual Wampus Riot was given at Universal City Wednesday evening, October 4. Malcolm Boylan acted as Master of Ceremonies.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASE

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATER

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Manslaughter—

Second week pulled big; fine picture with big settings. (Middle West.)

Much favorable comment. Drew excellently through week run. (Middle West.)

Beat all records made by the biggest pictures of the season. Capacity all week. (East.)

A good picture which drew the business. (Middle West.)

One of the best drawing cards in several weeks. Played to big houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Holding its own on fourth week. (West.)

The Bonded Woman—

Business good, special stunt of style show may have helped. (Middle West.)

Night business fine; matinees trifle off; picture well received. (East.)

The Valley of Silent Men—

Strong feature with fine outdoor atmosphere; played to good business. (Middle West.)

Business very unsatisfactory. (Middle West.)

The Top o' New York—

Fair picture; fair business. (Middle West.)

Business fell off. (West.)

Burning Sands—

Good entertainment; heard many complimentary remarks. Good week. (Middle West.)

Blood and Sand—

Five weeks and still going strong. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Remembrance—

They're still coming on second week. (West.)

Goes over with patrons pretty good. Heard good comments on it in lobby. (Middle West.)

The Dust Flower—

An excellent program picture that appeals to all classes. Average receipts. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Too Much Business—

A very pretty comedy with proper sprinkling of romance. Was well received, nice receipts. (Middle West.)

Seven-column display ad on "The Old Homestead" used by the Temple theatre, Toledo

A Rogue's Romance—

Re-issue did as good as many new ones. Valentino's popularity partly responsible. (West.)

Valentino is a great drawing card here, the picture attracting good crowds the first week. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Smudge—

Good action stuff for Ray; pulled fair houses for one week. (Middle West.)

The Masquerader—

Business was fair. G. A. R. Convention swelled attendance, but did not swell receipts as veterans were admitted free. (Middle West.)

A great picture and a big box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Skin Deep—

Excellent melodrama showing Milton Sills in a "different" role. Was liked by our audiences and proved good business getter. (Middle West.)

Did good business against keen competition. (West.)

Unusually fine picture. Has a new twist to the story which is brought up to date through connecting it with the war. Splendid acting of Sills makes the picture. Better than average business for the week. (Middle West.)

The Eternal Flame—

Fine business on two weeks run. Best Talmadge picture in a long time. (Middle West.)

The Infidel—

Hold up its part of a big program; people spoke well of it. (West.)

ASSO.-EXHIB.

Grandma's Boy—

Second run showing, but lined them up most of the week. (East.)

FOX

Oathbound—

The popularity of Dustin Farnum put this over to satisfactory business for the week. (East.)

The Fast Mail—

A real reel melodrama. Drew many new faces to the theatre. Fair attendance for the week. (Middle West.)

Splendid melodrama, which, for some unaccounted reason, failed to get over very big. (Middle West.)

This one played to good weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

METRO

Broadway Rose—

Nothing but lavish scenes; played to fair houses. (Middle West.)

Poor week. Guess people are tired of Mae Murray always doing the same thing. Fine direction, splendid photography, but story is worn threadbare. (Middle West.)

Mae Murray slipping in this sort of stuff; why not a new one? This was the sentiment my patrons expressed. (West.)

The Five Dollar Baby—

Business good all week with surprising number of children. (Middle West.)

Played to good receipts; some liked it; others didn't. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Caught Bluffing—

Good show, good cast, good acting. We did fairly well with it but not up to standard business. (Middle West.)

Human Hearts—

Played to capacity on return engagement. (West.)

Held its own for two weeks; can play it again and do well. (West.)

Very good feature but failed to draw the crowds we expected. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Good old fashioned rural drama; which went over big at this house. (Middle West.)

Under Two Flags—

Splendid feature which gave Priscilla Dean fine opportunities to display talent. Business good. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Man Who Played God—

Very big week. Splendid production from every angle. (Middle West.)

Orphans of the Storm—

Ran for two weeks and drew crowded houses. (Middle West.)

The Ruling Passion—

Exceptionally good picture, but only an average box office attraction. (East.)

HODKINSON

Slim Shoulders—

Best Irene Castle feature shown in some time. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN

Queen of the Moulin Rouge—

Proved a winner and patrons liked it. Nice attendance. (West.)

The Cradle Buster—

A very fine picture that recorded excellent business. Patrons praised it highly. (East.)

AL LICHTMAN

Rich Men's Wives—

Pleased about 75% of the patrons. Heart interest is its chief drawing card. Wonderful photography. Splendid direction. Sincere acting. All make a time worn story interesting. Good cast. Ought to make money for any exhibitor. (Middle West.)

A full-sized farmhouse, with all manner of practical props, was erected in the lobby of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., by Manager E. R. Rogers for the run of "The Old Homestead." The above photos show the farmhouse from three different angles.

Girl Chained in Lobby Draws for "Bonded Woman"

El Paso, Texas—Manager J. M. Edgar Hart of the Palace theatre was up against strong opposition recently on "The Bonded Woman," but he evolved a stunt which was so different from anything seen in El Paso that it turned the trick.

The title of the picture suggested some feminine beauty chained down by obligations. Working on this suggestion, Manager Hart went about to find some young lady who resembled Betty Compson. He was successful in locating the correct type, and by using a wig and a bit of make-up Mr. Hart soon had a lady resembling Betty Compson very closely.

The young lady selected to represent Betty Compson was placed behind a white fence with both of her arms chained to the post. The card tacked to one of the posts read: "A Bonded Woman Until a Derelict Is Redeemed." This young lady stood in the lobby most all afternoon.

There were episodes of comedy attached to this stunt also. The young lady stood so still at times that people thought she was a wax figure, and while crowds stood around watching her she occasionally smiled, which caused several people in the crowd to gasp with alarm since at first sight everyone thought she was only a wax figure.

"Fools First" Title Tied Up With Dangerous Road

ANNISTON, Ala.—Good use of the possibilities in the title, "Fools First," was made recently by Roy Smart, manager of the Noble theatre. On the most popular drive out from Anniston, the road to the military camp, there is a deep cut through a hill. At this point the banks run up about twenty feet on each side of the road. There is much traffic on this road, also much fast driving, and, as is natural under such conditions, quite a few accidents.

From one bank to the other at the point of the road mentioned above Mr. Smart stretched a banner reading:

"Accidents Are Inevitable, but they happen to FOOLS FIRST."

While this banner was up a big polo game was played at the camp and practically the whole town turned out to see it. And all who saw the game saw the banner, too. It was that kind of a banner!

Bananas Used as Heralds on "The Dictator"

CHARLESTON, Ill.—Something different in the herald line was evolved by O. W. McCutcheon, manager of the American theatre, when he played "The Dictator."

In small towns fruit is cheap and if you buy a lot of it from a commission house it is cheaper still. Mr. McCutcheon bought up a lot of the long, yellow tropical fruit and to each he attached the following tag:

This banana put Wally Reid to work and made him "The Dictator."

Several hundred of these were distributed as heralds and made a big hit. In Charleston, folks aren't afraid to peel 'em and eat 'em right on the street.

Shimmying Doll Exploits "The Half Breed" at Sandusky

SANDUSKY, O.—Only a short time ago George Schade, owner and manager of the Sandusky theatre bearing his name, startled Sandusky by producing a leaping frog to exploit "The Seventh Day." The caption on it read: "Hop to the Schade theatre 'The Seventh Day'." It was given out six days before the picture began its run.

Now Schade has produced another novelty in a shimmying doll that he used to exploit "The Half Breed." Two thousand of these were distributed with the words: "The Half Breed, a First National attraction, playing at the Schade."

The dolls cost a little less than a cent a piece, and, according to Schade, netted handsomely on the investment.

Birthday Mailing Card Pass Is Good Will Promoter

Syracuse, N. Y.—Walter W. McDowell, assistant manager of the Strand, evolved a plan, in effect since the first of the year, which has been winning a good bit of friendship for the house.

A mailing list has been obtained, which now totals 1,231 names, with the birthday date of each person. This list includes people in all walks of life. Shortly before the birthday arrives, an attractive card, printed in Old English in dark blue on a white card, reading as follows, is sent:

"The Strand theatre takes this opportunity of congratulating you on your birthday and would enjoy having you occupy two seats at our theatre on that day.

"This card when presented at our box-office serves as a ticket."

The theatre's name appears at the top, and the manager's signature at the bottom.

Clothing Tie-Up Arranged on "A Tailor Made Man"

Cleveland, Ohio.—Manager W. H. Raynor of Reade's Hippodrome theatre started his campaign on "A Tailor Made Man" off with several wax dummies, such as are used in clothing store windows, togged out in dress suits and dinner clothes, on each of which was a neat little card reading: "Next Week, 'A Tailor Made Man.'"

The management also had a good-looking chap wearing a dress suit parading the streets, accompanied by a young colored boy, uniformed as a hall-boy, carrying two suit cases with placards reading "Next Week, Reade's Hippodrome, 'A Tailor Made Man'." This ballyhoo attracted a lot of attention, Mr. Raynor says.

"We also tied up a publicity stunt with the Bond Clothing company," says Mr. Raynor, "which carried page advertising, mentioning Charles Ray in 'A Tailor Made Man' playing at Reade's Hippodrome in which they used a full page cut of Charles Ray in evening clothes."

"Our outside billing for 'A Tailor Made Man' consisted of 500 three-sheets, 1,000 one-sheets and 600 cards."

Egyptian Lobby Prepared For "Loves of Pharaoh"

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—Manager Ray Beall created for "The Loves of Pharaoh" a highly atmospheric lobby display. And he did this at very little expense for practically all materials used were salvaged from the display used the previous week for "Orphans of the Storm." Of course everything used was repainted and the finished displays did not resemble each other in any way.

Extending across the lobby about twelve feet back from the sidewalk was a "stone" wall with an arched doorway in the center. Across the top was a decorative cornice and on each side of the door was an Egyptian Idol on a high pedestal. Along one side of the lobby from the "stone" wall forward was a desert scene with painted back drop and cut-out beaver board pyramids. Along the other side was a balcony scene properly framing the cut-out figures from the 6-sheet. The pyramids on one side and the cut-out on the other side were silhouetted at night by concealed illumination. Incense was kept burning back of the cut-out at all times during the engagement.

Artistic Lobby Prepared on "A Fool There Was"

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A striking lobby display was prepared by Messrs. Rowland and Clark of the State theatre for the showing of "A Fool There Was."

Suspended near the ceiling of the lobby were cut-out letters of the title of the picture. They were made of black cardboard and set off with white outlines. Tile-letters in a specially constructed frame directly under the ceiling and at the rear of the entrance carried, "'A Fool There Was' With All Star Cast."

Superimposed on the ticket-office was a beaver board replica of an open book, on top of which rested a cut-out of the vampire of the picture, her hand extending a faded rose. On the left side of the book, the page gave the first verse of Rudyard Kipling's famous poem, "The Vampire." On the right page were encircled portraits of the various characters in the picture.

On the walls of the lobby were hung hand-painted posters quoting portions of the poem. Large lobby stands were stationed at artistic distances about the doors and walls. Framed six-sheets also went into the general decorations.

With a local newspaper which was conducting a beauty contest, arrangements were made to drive the winner about the streets of the city. As the contest ended just as the run of the production was beginning, the tie-up came at a most propitious time.

Eight Page Section Put Over at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Cape Girardeau, Mo.—Messrs. Doyle and Strain, owners of the Park and Orpheum theatres, recently put over a stunt that set a mark for other exhibitors to shoot at—an eight page newspaper section for the showing of "Foolish Wives" at their two houses for two days simultaneously.

When "Foolish Wives" was booked for the Park and Orpheum, the owners conferred with Maurice Engel, publicity director of the St. Louis Universal exchange, formerly a St. Louis newspaperman. The result was the plan for the special section, which was printed on pink paper, and called the "Foolish Wives" section.

The advertising department of the newspaper got busy and interested a number of merchants in the plan, and the section was well filled with advertisements hooking up with the picture. The remainder of the space was taken up by feature articles dealing with "Foolish Wives" and other Universal attractions, and the entire section tended to promote greater interest in motion pictures.

Later, Engel visited Macon, Mo., and showed the newspaper publishers the results attained in Cape Girardeau, and they quickly joined him in a similar stunt for Macon.

W. T. Brock, manager of the Strand theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., used cut-outs on prominent corners for "In the Name of the Law," one of which is shown here.

Manager of Queen Theatre Puts Paper to Good Use

Galveston, Texas.—The principal business corners carried one sheet frames with ads about "The Woman Who Walked Alone." In the Queen theatre lobby stood a large cutout of the star Dorothy Dalton, in a most attractive pose. The suggestion was taken from the Six sheet and worked out by Manager Sassen and his theatre help.

To make the whole display more attractive and easier seen from a distance, baby spotlights of different colors were arranged in the ceiling of the lobby so that they played directly on the display.

Slides were run in the other Southern Enterprises theatres in advance telling about the picture and also teaser ads appeared in the newspapers well in advance.

Firearms Tieup Made for "The Dictator" Campaign

GADSDEN, ALA.—Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre started his campaign on "The Dictator" a week in advance.

Cards were made up headed, "Volunteers Wanted—for the Army of the Dictator." The cards then went on to explain in a facetious manner about pay, rations, etc. These were placed in windows, tacked on posts, and attached to autos. At the same time Snell got four co-operative window displays with cards reading, "We are the Dictator in Styles and Values," etc.

Another co-operative window was gotten with a hardware store. The window was dressed with every conceivable kind of small fire arms, from prehistoric curios to the latest Colts and Winchesters. Also in the window were stills and small cut-outs from the picture, and a card appropriately worded.

The lobby display consisted of a fake brick wall, ferns and banana trees. Rifles were stacked across the front to get across the revolutionary atmosphere.

Box Office Draped in White for "One Clear Call"

LANCASTER, PA.—The Hamilton theatre took advantage of the night rider theme of "One Clear Call" when showing that picture recently, and got a ghoulish effect by the simple expedient of draping the box office in white. Star photos of the individual players in the picture were hung around the box office window, while trailing wreaths of oak hung from the ceiling.

Cut-Out Dressed Up for Lobby on "Smilin' Through"

EL PASO, TEXAS.—A variation on the use of cut-outs for the theatre lobby was evolved by the Ellanay theatre for its showing of "Smilin' Through."

Using the regular six-sheet cut-out in a small niche of the trelliswork stand in front of the theatre, the manager varnished the figure, gave it a head of real human hair and a bridal veil of orange blossoms and a bouquet of fresh flowers. The dress, a glistening white silk, was draped by a professional dress-maker and was set against a background of solid black.

The streets were whitewashed with exploitation signs: "Let's Go Smilin' Through 1922."

Malden, Mass., Theatre Opened By Barthelmess in Person

Malden, Mass.—They were short on advance notice but long on applause when Richard Barthelmess in person appeared for the opening of the Strand theatre, Malden, Mass. "Sonny" was the opening attraction at the house.

Owing to the fact that news of the star's coming was confirmed only one day in advance of the opening arrangements had to be made hurriedly and newspaper space was confined to notice for only one day. Despite this fact the manager of the Strand strengthened his stand by inaugurating a christening at which Barthelmess broke a bottle of wine over the marquee, finally borrowing a policeman's club to effect the end.

Mayor Kimball extended the freedom of the city to the star and although the returns were not all in at ten o'clock the early polls showed that the star, plus last minute exploitation, plus "Sonny," plus the new theatre, had brought a stand out business throughout the opening.

Showing how a scheme was worked out to get "ice effects," the structure being one to represent huge cakes of ice, used by the Queen theatre, Galveston, Texas

Opens "School Days" as School Days Start

Wilmington, N. C.—Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, held up his play date of "School Days" until the opening week of school in Wilmington so he could reach the schools better, and with this in mind he went after the kiddies in practically all his exploitation.

There are approximately four thousand children enrolled in the schools of Wilmington, so Stellings had special handbills printed for distribution to these pupils. Every child in the seven schools received one of these bills at noon on the opening of the picture and there was a mad scramble as soon as the school day was over.

A half page tie-up between five merchants and the theatre was arranged.

This safe was left standing in front of the Palace theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with $10 in gold inside for anyone who could open it, through a tie-up with a safe company on "Fools First"

"Nanook" Gets Double Page Ad on Dealer Tie-Up

SAN PEDRO, Cal.—The Victoria theatre, in conjunction with the "Daily Pilot," recently put over a double page tie-up ad on "Nanook of the North."

The display bore the heading: "Victoria shows 'Nanook of the North' 4 days beginning Wednesday." The space is shared with a full dozen local business houses, each of which contains an apt "Nanook" suggestion—as, that of the Columbia Grafonolas headed: "Nanook liked Grafonola music so well he ate the record," which is a reference to one of the scenes in the picture. The San Pedro Creamery Company utilizes a frigid "Nanook" scene to show the cooling effect of its entire product, including "Es-kimo Pie." In similar ways other leading tradesmen having daily dealings with the citizens of San Pedro, "sold" them "Nanook" along with their customary service.

Snow and Ice Front Built for "I Am the Law"

Galveston, Texas.—Manager Charles Sassen of the Queen theatre capitalized upon the snow and ice scenes in "I Am the Law" in building his lobby.

The entire front of the theatre was boxed in with beaver board with openings for exits and entrance and a space in the center to allow for one sheet frames and miniature cut-outs. This beaver board was painted to represent panels of a house covered with snow. Across the top of the lobby the title of the picture stood out boldly, it also being suggestive of winter because of the snow painted on the letters. The cast of the picture was featured.

Police Distribute Cards for "In the Name of the Law"

Knoxville, Tenn.—Manager W. F. Brock of the Strand theatre, in exploiting "In the Name of the Law," first arranged a special advance showing for the chief of police and a number of his force. He got a strong letter of endorsement from the chief, which he ran in the newspapers. He also got permission from the chief to place cut-outs anywhere he desired, and he selected prominent downtown corners.

The entire force agreed to help out in any way they could. So Mr. Brock had 3,000 cards printed reading, "STOP! In the Name of the Law. For further information ask any policeman." These were passed out by policemen while on duty.

During the engagement two of the cut-outs stood on the sidewalk in front of the theatre.

Window tie-up on "Grandma's Boy," obtained by the management of the Casino theatre, Lakeland, Fla.

Window display obtained by the Stanton theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., through tie-up with book store, on "Monte Cristo."

Street Impersonator Used for "Grandma's Boy" Campaign

Lakeland, Fla.—A thorough exploitation campaign was put over by Manager B. B. Garner of the Casino theatre on "Grandma's Boy," opening with teaser ads three days in advance asking, "Who is 'Grandma's Boy'?" and stressing the fact that he would be seen on the streets of Lakeland between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m. on Saturday.

To the first twenty-five people inquiring of the Lloyd imitator, "Are you 'Grandma's Boy'?" a pass to this show would be given. Two hundred people or more stopped and inquired of the Lloyd imitator. But they didn't all get the pass, for they didn't all inquire just the right way.

Another ad said that "Grandma's Boy" would be found sitting in "The Famous Department Store" window between the hours of 8 and 10 p. m. Saturday.

In addition to the signs on his back, he pushed a baby carriage with a good sized youngster in it, labeled "Grandma's Boy."

On the afternoon of the day "Grandma's Boy" opened, Garner, in cooperation with the local newspaper, arranged a paper carriers' parade. Every newsboy carried a sign and wore a pair of Lloyd glasses! The baby carriage was also in the parade, while leading the procession was a young fellow beating a drum.

Dignified Street Ballyhoo for "The Masquerader"

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The street ballyhoo on "The Masquerader" was given a different angle by the Kinema theatre in its advance exploitation campaign.

The silk hatted gentleman who doubled for the title role of the picture had a fair companion with him in the five-passenger touring car in which he covered the city. When he was in the machine the sign on it read: "I am 'The Masquerader.'" But there were many moments when he was not in the machine because he was making a shopping tour of the city in accordance with an exploitation and publicity campaign marked out in advance.

And when the lady was left in the car alone the sign was changed. The new sign read: "I am looking for 'The Masquerader.'"

Toy Balloons Bring "Trouble" Passes to Syracuse Kids

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—An automobile decorated with toy balloons that contained passes for "Trouble" at the Strand theatre covered the streets for three days. Syracuse youngsters were eventually to get these passes, but the display was to get as many of them interested as possible.

They were finally given the chance to show their marksmanship when the balloons were put up as targets. Not on the automobile—repainting was too expensive.

In a safe, secluded spot of the city the balloons were hoisted in the air and the kids were allowed to test their aim with stones. Any youngster bringing down a balloon was entitled to the pass inside.

Flame Colored Satan Cut-Out Exploits "While Satan Sleeps"

ATLANTA, Ga. A huge cut-out on beaver board of the devil in a sleeping posture was strung over the lobby of the Howard Theatre by Manager De Sales Harrison for the showing of "When Satan Sleeps." The cut-out was large enough almost to reach the entire length of the Howard lobby. The devil was painted in a bright red and could be seen for several blocks away from the theatre.

In the lobby proper were two large cut-out glasses and on top of each sat a cut-out of the devil holding a scepter and grinning. Oblong pieces cut out of the cups served as places to put photographic scenes from the picture.

Elaborate "Monte Cristo" Display at Youngstown

Youngstown, Ohio—Manager Joseph Shagrín of the Park theatre prepared an elaborate lobby decoration during the recent run of "Monte Cristo," which attracted the attention of all those who passed.

The marquee which extends over a wide sidewalk was laden with a large array of flags, bunting, signs, cut-outs, and stills. Across both sides were canvas signs announcing "Monte Cristo" as "The Mightiest of Metropolitan Successes." Above there was a large cut-out from a 24-sheet mounted on heavy beaver-board. This represented the Count of Monte Cristo standing with arms outstretched on a sphere bearing the words "The World Is Mine."

The corners where the marquee and the building met were rounded out with bunting and the outer corners were embellished with American flags.

Beneath the marquee running at right angles to the curb was suspended another canvas sign painted by hand and describing the picture. Colored stills and mounted posters were placed about the sidewalk and entrance way.

Lobby display, with girl chained to posts, which attracted attention to the Palace theatre, El Paso, Texas, for "The Bonded Woman." Arranged by Manager J. M. Edgar Hart.

"Till We Meet Again"

Assoc. Exhibitors—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THRILLS, romance, mystery, a very fine cast, excellent direction, photography of a very high quality, elaborate settings, a stirring climax—these are the principal ingredients of this William Christy Cabanne contribution. If ever a picture boasted a wide variety of scenes, this one is it. The observer is carried through a maze of situations each more interesting than the big punch in a lot of average filmplays. In spite of this variety the continuity runs smoothly to the fadeout.

Mae Marsh is the star, and she does some of the finest acting of her career. As Marion Bates, who is tricked by her guardian, thrown into an insane asylum, escapes and finds refuge with a gang of crooks, Miss Marsh has ample opportunity to display some real emotional fireworks. Walter Miller contributes a convincing portrayal in the role of Jim Brennan, head of the gang. The remainder of the cast is adequate.

The picture has an overabundance of thrills. It starts with a leap and jumps along merrily right to the end, when there's one of the kind of climaxes that draw an audience to the edge of the seats. Marion's escape from the asylum, her adventures in the lonely house occupied by the crooks, the Spanish Inn moments, the attempt to kidnap her and the thrilling rescue at the end when a radio outfit is introduced to summon police aid are just a few of the dramatic situations. Its all very good and we predict for this entertaining picture real success at the box office.

The Cast

Mrs. Whitney Carter.....Julia Swayne Gordon
Marion Bates.....Mae Marsh
Arthur Montrose.....J. Barney Sherry
Jim Brennan.....Walter Miller
Robert Carter.....Norman Kerry
Henrietta Carter.....Martha Mansfield
Sam McGuire.....Tammany Young
Pete Morrison.....Dan Hayes
Clarence De Vere.....Dick Lee
One of the gang.....Cyril Chadwick

Story and direction by William Christy Cabanne. Scenario by Edmund Goulding. Photographed by William H. Tuers and Philips Armond. Distributed by Associated Exhibitors through Pathe.

The Story—Suffering from nervous shock, Marion Bates, an orphan, is tricked into an insane asylum by her guardian. She escapes and becomes a cook for a gang of crooks. She wants to leave however when she learns of their identity but agrees as a last favor to accompany them to the Spanish Inn. In the excitement she escapes. She falls in love with a youth after she is saved from the gang sent to kidnap her.

Classification—An entertaining society and "crook" drama, melodramatic in spots and filled with stirring situations.

Production Highlights—The talented cast Mae Marsh seen at her best in the role of Marion Bates. The fine support. The shots of the lawn party on Long Island. Scene in which Marion escapes from the asylum. The scenes at the Spanish Inn and the row ensuing after the girl is insulted. The thrilling climax. The overseas episode.

Exploitation Angles—The cast is one of the best talking features of this picture. Play up the names. The overseas theme suggests a tie-up with your local American Legion post. Put over a tieup with your music store on the song of the same name as the picture.

Drawing Power—This picture is distinctly high class in every phase and should find a welcome place on any program.

"The Bootleggers' Daughter"

Playgoers Pictures—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS picture is not as bad as it's titled. We confess we were surprised. As a matter of fact the fine cast lifts this one away from the classification of just another picture. We doubt that it would have been much worth while with any other cast than the one which here interprets its very human characters.

Miss Bennett as Nell Bradley contributes a colorful bit of acting to the screen. As the "diamond in the rough" daughter of Jim Bradley, Bootlegger, she gives dignity to a role that requires nothing less than an artiste to put it over. Fred Niblo is convincing as the pastor of the flock. Melbourne McDowell as the bootlegger gives us some real red-blooded acting. The entire cast is a very fine one and acquits itself admirably.

Recently pictures built along the lines of this one had a very successful run, mainly because they were well exploited. The same thing can be done with this one. The story and cast of this feature eclipses any other picture of its type put out in celluloid form. The film abounds in dramatic situations. There is the advance of the townfolk upon the "den of iniquity," the confession of Jim Bradley that he framed the election that put the town in the dry column because he could make twice as much in bootlegging, the church bazaar and so on.

The picture is in five reels. This is another point in its favor. There is very little bunk. The film has a story to tell and proceeds at once to tell it in an entertaining and convincing manner. The production will find a welcome in many houses, but its title will probably hurt it in high class sections. Perhaps a more genteel title might be evolved for presentation in the better houses.

The Cast

Nell Bradley.....Enid Bennett
Rev. Charles Alden.....Fred Niblo
Charles Fuhr.....Donald McDonald
Jim Bradley.....Melbourne McDowell
Amy Robinson.....Virginia Southern
The Deacon.....Otto Hoffman
Ben Roach.....Billy Elmer
Phil Glass.....J. P. Lockner
Matilda Boggs.....Caroline Rankin
Violinist.....Harold Goodwin

By R. Cecil Smith. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Photographed by Chester Lyons.

The Story—The village goes "dry" and Jim Bradley is forced out of town and into the bootlegging business. Jim's daughter, Nell, has grown up to hate all church folks, but when the new minister happens to come upon their new roadhouse and is given some real hootch for lemonade, there is an hour's heart to heart talk and Nell is made to see things in a different light. Nell is given an education. She marries the minister.

Classification—A back home drama woven around the country's fifth industry.

Production Highlights—The work of Miss Bennett as Nell Bradley. The fine cast of supporting players. J. P. Lockner's characterization of a "hooch hound." The church bazaar and its attending comedy moments. The death of Jim Bradley. The attempt of the booze salesman to ruin one of the girls of the church congregation and her rescue by Nell. The fist fight between the bartender and the salesman.

Exploitation Angles—The title. The popularity of Enid Bennett and the other members of the cast.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second class downtown houses, neighborhood theatres. Should go well in the towns.

"Mixed Faces"

Fox—4500 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a dual role picture with the star, William Russell playing the part of a judge who is candidate for mayor and that of a fire extinguisher salesman who is employed to impersonate the judge and spoil his chances of election. And since Election Day is approaching, the picture carries a timely note which might be exploited to some advantage by a wideawake exhibitor. As in all dual roles the resemblance of the two figures puts a tax upon the spectator's intelligence—since it has often been proved that not even twins can fool all the people all the time. If the onlooker can overlook this premise he is liable to be entertained in a mild way because the director has incorporated an adequate amount of action and kept it moving from the start.

The idea is not the least bit original and some of the situations are extremely slight, but due to the variety of incident it is likely to be put down as a pleasing program offering—though one must admit that Russell has had better stories. The comedy formula of supplying a chase and pursuit comes in handy. The impersonator is kidnapped. He makes a political speech and tries to sell his extinguisher. All these efforts build a fair sample of humor. The judge's fiancée is deceived by the wonderful resemblance and not knowing the difference takes him to her studio. He soon discovers the reason for her cordial reception and tries to step out of the picture, but love conquers and the judge is defeated as a candidate for the love stakes.

Russell does good work in the dual role—he puts over a pretty lively fight and appears to be the sole excuse for filming the story. Call it far-fetched if you must. There are too many subtitles and too much striving to add a punch. The cast includes Renee Adoree as the girl and De Witt Jennings as the political boss. If "Mixed Faces" had stuck either to its comedy or its melodrama it would have been more convincing. The plot appears to be as mixed as the characterization.

The Cast

Judge J. Woodworth Granger } William Russell
Jimmy Gallop }
Miss Sayre, alias Mary Allen.....Renee Adoree
Murray McGuire.....De Witt Jennings
Mrs. Sayre.....Elizabeth Garrison
Mr. Sayre.....Charles French
Mrs. Molly Crutcher.....Eileen Manning
William Haskins.....Harvey Clarke

By Roy Norton. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Photographed by David Abel. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Candidate for mayor attempts to persuade his sweetheart to marry him. She promises to write her answer. Then she meets his "double" on the street, a young traveling salesman and mistakes him for the judge. The salesman accepts her friendship and soon after discovers the reason for her cordiality. He is hired by the candidate's political opponents to defeat the Judge.

Classification—Melodrama and comedy based upon mistaken identity and dual role. Plot centers upon an election campaign.

Production Highlights—The comedy angle is pleasing. The work of the star and a finely balanced cast. The rapid-fire incident.

Exploitation Angles—If your crowd is not too critical of the dual role characterization they will doubtless enjoy this as fair entertainment. Play up the idea that it features two men who resemble each other so much that even the sweetheart of the one could not tell them apart.

Drawing Power—Will likely succeed in neighborhood houses.

"On the High Seas"

Paramount—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

PUT Irvin Willat on the high seas and he can bring any picture into port without mishap. This director is at his best when a ship is foundering. And anyone who sees his latest opus will agree with us that he knows how to put elemental action into a vivid sea drama. His shots are exquisite. There is a fog which is a master touch of photography. And the big liner which is bringing Dorothy Dalton back to Frisco silhouetted against the night is another eyepopener. The entire action with the exception of the closing reel takes place on the high seas—and before you know it you are in for a burning ship, the escape in a lifeboat, the angry waves pitching about and what not.

There are some actual deep sea shots interspersed with some excellent miniatures. The action is dominated by three characters—two stokers and a girl. These three are the only figures who escape Davy Jones Locker. One of the stokers is a cutthroat and after they clambor aboard a derelict ship the vicious one attempts to force his love upon the girl. A falling beam attends to him. And the two companions are rescued by a battleship and brought to San Francisco. The scenes are unusually vivid and compelling. And Dorothy Dalton in a sailors outfit carries on with her customary vitality. Jack Holt as the rugged stoker has his biggest role and makes himself a regular he-man. A convincing performance.

This is Edward Sheldon's first photoplay. And if he continues to write for the screen with the talent he has furnished the stage the silent drama is in for some clever stories. When port is reached the melodramatic touch is dominated by a serio-comic romance. The stoker is snubbed when the fair passenger is met at the pier by her fiancé and society friends. But the hero bobs up and kidnaps her from the wedding party. And she consents to be his wife when she discovers that he is one of the first sons of California who went stoking in search of adventure. A trifle false, this finale—showing that the girl is not genuinely sincere. It is a snappy picture—carries a kick like an army mule and your crowd will surely get a thrill from it. "On the High Seas" is positively the most exciting story of the bounding deep that has ever been shown.

The Cast

Leone Devereux.....Dorothy Dalton
Jim.....Jack Holt
Polack.....Mitchell Lewis
Aunt Emily.....Alice Knowland
The maid.....Vernon Tremaine
Captain of S. S. Andron.....James Gordon
Lieut. Gray, U. S. N.....Otto Brower
John Devereux.....Winter Hall
Dick Devereux.....William Boyd
Harold Van Allen.....Michael Dark

By Edward Sheldon. Scenario by E. Magnus Ingleton. Directed by Irvin Willat. Produced by Paramount.

The Story—Boat which is carrying heroine to Frisco catches fire and heroic stoker saves her life. With another stoker the two friends escape in a lifeboat and eventually find a derelict ship where they find refuge. The boat is doomed when a warship heaves into sight and rescues them. The bad stoker is killed in an accident. Port is reached and the hero is snubbed but he turns the tables by kidnapping the girl away from her fiancé.

Classification—Vivid melodrama of the bounding deep. Final reel discloses a romantic comedy vein.

Production Highlights—The marvelous shots on the high seas. The burning ship. The rescue. The excellent miniatures. The fine direction. The work of Jack Holt and Dorothy Dalton. The situation when fiancé is left waiting at the church as the bride is kidnapped.

Exploitation Angles—Play this up as an exceptionally graphic picture of romance and excitement on the bounding deep. Play up Willat as a pastmaster at putting over sea pictures. Stage prologue with motif established around deep sea life. Sailors' songs, dances, etc.

A laughable moment in "Dandy Dan," William Fox Sunshine Comedy.

"One Night in Paris"

Playgoers Pictures—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS picture was made in France. It has a cast of French players. It has a business getting title. It deals with the adventures of a ladies' man in la belle Paris, one of those "cake eaters" who goes over the collection of photos of his past "flames" enumerating their faults. This hero is named Jacques Fromage. Fromage is French for cheese. It was a bad selection for a leading man's screen name, especially for Americans who know French and since the war there are some few million buddies who remember "fromage" at least.

Well, it seems that this Jacques plays with women's hearts the same as he would a pair of dice—he throws them around at his will. He casts away one Cora La Belle when he sees Clara Durand, daughter of his landlady. The daughter has just been betrothed to Felix Cloque, who would be termed a "dumb-bell" in this country. Undismayed by this detail, Jacques plies his troth so well that Clara gives Felix the gate. Jacques has sicked Clara's brother on Cora, the actress, and after the brother has tasted of the Montmartre night life and Jacques has loudly proclaimed that he's through with the pace that kills—it all ends happily.

The production suffers from poor direction. Most foreign pictures do when compared with films made in the U. S. A. The photography is below par. So is the cast. Whoever made the picture (no one is given credit for this masterpiece) tried to obtain elaborate effects, but he has succeeded in obtaining only bizarre. In fact it's all very tame and proves that the French producers still have some crude ideas on American "jazz." The picture will be O. Keh. for houses that change their bills often. It has the novelty of at least being "different."

The Cast

Jacques Fromage.....Pierre de Guingant
Maurio.....Maurice Chevalier
Denise.....Denise Legeay
Old Cloque.....M. Joffre
Jerome.....Jerome M. Martinelli
Mme. Durand.....Marguerite Moreno
Maid.....Mlle. Nina Myrol
Clare France.....M. Pre Fils
Cora La Belle.....Mlle. Gereau

The Story—Deals with the adventures of Jacques Fromage, a French "lounge lizard," among the ladies. He tires of Cora La Belle of the Casino de Paris when he sees the daughter of his new landlady. Jacques introduces the brother of his new "flame" to the actress and then proceeds to win the daughter away from her "dumbbell" fiancé.

Classification—A comedy drama that is mostly comedy.

Production Highlights—The beauty of the leading lady. Jacques' lounge coat, which may set a new mode in this country. Some of the "night life" scenes in la belle Parée.

Exploitation Angles—The title is your best bet here. Play it up, but don't go too strong on superlatives in describing the production.

Drawing Power—Many exhibitors change their programs daily. This one will be suitable in such cases in second class houses.

"The Old Homestead"

Paramount—8000 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

WHEN the list of the best pictures of 1922 is compiled, this magnificent production must needs be placed way up near the top. If this attraction is not one of the most talked of features of the year, if it does not break box office records everywhere, if it does not start a great revival of interest in the silent art—then the American public is a halcyon, indeed, to please. Here is film entertainment plus the greatest heart interest story the stage put into one of the finest screen plays in the history of this industry.

"The Old Homestead," in its present form, is notable for many things. Some of the things are: It has the most realistic storm scenes ever screened. An entire town is wiped off the earth by its fury. It is said that on third the cost of the production was chalked up on this big talking point. It is the climax of Theodore Roberts' career. As kind hearted old Uncle Josh, optimistic to the "nth" degree in spite of almost overwhelming adversity, this sterling actor contributes to screen literature a characterization that will be remembered for a long time. The work of the other players is of such an order that must have been inspired with the one desire to help create a masterpiece. The mounting of the picture is another big factor. Correct in detail, realistically staged, artistically photographed and directed by James Cruze with punch, pep and action, it approaches 100 percent in entertainment value.

The story is well known. It's one of those human documents that strum at the heart strings. You'll wonder at the work involved in staging those cyclone scenes. You'll enjoy the many real comedy moments that will send your own memory back to your own little home town life and you'll get a deal of satisfaction in recalling that you, too, once went "sparking" in "a one-hoss shay" catop a high wheeled velocipede as picture here. And that you too had your favorite swimmin' pool and loafed around a general store wherein centered all the knowledge of the world. Would that we had space to enumerate the many highlights.

The Cast

Uncle Josh Whitcomb.....Theodore Roberts
Reuben, his son.....Harrison Ford
Aunt Matilda.....Ethel Wald
Ann, an orphan.....Fritzi Ridgeway
Eph Holbrook.....George Fawcett
Len, his son.....James Mason
Rose Blaine.....Kathleen O'Connell
Cy Prime.....Z. Wall Covington
Seth Perkins.....Frank Hayes
Constable.....Edwin Brad
Happy Jack.....T. Roy Barne

By Denman Thompson. Directed by James Cruze. Scenario by Julian Josephson. Adapted by Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Woods.

Photographed by Carl Brown.

Classification—A "way back home" drama and the greatest heart interest story ever written.

Production Highlights—The work of Theodore Roberts as Uncle Josh. The very fine supporting cast. The tremendous climax featuring the finest storm scenes ever filmed. The realistic Chinese scenes. The exquisite mounting given the production from beginning to end. The artistic titles. James Cruze's directorial work. The real comedy moments. The wonderful exterior winter scene with the Old Homestead in its midst.

Exploitation Angles—So many it would take a whole book to enumerate them. Put over a big rural street parade with all the old homestead characters, led by a rube band. Have a rube quartette sent around town on a hay wagon. Turn your lobby into a barnyard scene. Boost the cyclone scenes to the skies. And the cast. And Theodore Roberts as Uncle Josh. This picture will stand up under the biggest exploitation campaign you ever put on.

Drawing Power—Inasmuch as every man, woman and child has heard of "The Old Homestead," millions will want to see this magnificent screen adaptation. The world's finest houses can put this one on and attain new attendance records.

"Trifling Women"

Metro—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

REX INGRAM has demonstrated again that as an artist of the silversheet he has few equals. Looking at "Trifling Women" we marvel at his skill in so composing his scenes that the design takes on the appearance of a superb painting. He knows how to use colors—he knows how to dovetail every sequence and to emphasize every dramatic situation.

We can name no director who can get more out of a scene than this director. He is both artist and dramatist. Consequently he is able not only to please the eye, but to stimulate the imagination. "Trifling Women" is a new title given to "Black Orchids" which the director made several years ago. He has not changed the general scheme of his story—he has only revised it and embellished it with new colors. And you wouldn't recognize it if you remember the former production—so much has Ingram progressed in his art. His story reveals how a trifling woman can play at love so that tragedy stalks at her heels. A father and son are in love with this sorceress—and when the latter is called to war, the parent is made a plaything in her hands. In revenge he would kill his rival, but the tables are turned. The boy comes home and she manoeuvres things so that a duel comes about and her new husband is mortally wounded.

The climaxes are positively uncanny. Ingram has taken a leaf from Poe, a leaf from Sardou, a leaf from Marie Corelli and a scene from Richard Mansfield's parietic study, "A Parisian Romance." And he has accomplished something in the way of vivid episodes. No finer individual scene has been done which showed such dramatic power as that of the banquet when the old roue dies from the poison he would give to another. The war touches are only suggested. The final climax releases a powerful impression as the wounded diplomat conceives a horrible scheme of revenge for the trespassers. This may be far-fetched in the sense that a mortally wounded man could not expend the strength to carry out such vengeance.

The action could be speeded up in several episodes, particularly those featuring the home life of the roue and the sorceress. Yet eliminating one single detail would have robbed it of its force—its lesson. Lewis Stone, Edward J. Connelly, Barbara La Marr, Ramon Navarro and others give admirably limned portrayals. The picture carries a punch and deep interest and is technically perfect.

The Cast

Leon de Severac, the novelist.....Pomeroy Cannon
His daughter, Jacqueline.....Barbara La Marr
Henri.....Ramon Navarro
Zareda, the fortune teller.....Barbara La Marr
Baron Francois de Maupin.....Edward Connelly
His son, Ivan.....Ramon Navarro
The Marquis Ferroni.....Lewis Stone
Pere Alphonse Bidondeau, innkeeper.....Hughie Mack
Col. Roybet.....Gene Pouyet
Achmet.....John George
Cesar.....Jesse Weldon
Hasson.....Hyman Binunsky
Hatim-Tal.....Joe Martin

Story and scenario by Rex Ingram. Directed by Rex Ingram. Photographed by John F. Seitz. Produced by Metro.

Classification—Story within a story, showing tragedy of accepting love lightly. Has tragic moments. In fact tragedy is the framework of plot. Highly complicated.

Production Highlights—Ingram's fine direction with individual scenes. The banquet scene. The episodes in the roue's home. The marching away of the soldiers. The duel and the subsequent climax. The fine acting of Barbara La Marr, Lewis Stone and Edward J. Connelly. The sets and photography.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Ingram. He is the dominant factor here. Play up the title and use it for a newspaper campaign. Stage an elaborate prologue—ballet scenes, etc.

Drawing Power—Good for the Big Time.

Mary Pickford as "Tess" in her new production for United Artists, "Tess of the Storm Country."

"Headin' North"

Arrow—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IF you are looking for action in this picture or not, just so long as it keeps moving, you are apt to be satisfied. Otherwise "Headin' North" does not measure up to present day standards. It smacks of the old school melodramas which were turned out on the screen several years ago. Action is what the director has striven for and he has found it. But in keeping it on the move he has sacrificed such important details as continuity and logic.

The premise of the story is not very sound. You see a hero starting out to avenge his sweetheart's death without actual knowledge that she was killed by the man with whom she eloped. The story is always obvious despite the fact that several adventurous episodes occur before the climax. The incident reveals a falling tree pinning a man beneath it, the rescue of the heroine from a canoe, a payroll robbery, and some other thrills. The hero starts out to get his man. And we must be thankful that he doesn't wear the Northwest Mounted uniform. The villain who eloped with the girl is followed to a lumber camp where he attempts to frame the outraged lover with a robbery. It follows that the blackguard is shot by a half-wit and in his dying confession admits that he committed the robbery, but that the girl's death was accidental.

The picture is one of those products which are made to release action. Just so long as the camera can hold up—the director keeps on shooting. Plenty of fighting, riding and gun-play—but these elements are all lost in the shuffle. Heroes who have a mission in life—to go out and start something without stopping to use their reasoning faculties are gradually becoming passe. The picture has some first rate backgrounds. In fact the pictorial appeal is its one compensation. It is crude melodrama and not very skillfully acted. If we must have elemental action at least it should carry some object for being incorporated.

The Cast

Bob Ryan.....Pete Morrison
Madge Mullins.....Gladys Cooper
Her father.....Will Franks
Arthur Stowell.....Jack Walters
Frances Wilson.....Dorothea Dickinson
Hank Wilson.....William Dills
The Boob.....Barney Furey

Story and scenario by Barney Furey. Directed by Charles E. Bartlett.

The Story—Western loved girl and when she is found dead he is determined to get the man with whom she eloped, and who he believes is responsible for her death. The youth encounters several adventures and is ultimately framed for a robbery by the villain. The latter is mortally wounded by a half-wit and in his dying confession admits the robbery, but that the girl was the victim of an accident.

Classification—Western melodrama of old school type. Chase of villain by hero and former's confession when he is mortally wounded.

Production Highlights—Fine exteriors. Good atmosphere. Acting is adequate.

Exploitation Angles—If your folks aren't surfeited with this old-time plot perhaps they will like it. Feature the action and thrills.

Drawing Power—Second class downtown houses may enjoy it.

"The Face in the Fog"

Cosmopolitan—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THERE have been so many good pictures this season that most of the superlatives have been exhausted in heralding their advent. If one is to believe all that is printed this industry must be enjoying its golden age. Therefore in spite of anything that has gone before in the way of laudatory expressions on this or that production, we want to stand right up on our hind legs and tell the world that one of the finest "crook" pictures ever produced is about to be projected on our screens. We guarantee that "The Face in the Fog" will shock the most jaded patron into a knowledge that he is witnessing A STORY.

Millions of folk in these United States know Blackie Dawson and the "Mrs." Their adventures have been set forth in vivid style by Jack Boyle. But here they live in a story that will send shivers shimming up and down the spine. We fail to recall a more dramatic series of scenes that those attending the entrance of Petrus and a confederate into Blackie's home, the attempt to steal the jewels and the capture of both by sending a strong electric current through their bodies as they grip the combination of the little safe. And this is only one of the fast succeeding moments that make the heart beat faster.

The picture is notable for its cast. Lionel Barrymore is an ideal type for Blackie. Louis Wolheim, who became famous over night for his work in "The Hairy Ape," the New York dramatic triumph, appears as Petrus. We predict he'll have everyone talking about his characterization in his picture. We have never looked at more artistic night photography than that presented in the almost two reels of action in a dense fog. The lighting effects in these scenes is an accomplishment. "The Face in the Fog" is a fine answer to "Why I Am Ashamed of the Movies," which appeared in a certain weekly magazine. It makes that article look foolish.

The Cast

Boston Blackie Dawson.....Lionel Barrymore
Grand Duchess Tatiana.....Seena Owen
Petrus.....Louis Wolheim
Count Alexis Orloff.....Lowell Sherman
A Detective.....Joseph King
Mrs. Blackie Dawson.....Mary McLaren
Kuk Kant.....George Nash
Prince Ivan Ivanovitch.....Macey Harlan
Michael Najansky.....Gustav Von Seyffertitz
Grand Duke Alexis.....Mario Majeroni

By Jack Boyle. Directed by Allan Crosland. Scenario by John Lynch and Jack Boyle. Photographed by Harold Weastrom and Ira H. Morgan.

The Story—Deals with the escape of a Russian grand duchess and some confederates from their native land with a portion of the Romanoff jewels, their arrival in this country and constant bounding by a gang of Muscovite Terrorists. How Blackie Dawson finds the jewels, risks his life several times in trying to keep them and eventually turns them over to the duchess is told in a series of stirring scenes.

Classification—One of the finest "crook" pictures ever produced in this industry. Mystery, suspense, thrills and romance—there all here in overflowing measure.

Production Highlights—The cast. Its a blue ribbon one. The work of Lionel Barrymore as Blackie and Louis Wolheim as the leader of the gang of Terrorists. The exquisite night photography and unusually fine lighting effects, especially during the opening reels when all the action transpires in fog. The tense moments attending the attempts of Petrus to get the jewels from Blackie's home and the fist battles ensuing. The capture of the two Terrorists by electricity.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the names of the cast in this master film. It reads like the Bluebook of Filmdom. Everybody likes crook plays. Tell them this one is just about the best ever produced. Tell folks that Louis Wolheim, star of "The Hairy Ape," the New York stage sensation has a prominent part.

"The Trail of the Axe"

American Releasing—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a lumberjack tale which is so transparent in outline that one can guess the outcome from the opening subtitle. The idea is so familiar that it loses what little suspense it carries, so to find interest the spectator is forced to look at the scenery. The backgrounds offer the only excuse for making the picture, which obviously belongs to the old school of ten, twent' and thirt' melodrama. It's a story of brother against brother, the feud between them revolving around a girl whom both love. Naturally the weaker youth has first call. But he is such a ne'er-do-well and his craving for strong liquor forces the hero to discharge him from the lumber mill.

The early scenes present Dustin Farnum trying with all his might to appear natural, but the story makes him one of those holier-than-thou brothers and you don't have much sympathy for this type of man. The climax is slow in arriving, but when it does appear the picture picks up in value. Even though you know for a certainty what is coming, the scene carries quite a kick. The evil brother, revengeful, dynamites the sawmill—which results in the hero being pinioned by a log. However, he manages to escape. He traces the villain to the girl's house and because he is a relative the scoundrel is allowed to make a getaway. And the heroine gives up her love to the honest lumberjack.

A trite story which never leaves the beaten path. Virtue triumphs with a big rescue. The atmosphere and incident of the climax are the best features. The scenes of the logs sliding down a mountain to the river—and eventually reaching the saw where they are sliced are well executed. The forest shots are also praiseworthy. Farnum carries a burden as the good brother, while George Fisher has the thankless role of his evil relative. Ernest C. Warde, who can make a story hum with half a chance, does as well as could be expected with this threadbare plot.

The Cast

Dave Malkern.....Dustin Farnum
Betty Somers.....Winifred Kingston
Jim Malkern.....George Fisher
Doctor Somers.....Jos. J. Dowling

By Ridgewood Cullom. Directed by Ernest C. Warde.

The Story—Lumber foreman wants his brother to reform on account of his engagement to girl whom both love. But the weak youth continues his evil ways with the result that he is discharged. In revenge he dynamites the sawmill, nearly causing the death of his brother. The latter through his relationship is unable to punish him. So the villain makes a getaway. The girl realizes where her true love lies.

Classification—Lumberjack melodrama of the old school. Plot introduces brother against brother.

Production Highlights—Fine scenery. Scene when logs slide down mountain to the river. The sawmill scene when hero is pinioned by a log.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Dustin Farnum and the scenery. Get a good program to carry it along—introducing several novelties. You might feature the climax.

Drawing Power—Only good for second-class downtown houses and theatres in factory districts.

"The Mohican's Daughter"

American Releasing—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a picture which takes you back to the day when Indian stories were favorites on the screen. While this tale of Jack London's is entirely obvious and belongs to an ancient pigeon-hole, doubtless the picture will please seven patrons out of ten because of the well sustained interest—and the fact that the redskins can always excite a thrill—even if they don't look genuine here beneath their walnut stain. There is a note of intrigue present throughout which does not add any relief to the plot.

It goes along in a rather heavy vein telling a story of a halfbreed girl who is accused by a jealous chieftain of murdering the tribe's medicine man. She finds a refuge at her white lover's trading camp and when the tribe attack the post, the heroine puts a wrong conclusion on the presence of a scheming white woman, and gives herself up to the redskins. This introduces the ultimate rescue and the capture of the real culprit.

Doubtless London's tale made much better reading via the printed page. Certainly the imagination would be stimulated there, because the continuity would have progressed evenly. The ending is rather unsatisfactory and several of the sequences are chopped off, leaving the impression that it suffered from editing. The Indian atmosphere is the outstanding feature of the production, aside from Nancy Deaver's appealing study of the halfbreed girl. Longfellow's Hiawatha does not possess more charm. Saxon Kling is the white lover and gives a good account of himself.

The Cast

Jees Uck.....Nancy Deaver
Kitty Shannon.....Hazel Washburn
Neil Bonner.....Saxon Kling
Amos Pentley.....William Thompson
Jack Hollis.....Jack Newton
Father La Claire.....Paul Panzer
Chatanna.....Nick Thompson
Nachinta.....Mortimer Snow
A Half Breed.....John Webb Dillon
Inigo.....Myrtle Morse
Child.....Rita Abrams

Adapted from story, "Jees Uck," by Jack London. Scenario and direction by S. E. V. Taylor. Photographed by Oliver Marsh and Lester Lang.

The Story—Half breed Indian girl risks death for disobedience of a tribal law. The medicine man is killed when he offers to aid her and the girl is accused of the crime. She flees for protection to her white lover, but when the post is attacked, she misinterprets the presence of a white woman and surrenders to her own people. Her lover follows and rescues her.

Classification—Tale of Indian romance involving crime and villainy. Story written by Jack London.

Production Highlights—The unusually fine performance of Nancy Deaver as Indian girl. The beautiful exteriors. The atmosphere. The suspense despite obvious plot.

Exploitation Angles—Play up Jack London's name. Mention that it is an interesting Indian tale. Put over the lobby display—you know the stuff. Put on an Indian prologue—Indian dances and songs. Feature Nancy Deaver.

Drawing Power—Second class and neighborhood houses will doubtless enjoy it. Trifle too antiquated for everyday patron who has been educated to big stuff.

"The Girl Who Ran Wild"

Universal—4506 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

UNIVERSAL has tacked on a new tale to Bret Harte's story, "M'liss," which served several years ago as a vehicle for Mary Pickford. Since there is a new generation of picturegoers and since time erases a number of impressions from the memory, doubtless the present day audiences will look with favor upon this tale of a tempestuous mountain girl, played with considerable spirit by Gladys Walton.

The new version is quite different from the original production in that the dramatic element seems to have been subordinated to allow the star to frolic in the manner which has established her popularity. And somehow she doesn't act as Bret Harte would have had her. She is not so much the untamed girl, who doesn't know "what it is all about" as she is the product of the slums, if one takes her gum-chewing into consideration and the fact that she allows herself to become unduly hysterical in her reactions to things.

In playing up the star and trimming the drama from the story the picture doesn't carry much value. It appears rather slight and episodic. A murder is committed in the tale but no one is accused. In the Pickford production the schoolmaster was accused. Here a couple of characters come forward to adopt her—both of them being friends of the man who killed her father. After this episode the schoolmaster persuades her to attend school. And the picture hits off on a romantic comedy angle with a few twists here and there to give it balance. The mountain girl has a rival and so conflict is precipitated before the teacher comes to the rescue and take her away from the man with whom she has planned to run away.

Bret Harte won't be easily recognized in this story, although several subtitles are in his best vein. If your customers don't remember the other picture, they won't mind this version. There is some good atmosphere. But the direction is faulty in allowing too much incident to dominate the action. Furthermore several scenes aren't dovetailed in up-to-date fashion. The best points in the production are the schoolroom scenes. And the star is always charming even though she isn't a perfect M'liss.

The Cast

M'liss.....Gladys Walton
"Bummer" Smith.....Marc E. Bobbins
The Schoolmaster.....Vernon Steele
Calaveras John.....Joseph Dwelling
Johnny Cake.....William Burres
Preacher.....Al Har
Deacon McNagley.....Nelson McDowell
Jack Velvet.....Lloyd Whitlock
Clytie.....Lucile Rickson

Adapted from "M'Liss," the story by Bret Harte.

Scenario by Rupert Julian. Directed by Rupert Julian.

Photographed by Allen Davey. Produced by Universal.

The Story—M'liss is made an orphan when her father is murdered by her mother's brother. The latter's friends offer to take care of her but she repulses them. However, she is attracted to the new schoolteacher who influences her to get an education. While at school she discovers that the village belle is in love with him. Convinced that the girl loves him, M'liss tries to run away, but the schoolteacher prevents her from doing so by fighting the man who has urged her to join him.

Classification—Western romantic drama, adapted from Bret Harte's "M'liss."

Production Highlights—The good atmosphere and details. The schoolroom scenes.

Exploitation Angles—This is an adaptation of Bret Harte's "M'liss." And it would be a good idea to tell your crowd about the authorship. Go after the star's following. Put on an atmospheric prologue. And if you think the picture deserves it, put on a lobby display.

Drawing Power—Will draw best in small neighborhood houses and in small towns.

Bill Whiston, veteran showman, has succeeded William McKenna as manager of the Olympic theatre, Buffalo. Mr. Whiston has been manager of road shows, was formerly with the Shuberts and has had a vast experience in the operating end of the theatre. The Olympic is now offering double feature programs.

Billie West has resigned as manager of the Central Park, Buffalo, to become associated with Harry Green in the management of the Premier, another North Main Street neighborhood theatre. J. Savage, father of Jim Savage, assistant manager of the Universal exchange, has been named manager of the Central Park, which is a link in the General Theatre Corporation chain.

J. H. Michael, chairman of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, Inc., and manager of the Regent theatre, Buffalo, has been named chairman of the board of directors of the Western New York unit of the organization. The exhibitors are now planning a big battle against the daylight saving ordinance which comes up for referendum in Buffalo at the November election.

Walter Hays, vice president of the Mark-Strand interests, with headquarters in Buffalo, will return to town Monday, October 9, after serving two weeks as a representative of Moe Mark on the rotating committee at the New York office of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Manager Bill Whiston put over a good tieup with the Buffalo Times when he arranged for a special showing of "Trouble," at the Olympic, Buffalo, for the 300 orphans of the city. The Times gave the stunt a million dollars' worth of free publicity. H. L. Beecroft, First National exploitationist, assisted Mr. Whiston in exploiting the picture. Tuesday, October 3, was the big day.

John Daggert Ashby, manager of the Lincoln, Rochester, is dead. He had been in the theatrical business for more than 35 years.

Fred A. Stone, who was appearing in Rochester in "Tip Top," made a special trip to Auburn one day last week to put on a special act at the Grand theatre where one of his pictures was being shown. Mr. Stone made the trip because of his close friendship with Manager Richard F. Staley. They have known each other for 35 years, being together in Colorado some time.

In Buffalo Film Centres

COLONEL P. H. SMITH, one of the best known exchange men in western New York, formerly manager of the First National, United Artists and other exchanges and recently a member of the Goldwyn sales staff, has been appointed manager of the new Buffalo Warner Brothers' exchange and is now seeking permanent office quarters. We suggest that he might build an exchange on the top of that Italian tank he drives along the highways of the state. The colonel's host of friends will be glad to see him back at the head of an exchange again. He'll soon be screening the new releases of his company for exhibitors in the key cities of the territory.

George A. Hickey, former manager of the Goldwyn exchange, has left town to assume his new duties as district manager for the same company, with headquarters in Washington. Before leaving, Mr. Hickey was presented with a handsome leather brief case by the members of his office staff. Tom Brady is now in charge of the Goldwyn exchange here and announces that he has closed "Remembrance," in every key city in the district.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Grand & North exchange, has closed "Rich Men's Wives," for its western New York premiere at the new Lafayette Square and "More to Be Pitied Than Scorned" at the Olympic. Sydney has just returned from a motor trip to Boston, New York and Philadelphia. The end of the trip was not a success. He was towed in from about 20 miles outside the city. Syd says the next car he gets will be a good one. He was not pinched for speeding on this recent trip.

Bill Gehring, who is in charge of the educational department of the local Fox office, is spending his spare time aiding in coaching the Lafayette High school football team. It seems to us that he would be better guiding a girl's basketball squad.

G. H. Quigley, formerly with Pathe, has been engaged as a salesman by Select Manager Harry E. Lotz, who just now is being swamped with contracts on "Love Is an Awful Thing," which will soon have its local premiere at Shea's Hippodrome.

L. Bernstein, special representative for Educational was in town last week for a conference with Howard F. Brink, local manager. Mr. Bernstein is specializing on Kinograms.

Elmer Brooks, Pathe serial sales manager, was a Buffalo visitor last week end. He visited the leading exhibitors in the city and had several conferences with W. A. V. Mack, local Pathe pilot.

The local Pioneer exchange on the third floor of the Warner building in Franklin street has been discontinued.

Chester A. Saunders, manager of the United Artist's Exchange, is signing up the big attractions which his company is distributing at the leading houses in the territory and is now anxiously awaiting the Mary Pickford revival of "Tess of the Storm Country."

With Canadian Exchanges

THE Canadian headquarters of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, Toronto, have been moved to the new Universal Building, 277 Victoria Street, in the heart of the exchange district of Toronto. Universal occupies the whole of the first floor of the handsome new structure while the top floor has been leased to the Canadian Educational Film Company, Ltd., for the latter's head office for the Dominion. The new building was taken over on October 1.

Carl Weeks of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been appointed manager of the Ontario branch of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto, in succession to Morris Milligan who has been transferred to the Famous-Lasky office at Washington, D. C. Weeks was formerly in charge of the Manitoba branch of the organization at Winnipeg.

J. Rowell of the Toronto office of United Artists has been appointed manager of the Montreal office of United Artists in succession to I. Sourkes who has resigned.

E. H. Teal is the new manager at Montreal for the Canadian Releasing Corporation of which Roy Kerr was formerly manager.

J. P. O'loghlin of Montreal, managing director of the Canadian Releasing Corporation, announces that "I Am the Law" will shortly be released in Canada. He has also secured the Canadian rights to the Eddie Polo serial, "Cap'n Kid."

W. S. Jones, manager of the First National exchange at Winnipeg and a resident of Winnipeg for 27 years, is leaving that city on October 15 to reside in California where he has invested in property that gives indication of producing oil. He has been vice-president of the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association, built the Colonial theatre, and managed the Bijou theatre. He has been succeeded by W. H. Mitchell, formerly of Calgary, Alberta.

Canadian News

Some of the Allens are said to be interested or identified with the establishment of another moving picture theatre chain in Canada, the new organization being reported as the Sterling Theatres, Ltd. Quite a number of moving picture houses have been acquired already, it is declared. The names of H. J. Allen and Max Allen have been mentioned in connection with the announcements regarding the change in ownership or control of various theatres affected.

The New Allen or Sterling circuit is said to embrace a number of cities in Ontario. The Walkerville theatre, Walkerville, is said to have been acquired, and other houses which have been taken over, according to reports, include the National and Plaza theatres, Toronto, and theatres in Windsor and Paris.

Bud Lennan has started out with moving picture theatre enterprises in Toronto, Ontario, after many years' service as an exchange manager with both Canadian Universal and Stephenson's Attractions, Limited, it is announced. Mr. Lennan is now conducting the Imperial theatre, Toronto, and has secured the Aster and other local houses as well, it is stated.

William Sturgess, for years manager of the Imperial theatre, Toronto, is now active as a salesman with Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto, which is an Allen organization.

James W. Cowan, manager of the grand Opera House, Toronto, for nearly 25 years, has resigned to join the staff of the Royal Alexandra theatre, a legitimate house in Toronto. It was at the Grand theatre that a Canadian record was established for length of run for any one photoplay when "Mickey" was shown continuously there for 17 weeks.

The man in charge of Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, Ontario, for its new regime as an exclusive moving picture theatre, without vaudeville, is Mr. Walter Thomas, who has been appointed manager of the house. Mr. Thomas went from Buffalo to Toronto to assume charge of the big downtown house in Toronto. Ernest H. Hunt has been appointed organist of the Hippodrome and has charge of the Wurlitzer instrument that is recognized as the largest organ in all Canada.

Ben Bloom, formerly supervisor of theatres at Winnipeg, Manitoba, for Allen Theatres, Limited, has opened up a business for himself in Kalamazoo, Mich., having resigned from the Allen enterprises.

Washington Gossip

Indicative of the recovery from strike conditions in the mining state of West Virginia is the information that the Orpheum and Lyric in Huntington charge $.35 and report good business while the Hippodrome does a fifty cent business and recently showed pictures of the Clyffeside Fourth of July fight at the same price. The Blue Ridge running feature pictures and 4 Keith vaudeville acts is doing a good business at a 55 cent rate.

The West Virginia Amusement Company has purchased the contract held by the Valley Engineering Company for completion of the construction of the new theatre in Adams street, Fairmont, adjacent to the new Watson Hotel there. Two shifts have been put on, and Samuel D. Brady is in charge of operations, with William C. Hawkins as his superintendent. They expect to open the week of December 1st.

Movies were one of the attractions at the Coal-Industrial Exposition last week at Huntington, West Virginia.

Daylight Saving, which proved a great detriment to the film theatres of Baltimore and other Maryland cities and which caused the Crandall theatres of Washington to have a straw ballot vote on the matter, was finally presented to the Second Branch City Council of Baltimore at their meeting Monday night. By a vote of 9-1 the councilmen put the matter of permanent daylight-saving up to the Baltimore voters at the municipal elections next May. City Solicitor Rolan R. Marchant ruled that the question could not be on the ballot at the state election in November as the legislature had not sanctioned its submission.

Harry Howe of the Columbia has been at his desk for several days since his return from an extended autumn vacation.

Business at Washington's large first run houses has been very good for early autumn, and houses like the Rialto, Metropolitan and Columbia have been turning patrons away from evening performances. Two-week runs are becoming the regular diet here. Even the Metropolitan has been infected, and "Monte Cristo" is held over for a second week. "The Prisoner of Zenda" has just finished its capacity-house two-week run, and the smiles of Larry Beattus and Mark Gates spread from ear to ear and wont wear off. Practically all Columbia bookings are on a two week basis.

Miss Emma Venable, attendance officer of the Norfolk, Va., public schools, announced that Norfolk picture theatre managers have assured her that school children shall not enter their theatres before three o'clock in the afternoon, week-days. Miss Venable said that she wished "to publicly express her appreciation of their invaluable cooperation."

Washington Exchanges

VISITING the new home of Washington Paramount exchange this week was A. C. Benson, special representative of the home office of Paramount Pictures.

Harry Hunter, former manager of the Des Moines exchange of Famous Players-Lasky, and before that at Portland, Ore., is now manager of the Washington branch of Paramount. He relieved Assistant Manager Rothmann of Washington, who has filled in since the recent resignation of Herbert I. Krause.

Phillip Miller of Annapolis was in the city Friday for the Film Board of Trade meeting, on which he is an exhibitor representative.

Mrs. Bachman, wife of the manager of Educational, has been acting as temporary secretary for her former chief, J. Howard Beaver of the Al Lichtman Exchange.

Inventor Coleman of Seaboard-Arrow Films recently returned from a successful buying trip in New York.

H. R. Beirsdorf, salesman for the Select pictures Washington exchange, after seven solid successful sales weeks on the road, took a two weeks vacation recently, spent at Atlantic City, from which he returned early this week.

Miss Ella White has been assigned as film inspector for F. B. O., following the recent promotion of Miss Marie Clarity to the position of bookkeeper.

Owing to the Victor Herbert Week, booking arrangements of Tom Moore's Rialto for the Washington first run of "Slim Shoulders," the Irene Castle fashion review will not appear at the Rialto, but will be shown under the title "Dances and Fashions of 1923," for one matinee performance only, October 1st, in the re-modeled Poli's. Mrs. Tremaine and dancing partner will give their own dances, accompanied by the six "slim shoulders" models, their own orchestra, stage settings, costumes, etc.

Miss Lillian Crabbe is now acting as secretary to Mr. Clafin of The Southern Moving Picture Corporation of Washington and College Park, Miss White having resumed her studies in Central High where she was a senior.

In Kansas City's Film Center

ONE by one Kansas City exchanges are deserting the film building until there now are only three exchanges left, Hodkinson, United Artists and Vitagraph. High rent is the cause of the desertion. The latest exchange to leave the building is the Richards & Flynn Company, which has established quarters at 113 West Eighteenth Street, next door to "Hollywood," a unique refreshment stand in the heart of the newly created film exchange colony. William Flynn, manager of Richards & Flynn, is planning much larger quarters than was available for the company in the film building.

The second session of the Kansas City arbitration board last week proved conclusively that the board has progressed from the theoretical into the practical stage. The meeting was divided into two parts, the exchanges being heard in grievance against the theatre owners in the first part, while the exhibitors were heard against the exchanges during the second part. Each was thoroughly investigated and disposed of. The next meeting will be in about two weeks.

The Linwood theatre, one of Kansas City's largest suburban houses, will re-open in about a week with W. O. Lenhart of Iola, Kan., as the manager. The house recently was acquired by the Capitol Theatre Enterprises, Mr. Lenhart being a brother of L. J. Lenhart of that organization. The theatre has just undergone complete remodeling, both interior and exterior, and now is one of the most modern houses in the city.

J. Erwin Dodson has been appointed serial sales manager of Universal's Kansas City branch.

In Cleveland Exchanges

THE FILM BOARD OF TRADE of Cleveland has moved to its new offices, 205 Film Exchange Bldg. Howard Christman, secretary of the organization, is always present to receive exhibitor and exchange complaints alike. The Film Board of Trade of Cleveland is also helping the Ohio Convention of Better Film, which is to be held in Cleveland Friday and Saturday, October 6th and 7th, donating both money and film service.

Irwin Hirsch has resigned as manager of the Cleveland office of The American Releasing Company.

"Billie" Liebson, secretary to the manager of American Releasing Company, is in charge of the office until a new manager is named, following the resignation of Irwin Hirsch.

R. O. Flemm, former booker for the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland, is now covering the Akron-Canton-Youngstown territory for the local Vitagraph exchange.

R. A. Hardy has come out of the West to sell Vitagraph pictures in Toledo and the surrounding territory.

Maurice Lebensburger, manager of the Cleveland office of the Standard Film Service Company, has been spending the week visiting the exhibitors in the territory. It isn't often that Lebensburger hits the ties. This was a profitable trip, however, for he closed contracts in all the key cities for the early release for "Rich Men's Wives," and other important features distributed through the Standard Film.

Cleveland Chips

Dave Adler, former Cleveland exhibitor, now manager of the Alhambra, Triangle and American theatres in Pittsburgh, was discovered making a tour of the Cleveland film exchanges this week.

Gene Ochs, manager of the Allen theatre, Cleveland, since the house has been under Loew management, and who was assistant to S. Barrett McCormick previously, has resigned to become manager of the Circle theatre, Euclid Avenue and East 105th Street.

Kenneth Reid, manager of Loew's State until this week when the house changed from a picture policy to Shubert vaudeville, succeeds Ochs as manager of the Allen.

Thomas Carroll, better known from one end of the state to the other as "Tommy," is house manager of the State theatre, Cleveland. Carroll was manager of the Standard theatre, Cleveland, for the past several years and resigned last season to become manager of the Opera house which was then showing Shubert vaudeville. During the summer he has been managing a picture house in Dayton, O.

New England Brevities

More than 3,000 invitations were issued and practically all accepted, for a special showing of "Forget Me Not" at Loew's State theatre, Boston, which was given Wednesday morning. Characterized as an unusual film and word of its successful eight-week run in New York leaking out, a large house was present. Comment was very enthusiastic. The object of the showing was to gain the cooperation of welfare workers and clergy in spreading interest in the picture. Invitations were issued to the Boston clergy, welfare workers, and directors and managers of all orphanages in this vicinity.

Church "movies" are daily gaining in popularity around Boston. The First Congregational Church has started a regular season of motion pictures, opening Sunday night of last week, with the dramatic Bible photoplay, "Moses in Egypt." It was well received, and its complement, "Moses in Sinai," was shown October 1st.

Harry Houdini was the honor guest on October 1st at a dinner given in the Dutch Room of the Copley Square Hotel by the Boston Local Society of American Magicians. Feted with Houdini was his local manager, "Mystic" Clayton. D. James Gordon, president of of the local, presided and spoke. Other guests were Howard Thurston and his associate, Harry Jansen, and following the dinner the two masters of legerdemain held a "mystification match." Others spoke as the spirits moved, but when the party broke up, all of Houdini's art could not produce his hat, and he went to the Medford Broadcasting Radio station in a borrowed top-piece.

Boston has had a well-loved visitor this last week in the person of Mrs. Mary Carr, star of "Over the Hill" and "Silver Wings." She was here in connection with the showing of the latter at the Park theatre, and received royal receptions at all appearances. She was widely feted, and presented the key of Boston by Mayor James M. Curley, and last Monday noon gave a lunch to her good friends the scribes at the Hotel Copley Plaza.

Joseph B. Hurl, formerly manager of the Codman Square theatre, Dorchester, and now at the head of the Milford Opera House, Milford, Mass., has become a benedict. Miss Alice Killeen, of Dorchester, well known both in amateur theatricals, and on the local professional stage, took him for better or for worse. The romance started just six months ago after Hurl had panned Miss Killeen's act at the Broadway theatre, South Boston.

Albany Items

Edwin O. Weinberg has been selected to manage the theatre which is being erected in Troy by the Strand interests, and which will be opened within the next three or four months.

C. C. Charles, has just been made Nu-Art's Albany representative. He was formerly associated with Vitagraph.

The offices of the American Releasing Corporation moved on October 1 from 676 Broadway, this city, to the corner of Broadway and Clinton avenue.

Virgil N. Lappeus, just appointed manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall here, was tendered a reception one night this week by his former associates at Proctor's Fourth Street theatre in Troy. Incidentally he was given a handsome fishing set. John Jackson was master of ceremonies.

Jack Krause is now associated with Grand and North over the Albany territory. He was formerly a salesman for Pathe.

The new National theatre in Sidney will be handled by William Smalley of Cooperstown, according to all reports.

The Avon in Watertown, observing its first birthday anniversary this week, used a huge candle, burning night and day, in one of the store windows as advertising.

First National announces the appointment of S. E. Feld to look after matters for northern New York.

Earl Kramer, of Buffalo, formerly located in this city, was in town this past week.

John Angelo, of the Family theatre in Utica, made a trip to the Albany exchanges this week, and reports good business.

Myer Schine of the Glove in Gloversville, was in Albany this week, booking up pictures for the winter.

Russell Clark of New York, sales supervisor for First National, spent a day in Albany this week.

Florida Flashes

The American Legion Post of Clermont, Fla., are hard at work rehearsing a minstrel show, which is to be the opening attraction in the new Reliance Theatre. It is expected that the Reliance will be ready for the grand opening by the first of November.

One of the features of The Tampa Times is a daily column under the heading "The Philosopher." Phil is very clever and his paragraphs on the different pictures he sees are good, clean cut, constructive criticism.

H. A. Kelly, who for the past four years has been trying to establish a Film City in Florida, landed on the front page of the Tampa papers last week, with the story that he has finally completed all arrangements and would start the actual work by the first of December.

The Tampa Board of Trade offered to give to Mr. Kelly 750 acres of land on Old Tampa Bay, just a few miles from the City of Tampa, providing he could furnish the wherewith to build a real Film City there, which according to the report, called for an investment of not less than $2,500,000 within five years, and in case he failed to make good the property would revert to the Board of Trade.

Mr. Kelly reported that he had secured the needed assistance to start the work and a company had been incorporated in Maryland under the title of Florida West Coast Studios.

Des Moines Close-Ups

Walter Davis, manager at the Rialto theatre, Des Moines, celebrated his nineteenth wedding anniversary recently. A number of theatrical friends playing at the local theatres at the time were present at the party in celebration of the event.

The Famous-Players exchange, Des Moines, held a farewell dedication and greeting recently when they gave a party at the new exchange building with Miss Hazel Douglas in charge. Mr. Harry Hunter who leaves the exchange to act as manager at Washington, D. C., was the honored guest as well as Mr. Nichols, formerly a salesman who takes his place at the Des Moines exchange. Mr. Thompson, manager at Omaha, and Mr. Tardy, chief accountant, were present. The exhibitors were represented by Mr. Wright of Algona and Mr. Swanson of Emmetsburg. Mr. Redick, travelling auditor, happened to be in town and also attended the party. Dancing was the main feature of the evening, and confetti, balloons and horns helped to make merry. Mr. Hunter was presented with a green gold fountain pen and pencil. Mr. Friedl of exploitation made the presentation speech which was a dandy. Coffee, sandwiches and ice cream were served. In the ice cream was marked an exact duplication of the Paramount trademark.

Baltimore Items

Another change in the managerial lineup of the Whitehurst chain of theatres has been announced, closely following the last switch in personnel of the five houses controlled by these interests. Eugene N. Daley, only recently made manager of the Century Theatre, will become manager of the New. William E. Sumpf, of the New, will go to the Garden, while George A. McDermit has severed his connection with the chain as manager of the Garden. Louis A. D. Hoff will remain booking agent for the entire chain, and C. E. Whitehurst managing director. W. M. Whitehurst will manage the Century.

Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, spent last week in New York on a business trip. Incidentally, Mr. Wonders and his orchestral director, Felice S. Iula, have been widely congratulated for the unusually fine presentation of Norma Talmadge's "Eternal Flame," which just completed a two-week showing at the Rivoli.

Two trustee's sales involving motion picture properties are advertised for this city in the near future. The first will be of the Broadway Garden, a northeastern section neighborhood house, and the second will be of the fixtures, furniture and other equipment of the Maryland Theatres, Inc., which operated a neighborhood house in the southern section of the city.

Thomas D. Goldberg and Harry L. Price, of the Walbrook-Wizard-Blue Mouse chain, spent the latter part of last week in Washington on exchange business.

Complaint over alleged failure by some theatres in Baltimore to have exits properly marked and to carry out otherwise all requirements of safety has been laid before Building Inspector Crowther by the outgoing Grand Jury, and an investigation will be made by Mr. Crowther as a consequence.

Annual inspection of all theatres and other public gathering places is carried out by the Building Inspector before permits for them are granted, and the Fire Department exercises constant supervision during the year. In view of that fact, Mr. Crowther said, he inclined to the belief that the rules were being generally carried out.

He will make the inspections, however, in conjunction with the Fire Department. In making its request for an inspection the Grand Jury mentioned no specific instances of violations of the safety code.

Seattle Slants

Harry Bernstein, general manager of all Universal exchanges in Canada, west of, and including Winnipeg, was a recent visitor in this city, spending several days around the local theatres and exchanges.

Mr. Bernstein was very enthusiastic over the improving conditions of the film industry in his territory and reported that his principal exchanges in Calgary, Vancouver and Winnipeg have seen increases in business. A very good crop year was also given as a factor toward the improvement in the business of the film industry in the North.

The Jensen-VonHerberg circuit a few weeks ago sold their interest in Bellingham, Wash., theatres, and are no longer interested in that city, according to a recent report. Walton bought the circuit's interest, and since then has joined forces with W. S. Quimby, under the title of Bellingham Theatres, Incorporated.

This organization, through the several deals, now operates the American, Grand and Liberty theatres in Bellingham. The Rialto theatre has been dismantled and is no longer in operation. The American, following the deal, was entirely renovated and redecorated, having been closed for several weeks while the repairs were being made.

Jensen-VonHerberg, aside from their Seattle houses, still maintain theatres in Tacoma, Portland, Bremerton, Wenatchee and other Pacific Coast cities.

L. O. Lukan, Western District Manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., recently returned to this city for a few weeks after a three months tour spent in covering his district. Lukan brought highly optimistic reports of the general business conditions throughout the entire West, and asserts that this fall will be a banner season in the motion picture industry.

Manager Al Rosenberg of the De Luxe Feature Film Company is arranging first run showings of his new pictures in all the Pacific Northwest key cities. The first of the Al Lichtman Preferred Pictures "Rich Men's Wives" had its initial engagement in this territory September 30 at the Coliseum theatre. It was also booked at the Liberty theatre, Portland, two weeks later, and will be shown in the very near future in Tacoma, Spokane, Bellingham, Aberdeen, Butte, Yakima, Walla Walla, Great Falls and Missoula.

Rosenberg's second picture, a De Luxe Special, "Flesh and Blood," starring Lon Chaney and Noah Beery, opened at the Liberty theatre in Seattle on September 30. It will also play against "Rich Men's Wives" in Portland, being booked for the Majestic theatre in that city on October 14.

The new series of Felix, Pat Sullivan's animated cat cartoon, has been booked for the entire Jensen-VonHerberg circuit, according to a recent report. Felix Comedies are handled in Seattle and neighboring territory by the Greater Features, Inc.

H. W. McLaughlin, the manager of the Criterion theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., has returned from a three weeks' vacation spent in visiting in New York, Detroit, Niagara Falls, Chicago, Kansas City, and St. Louis. He visited the big shows while way back East and brought back quite a few new ideas for application at the Criterion.

Mr. Tony Mitchell has taken over the management of the Broadway Theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla.

Springfield Notes

Gus Kerasotas had "Slim Shoulders" and the Irene Castle Fashion Review for the week of September 16-23. This was fair week, and it was expected that big business would result. Gus states that the week was not up to expectations. Fair visitors no longer go to the theatre, but spend their time day and night at the fair grounds. As far as the theatre men of this city are concerned the state fair is no asset. Time was when people would go to see a good show but not now. The city people avoid theatres during fair week, while the country folks stay out at the grounds to see the big free attractions. Thus the theatres play to about the smallest business imaginable when things should be good for them.

The Vaudeville opened September 10. The new theatre is decidedly pretty, cosy and inviting. Many improvements were made and patrons have complimented Manager Watts by the hundreds.

The Vaudeville is operated on a 10c and 20c policy, which seems to meet with the approval of local fans. It is the cheapest of the downtown houses, the Lyric, Gaiety and Princess being higher-priced.

Harry Loper is doing well at the Lyric with Selznick, Robertson-Cole and Vitagraph attractions. The Lyric prices are 15c and 25c, which includes the war tax.

Mac Murray in "Fascination" is the next big attraction coming to the Lyric and one on which much publicity is being done.

"Smiling Billy" Mason, who was once in pictures, made a personal appearance at the Majestic fair week.

The First Congregational Church has started its picture season again. "Fair Play" was the last attraction shown.

The Gaiety has booked "Remembrance," Rupert Hughes' new Goldwyn picture. Lon Chaney in "The Trap" was well liked at the Strand during its five days engagement. Mac Murray and Rodolph Valentino in "The Delicious Little Devil" followed. Valentino is a prime favorite here, and though the picture is a repeat, it is expected to do well.

Betty Compson in "Always the Woman" and Goldwyn's "The Dust Flower" were the week's attractions at the Vaudeville, September 23-30.

St. Louis Chatter

Spyros Skouras had special moving pictures taken of members of the New York Yankees and New York Giants to give the patrons of the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theatres, an intimate line-up on the probable stars in the 1923 world's championship series. He also included shots of George Sisler, champion batsman of the American League, and Rodgers Hornsby, king of the 1922 sluggers.

James Arnett, well known Southern Illinois motion picture theatre man is the manager of the new Majestic theatre, West Frankfort, Ill.

O. W. McCutcheon of Charleston, Mo., has purchased the Meloan theatre, Sikeston, Mo., from T. W. Strehline, formerly of Gillespie, Ill. The price paid for the theatre has not been revealed. McCutcheon operated the American theatre at Charleston.

G. M. Pedley is again operating the Grand theatre, Owensboro, Ky. He had the house under lease for several seasons. He has purchased the "Prisoner of Zenda" and other features from Charlie Werner of Metro.

The Liberty theatre, Easton, Ill., reopened on October 7.

The Grand, Centralia, Ill., had its 1922-23 premier on Wednesday, October 3. It will play high-class pictures.

Leon de la Mothe, director general of the Mid West Production Company will leave for New York city next week to engage principals and a cast for "The Eyes of Mystery," a serial now in production here.

Directors of the Mid West Production Company were guests of the St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Francis Home last Thursday evening. Leon de la Mothe gave an interesting talk on motion picture production, telling of the early days when he made pictures for the old St. Louis Moving Picture Company and the present day methods. "Slim" Cole put on a few vaudeville stunts. The other guests were: Aaron Finschreiber and C. K. Ansell, owners of the Variety theatre, and Harry L. Rork and Barney Fegan.

STUDIO BREVITIES

George Archainsbaud is preparing to film "The Power of a Lie," Hohann Bojer's story, with a cast of the best known players.

Rupert Julian is also preparing an all star special.

Robert F. Hill is preparing to direct a noteworthy cast in a new chapter play titled "Wolves of Society." Lucille Ricksen has been selected for a principal role, but the star is not yet decided upon.

Nat Ross is preparing to start work on "The Ghost Patrol," by Sinclair Lewis, scenarized by Edward T. Lowe, Jr. and Raymond L. Schrock. George Nichols and Ralph Graves have been engaged for parts.

"The Kidnappers," one of the "Scarlet Car" stories by Richard Harding Davis is being made with Herbert Rawlinson as star, under the direction of Stuart Paton. Claire Adams is the leading woman.

"The Summons," a story by George Patullo, which Universal bought for Frank Mayo's use, is under production with William Worthington handling the megaphone.

R-C Production Notes

"Fighting Blood," is the first of a series of two reels which have been started, from H. C. Witwer's stories in Collier's Weekly. Mal St. Clair is directing. George O'Hara and Clara Horton are the leads.

A partial cast for Ethel Clayton's "The Remittance Woman," from a continuity by Carrol Warren, includes Rockcliffe Fellowes, lead; Mario Carillo, Tom Wilson. James B. Leong, Etta Lee, Edward Kimball. Wesley Ruggles is directing.

Sawyer-Lubin will make "Your Friend and Mine," adaptation by Winifred Dunn from the Willard Mack vaudeville sketch "The Rat." Clarence Badger will direct.

Hunt Stromberg is casting the next "Bull Montana" comedy "Glad Rags." Tom Gallery, Otis Harlan, Marion Harlan, Marbyn Leroy and Thomas O'Brien have been engaged with the lead still to be selected. Hugh Fay is director.

Fred Niblo has selected all but two leads for "The Famous Mrs. Fair," the cast at this writing including Marguerite DeLaMotte, Cullen Landis, Myrtle Stedman, Huntley Gordon and Ward Crane, the latter two traveling from New York for the engagement.

Three San Diego Houses Join in Merger

Announcement was made Sept. 19th by W. W. Whitson, for several years the owner of the Plaza, California and Kinema Theatres in San Diego, Cal., that a deal had been consummated whereby these three houses have joined the West Coast Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Los Angeles. The Plaza has long been one of the best first-run houses in San Diego, and the California and Kinema are both popular amusement places as well. Mr. Whitson states that no changes in the local management of the three houses are contemplated as a result of the merger. The bookings, however, will be made through Dave Bershon, the booking manager for the entire chain of theatres included in the corporation. Harry C. Arthur, Jr. is the general manager of the West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Jackie Coogan and scenes from his forthcoming production "Oliver Twist," for release via First National.

"Oliver Twist" Ideal Role for "Jackie" :

By Richard Rowland

THE exhibitor booking Jackie Coogan's production of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" is indeed in for a rare treat and a record in his box office coffers. I do not know of a combination presenting greater possibilities than this new Coogan offering.

The name of Charles Dickens has been a household word for nearly a century. His "Oliver Twist" is perchance the greatest of all his stories. It is known throughout the world and loved by all who have read it. The name of Jackie Coogan immediately places a stamp of dignity and great worth when linked with this Dickens volume, and it is my sincere opinion that this rare combination of child genius and Charles Dickens will set out to make new history in the box office—new comment in the columns of our papers and new friends for every exhibitor in every part of the world.

I feel highly honored that Associated First National will fly the Jackie Coogan "Oliver Twist" banner, not only for American distribution but for the entire world. It is picture presentations such as this new Coogan production that the world needs more of, and let us hope that little Jackie Coogan will not stop with "Oliver Twist," but that he will continue to give the world more refreshing, dignified and super-products such as this masterpiece.

No exhibitor will make a mistake in booking "Oliver Twist." No exhibitor will make an error in getting behind this production with every ounce of energy possible. No exhibitor can afford to let "Oliver Twist" slip from his grasp, for "Oliver Twist" is going to establish something different in the silent drama. This picture is going to go down on record as an immortal masterpiece. It is going to raise the dignity of the screen, and it is going to bring new faces to every box office from which a ticket may be purchased to see it.

It would be difficult to find another picture that offers more human interest angles than does this Dickens classic. Every human appeal is to be found in the eight reels that contain this beautiful story. Within these reels little Jackie Coogan runs the gamut of human emotion, and those that are seen in the support of this remarkable little star have been selected from the finest artists in the cinema world. I know of no better director for a story like "Oliver Twist" than Frank Lloyd, who has given the world this screen version. Summed up in the final consensus, I think that "Oliver Twist" presents the rarest combination for a successful record making production yet offered the screen.

Frank Lloyd the Director of "Oliver Twist"

WHEN "Oliver Twist" was definitely decided upon as Jackie Coogan's next film production, the subject of a director capable of presenting this immortal masterpiece on the silver sheet was a much discussed one.

Finally a selection was made. Frank Lloyd was the man to whom the Jackie Coogan Productions entrusted the making of "Oliver Twist." Lloyd was selected primarily because he is recognized by all picture goers as one of the greatest directors in the industry. Another quality that rendered Lloyd the logical man for this task was his love for and knowledge of children.

Mr. Lloyd, who is himself a father, knows how to get along with juvenile folk and to make them love him heartily and without restraint. But the final fact that rendered Mr. Lloyd the inevitable choice for the difficult "role" of directing the great picture was his knowledge of the London, not only of the present day but of the time of Charles Dickens.

Jackie Coogan listening attentively to his director, Frank Lloyd, go over some important scenes in "Oliver Twist."

Having been raised in London, Mr. Lloyd early became a Dickens enthusiast. The squalor of Field Lane he knows about for he has stood on the very stones of the evil district and looked on the very buildings and stores described by Dickens. He has, many and many a time, walked in spirit with the immortal Dickens through the London that Dickens described and glimpsed suggestions of the evils which the great author did much to reduce and destroy through the vigor of his marvelous and living prose.

London Bridge, which will be shown in the forthcoming Coogan production, is actually and accurately revealed, swathed in its familiar fog; the Thames was the scene of Lloyd's boyish adventures, and into the residential section of Dickens the imagination of Director Frank Lloyd found it easy to retrace its way, for in one of them he lived, and in all of them he knew his way.

Thus, in its physical phases as well as in its dramatic, humorous and tragic aspects the London revealed in the picture of which Jackie Coogan is star, is the London of actuality—the London of Charles Dickens.

Three scenes from "Oliver Twist," starring Jackie Coogan, a First National attraction.

Big Premiere Set for New York Strand

"OLIVER TWIST" will not only sail through Associated First National Pictures channels but instead of entering a legitimate theatre on Broadway the production will enter an engagement at the Mark Strand theatre commencing October 29th.

It was Sol Lesser's intention of placing the Dickens film starring Jackie Coogan in a Broadway theatre for a run, but with the signing of contracts with First National for the world distribution, it was Lesser's theory that the production should play a motion picture theatre instead.

That Jackie's super-feature will make new box office records at the Strand is expected, and all along Broadway talk is rife to the effect that this Dickens masterpiece will make a decided clean-up insofar as picture box office receipts are concerned.

It is expected that "Oliver Twist" will take a run at the Strand and a big exploitation campaign is already being planned by both the Coogan representatives and those in the Strand and First National offices. Those whose pleasure it has been to see a screening of "Oliver Twist" claim it to be a decided hit and a great asset to the silent drama of today.

Editorial writers and magazine representatives have constantly asked for showings of the production, feeling it to be a worthy subject for their columns.

The national release date for "Oliver Twist" will be late in October or early in November, but many first run exhibitors are anxious to book the picture for early dates.

Although the Coogan offering has been witnessed by but few people since Lesser arrived with the print, word has been passed around film row that Jackie Coogan has given the world a new masterpiece to talk about. Institutions such as Dickens Clubs, Colleges, Better Films Leagues and Welfare organization are all anxious to witness the picture and are inquiring about release dates of the subject. With these inquiries, it is reasonable to feel that little Jackie Coogan is in for a period of great popularity and praise—even surpassing that which has been his since his initial entrance in the silent drama with Charles Chaplin some three years since.

"Oliver Twist" will have a showing in the West immediately and equally important arrangements and preparations are being made in Los Angeles as in New York for the exhibition of the production.

Several editors of national magazines have already used "Oliver Twist" as presented by Jackie Coogan as editorial material, claiming that the motion picture would be elevated to a fast pace with more offerings such as this Dickens classic.

Why "Oliver Twist" Goes via First National

SOL LESSER on the eve of his departure for Los Angeles gives out a statement in which is explained the reason Jackie Coogan's production of "Oliver Twist" is to be distributed for the world by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

"The production," says Lesser, "cost four or five times more than the usual amount we spend on Jackie's pictures. From its incipency, both Mr. Coogan and I felt that we should obtain advanced admission charges and consequently the road-showing of the picture presented itself and work was proceeded with along that line.

"After arriving in New York and consulting with executives of First National Pictures, the exhibitor's standpoint was brought up and as presented to me by First National I could hardly carry out the initial idea of the road showing of the picture.

"I realized that exhibitors had played all of Jackie Coogan's past pictures and felt that no picture should be excluded from their screens even in view of the fact 'Oliver Twist' was a much bigger production than any they had so far received from the Jackie Coogan Productions.

"Briefly, I saw the angle from the exhibitor's standpoint and immediately altered all plans of road showing. Prevailing on those with whom I am associated in the West Coast Theatres, Inc., organization, it was not long before they, too, realized the justice of giving the exhibitors playing former Coogan picture the Dickens offering.

"At this time I wish to congratulate Adolph Ramish and A. L. and M. Gore for being so liberal minded in this transaction, and we all anticipate the greatest results from this Jackie's biggest production. I am sure the First National will leave no stone unturned in the endeavor to establish a record both from the distribution end and from the box offices of the exhibitors throughout the country who are to present this masterpiece."

Mr. Lesser and A. L. Gore left New York this week and will stop over in Chicago to attend the executive meeting of First National. Immediately afterward they will go straight to Los Angeles. They have been away from their West Coast offices for four weeks.

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Rochester Press Acclaims
Eastman Subject

IN the Democrat and Chronicle of Rochester, N. Y., issue of September 28, that newspaper devoted considerable space to the description of the success of "A Trip Through Filmland," a short subject acquainting spectators with methods employed in the manufacture of film. The publication stated that the number of bookings on the local subject included nine hundred theatres in United States and estimated that over a million people had seen the celluloid description of film making.

Said the newspaper: "It had its first public showing at the Rialto Theatre, New York, in December last," and continued enumerating the different cities in which the subject had been shown.

Frankie Lee Begins on First Comedy

Frankie Lee, who will be seen in a series of comedies which will identify him as "The American Boy," began work this week on the first of the two reels. "Last Night When You Kissed Blanche Thompson," a story by Bess Aldrich which appeared in the American Magazine, will serve as the first vehicle for the juvenile star and it is declared by Messrs. Becker and Bricker that they purpose to furnish him with stories purchased in a market where the stamp of public approval has already indicated them as eligible material. In addition they plan to provide the best screen talent obtainable for the supporting cast. The release of Frankie's first picture will be announced later.

Costume Production for Bobby Vernon

Al Christy has started filming a comedy costume play with a European mythical kingdom the major setting. This according to the producer, is the biggest undertaking of his career in two reels, and will be called "Choose Your Weapons," featuring Bobby Vernon.

Christie has done the costume play in comedy before, but the character list, the chart of sets and costumes for this one indicate it will surpass any previous efforts.

Supporting the comedian in the new comedy will be Charlotte Stevens, Lincoln Plumer, Earl Rodney and Victor Rodman.

F.B.O. Warns Against Plagiarism

H. C. Witwer's "Fighting Blood"
Stories are to be Fully Protected

FILM Booking Offices of America has issued a warning to all producers and distributors concerning the series of "Fighting Blood" stories which will be produced as a series of two reel subjects at the R-C Studios for F. B. O. release. The exclusive motion picture rights to these stories by H. C. Witwer, author of the "Leather Pushers" stories were purchased recently by P. A. Powers, managing director for F. B. O. and production will start at an early date.

The "Fighting Blood" stories, each one of which is complete in itself, are now running in Collier's magazine, which to date has published seven at two weeks intervals.

"We know full well," stated Mr. J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O. "that we have the best work of one of the country's most popular authors in our possession, and we do not intend that any company shall receive the benefits on our investment. It seems to be the rule that no producer can announce contemplated production of any good story or series of stories without being forced to fight those unscrupulous picture-makers who seek to make a livelihood by infringing upon the investments of others. 'Fighting Bloody' stories cannot be easily plagiarized and it is our intention to fully protect our rights in this matter by the full power of law. We expect to be able to announce in a short time the full cast of the first picture, which will go into production immediately."

New Comedy Series Under Way

C. C. Burr Announces Release
Date Through Hodkinson

THE first of the "All Star Comedies," featuring Ray McKee, Charlie Murray and Mary Anderson, produced by C. C. Burr, President of the Mastodon Films, Inc., has been delivered to the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for release under the title of "Faint Heart." This is the initial offering of a series of twelve two-reelers for which Hodkinson has contracted, each of which to feature the same cast, and for delivery at the rate of one per month.

With Charles Murray, veteran Mack Sennett comedian in the role of an irate father, Mary Anderson, popular as an ingenue, the sought after daughter and Raymond McKee the ardent suitor in the three principal roles, there is ample room to expect many mirth producing happenings, which producer Burr and Director LaCava planned to offer followers of comedy. The release date for "Faint Heart" is scheduled for not later than October 28.

Pathe's October Program Ready

Ten Two Reelers Include "The Old Sea Dog" and "Rough Going"

THE Pathe program for release on October 15 includes in addition to News numbers, two comedies, namely "The Old Sea Dog," starring "Snub" Pollard and "Rough Ridin'," with Leo Maloney.

"The Old Sea Dog," second release in which "Snub" Pollard appears as the star, is described as presenting the comedian in compact action, supported by comic incident showing him off to best advantage.

In the "western" called "Rough Going," Leo Maloney is a struggling young rancher in love with the daughter of a cattle king neighbor.

"One Day to Go," the fourteenth episode of "The Timber Queen," Ruth Roland serial, is described as one of the most daring of the two reel parts shown to date.

The Hal Roach Comedy, "Out on Bail" with Paul Parrott is a one reeler in which the hero encounters the job of "cleaning up the district."

"Two of a Trade" is the Aesop Fable ready for this program, which includes the submarine adventures of "Tom Cat," the cartoon hero.

In addition, "Chop Suey and Co.," a Harold Lloyd re-issue, shows the comedian as a mild mannered "cop" in Chinatown.

Important Bookings
Educational Release

SID GRAUMAN recently contracted for the next fall series of Educational Christie Comedies for theatre in Los Angeles, following the screening of the first two pictures of the output. The first subject to shown will be "That Son a Sheik."

Heretofore short subject showings for Grauman's have been on a spot booking basis only, this being the exhibitor's first venture in contracting for an entire series short subjects.

Another of Educational fall offerings includes a booking of eighty-seven days on the Loew circuit. Scheduled for New York and vicinity are "The Tiger of San Pedro" and "The Red Headed League" two of the latest in the A. J. Ventures of Sherlock Holmes series, covering a period of almost three months.

"Makin' Movies"
Praised by Critic

In a recent number of "The Robert E. Sherwood, critic screen plays for that publication praised the Pathe two reel "Makin' Movies," starring John Jones. Among other remarks, Sherwood said:

"Those who saw and enjoyed the two-reel picture entitled 'Sue and Demand' will not want to miss 'Makin' Movies,' which is formed by the same youthful and is superior to its predecessor in every way. * * It contains some excellent pictures of a still in operation, and is not above touch of satire here and there."

New "Plum Center"
Ready for Release

"Pop Tuttle's Clever Catch," which Dan Mason makes his second appearance as the rustic hero Plum Center comedies, is the current F. B. O. comedy release. "Tuttle" shows in this picture slick way to capture a hold-up man and the result, it is stated, is uproariously funny. Mason is again supported by Wilna Hervey as "Great Dane," who will be remembered as the "Katinka" of "Toonerville Trolley" series which Mason starred. Robert E. directed.

Fox Ready to Release Six Educationals

THE first six of the Fox series of Educational Entertainments are ready for release. More are in process of preparation. These may be booked singly or in a group via Fox Exchanges. The Fox organization aims to gain for the exhibitor, the cooperation of educators, ministers, welfare workers and parent teacher associations, in exploiting these short entertainments. Already known at the Strand Theatre, New York, the first subject has indicated its influence in gaining favor, according to reports from Fox officials, who report application for contracts verify the belief that the sighted exhibitors, perceiving the value of this type of film, are eager to make use of it.

New York Strand Books Fox Comedies

JOSEPH PLUNKETT, managing director of the Mark-Strand Theatre, New York, this week attached his signature to a contract which will bring about the introduction of Lupino Lane in his first farce, "The Reporter," through the channel of the nationally known amusement house. The contract also calls for the premier of the two following Lupino Lane comedies, both of which have been completed and are scheduled for release to exhibitors at intervals of four months apart. While no definite starting date for "The Reporter" is as yet available, it is known that Mr. Plunkett is planning to show it shortly as one of the important attractions of the Mark-Strand program. Pre-view screenings of "The Reporter," it is asserted, have revealed a comedy which is sure to rank Lupino Lane among the few genuinely-good comedians of the scene. An accomplished dancer, acrobat, mimic, pantomimist, athlete and actor all in one, Lane, it is claimed, furnished a hearty laugh every foot of film.

Comedy Described as "Family Film"

"Let 'Er Run," the third of the new series of Educational-Christie Comedies, featuring Dorothy Devore, is recommended as a "family film" in the current bulletin of the National Motion Picture League. "Let 'Er Run" has just been released by Educational. It shows Dorothy Devore in the role of a jockey, and also marks the introduction of Christie Comedies of George Stewart, brother of Anita Stewart.

New "Holmes" Subject Ready for Release

"The Solitary Cyclist" will be the eleventh release in the Educational series on "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," from the stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. It features Eille Norwood as the master detective.

News Reel Shows Frisco Fire

Universal Mirror No. 2 Depicts Plight of Inhabitants During Great Holocaust

UNIVERSAL announces the early release of the second installment of International News Reel Corporation's feature reels showing events of two decades ago. Mirror No. 2, is a cinematographic record of the great San Francisco Fire, in April, 1906, in which hundreds of persons perished, 200,000 were made homeless and almost the entire city was devastated.

The Mirror, in showing the fire scenes, collated from many sources, also shows San Francisco as it is today, a Phoenix which has arisen from the ashes of the 1906 holocaust.

"To the motion picture, we owe a remarkable historical record, proving to future generations the astonishing ability of the American spirit to rebound from a disaster which might well have wiped from the map a city peopled with citizens of less courage and will," says R. V. Anderson of the International News Reel Corporation, discussing The Mirror No. 2.

"The scenes in this news feature show that desolation as complete as the ruin wrought by the Hun on defenseless Belgium was visited on San Francisco.

"Besides the fire, are shown the scenes of chaos amid the debris strewn streets, and the dynamiting of the various structures in a frenzied effort to halt the conflagration."

Universal is getting out special accessories with The Mirror, including exploitation material.

"Man vs. Beast" Out in October

Educational Announces Two Reel Thriller for Last of Month

WITH no other motive than to reveal to the world the wild animals of the jungle in their native haunts, Louis Shuman, scientist, explorer and sportsman, personally equipped an expedition and led it into the heart of Africa. What is believed to be a remarkable motion picture, announced by Educational for release late in October, is the result of Shuman's adventure, which is said to embrace a number of thrilling close-ups of conflicts between men and vicious wild beasts of Africa.

The expedition made its headquarters at a hotel on the East African coast. More than 150 natives were engaged as gun bearers, tent boys, etc., while fearless cameramen accompanied the expedition, ready to set up a camera in the face of threatening attacks which were not infrequent during their two years in the wilds.

A large amount of negative was brought back to civilization. It told the dramatic story of the hardships and conquests Shuman and his followers were obliged to undergo, out of which has been taken the most striking and thrilling parts to be issued in a two-reel Educational offering under the title of "Man vs. Beast."

There are shots which are alleged to describe in detail the capture of wild beasts of varied species, as well as attacks. It was on the return trip in one of these attacks that the explorer lost his life, after having accomplished his life's purpose, that of bringing realistic information to the world via the screen regarding wild beasts of Africa, in their native haunts.

Garsson Announces Two Reelers

Twelve Nick Carter Stories With Four of Series Ready to Be Made

MURRAY W. GARSSON has announced the completion of four two reel Nick Carter detective stories, the first of a series of twelve, which he will release on the State Rights market.

The titles of the first four are "The Spirit of Evil," "Unseen Foes," "The Last Call" and "A Game of Graft." The pictures were produced under the personal supervision of John J. Glavey and directed by Alexandre Hall.

The stories have been brought to date, some even involving the use of the radio phone and other present day "miracles." Edmund Lowe, who has enjoyed a successful career as an actor of both the stage and screen, portrays the role of Nick Carter in the first four productions, supported by Diana Allen, ingenue.

The Nick Carter detective stories, according to Mr. Garsson, offered unlimited possibilities owing to their popularity in fiction form and production work on the remaining eight of the twelve two reelers is going ahead and will be released at the rate of one a month. "The Spirit of Evil," first one on the schedule, deals with psychic phenomena, while "Unseen Foes" deals with the unraveling of a unique mystery in which the modern methods of detection play a prominent part. "The Last Call" is the picture hinging upon the use of radio, and "A Game of Graft" is a story of New York night life, involving a romance about a cabaret dancer.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Release.

"The Priory School"

(Educational—Two Reels)

IT is remarkable how these Sherlock Holmes stories in two reels hold their own. While this is not the strongest of the series, it has the happy faculty of getting to the plot in the first few feet. Holmes and his worthy friend Watson are discovered enjoying a few moments of relaxation, when the head of a boy's school enters, appealing to the great detective to solve what appears to the bewildered man, a mystery. His star pupil seems to have been abducted, which would stir up considerable trouble, were his father, the Duke of Holderness, to hold the school responsible. So Holmes and Watson start on the trail, solve the mystery and bring about a reconciliation between the estranged parents of the boy in question. In so doing, considerable action and bits of entertaining melodrama are injected. One thing in particular is noticeable in connection with this one—it is unlike any other from a narrative standpoint, brings out some of the admirable traits of the great detective's character and is in the last analysis a subtle preaching on a worthy subject.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Skipper's Sermon"

(Educational—Two Reels)

ATHOROUGHLY enjoyable comedy, bound to provoke laughter and spread good humor. There is no resorting to over-done slapstick, the laughs being worked up by natural situations, put across with the help of some of the best subtitles yet applied to this sort of entertainment.

A splendid little plot lays the foundation of this comedy, although the fun hinges, as usual, upon the movements of the dilapidated old trolley, the rural background and types, comprising a list of capable players.

This time the town bank is the scene of most of the action, although the trolley is laboring along the road burdened with a shipment of gold for the bank. A slick guy from the city has designs upon the shipment and plans to make a last haul, after which he expects to go straight. But meeting with pillars of Toonerville society softens his heart, and he decides to become a law abiding citizen instead.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Strictly Modern"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

SNUB POLLARD as a hotel clerk has been surrounded in this comedy with a series of "conveniences" and adjuncts to hotel management which belong in that vast category of things which don't exist, yet certainly ought to. The disappearing "bawth" is a charming idea. A pearl thief and a bridal couple are among the guests. Pollard takes an active part in capturing the robber after the bride's necklace is stolen, meantime being mistaken for the thief, a masher and various other things. There are real laughs in the two reels, and if Pollard would devote himself to the development of straight farce and avoid the frankly labored clowning which he perpetrates in places, he would be a proficient comedian.—STUART GIBSON.

In the Burr-Whitman-Bennett production of "Secrets of Paris," a scene in a toy shop is shown "Bone Dry"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

PAUL PARROTT appears in this as the son of a prohibition director, and is sent out by his father to seize a band of bootleggers. After some "thrilling" moments he succeeds in drugging the entire crowd of desperadoes with doctored liquor, only to find a moment later that they all are agents like himself. At the last moment, having discovered this dreadful fact, he is faced by the real bootleggers. The concluding scenes are particularly funny. Paul and the girl are in a canoe, sailing alone with an umbrella over them. The boat goes over a falls, apparently to destruction; but at the foot they are found, still oblivious, sailing along in the umbrella, with the boat held over them.—STUART GIBSON.

"The Enchanted City"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS may be described using the title of the poem upon which it is based, "A Love Fantasy" and enacts the dream of a suitor who relates the beauty and sadness of an ethereal journey leading into realms of life beyond, which came to him in a dream. The artistic settings play the most important part of the offering, supported by sub-titles of an appropriate nature, describing the steps of the journey into that enchanted land of "Love's Dream." It is of extremely high-class nature, and would fit advantageously into a program in need of something uplifting, with a direct appeal to patrons capable of appreciating a reel of artistic diversion. A sort of futuristic novelty of unusual distinction.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Touch All the Bases"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS one, as its name would imply, concerns the worries of Paul Parrott and his girl when they go to see a baseball game and a goat eats Paul's lone dollar bill, thereby preventing him from entering the park. After a series of adventures Paul arrives inside the fence in time to be seized upon as a pinch-hitter; whereupon, of course, he wins the game, gets some money and hurries his girl off to a minister. The film contains some pretty good laughs, but it doesn't come up to the mark usually set even by these short comedies.—STUART GIBSON.

"The Fighters"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is the second of "Our Gang" series written and directed by J. P. McGowan, and Tom McNamara, who get such remarkable results with children and animals. Mr. McNamara, who draws the strip cartoons featuring "Us Boys," certainly knows the psychology of youth. With Mr. McGowan's co-operation he has humanized his cartoons. The idea is built upon funny lines and so spontaneous that the high jinks seem to evolve in the heads of the youngsters themselves. Certainly the very young generation will respond with enthusiastic delight. Yet the picture is suitable for the parents because it takes the years away.

The material is simple and to the point—showing the imitations of children in trying to adopt the manners of grown-ups. Here they form a fire department. The smallest boy has acquired a fire hat so his pals make him chief. He is drawn in a soap-box by the pet dog. A pony cart is commandeered and also the little girl who owns it. The piece de resistance, however, is the fire engine, made of a still discovered by the gang in the back yard. How they dash to an imaginary fire and turn on the hoots thus revealing to the police the presence of the bootlegger, is only surpassed by the behavior of the animals who taste the stuff and are pictured by the snow-motion camera cutting up capers.

There is real humor here. There is also place on every exhibitor's program for such wholesome ideas.—LAURENCE REID.

"His First Job"

(Universal—One Reel)

THIS introduces Lewis Sargent, the boy actor, in the first of his series of comedies. The idea develops around a conflict between the principal in the role of a messenger boy and a pugnacious scrapper from the gas house district. Perhaps the ending is a trifle abrupt, but one cannot criticize a comedy that is only a reel in length. The Sargent boy has a clever assistant in Julia Brown, who plays the role of little sister. Had the piece continued another reel it would have carried more substance. As it is the offering makes a neat little filler for a program.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Radio Hound"

(Century-Universal—Two Reels)

HERE is Brownie, the wonder dog, at it again. This time he figures prominently as a radio entertainer, though he has company in the figures of two little youngsters. It is amusing and original. Naturally the title gives it away as being a vehicle for the dog. But he makes it more a vehicle because you follow his antics without giving thought to the idea that he fits the story instead of the story fitting him. The piece hits the bull-eye because the radio is still timely even if folks are not listening in with the enthusiasm of six months ago. The comedy is sure-fire.—LAURENCE REID.

Doug. Conducts Tourney for Boy Scouts

WHAT is announced as the greatest gathering of Boy Scouts in Southern California since war-time days was that at Hollywood recently when members of the organization gathered from towns in the vicinity of Los Angeles to try their skill at the Robin Hood Archery tournament and field meet at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios, Santa Monica Boulevard.

More than five hundred boys peeped into King Richard's castle and the town of Nottingham so recently peopled by Little John, Friar Tuck, Will Scarlett, Alan-a-Dale and others of Robin Hood's merry band as they are pictured in Douglas Fairbanks' new photoplay sensation, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." The archery contest, for which Sid Grauman gave an English ash bow of the type that Robin Hood is said to have used, was held in the castle banquet hall, where Mr. Fairbanks in the role of Robin Hood made records with the bow and arrow which the Boy Scouts tried to beat.

Legion Commander Sees "Skin Deep"

Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion, and Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, director of baseball, were the guests of honor of Balaban & Katz at the world premier of "Skin Deep," Thomas H. Ince's latest release through First National, at Chicago theatre, Sept. 25, 1922.

Introduced by Judge Landis, Mr. MacNider spoke from the stage of the Chicago theatre as the picture rolled out for the first evening's presentation.

The opening night of "Skin Deep" was acclaimed "American Legion Night." The marquee was decorated in flags and the lobby in the national colors, with an emblem welcoming Mr. MacNider.

"Skin Deep" makes an appeal for a square deal for the men who saw service and American Legion officials and posts throughout the country have evidenced a tremendous interest in its presentations.

In addition to entertaining Mr. MacNider as the guest of honor at the picture's premier, Balaban & Katz arranged a private preview of "Skin Deep" for the 500 disabled veterans who are in Drexel Hospital.

"Remembrance" Well Received "Knighthood" Endorsed by Brandt

Opens to Good Business at Capitol, New York; Gillingwater Wins Praise

JUDGING from early indications, Goldwyn and Rupert Hughes have put across another "Old Nest" in "Remembrance," which is this week's offering at the Capitol theatre, New York, and will be nationally released on Sunday, October 8.

The big auditorium of the Capitol was kept filled all Sunday afternoon and, beginning soon after six o'clock in the evening, even standing room could be bought with difficulty only. Business started out strong on Monday afternoon with indications that the attendance, by the end of the week, would rival the extraordinary business done at the Capitol by "The Old Nest" last season.

The reviewer for the New York Herald wrote of "Remembrance": "A moving film play. . . . The picture holds the interest with mounting effect more signally than many a photoplay of ferocious clashes. This is obviously due to the varied, resourceful acting of Claude Gillingwater, who is coming to be the Frank Bacon of the screen. . . . He gives a pathetic and genuine glimpse of the father who slaves for his family. . . . To the life he portrays the man who is always one week ahead of bankruptcy."

Journal: "In his latest picture, 'Remembrance,' Rupert Hughes has repeated his success of last season, 'The Old Nest.' The story is a simple, straightforward one, yet with all the 'heart interest' that distinguishes the work of its author. Faithfulness to life might be set down as its predominating feature.

'Remembrance' is distinctly an American drama, of American city life. But its characters, so faithfully portrayed on the silver sheet are so perfectly human that there is no doubt of its universal appeal."

Evening World: "For once the advertisements of a picture release have been absolutely right. 'Remembrance' really IS a picture one will remember. . . . Rupert Hughes at his hugiest."

Journal of Commerce: "Like its companion picture, 'The Old Nest,' 'Remembrance' translates a typical American family problem to the screen, but even more so than the former does it retain intact the tenderness, humor, pathos and keen observation and sympathetic understanding that are so typical of Hughes' pen."

American: "A panegyric to Pop. . . . Claude Gillingwater does some exceptionally fine acting, and is well supported by the rest of the cast."

Sun: "Claude Gillingwater dominates the new Rupert Hughes picture. . . . Gillingwater seems strangely like Frank Bacon's double. . . . It is a case of Rupert Hughes doing father love the good turn he did mother love in 'The Old Nest.'"

Mail: "Claude Gillingwater in the role of Pop quite outdoes himself. It is a magnificent role for any player and Gillingwater fits it like the proverbial glove, only more so. He is splendid and cannot be praised too highly. Kate Lester, too, as Mom, is worthy of special mention."

"One Week Of Love" Is Ready

Myron Selznick Completes Cutting Preparatory to Departure For Coast

PREPARATORY to his departure for the Coast where he will resume the supervision of the year's quota of Selznick super-specials, Myron Selznick, President of Selznick Pictures Corporation, has just about completed the cutting of "One Week of Love" which he brought on with him from Los Angeles a week or two ago. The production will be in the identical shape in which it will be offered to the public before another week has passed.

"One Week of Love" is he first of "Sixteen Only" which the Selznick company have promised for the year. Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are co-starred in the production.

The picture was shown informally in the company's projection room a few days ago to an audience made up of Selznick and Select employees. It far exceeded the high expectations which had been built up for it by the glowing reports which had come from the Coast during the time it was in production, according to those who saw it.

Emphasis has been laid upon the action end with the thought that audiences are daily becoming more and more interested in this type of entertainment, swinging away from the quiet, tense, dramatic situations. There's an aeroplane race and aeroplane crash early in the story development and, in the last five hundred feet, is said to be one of the most remarkable railroad accident incidents which has yet been registered on the screen.

THE entire motion picture industry owes a vote of thanks to William Randolph Hearst for giving such a wonderful picture as 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' now at the Criterion Theatre, to the public at this particular time," declared William Brandt, founder and president emeritus of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce just before the weekly meeting of that organization at the Hotel Astor.

Brandt is the owner of several theatres in Brooklyn, and was one of the first motion picture theatre managers to recognize the need of organization and co-operation among theatre owners. Accordingly he organized the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, which has done much to stabilize the exhibit-or end of the business, and hence react favorably upon every branch of the industry. Although Mr. Brandt declined re-election this year, he is still the leading spirit of the organization.

Life of Lincoln Now in Production

Five years ago at the old Balboa studio Rockett Brothers dreamed of picturizing the life of Abraham Lincoln and now they are doing it.

In their research the Rockett company has enjoyed the co-operation of government officials, the custodians of the famous Lincoln collections, the State of Illinois, the city of Springfield, and Lincoln organizations.

Frances Marion is lending her matchless genius to the authorship of the working script and she will also title and edit the picture.

The director will be announced as soon as expiring contracts permit, and the cast, which will be the largest ever organized for a picture, will be practically a roster of the leading lights of the American screen it is claimed.

England Gives "Nanook Quick Showing

Advices to Pathe from Sir William Jury, who has "Nanook of the North" distribution rights for the United Kingdom, accompanied by enthusiastic printed reviews of the Eskimo classic, announce that the picture earned the unaccustomed tribute of immediate release following the trade showing in London.

"Our Gang" Comedy Is Hit with Kiddies

IN making its highly successful appeal to New York Capitol Theatre audiences last week, Pathe's two-reel "Our Gang" comedy "The Fire Fighters" won another evidence of Mr. Rothafel's appreciation of the film's realistically comic representation of the efforts of typical children to get desirable excitement out of life.

He included "The Fire Fighters" in his Capitol all-star program for "Children's Day," Saturday morning, October 14th, given in conjunction with the Will Hays organization.

Booked for its Capitol run because of its unique and distinctive portrayal of the harmlessly mischievous escapades of a bunch of ingenious youngsters and their animal pets, the prompt reaction of children in the audiences to its mirth-provoking incidents made "The Fire Fighters" a logical short feature for a program designed first of all to interest and amuse the young folks.

Young Commended for Screen Story

It isn't often that authors give unstinted praise to screen adaptations of their work, so when Joseph Hergesheimer commended Waldemar Young on the scenario for "Java Head," which George Melford will make into a Paramount picture, there was much rejoicing at the studio.

The story was purchased from Mr. Hergesheimer with the understanding that he should ratify the screen treatment. After a conference with Mr. Melford and Mr. Young in New York this week he said of the continuity:

"It is a perfect piece of work. It isn't the story that makes a great or even good novel. It is the spirit of it. What delights me most in the screen adaptation is that the spirit of the story has been preserved."

Entire F. B. O. Program in Minneapolis

The Strand of Minneapolis, presented an entire F. B. O. program during the week of September 23rd. The feature picture "In the Name of the Law," the Emory Johnson production glorifying the American policeman, was preceded by "Pop Tuttle's Clever Catch," the second Plum Center Comedy to be released through the Film Booking Offices, and also by "Starland Revue," a single reel subject of New York theatrical life, issued every second week. A news reel completed the program. F. B. O. does not issue any such subject.

The Strand duplicated the work of the Capitol theatre recently, when "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "Their First Vacation," a Carter DeHaven comedy, played during the same week.

"Kick In" Has Sterling Cast

Eleven Strong Players Will Enact Roles Said to be Entirely Suitable

"KICK IN," the forthcoming George Fitzmaurice production which Ouida Bergere adapted from Willard Mack's successful stage play, is cited by Paramount as an example of the use of the big "featured players" casts which have grown to be the biggest marketing point of current motion pictures.

The company points out that in some pictures too many outstanding players might give a crowded effect but nothing like this is possible in "Kick In," it is said, because of the fact that while the production contains eleven persons of stellar and near-stellar rank, the scenes are so divided that the players appear in groups.

The featured players are Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and May McAvoy, while others in the cast include Gareth Hughes, Kathleen Clifford, Mamy Kelso, John Milster, Walter Long, Robert Agnew, Jed Prouty and Carlton King. All of these people are well-known and it is said that their grouping allows them all an opportunity to "put over" the best points of their specialties.

For instance, two pathetic little kid crooks are played by May McAvoy and Gareth Hughes. "King and Queen of Pathos" this pair has been called after their big success in "Sentimental Tommy." Walter Long is the beetle-browed detective. Long's tough, hard stuff has scored heavily in such productions as "Blood and Sand," and "Moran of the Lady Letty." The foolish, silly idle-rich mother has been a specialty for Mayme Kelso for years. For Frou Frou, a peppy, tempestuous "jazz" dancer, Kathleen Clifford was chosen—the same young woman who headlined in vaudeville and in the Winter Garden Revue, "Business Before Pleasure" and "A Pair of Queens."

As a typical man-about-town Jed Prouty is seen in the role of Jimmy Monahan. Prouty has done that sort of comedy for years in "Miss Springtime," "The Velvet Lady," "Seeing Things" and "The Pink Lady."

The two main roles of Chic Hewes, the reformed crook, and Molly Brandon, the District Attorney's daughter. Betty Compson and Bert Lytell were considered ideal for the two parts because it was in crook parts that Bert and Betty made their first great successes, Bert in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Betty in "The Miracle Man."

"Smilin' Through" Hit in England

Cable Tells First National of Success of Norma Talmadge Picture

A cable dispatch has been received at the offices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from Bruce Johnson, manager of First National's Foreign Department, who sailed for Europe, Sept. 22, in which he tells of the tremendous success being scored in England by Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through," a First National Attraction.

"'Smilin' Through' doing tremendous business," reads part of the wire. "English enthusiastic. Want more such Big Time pictures."

In its English presentation "Smilin' Through" was handled in a manner entirely distinct from all other subjects. It is customary over there to first have trade showings, and then the bookings follow from eight to ten months later. In the case of "Smilin' Through," however, no trade showings took place. Instead the picture was booked in big theatres on a percentage basis in the various key centers.

Under this method exhibitors saw the picture along with the public and were enabled to study its effect on motion picture patrons. The plan proved a tremendous success. Exhibitors flocked to see the picture and were so enthusiastic over it that they cancelled bookings already in so as to give play dates to "Smilin' Through."

It was enjoying its great success in England when Joseph M.

Schenck, its producer, arrived in London with his wife, Norma Talmadge and Constance and Mrs. Talmadge. Mr. Schenck was so impressed with the results obtained on "Smilin' Through" that he immediately cabled to the First National New York offices for prints and advertising and other accessories on Constance Talmadge in "East is West," "Polly of the Follics," "The Primitive Lover," and Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," all of which First National Attractions are to be handled in a manner similar to the percentage first run showings of "Smilin' Through."

Marion Davies Edition of Book Shown

A fine display of the Marion Davies edition of the book "When Knighthood Was in Flower," published by Grosset & Dunlap in connection with the Broadway release of the photoplay starring Miss Davies, is made in the Thirty-second street window of Gimbel Bros' New York store.

The big window is completely filled with the books in their attractive blue and white jacket covers showing Miss Davies in one of the striking scenes from the photoplay. A large picture of the star in one of her costumes as Princess Mary Tudor occupies the center of the window and on either side are large sepia reproductions of scenes from the picture.

Kohn Takes New Office as Producer

MORRIS KOHN, who has been Treasurer of Select Pictures Corporation for some time, and recently organized the Dependable Pictures Corporation for the purpose of producing feature photoplays, has taken offices in New York, where in the future, he will devote his entire time and attention to the interests of his new producing organization and such other motion picture activities as he may develop.

Dependable Pictures Corporation recently produced "Till We Meet Again," directed by William Christy Cabanne. It is understood that other productions will follow soon.

In announcing this new move on Mr. Kohn's part President Lewis J. Selznick of Select Pictures Corporation, remarked: "I need scarcely say that, going to a field of new endeavor, Mr. Kohn takes with him my sincere best wishes as well as the best wishes of all other members of the Select and Selznick enterprises who have had abundant opportunity to find him a man of exceptional ability."

Broadside Press-Sheet for "Rags to Riches"

The eight page broadside press sheet that has been published for the first Warner Brothers release "Rags to Riches," a Harry Ra production featuring Wesley Barry, is said to contain many novel publicity and exploitation aids for use by exhibitors booking the picture.

On the first page there are feature and short newspaper stories and cuts. The second page contains advance notices, current views, scene cuts and a striking four column advertisement. The third page has been devoted to feature stories, for newspaper use, of six nationally known men who have risen from rags to riches. Page four is filled with stories of Barry, and four attractive newspaper ad suggestions. On the fifth page the entire array of novelties have been reproduced.

Page six is devoted to exploitation suggestions, scene cuts, and newspaper stories; seven is utilized for lobby display photographs, oil paintings and a number of teaser ads and the eighth page is given over to lithographs and slides.

"A Dollar Down" is i Production

A comedy not unlike "The Fire Year," of stage fame, is the Selznick Picture, "A Dollar Down" which is now in the course of production at the Hollywood studios of the company. It deals with young married life and the attempt to furnish a home on the installment plan. Owen Moore, a newlywed, plays the leading role and the picture will be directed by Victor Herrman, also a recent benedict.

Lloyd Picture Ends 19 Weeks Run

WITH the close of its nineteenth consecutive week, the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors attraction, "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, has ended its phenomenal run in Mr. H. B. Breckwedel's Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles. In this engagement the Lloyd picture set a record which is not likely to be broken for a long time.

The records so far show, besides the nineteen weeks' run in Los Angeles, a run of four weeks in Calvin Heilig's Heilig Theatre, Portland, Ore., three weeks in P. Morner Lewis' Bijou and Capital Theatres, Atlantic City, and numerous others.

Elaborate Sets for "If Winter Comes"

Several of the interior sets for the Film Corporation's screen version of "If Winter Comes" are said to be among the most elaborate and complete ever built for a moving picture. The courtroom at Tidborough, where Mark Sabre tried for the death of Effie Light, is an exact replica of an English court of justice. The offices of the firm of "Fortune, East Sabre, Ecclesiastical and Schottic Furnishers and Designers," in keeping with the dignity and hallowed traditions of that eminently respectable organization.

Marion Davies Picture Still Going Big

Marion Davies in "When Highblood Was in Flower," at the New York Criterion Theatre continues to be an outstanding success of the opening season on Broadway. Hours before the house opens a line of patient would-be patrons extends from the box-office near around the corner and down Fifth Street, yet hundreds are turned away from every performance.

"The Storm" Proves Good Seller

Universal Receiving Splendid Reports From Exhibitors All Over Country

"THE STORM," is proving to be the best self-seller ever put out by Universal, officials of that company assert. Its percentage of extended runs is far ahead of that of any other picture, and reports from exhibitors indicate that it holds up better than any picture of the year, it is further asserted.

House Peters, in the leading role, has definitely established himself as a star of the highest attainments, and Matt More and Virginia Valli, gained hosts of admirers by reason of their work in the big Universal-Jewel adaptation of the Langdon McCormick stage success.

As evidence of the universal appeal of "The Storm," no matter what the locality of the class of patrons, the Universal sales force has made public several of the many letters received in high commendation of the picture from exhibitors who have played it.

Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion and Metropolitan theatre in Atlanta, Ga., and one of the leading exhibitors of the country wrote as follows:

"I knew that you would be interested to know that we have just finished a weeks' engagement in our Metropolitan theatre with 'The Storm.' From a box-office standpoint it was most satisfactory, in fact, each day's receipts was bigger than the previous day. I would suggest that you advise exhibitors when they play this production, that they extend their runs so that they may get the advantage that we missed in not extending our engagement another week.

"The Universal has every reason to feel proud of 'The Storm.' I trust that your future pictures will measure up to the same high standard. If they do, you may rest assured that we shall always be glad to play them."

Publicity For Rogers' Picture

Extensive Campaign Will Precede Release of "The Headless Horseman"

FIFTY-THREE editions in print distributed among forty-eight publishers is the advance publicity and advertising preceding "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" which will soon be presented on the screen under the title of "The Headless Horseman" released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation sometime during the month of October and which will provide the screen with one of the best read American classics.

Produced by Carl Stearns Clancy a member of the new school of motion picture presentation and featuring such a well known and popular idol as Will Rogers in the beloved role of Ichabod Crane, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation feels that they have a film feature of one hundred per cent entertaining value and one with a strong box office appeal and many exploitation possibilities.

In the selection of the cast great care was shown. It is difficult to figure a character that could portray the inimitable "Ichabod Crane," the lean and lanky Yankee school teacher, better than the droll and picturesque Will Rogers. It is believed that Mr. Rogers' characterization of Ichabod Crane will make for him many new admirers among the motion picture fans.

Lois Meredith plays the charming Katrina Van Tassel, Belle of Sleepy Hollow, whose wiles stir up hopeless ambitions in the breast of Ichabod.

New Sherlock Holmes Picture Popular

The popularity of the mystery type of play is reflected in the advance bookings which are being given "The Hound of the Baskervilles," according to word received from F. B. O. branches at the home office of the Film Booking Offices of America.

New Brooklyn Theatre Added to Chain

MAYER & SCHNEIDER, whose chain of theatres around New York City is a monument to their energy and enterprise, recently added a new house to their circuit with the opening of the Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn. This house seats 1500 and is a triumph in modern theatre construction.

The opening was made a gala event and before the hour set for the performance thousands of persons were seeking admittance. The magnificent lobby and foyer were heavily banked with floral tributes from all of the Mayer & Schneider business associates and well wishers. The opening attraction was First National's "Kindred of the Dust."

"One Night in Paris" Due for Release

"One Night in Paris" is the offering which Playgoers Pictures is releasing October 8th, a five-reel comedy drama that is described as full of pep and punch, of gayety and laughs.

The plot concerns the romantic adventures of one Jacques Fromage, bachelor, a young man about town—"town" in this case being that dear, gay French capital. Fromage is a good-looker, debonaire, dresses well and is a favorite with the ladies.

First Selznick Special Is Completed

The first of the series of Selznick Special productions for the new season is "One Week of Love," which has just been completed. It contains a thrilling aeroplane scene, which was taken in the California Rockies and actually shows the plane dropping through the air and crashing into a ravine.

Another exciting scene is a train wreck. The cars are shown falling from a suspension bridge into a rapidly flowing mountain river.

S. F. Critics Praise Ray Picture Reviewers Proclaim "A Tailor Made Man" Best Photoplay Star Has Done

BOTH public and critics were quick to enthuse over and praise Charles Ray and his newest photoplay, "A Tailor Made Man," a United Artists release, when it was shown at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, according to word from the releasing office.

"A screen comedy-drama of the higher type," said the critic for the Bulletin. "Here is a photoplay as refreshing as mountain air, replete with wit and wisdom, which affords Charles Ray one of the best vehicles of his career. Its humor springs naturally from a combination of logical events and its thrills avoid the melodramatic and are all within the bounds of probability."

"Charles Ray achieves distinction in 'A Tailor Made Man,'" said the critic for the Examiner. "There is a whimsical tenderness, a touch of quaint poetry, a certain friendliness that marks his interpretation of the principal character."

"'A Tailor Made Man' has the elements of the perfect picture," said Curran D. Swint of the Call. "There is story, romance, comedy, compelling drama and thrills. It easily can be credited to Charles Ray's greatest picture date. Throughout the entire picture the audience was in a state of sustained good humor."

"'A Tailor Made Man' is a triumph for the young star Charles Ray," said the reviewer for the Chronicle, "and gives promise of even greater things. It is a lightful comedy and seems almost short and because of its interest one regrets the end of the story."

"The play moves swiftly through thrilling situations to an impressive dramatic climax and surprising denouement," said the critic for the Daily News. "Charles Ray supported by as fine a cast as could be got together, even the smallest roles being done by good actors."

Vignola Will Make World Tour Director Will Complete "Adam and Eva" And Start On Four Months Trip

FOLLOWING his completion of "Adam and Eva," a Marion Davies production which he is now making for Cosmopolitan, Robert G. Vignola expects to start on a trip around the world which will keep him away from New York for about four months.

The contemplated trip is in the nature of a combined business and pleasure jaunt. Mr. Vignola has had it in mind for a long time but for business reasons was unable to make it until now. With the completion of "Adam and Eva" he will be in a position to set aside his production plans and make the trip. Upon his return Mr. Vignola will begin production on another

Marion Davies special the story which has already been selected was planned to do this picture immediately after "Adam and Eva" but owing to Mr. Vignola's desire to make the trip it will be put up until his return.

According to present plans Vignola will sail sometime in November. He will go through the Panama Canal, thence across the Pacific to the Hawaiian Islands, Philippines, Japan, China, India, the Straits Settlements, Australia, Egypt and Europe. He will spend several weeks in Italy after which he will return to New York. Vignola expects to be back in March or early April.

"Java Head" Has Strong Cast Leatrice Joy Will Assume First Character Role As Young Chinese Wife

IN "Java Head," George Melford's latest production for Paramount which has been started at the Paramount Long Island studio, Leatrice Joy whose work in "Manslaughter," C. B. DeMille's spectacular Paramount production, won her much praise, will play the colorful role of Taou Yuen, the Chinese wife. This is the first time in Miss Joy's motion picture career that she has played a character role.

Jacqueline Logan will be seen as Nettie Vollar and Albert Roscoe will play Gerrit Ammidon, the leading male role. Raymond Hatton will have the chief character role and George Fawcett will play the part of Barzil Dunsack, the old sea captain. Arthur Shirley Hull, who played the heavy in "The Great Moment" with Gloria Swanson has been cast in the role of William Ammidon, Rose Tabor will be Rhoda, Helen Lindreth will be the part of Kate Vollar, Dan Pennell will be Broderick, Frederick Strong will play the part of Jeremy Ammidon. Four little girls, Marie Axwell, Betty Bronson, Audrey Berry and Polly Richer will have important parts in the picture.

This story by Joseph Herseyheimer will be given an authentic and elaborate background, Paramount says. The first scenes will be taken in Salem, Mass., where much of the story was laid. All the sites spoken of in the novel will be transformed into their 1916 style by Rudolph Bylek and technical staff. After finishing work in Salem the company will return to the Paramount Long Island studio to film the colorful Chinese scenes.

Photograph Thriller Due for Early Release

WILLIAM DUNCAN has completed shooting on "When Danger Smiles," and is cutting and titling. The negative is expected East very soon, to be prepared for early release.

The Southern California mountains and deserts are the actual settings used in "When Danger Smiles." The story concerns a young packing house executive from an eastern city, who determines to study the cattle business from the ground up. Once in the West, however, instead of studying the cattle industry he is compelled to concentrate his best energies on remaining alive, and saving the life of the girl.

Edith Johnson appears opposite Duncan in "When Danger Smiles," and is finely suited to her.

Mayor Gives Mary Carr Key to Boston

The opening of "Silver Wings" at the Park Theatre, Boston, last week was given unusual interest by the presence of Mary Carr, the featured player of this Fox Film Corporation picture. When Mrs. Carr appeared upon the stage in front of the screen she was met by Mayor Curley, who proceeded to hand her the key to the city, after a graceful and sincere speech.

"Eternal Flame" Well Received

Los Angeles Newspaper Critics Enthusiastic Over Norma Talmadge's Latest Picture

HAILED as the greatest play of the season, Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," a First National Attraction, was received with enthusiasm when it was shown at the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles. Here are what the Los Angeles critics said of it:

Express—"The production was beautifully and carefully set, well directed and the story was interesting."

Record—"Superbly acted by Miss Talmadge. There could be no richer spectacle than the grand ball in the palace, no more tense and dramatic horror than the woman's surrender to the branding iron, no more pictorial beauty than in many of Tony Gaudio's pictorial compositions featuring Miss Talmadge."

Herald—"Miss Talmadge rises to new and greater dramatic heights in 'The Eternal Flame.'"

Examiner—"Joseph Schenck has produced a great picture in 'The Eternal Flame,' starring Norma Talmadge. You will certainly agree that it is one of Miss Talmadge's greatest vehicles."

Critics Praise Arliss Picture

"The Man Who Played God" Is Highly Recommended by Reviewers in N.Y. Showing

A full measure of praise from public and critics was meted out to George Arliss and his newest photoplay feature, "The Man Who Played God," when this United Artists release was given its first New York showing last week at the Mark Strand theatre.

"The Man Who Played God" is not merely George Arliss's strongest and most human picture," said the New York Herald's critic, "but it bids fair to be considered throughout most of its reels one of the finest screen transients seen here this year."

"High class entertainment which no lover of pictures will wish to miss," was the statement of the critic for the Daily News. "The Man Who Played God" touches closer to life probably than any picture which has been on Broadway for months."

"In every way a fine picture," said Harriette Underhill in the Tribune. "To watch the performance of George Arliss is a delight. He has the loyal support of an unusually good company, and the direction is wonderful."

"The Man Who Played God," is not only George Arliss's latest, but it is by far the best picture he has yet made," said Don Allen in the Evening World."

"Thanks to the acting of George Arliss and excellent support by other players, a high class scenario and the remarkable direction of Harmon Weight, 'The Man Who Played God' is one of the finest photoplays of the season," wrote the reviewer for the New York Sun.

"Grandma's Boy" Run at Midnight Show

Nobody can truthfully say that Philadelphia is slow, after what happened at the Carman Theatre last Sunday night, October 1st. A city ordinance forbids theatrical or motion picture entertainments on Sundays, but so great was the demand to see the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors attraction, "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, that George Gravenstine, manager of the Carman, feared that the two weeks for which he had contracted would be insufficient, with the two Sundays deducted.

The law was observed strictly and the run did not begin until Monday, yet it was very, very close to Sunday night that the first showing started. It began at exactly one minute after midnight. And despite the fact that this meant a long wait, the theatre was crowded at the opening, as it has been at each performance since.

Publisher's Tie-Up for "Strangers' Banquet"

"The Strangers' Banquet," Marshall Neilan's first production made in association with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, is to have an exploitation tie-up with Grosset & Dunlap, publishers. They will issue shortly a photoplay edition of the Donn Byrne novel illustrated with scenes from the film version. The paper jacket will carry a scene from the film also.

Grosset & Dunlap will arrange for window displays of their edition of the novel in many bookshops throughout the country at the time Goldwyn releases the photoplay, which will be about the end of the year.

Will Distribute Second National Releases

UNDER an agreement entered into by Second National Pictures Corporation and Ferdinand H. Adam, the latter has arranged for the distribution of Second National releases in South America, Central America, Mexico and the West Indies.

Mr. Adam for years has been handling the product of several of the largest American film companies in these territories. Arrangements already have been made for shipping prints of the five pictures so far released by Second National to Buenos Aires and other important centers in the new field.

Warner Float Starts Tour to Coast

The huge float advertising the forthcoming series of Warner Brothers pictures left New York this week for Los Angeles. Frank A. Cassidy, a circus and film publicity man, who has a coast-to-coast acquaintance in newspaper offices, is accompanying the float with Howard Messmore as assistant.

The float has been equipped with a silvery-toned callopie which will play "There's a Main Street in Every Town, But There's Only One Broadway," a song written by Eddie Bonns and Lou Marangella, adapted to the Warner version of the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Main Street."

Stunt Trailer Helping Serial Picture

The Export & Import Film Company in cooperation with the Republican Laboratories have prepared a special "stunt" trailer of about 300 feet for advance announcement of "Jungle Goddess" screenings in theatres.

The reel is made up of thrill shots from the fifteen episodes of the animal chapter-play and its use as a serial business getter is said to have already been proved by many exhibitors.

Buffalo Territory Sold on Warner Pictures

The Film Exchange, Inc., of Buffalo, has purchased for the Buffalo territory the exclusive rights to the following Warner Brothers pictures: "Your Best Friend," a Harry Rapf production starring Vera Gordon; "Parted Curtains," with Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden; and "Ashamed of Parents," which was edited and titled by Eddie Bonns and Lou Marangella of the Warner publicity staff.

New Independent Enters Field

Amalgamated Exchanges Will Produce Twelve Stories For Monthly Release

THE advent of the Amalgamated Exchanges of America into screen circles marks the beginning of the predicted influx of independent producing corporations.

Its entrance into the field has followed months of planning and hard work of gathering together an organization well known to the industry from both the producing and distributing end. The so-called shortage in screen subjects led its organizers to first extend their search in this direction with a result that the screen rights for twelve well known published books were obtained with further works of the various authors contracted.

The object of the company is to produce the twelve stories in five reel subjects of one subject a month. The books are "The Madonna in Chains," by Edwards Owings Towne —"The Life of an Actress," by Langdon McCormack—"The Fire Patrol," by Hawkins and Barber—"Sunshine of Paradise Alley," by Denman Thompson—"Her Fatal Night," by Hal Reid—"Lost in New York," by Leonard Grover—"Too Rich to Marry," by Edwards Owings Towne—"Land of the Living," by Martin J. Harvey—"Driven From Home," by Hal Reid—"It's Never too Late to Mend," by Chas. Reade and "Easy Money," by Edwards Owings Towne.

The first of these to be released is "The Madonna in Chains," and the others to follow monthly but not in the rotation given.

The entire production of this newly formed company will be done in their studios at New Rochelle and Yonkers.

Betty Blythe Picture I Under Way

THE second in the present series of Betty Blythe special star pictures now being made by B. B. Productions, Inc., is well under way at the Whitman Bennett Studios in Yonkers.

The title is "The Darling of the Rich." The five leading artists in the supporting company are Montague Love, Charles Gerard, Gladys Leslie, Julia Swayno Gordon and Leslie Austin.

The story and continuity of "The Darling of the Rich" are both by Dorothy Farnum, who has been Mr. Bennett's staff writer for the past two years and who is now temporarily in Los Angeles writing the script for Marshal Neilan's next important special production. The plot is a melodrama of New York "high society," telling the amazing adventures of a poor country girl who comes to the big city, exchanges identities with a refugee Russian Princess and finds herself in a maelstrom of unexpected events.

Kentucky, Tennessee Sale Announced On "What's Wrong With The Women"

THE sale of "What's Wrong With the Women" for Kentucky and Tennessee is announced this week by Louis Baum, vice-president of Equity Pictures Corporation. The picture will be handled in these states by Col. Fred Levy of Big Feature Rights Company, one of the largest exchanges of this territory.

"What's Wrong With the Women" was written and produced by Daniel Carson Goodman. It is interpreted by an all-star cast including Wilton Lackaye, Barbara Castleton, Julia Swayne Gordon, Huntley Gordon, Rod La Rocque, Constance Bennett and Montagu Love. It was received by all trade paper critics as one of the most powerful dramas of present-day life to reach the screen and was commended as a faithful picturization of modern women. The picture has already had its New York premiere at the Cameo theatre where it was booked by Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Film Corporation, who controls the rights for New York State.

The sale to Big Feature Rights brings the total sales to date on this picture to nearly seventy-five per cent of the entire country.

The sale of "Where is My Wandering Boy" to Eltabran Film Company for Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, marks the 100 per cent distribution of this Equity picture in the United States.

Earthquake and Fire Wreck Cafe

An entire cafe extending the full length of one of the big double stages at the Hollywood Studios, Inc., was entirely wrecked by a fire and earthquake for the moving picture camera by Irving Cummings in staging some of the scenes in "Chicago Sal," his first of a series of three productions for Principal Pictures Corp.

The scenes were staged under the supervision of the police department. More than 800 persons were seated in the cafe when it was wrecked.

"Rags to Riches" Hit at Capitol Is Endorsed by Newspapers and Trade Critics as Good Audience Attraction

"RAGS TO RICHES," the Warner Brothers picture featuring Wesley Barry, which was shown at the Capitol theatre, last week, is declared to have played one of the biggest business weeks in the history of the theatre.

The trade paper critics, following the fine reception accorded the Harry Rapf production by the New York newspaper critics, characterize the feature as a sure-fire box-office attraction.

Substantiating these laudatory comments, S. L. Rothafel, managing director of the Capitol, upon being queried about the picture is declared to have remarked: "It's a peach of an audience picture."

Moving Picture World said: "Warners offer a human interest knockout that promises gold mine for exhibitors. Here's a production that is that big and that promising to warrant cancellation of any contract in order to show it at the best houses everywhere."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS said: "Here is a photoplay combining all the elements which build smashing returns at the box-office. Don't hesitate. Get this picture. Then take your money to the bank."

Film Daily said: "Barry's latest is another sure-fire box-office that you don't want to miss. Put in your order as early as possible and start getting them interested as soon as you are sure of it. You can't beat this for clean entertainment and a real family picture. It is for old and young alike."

Exhibitors Trade Review said: "Rags to Riches" is rare entertainment. It's a wholesome story, a story for the whole blessed family, filled with laughs and many alternating chokes. In reply to an inquiry as to how this feature was going, Mr. Rothafel, the chief of presentations, remarked that it was 'a peach of an audience picture.' Mr. Rothafel was right. It is."

New York Telegraph said: "Rags to Riches," that good old melodrama that we used to laugh, cry, applaud and hiss over, has at last reached the screen, thanks to the Warner Brothers, and is being presented at the Capitol this week. It's going to be just as big a hit as the stage version. The film has something to please most everybody and ought to create as fine a cinema record as it did as a speaking stage production. Barry is excellent throughout, and places this feature film high up in the success class."

Wesley Barry is supported by a cast which includes Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Eulalie Jensen and many other prominent screen players. The story was written by Will Nigh and Walter De Leon, and it was directed by Wallace Worsley.

Special Paper For "Notoriety"

Artistic Color and Tint Process Used
In Campaign of Outdoor Advertising

A new step in poster creation will be marked when the paper on Will Nigh's first production for L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North will appear. The elaborate standard set in making the picture itself and in titling it with a special color and tint process, will be maintained in the outdoor advertising campaign.

The posters will be unusually colored, and masterpieces of art as well as of advertising value according to Weber and North. Albert Vargas, leading motion-picture artist of his class, was engaged to concentrate for two solid weeks on "Notoriety" alone, and the expert staff of the Otis Lithographing Co. paid special attention to developing the punch in every piece of paper. The keynote of the posters is class, in conformity with the calibre of the eight-reel release.

The large collection of stills on this multi-reel production helped the producers in picking a rich variety of scenes for advertising purposes and lobby display. In its present length of 8,000 feet, "Notoriety" contains practically every imaginable type of setting and action. The dazzle of society, the pathos of poverty, the thrill of physical combat are all represented in the paper. More than three hundred scene stills were available for choice, and the exploitation and advertising staff hasn't missed a bet, it is claimed.

Fast progress is being made on the heralds, press-book and accessories accompanying "Notoriety," and it is expected that they will strike the patron forcibly with their daring treatment.

"Lost in a Big City" Nears Completion

Word has been received from Gloversville, New York, where Blazed Trail Productions, Inc., is busily at work upon "Lost in a Big City," that the picture is rapidly nearing completion with approximately two weeks more of camera work still remaining to be done.

Arrow Film Corporation is to release the film version of this world-famous old melodrama.

The stars, John Lowell and Baby Ivy Ward, are the same as in "Ten Nights in a Barroom," as is the scenarist, L. Case Russell.

New Al Haynes Series Is Offered

Al Haynes in a series of one-reel comedies, one every two weeks, is the latest offering of Storey Pictures, Inc., for the independent State Rights market.

Haynes will be remembered for his work in Christie comedies. In the new series of twenty-six single reels he is supported by many of his former associates in Christie Comedies, including George French, Vera Reynolds, Bille Bennett, Tom Dempsey and Jack Henderson.

Abramson Picture in "Loop" Theatres

WHAT is supposed to constitute a record in Chicago film circles was engineered this week by Frank Zambreno, president of the Chicago Graphic Film Exchange, when that enterprising showman booked "Wildness of Youth," Ivan Abramson's All-Star Masterpiece for the Castle and Barbee Theatres in the Loop playing day and date.

With such stars as Virginia Pearson, Mary Anderson, Harry Morey, Joe Striker, Thurston Hall, Julia Swayne Gordon and the late Bobby Connelley in the cast Zambreno is exercising every possible means to have some members of the cast present for personal appearances in conjunction with the week's run at both houses.

Roy Sheldon to Direct "Way Down South"

Announcement is made by Murray W. Garsson, president of Murray W. Garsson-Inc., that Roy Sheldon has been engaged by him to direct Harry P. Diggs' southern drama, "Way Down South."

The company of players and technical experts are now being engaged and by the tenth of this month the entire company will leave for Albany, Ga., the locale of the play,

"The Scarecrow" Will Be Produced

Percy MacKaye's story of Salem witchcraft, "The Scarecrow," which has taken its place in most texts and anthologies as one of the classics of the American drama since its stage production a few years ago, will be Glenn Hunter's next Film Guild picture.

The scenario is being written by James Ashmore Creelman, adapter of "Smilin' Through," and other successes, and Frank Tuttle, who will direct the picture.

"Affinities" Prints in Exchanges

Announcement has been made of the arrival of prints in the various exchanges of the W. W. Hodkinson Corp. of the Ward Lascelle feature "Affinities," the comedy by Mary Roberts Rinehart and starring Colleen Moore and John Bowers. This feature is being viewed by the exhibitors for the purpose of first run showing.

"Affinities" is scheduled for release by the Hodkinson Corp. on October 15.

Colleen Moore plays the leading role of Fanny Illington while John Bowers plays the part of her husband, Bay Illington. Both are very capable screen personalities. The balance of the cast consists of such well-known names as Joe Bonner, Grace Gordon and Pietro Sosso.

Williams Is Finishing New Picture

Earle Williams is putting the final touches on "You Never Know." This production is being made at the Vitagraph Hollywood studios under the direction of Robert Ensminger.

Much of the comedy and several of the dramatic situations revolve around Muggsy, a ward of Eddie Manning, the hero. This role is handled by Coy Watson Jr. This youth with a dog, secured after a long and careful search, are said to do much to enhance the value of the picture and occasionally steal scenes from Earle Williams.

Gertrude Astor plays opposite Earle Williams and the cast includes such well known names as George Field, Claire DuBrey, James Conway, Louis Dumar, Walter Cooper and Leonard Trainor.

Coast Company Leaves for Honolulu

Said to be one of the most elaborate location trips ever made out of Hollywood is that just started by Director Julia Crawford Ivers, Betty Compson and a company of players who are to spend six weeks in the Hawaiian Islands making scenes for "The White Flower," a Paramount Picture written by Mrs. Ivers during a recent stay in Honolulu.

Companies have gone on trips before, but usually with only a "skeleton" equipment. Mrs. Ivers, however, has arranged that practically a temporary branch of the Lasky studio will be set up in Honolulu.

"Sure Fire Flint" Hits Mark

New Jersey Manager Reports Ovation Given Johnny Hines' Latest Vehicle

WITH the announcement of the first report of "Sure-Fire Flint's" success and the tremendous ovation accorded it at the Playhouse Theatre in Westfield, New Jersey, where it played last Saturday to an enthusiastic audience and a more enthusiastic manager who adjudged this production as "the best comedy drama he has ever seen," a veritable flood of demand for prints from exchange-men who have bought "Sure-Fire Flint" featuring Johnny Hines for their territories, began coming in to producer C. C. Burr's office according to that office.

In as much as the production ran into seven reels, Mr. Burr went to see the trial performance at Westfield to obtain the reaction of the audience and ascertain which parts of the production to cut in order to reduce it to six reels. This plan however, was unnecessary since the continuity, action of gags were so well knit together that any cutting would have injured the production. "Sure-Fire Flint" therefore will be released as a seven reel production. Immediately following the successful debut of "Sure-Fire Flint" at the Playhouse Theatre, Manager Flagg wired to producer C. C. Burr: "Sure-Fire Flint" played to a jammed house Saturday against new opposition which has a fine new house. Held crowd in lobby and sidewalk one hour and a half. The best comedy drama I or my people have seen. Both you and Johnny Hines deserve a great deal of credit. Nothing but compliments from my people in being able to get such a picture."

"Beautiful and Damned" Listed

Is Announced by Warner Brothers as Second of Seven Season's Releases

"THE BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED," F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel in the course of picturization by the Warner Brothers, is announced as the second of seven releases for the season. The story is being produced under the supervision of Sam and Jack Warner at the organization's Coast studios, with William A. Seiter directing.

Prominent members of the cast headed by Marie Prevost include Kenneth Harlan, Harry Myers, Louise Fazenda, Tully Marshall, Emmett King, Cleo Ridgeley, Walter Long, Parker McConnell, Clarence Burton, George Kuwa, Charles McHugh and Kathleen Key.

"The Beautiful and Damned" tells the story of the love and marriage of Anthony Patch (Kenneth Harlan) and the vivid beauty, Gloria (Marie Prevost). It reveals with devastating satire a section of American society which has never before been recognized as an entity—that wealthy, floating population which throngs the restaurants, cabarets, theatres and hotels of the big cities—people adrift on the sea of luxury, without the anchors of homes and the rudders of responsibilities, people without roots or backgrounds.

Brandt Back From Coast Trip

C. B. C. President Finds Exhibitors Are Ready to Cooperate With Independents

JOE BRANDT, President of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, returned this week from a two and a half months' trip more convinced than ever of the big times coming for independents, and of the fact that this bids fair to be a big season for the entire industry.

Brandt's trip took him all the way to the Coast, including prolonged stop-overs at all the principal key cities en route; allowed for a stay of several weeks at the Coast production center to put into effect ideas he had gained, and to study the situation there; and a stop of several weeks, he said that he studied conditions carefully en route interviewing exchange men, territorial buyers, and exhibitors in every city, and that the results of his observations led him to be confident that the majority of exhibitors throughout the country are really holding off on booking solid, and are leaving a definite number of open dates for Independent pictures this year.

The consensus of opinion of exhibitors seems to be, he says, that the Independent field will be well worth watching this year, and that enough open dates for Independent pictures will be conducive to greater prosperity for every one concerned.

"Bull Dog Drummond" Deal Completed

AN important deal is announced this week whereby W. W. Hodkinson, through Producer Security Corporation acquired the distribution rights of "Bull Dog Drummond" for the United States and Canada.

"Bull Dog Drummond" as a stage production scored one of the biggest successes in a decade and last year made a remarkable run in both New York and London. At the present time it is playing to capacity in Chicago under direction of Charles Dillingham.

The picture rights for this notable melodrama brought a record price, it is claimed. Hollandia Films Co., produced the feature and Evelyn Greeley and Carlyle Blackwell were specially sent to England along with Director Oscar Apfel to secure the exteriors in the exact locale of the story.

Indiana Endorsers Pay Tribute to Post

The Indiana Endorsers of Photoplays have paid an unsolicited tribute to Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," a First Nation Attraction. After reviewing "The Masquerader" they sent the following letter to Mr. Post:

"The Masquerader" is a wonderful picture and your acting faultless.

"Your work in this picture adds much to the reputation you have made for doing only worth while plays and doing them splendidly. We wish you success in all new plays."

Historical Developments Leading to the Modern Motion Picture

Idea First Originated Several Hundred Years Before Christian Era

By C. Francis Jenkins*

HAVE been asked by your Papers Committee to prepare a sketch of the conception, early history and development of the motion picture, but to compile an accurate account sufficiently complete without being too lengthy is not an easy task.

Where the motion picture idea originated I have not found out, though a hundred years before the Christian era, Lucretius strangely wrote his friend thus:

Do not thou moreover wonder that the images appear to move and appear in one order and time their arms and legs to use; for one image disappears and instead appears another arranged in another way, and thus seems each gesture to change; for you must understand that this takes place in the quickest time."

In Development 2000 Years

This is an exact description of the motion picture of today, and if this is really what he meant, then it took two thousand years to get a suitable picture ribbon and a proper machine to handle it. And it will be noticed that the subject naturally divides itself into these two main elements, i. e., the picture-carrying vehicle and the handling mechanism therefore. The mechanism is of two kinds, i. e., one of them continuous movement, the other intermittent movement of the picture carrier at the illuminated aperture. The process, as we know it today, is likewise divided into two steps; the first a photographic analysis of the animated subject, the second a synthesis of the elements into which the subject was divided by the analytical process.

The success of the attempt to simulate animation depends initially upon persistence of vision, that faculty of the human eye which enables the retina to hold onto a light sensation for an appreciable time after the light is cut off. And curiously enough this phenomena seems to have been first mentioned by a blind man.

The motion picture is not a sort of Minerva-birth of inventive genius, but like all notable achievements in mechanisms has had a long line of predecessors, for the difficult problem of recording and reproducing motion did not yield without much preliminary fumbling.

Six Historical Periods

Obviously it would lengthen this paper beyond acceptable limits if description were made of the work of all who have contributed to the result in the form finally adopted and practiced at this time. I shall therefore endeavor to confine myself as far as this may be done to mention of the contributions of those who in turn first added a new step in the development of the idea.

By a process of knowledge additions and eliminations the motion picture of today reduces itself roughly to six historical periods; the first (1) a series of related picture elements; (2) the adoption of photography to secure them; (3) the use of a single camera; (4) of perforated film; (5) of intermittent film movement; and (6) in making the period of illumination exceed the period of change or substitution of a new picture element, or frame, for the last in sequence throughout the series.

The First Record

The first motion picture mechanism we have any record of is the zoetrope, or wheel of life, though its origin is buried in antiquity. It may be that this is the device Lucretius was writing about.

It usually consists, as you all doubtless well know, of a paper cylinder having equi-spaced axial slits cut through its wall. Between the slits on the inside were arranged sketches of successive phases of an object in motion. By whirling the cylinder and viewing the sketches through the slits as they passed the eye one got the sensation of an object in motion.

The picture series were also put upon a slotted disc (this form may have antedated the drum type) and were viewed by looking through the slots at the reflection of the pictures in a mirror as the disc was whirled.

Lobby display used at the Palace theatre, El Paso, Texas, which has a northern forest stream flowing down through the set. The mechanical arrangement and equipment used are extremely simple. A working description is given in the text on this page

How to Construct Lobby Display With Realistic Northern Forest Stream

THE Palace theatre, El Paso, Texas, used a lobby display which proved very effective in attracting attention for the picture "I Am the Law." The display consisted of a set representing the snow covered northern woods with a small stream running down over a rough stream bed.

The accompanying photograph and sketch show details of the construction and the general appearance of the set when completed.

The equipment used in this particular set consisted of a watertight barrel, small electrically operated suction pump of ten gallons capacity, an open tank which held about 35 gallons of water, a tin chute, a few lengths and connections of three-quarter inch iron pipe along with the general material needed to make up the exterior of the set. To build a similar set this equipment can be varied to a considerable extent depending on that most conveniently available.

The equipment was arranged as indicated in the line drawing. In the barrel or large tank shown on the left of the diagram, a slot was made wide enough to allow the water to flow from this barrel down over the tin chute which starts at this opening and empties in the tank at the bottom. The tank into which this water empties can be any open receptacle that is water tight and will hold sufficient water. The small electrically operated pump is connected with this open tank and also the barrel or larger tank at the head of the chute by means of three-quarter inch iron pipe; the water being sucked from the smaller tank and forced up into the barrel.

The motor which operates the pump can be connected to the house current by means of an attachment plug.

The tin chute down which the water runs can be dented to make the water course uneven.

Diagrammatic sketch showing layout for the lobby display explained on this page

It is a good idea to cover this tin chute with white oil cloth.

To prevent any leaking at the barrel slot, the end of the tin chute should be bent over into the inside of the barrel and fastened down.

A small amount of blue coloring put into the water will add to its appearance, causing it to look colder.

The set is then masked in with trees, but and a bridge as shown in the photograph; the rocks at the bottom of the chute should be treated with a white glaze. A snow effect is obtained by shaking scintillating powdered glass over the set.

The set is approximately twelve feet deep.

A very striking night effect should be obtainable by proper lighting. A baby spot light could be employed to good advantage placed in the lobby so that the display would be brightly illuminated as the center of attraction.

Code for Ventilation of Public Buildings Submitted for Approval

THE code for the ventilation of public and semi-public buildings adopted by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers in 1915 has been submitted to the American Engineering Standards Committee for approval as AMERICAN STANDARD.

This code was prepared by a committee of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers in response to requests from state commissions, legislative bodies, public health agencies and other organizations for suggestions to be used in the preparation of legislation and regulations regarding the heating and ventilation of buildings. The committee endeavored in this code to cover the general features most essential to the public health in such a manner as to protect the public with the least possible expenditure for equipment and without unnecessarily limiting the methods of obtaining the desired results.

Section 1 of the code relates to general matters pertaining to all classes of buildings; the remaining three sections relate to schools and colleges, factories and theatres, respectively.

Among the states that have utilized parts of the code in their regulations are: Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia and Wisconsin. A thoroughly representative special committee, including all the important organizations interested in the subject, has been appointed by the American Engineering Standards Committee to investigate the status of the code in the industry and the desirability of approving it. Sidney J. Williams, Chief Engineer of the National Safety Council is chairman of this special committee.

The American Engineering Standards Committee would be very glad to learn from those interested of the extent to which they make use of this code, and to receive any other information regarding the code in meeting the needs of the industry.

An ECONOMY that EXHIBITORS have learned from EXPERIENCE

DURING the last ten years exhibitors have come to realize the positive power of an artistic theatre front to attract patrons. From Maine to California, hundreds of exhibitors, who have learned this lesson through experience, will tell you that, regardless of the size or type of a building, whether it is exclusively a theatre or contains store space as well, Terra Cotta will give it the utmost in business-getting attractiveness at most moderate cost.

This adaptable facing material permits the use of fine ornament that would be prohibitive in price in any other equally effective material. It also permits the use of color, in a complete range from lustrous white to deep and brilliant colorings. And besides being attractive, Terra Cotta is practical. It is fire-resistant, impervious to weather and time. Maintenance is practically negligible—any accumulation of dirt can easily be washed off with soap and water.

The Florence Theatre shows what Terra Cotta can do to make a building attractive. The stores and the entrance-way take up most of the front, but in the small space left Terra Cotta gives variety of ornament in the various mouldings and medallions, and pleasing color in the soft, warm grey tone.

If you are planning to build a new theatre or to alter your present front, let us tell you how well Terra Cotta will adapt itself to your needs. Address National Terra Cotta Society, 19 West 44th Street, New York, N. Y.

Historical Development of Modern Motion Pictures

The first attempt at projection followed this line, that is, transparencies were mounted in disc form and illuminated from the back, a projection lens imaging these on a screen as the successive pictures of the series were momentarily exposed in the field of the lens.

Plateau, who seems first to have made up such a mechanism, mounted sixteen pictures on his disc, suitably illuminated them through a whirling opaque shutter having a single radial slot therein, the shutter disc rotating sixteen times as fast as the picture disc. Though blind, Plateau appears to have given diligent study to this persistence of vision phenomena, and at this early date, 1849, curiously enough hit upon the same picture frequency now universally used. This picture disc, intermittently illuminated, was subsequently employed by several experimenters.

Used Sixteen Lenses

Another form was exactly the reverse of this plan, for instead of a single stationary lens and stationary light with a 16-picture transparent disc revolving between, consists of a stationary disc with 16 pictures and 16 lenses, a single lens mounted in front of each picture, while the light whirled around to momentarily pass through each picture and adjacent lens. As all the lenses were adjusted to register at a single spot on the screen, the composite on the screen appeared, by persistence of vision, as a single uninterrupted picture.

The idea of simulating motion by intermittent illumination of a series of related picture elements seems to have been the preferred method for more than a hundred years, the last of the line being Edison's Kinetoscope of 1894 (to be described later).

The picture series were first made in a camera in 1860, to the best of my knowledge, by Colman Sellers, an engineer, who, in one form, pasted the photo prints on an endless band for exhibition. In 1894 I met Mr. Sellers who described his devices to me and gave me photographs of them and also strips of pictures used therein.

Reynaud's improved version of the Zoetrope

An acquaintance of Colman Sellers, and likewise a Philadelphian, Henry R. Heyl, also made camera plates (of a dancing couple in action) making from the negatives wet-plate lantern slides which he mounted disc-wise, and revolved, step-by-step, in the light of a projection lantern. He gave a public demonstration at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Feb. 5, 1870. I have paper prints off the negatives, which he gave me in 1895.

An examiner in the U. S. Patent Office, some ten years after allowing me a patent on a perforated picture strip in continuous and synchronous motion with a plurality of lenses passing a fixed opening in a camera, called my attention to an anticipating French publication, of March 1, 1864, in which Sr. Ducos illustrated and described much the same thing, i. e., a flexible picture band carried along by a sprocketed drum, synchronously with a plurality of lenses.

First Use of Geneva Star

The first use of the now almost universally employed geneva gear or star-and-cam in projectors appears to have been made by A. B. Brown, in 1869. However, the use of this type of intermittent gear is practically the only interest his contribution has for the historian.

Marey, a French scientist, employed the zoetrope, the slotted cylinder described earlier herein, with solid figures instead of pictures, modeled in imitation of successive phases of an animal in action, which not only gave the action but the plasticity of solid bodies. One of his instruments of this type is still to be seen in the Museum of the Paris Physiological Station.

Employed Series of Mirrors

A variation of the picture-carrying drum, employed as a projector, had a series of vertical mirror-strips for reflecting the light beam which carried the picture to the screen. It depended for success upon the reflection phenomena that, to accomplish the desired result, the angular movement of the mirror must be but one-half that of the picture movement.

FOR BETTER PROJECTION POWER'S PROJECTORS

Power's Multiple Coil Rheostat

THE multiple coil rheostat is so much superior to the grid rheostat we have discontinued manufacturing the latter. Power's multiple coil rheostat weighs less than 1/3 of the grid type rheostat and can easily be moved by one man. The multiple coil units are connected across two heavy brass bus bars, one coil carrying five amperes and the balance ten amperes each. The current carried thru the rheostat is easily varied in five or ten ampere steps by means of knife switches.

The loss of one coil does not affect the others, and if entire capacity of rheostat is not being used, a new coil may be immediately switched in. Coils are of a special non-corrosive wire and may be replaced in a few minutes without difficulty. They are exceptionally strong and operate at an exceedingly low temperature. As each coil carries a low amperage (not more than 10 amps) a wire of very small cross-section is used which permits perfect connections to be made to bus bars.

Power's multiple coil rheostats are made in the following sizes:

30-55 amperes	} 110-115 volts {	60- 95 amperes
40-75 amperes		or 220-230 volts {

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS

Re:naud, in 1889, made such a device which was to be seen on the boulevards of Paris until the present type projector deprived it of public favor.

Aside from the ribbon form of picture carrier, another which attained considerable popularity in its final and perfected form consisted in mounting the picture series as the leaves of a pad or book, which, bent back and exhibited by slipping from under one's thumb, brings the picture into sight in such rapid succession that a very good motion picture is produced.

The first mention I have been able to find of these thumb books, as they came to be called, was the invention of Linnett in 1868. They appeared from time to time in one form or another, sometimes being mounted in a holder with a mechanical detent to press back the cards.

The Picture Card "Movie"

The most pretentious of these instruments was the Mutoscope of Herman Castler in 1895. The picture cards stood out radically from a drum to which they were attached by their bottom ends, a thousand or more on a single drum, and these slipping from under a detent exhibited the pictures thereon with smoothness and precision. It was a coin operated machine and "picture parlors" equipped with Mutoscopes were established in the large cities, seaside and mountain resorts and pleasure parks, holding the public favor until the advent of the 5c.-movie theatre.

The Messrs. Lumiers, of France, brought out a similar machine which they named the Kinora. The striking feature of this machine was the curved picture-carrying cards, curved to add resiliency.

My own contribution to this line was a Phantascope toy, in which a flexible band was employed, the cards being attached thereto by their lower ends and having a spaced relation of about five thousandths inch. This close spacing of the cards assured a firm adhesion to the band and to each other when a flexible glue was used.

Dr. Marey's experiment with phases of animal locomotion

But it is to the persistence of Edward Muybridge that we are indebted for the most scientific research in motion analysis, work which he began in 1879. His animal studies became classics with artists. Wet plates only were then available and he used above half a million of them in a plurality of cameras arranged in order along a track over which his subject was required to pass. He thus obtained consecutive impressions at regular intervals of time and distance during a complete stride. His first work was financed by the Hon. Leland Stanford, of California, a lover of fine horses. Between 1883 and 1887, he was engaged in like work at the University of Pennsylvania, where his "Animal Locomotion" was published.

On February 27, 1888, Mr. Muybridge interviewed T. A. Edison as to the possibility of combining his Zoopraxiscope projector with Edison's phonograph, but without result, though Mr. Edison did exploit such a combination some years later.

The next to come prominently into notice was Dr. Marey. Sometime after meeting Muybridge in Paris, in 1881, where Prof. Muybridge was exhibiting at the Electrical Exposition, Marey set about to determine by graphic methods the trajectories, velocities and accelerations of moving parts of the human body, aquatic locomotion, etc. At first, he used plates but later, 1888, used "a long roll of sensitive film" intermittently fed past the exposure aperture. His work has a permanent value to science.

Shown at World's Fair

In 1887, Auchutz published a description of his tachyscope, a device which was later shown at the World's Fair, Chicago, 1893. The apparatus consisted of a glass wheel the pictures on which lighted by the flash of a vacuum tube as they came into position; though the machine is the same as that described by Donisthrope, of London, in Nature, issue of January 24, 1878.

To concentrate a considerable length of entertainment on a convenient area a disc picture carrier was attempted by several inventors. In one scheme a glass plate was employed upon which series of pictures were spirally arranged, as in the Anthony device.

A British patent of 1900 to Rosenberg discloses another plan, a film having two rows of pictures thereon, each row being half of the whole show. At the end of the first row the film was shifted and run in the opposite direction to show pictures of the second row. Edison in his home projector of 1911 followed the same scheme.

In 1886 Augustus Le Prince, of New York State, filed an application for U. S. Patent which disclosed transparent picture ribbons having a row of perforations along each edge of each film. Four such strips were used in the machine, four pictures being made on each in succession behind sixteen lenses. A single lens modification is suggested, with perforated film driven by a sprocketed drum.

Failure to Follow Up Work

It is curious that those who came nearest anticipating future accepted methods and mechanisms should have failed to follow up their work. As another shining example I might cite Mr. Levison, who publicly exhibited at the Brooklyn Photo. Club an apparatus much like present day devices; it had flexible film, moved step by step, and behind a single lens.

Plates, cards, paper strips, drums and glass discs had been used for animated pictures, but when in 1885 Rev. Goodwin invented the transparent celluloid flexible film the way was opened to rapid advance,

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Kind Sirs:—

Enclose find twenty-five cents for a membership button and an enrollment filled out.

I have been reading the Forum for some time and I have obtained a great deal of good from it, so I thought it was about time to join.

In answer to the question of Mr. John Lineham of Aston, Mass., I wish to state that he is right about the light beams crossing just after going through the objective lens. I have proven it in this way. First light the lamp and open the machine so the light can pass through, then take a piece of colored film and hold it about one inch in front of the lens, covering the top half of the beam, and it will be noticed that the lower half of the screen is colored; now by taking the piece of film and holding it about six inches farther from the lens than the first time it will be noticed that the upper half of the screen is colored, thus proving that the light rays cross after passing through the objective lens and not while in it.

Yours truly,
VICTOR J. HIGGINS,
Greenville, Ohio.

Try This Test

It looks like a pretty good proof that the light rays cross after they come out of the objective lens and also the crossing appears to be quite close to the objective lens.

However, did you ever try this stunt. Take any object such as a stick, or, if possible, your finger and hold it in the beam of light near the objective lens. Notice whether there is any very noticeable shadow thrown on the screen. Then, while still keeping this object (the stick or finger) in the beam of light, walk down toward the screen. As the screen is approached it will be noticed that a more definite shadow of the object will be seen. Yet no well defined outline of the object will be thrown on the screen until the object is right up against the screen itself.

What does this seem to indicate? If we get no well defined shadow of the object until it is right up against the screen then there must be light rays crossing in front of the object at all places until it reaches the screen. If this was not the case a definite shadow of the object would be cast when it was held at any place in the beam, for light rays all travel in straight lines.

Nevertheless, in general, that part of the beam leaving the top of the objective lens goes for the most part to make up the lower half of the picture on the screen which the reverse is true for the other half of the light rays. The rays do cross each other all the way to the screen though undoubtedly the greater portion cross at the narrowest part of the light beam in front of the objective lens.

The Editor would like to hear further discussions on this subject from other projectionists. If you don't agree, tell us why.—Editor.

Diagram for construction of time switch using an alarm clock

Home Made Time Switch

A time switch which is very handy for numerous uses can be made very easily.

If the knife switch works easily an alarm clock can readily be converted into such a piece of apparatus. The clock is anchored to the floor by tying the feet down with stout wire. Now put an extension on the alarm key so that the switch will be pulled completely out. This extension can be made from fibre and fastened to the key by means of rivets. Connect the key to the handle of the switch by means of a wire spring. When the alarm goes off the key will turn to the left and pull out the handle of the switch, thus breaking the circuit.

Of course, you do not want the alarm still going after the switch is pulled, so tie another wire to the "stop" button of the clock, pass it around the handle and connect it to the alarm key also. As the alarm key turns to the left it will pull the "stop" button up and the alarm is turned off. You can remove the gong so that this operation will be noiseless.

If the switch will not pull out easily, this device may not work, but if it does an alarm clock will make an excellent time switch.

Comments on "Operator"

Dear Editor:—

It has been a long time since I have made an attempt to contribute anything to this department. However, I read with interest every article that appears on its pages.

I have just been reading of that Iowa "operator." Naturally, I have formed my opinion of his "manager." If a theatre has the kind of a manager and projectionist (so called) that this house has, then God help the outcome of it. It needs a nation wide prayer.

But: What is the matter with the better class houses all over the country? What is the matter with the men employed in them? Producers are spending thousands upon thousands to produce beautiful and artistic productions for the public—and when it reaches them they are entertained with a series of punch marks, strips of paper, scratches or most any kind of mutilation that the brain of a fool can think of. Who is responsible for this?

It will only take me but a minute to tell you who is responsible. In the first place, the film exchange managers are to blame. In the second, the theatre managers. And lastly, that bone-head dome of solid ivory, "operator." Mind you, I do not consider this "operator" as big a fool as either of the two before managers mentioned, because they seem to be perfectly satisfied with the kind of "work" he is doing.

I must admit that this and other departments of our trade papers has done a mighty lot toward eliminating evils and putting projection on a higher standard—but these evils will never be stamped out until the exchange and theatre managers take an active part in it.

If every exchange would notify each theatre manager that uses their service that they would not tolerate mutilation of their films, subject to cancellation of film service, it would only take

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Major Modified Type "C"

A Major System

every theater

The mere fact that the Major System of Theater Lighting Control is the most complete, efficient, effective and safe that money can buy doesn't mean that it takes a lot of money to buy it. Major Sectional Unit Construction provides a size range that gives every theater in the country opportunity to reap the lighting benefits that Major Control bestows.

Major Modified Type "C" is as thoroughly a Major System in its fundamentals as the biggest Major installation in the country. It is pre-selective, remote control, fire-proof, tamper-proof and gives a wide and wonderful range of lighting effects.

It occupies less stage space than any other board, is easier to control, gives longer, better service and is absolutely safe to even the most uninitiated. And every owner of a Major System of Theater Lighting Control will back up every one of these statements. Ask some of them and see.

One of the foremost stage lighting engineers of the country has written a book that tells in a simple, understandable way the fundamentals of stage lighting and gives a far greater insight into the problems and their solutions than has ever before been available. A postal card will bring you a copy.

Mr. Manager about one minute to get "his man" told that such practice would mean the cancellation of his job. Then you are going to see some mighty radical changes. It hurts me to have to say these things, Mr. Editor, but it is the only way it can be done.

I do not want to pass up the projectionist who has the ambition for a higher standard, and I want to congratulate the man who goes at his work each day and does it with an honor to his profession. Yes, we have a lot of these men and we are proud of them.

Mr. Editor, can't you in some way reach the exchanges and get a movement of this kind going? It would be a blessing to our country. I will write later and tell you of some of the devices I am using in the projection room, also my equipment. I am afraid the waste paper basket is going to catch this now, as it is over lengthy.

Will be glad to exchange letters with any member of the league. Maybe our ideas will be worth a lot to each of us.

ERNEST G. KEMP,

Projectionist, Orlando Enterprises, Inc.

Commendable Ideas

And the Editor wishes to add that this is one fine letter. Commendable ideas expressing good sound logic as outlined in Ernest Kemp's letter are to be seriously considered. While the exchanges, and we might add, the whole industry in general, has as yet to realize this damaging evil that prevails upon the film, there is little doubt but what the time is coming when these lamentable practices will not be tolerated.

Let your ideas help some one else

The mutilation of film cannot be stopped overnight. No reform of any moment is accomplishable without persistent and untiring effort by those interested in its success.

It therefore rests with those who realize the damage and detriment done to the Motion Picture Industry by the film evil to devote their loyal efforts towards its undoing.

Each person who co-operates in this effort should realize that his work is well worth while toward the ultimate correction of this evil.—Editor.

Dear Editor:

Enclosed please find membership blank for the N. A. M. L. I could not fill out the last two lines, as I am working relief just at present and you know what that means—here tonight and some place else the next night.

As I do not know the membership fee or price of buttons, etc., I am going to ask you to send me the stuff C.O.D. if you will. Or if you feel that you can trust me, send a bill with the stuff and I will remit at once. I am very anxious to belong to your League, and from what I gather from the letters published in the News it is a very good thing to belong to. I want to be a projectionist and not a crank pusher and will do all and have been doing my best to give the best possible performance, and my motto is "IF YOU CAN'T SEND FILM BACK TO THE EXCHANGES AS GOOD AS IT COMES TO YOU, SEND IT BACK IN BETTER SHAPE."

Can you tell me what an In and Out of Focus Film Gate is? That is one of the questions in the operators' examination here. I have asked a dozen projectionists the same question and they all tell me the same—"There is no such animal." Now, there may be, and as I don't claim to know everything, I will ask you, and let your answer settle the question.

Hoping to hear from you soon and please don't forget to send the stuff.

Yours for better projection,

W. J. BURTON, JR.,

2230 Court Place, Denver, Colo.

Regarding the question of an "in and out of focus film gate," the Editor must admit he has not had the pleasure of meeting up with this particular gentleman, and also finds that none of those to whom he asked the question ever heard of it.

for the necessary unlimited capacity in the picture carrier was then possible.

In 1889, Mr. Dickson began, at Thos. A. Edison's direction, the development of a picture machine. News of what was being done appeared in print from time to time and the summer of 1894 saw the beginning of the public exhibition of his Kinetoscope, a box into which one looked to see picture in animation.

The picture ribbon was passed continuously between a small lamp and the eye of the observer, the view being cut off by a rotating disc about a foot in diameter and having a one-eighth by one inch radial slit therein near the periphery. Through this flying slit the observer got a momentary sight of each picture frame as it came into position above the light. The frames passed at the rate of 46 per second, a high speed being required because of the instantaneous view and meagre illumination. The pictures were small, of course, but excellently done. The excellence of the Edison pictures without doubt proved a stimulus to the rapid development of the art, far more than any contribution in mechanical design or new methods, as was later demonstrated when the courts held that the Edison patents and re-issues were anticipated and invalid.

(The developments leading up to the present day equipment will appear in next weeks issue in a continuation of this article.)

Bids Submitted for New House

George M. Khoury of Clayton, Mo., has asked St. Louis contractors to submit bids on a new 500 seat motion picture theatre he plans to erect at Forsythe Boulevard and St. Louis avenue, Clayton. The structure will also contain three stores. Khoury has been operating a motion picture airdome on Forsythe Boulevard the past Summer. He is convinced that Clayton is ripe for a first class picture house.—Barrett.

Protectall

Approved by National Board of Fire Underwriters
As a Safeguard Against Film Fire

Their Report of Test reads:—"When installed and operated in the manner specified by the manufacturer the performance of this device was as intended and such safeguarding as designed was afforded."

The performance is as dependable as the current that supplies the light and the safeguarding covers every possible chance of fire in the projector.

It is ELECTRICAL, not mechanical

It affords COMPLETE PROTECTION, not part protection

90% of the Film Fires originate in the projector and often wipe out entire fortunes.

E. F. Murphy Joins Staff of Tom Evans Film Laboratory

WHAT many consider one of the biggest acquisitions in the laboratory field of the industry is the securing of E. F. Murphy by Thomas Evans of the Evans Film Laboratory.

This event is auspicious from two standpoints. Mr. Murphy is considered one of the best laboratory men in the industry and also possibly the highest priced man in America in the laboratory field. It is noteworthy that Mr. Murphy was with Mr. Evans when the Evans Film Mfg. Co. was formed and also assisted Mr. Evans fifteen years ago in laying out his plant.

In line with Mr. Evans' policy of "Personal Service" the securing of Mr. Murphy to conduct his laboratory bears out this slogan to even a greater extent than before. Mr. Murphy has been associated with the motion picture business since its inception. And even before motion pictures were a commercial asset he conducted their forerunner, which was known as the Edison Kinetoscope and was the main attraction in many an arcade.

In 1897 he was initiated into the mysteries of photography and laboratory work with the John Carbuet Dry Plate Mfg. Co. of Fort Wayne. This was the foundation on which Mr. Murphy has built his wide experience. During his five years with this company he not only learned the principle of developing and printing but was the sponsor of many improvements in the process.

He also was one of the first men to use the original Armand and Jenkins machine on which the present machines are based.

E. F. Murphy who has joined the staff of the Evans film laboratory

It is estimated that during his service in the industry Mr. Murphy has handled several million feet of film. He bears an enviable reputation among the laboratory men.

It is claimed that he is the highest salaried laboratory man in the industry.

Mr. Murphy was with P. A. Powers, present head of the Film Booking Office of America, when Mr. Powers went into the motion picture business in 1908. When the New York Motion Picture Company was a factor to be contended with in the business Mr. Murphy conducted their laboratory. He opened the Imp plant on 81st and Columbus Avenue when Mr. Laemmle started that well known brand of pictures.

In 1914 he went back with Universal and since that time has been operating their Fort Lee plant.

Kansas City and Wichita Scheduled for New Theatre

Two new theatres in Missouri and Kansas are being planned. George Boden of Kansas City will build a two-story brick and stone theatre at Thirty-sixth street and Indiana avenue, Kansas City, while Bernard Davis of Wichita, Kans., is planning the erection of a down town house in Wichita near Second and West Douglas street.

San Francisco Presented with New T. & D. Theatre

The new T. and D. Theatre in Richmond (a residential section of San Francisco), costing $250,000 has been opened by Turner & Dahnken.

Theatre Managers Know

That the curtain and draperies of the house exercise a mighty influence on box office receipts.

Harmony of design, consideration of colors, and appropriate materials decide whether a house is elegant or tawdry.

Our long experience and individual study of each theatre enable us to make draperies pay for themselves plus a profit.

Architects, owners and managers are invited to get our ideas—and we manufacture especially good equipment, too.

General Supply and Repair Co. Report Sales

Mr. A. H. McDonald, who has just completed remodelling his Castle Theatre in the city of Eugene, Oregon, has purchased a Superlite Screen, as have also Messrs. H. B. Hurst of the Vining Theatre, Ashland, Oregon and J. B. Sparks who recently remodelled his Liberty Theatre in Bend, Oregon.

Rockingham Theatre Opens the Garden

The Rockingham Theatre Company has opened their new Garden Theatre, formerly the old Opera House. The Garden has a capacity of 600, is equipped for road attractions and pictures and has a most up-to-date projection equipment with a Typhoon Cooling System. Interior finished with old rose and green. William G. Atkinson is manager of the Garden.—Stellings.

Elizabeth, N. J., Witnesses Opening of Regent

With a seating capacity of 2400 and no balcony or gallery, the Regent Theatre is a model of perfection in modern picture house construction. Its architecture is of the Elizabethan period as a tribute to the city in which it stands. There is not a post or pillar in the auditorium. The building is absolutely fireproof. In order to insure good projection. Power Projectors have been installed.

Hodge's Palace Marks Opening of New Era for East Texas

THIS month marks the opening of a new era in modern theatres for East Texas with the initial performance in H. T. Hodge's new Palace at Abilene.

Mr. Hodge operates a string of theatres, including the Mae Roy at Ballinger, Queen at Winters, Gem at Abilene and the Alcove at Stamford. He has spared neither money nor effort to make the Palace the best equipped and finest theatre in that section.

The lobby is unique in its dignified and compelling invitation to the passerby. Display frames in blue and gold are a unit with the other lobby decorations designed and finished to match, thus making the lobby display appear as a part of the building.

Box office trimming matches the lobby frames and other decorations, yet the box office stands out prominently through the use of three elaborate brushed brass grills and specially selected marble base.

The lobby floor features a beautiful design in delft blue and white tile with marble baseboards, the entire lobby being a completely matched, therefore highly efficient, advertising medium that will do much toward securing a capacity attendance.

Housing for the projection equipment includes a separate concrete room for the resistance devices, a large operating room and a fireproof rewinding and film room, each separated by fireproof doors with automatic control.

Upholstered chairs generously spaced and of ample proportions insure luxurious comfort for every one and the big specially built Reproduco organ is a source of attraction that is adding much to the box office intake.

Projection equipment consists of two New Model Motiograph Projectors, a General Electric Motor Generator, Gardiner Velvet Gold Fibre Screen and special optical system and sufficient stage space has been allowed for the presentation of atmospheric prologues and occasional dramatic offerings.

Clyde Churchill, chief projectionist for the chain of Hodge theatres, will have charge of projection, and the management of the new house will be vested in Mr. Homer Hodge, who for the past several years has taken an active part in the success of the Gem.

Installation of the equipment was personally supervised by C. K. Goss of the R. D. Thrash Company, the entire lobby and booth equipment being designed by him.

This picture illustrates progress made in motion picture machines. The old one is an Edison, first machine in Cornwallis, Ore. The other modern model is a Powers machine

A New Way to Feature Your Features

Now—for the first time—you can effectively advertise present or coming attractions in the lobby of your theatre, day and night.

SLIDE-O-GRAF

the new sensation of movie advertising—tells your story to those outside the theatre in the same way that you've been building up interest inside.

Its handsome gold front adds to the appearance of your lobby.

Twenty to forty-eight beautifully colored slides are automatically shown on a 16 in. screen for a period of 10 seconds each, then repeat.

In the Astor, Broadway, Jefferson, State, Stadium and other New York and New Jersey theatres, the Slide-o-graf is demonstrating its wonderful effectiveness by creating an interest in the daily program that packs the house—thus quickly paying for itself.

Local storekeepers gladly pay to advertise in the machine.

PROTECTION:

Every theatre purchasing a Slide-o-graf secures exclusive rights in his immediate vicinity for one year.

New Addition For Toronto House

Ronald McClelland, proprietor of the Capitol theatre, North Toronto, Ontario, has purchased a 30-foot lot adjoining the theatre at a cost of $350 per foot for the purpose of erecting a large building as an addition to the theatre block—Gladdish.

Better Business Opens Theatre

It is reported in film circles that Universal will re-open their Strand theatre in Charlotte, N. C. the first week of September. The Strand has been closed for about eighteen months on account of the business depression that hit Charlotte theatres a severe lick at the very beginning—Stellings.

Grand Theatre Changes Hands

Purchase of the Grand theatre in Binghamton, N. Y., at 204 Vestal avenue by Hiram Goldsmith and Ned Kornblite from Frank Kunkel has been announced. No change in the management of the Grand will be made, the purchase having been made for an investment, Mr. Kornblite said. Jesse C. Hillman, proprietor of the theatre, holds a lease which controls the theatre for about two years—Taylor.

Theatre Destroyed by Fire to Re-open

Nixon's Victoria theatre, closed since fire virtually wrecked it in the early spring, will re-open next month. A new organ, carpets and lighting effects are being installed, and a new front is replacing the old plaster decorations which were smashed in the fire.—Gibson.

Hudson and Colonial, Albany, N. Y., Reopen

After being closed for several weeks, the Hudson and Colonial Theatres here have reopened with many alterations and improvements. George Roberts will continue to manage the two houses.—Grant.

PARAMOUNT'S 1922 PROMISE was performed!

Last May Paramount announced to exhibitors its "Famous 41."

And hundreds of exhibitors booked their Paramount Pictures on the advance announcement.

What a demonstration of the power of Faith!

And how has that faith been rewarded?

Starting with the very first of the now famous 41, Paramount's promise has been performed.

Think of "Blood and Sand," of "Manslaughter," "The Old Homestead," "To Have and To Hold," "Clarence." Space is too limited to remind you of them all, but a few are pictured here.

Paramount's Famous 41 have proved the lions of the season!

These pictures were booked on faith. That faith has been justified.

Faith in Paramount will continue to reap rewards. The exhibitor who shows Paramount Pictures is the one who is keeping faith with his patrons.

And keeping faith with your patrons pays.

E. W. HAMMONS PRESENTS

CRASH

Featuring

JIMMIE ADAMS

With Virginia Vance

CRASH, the first of Educational's series of twenty-four one-reel CAMEO COMEDIES, will be released November 12th.

Cameo Clean-Cut Comedies are fast—mighty fast! They are productions; not the type of so-called comedy exhibitors are accustomed to receive in one reel.

The casts are headed by JIMMIE

ADAMS, supported by Virginia Vance, a new-comer to the screen but a young lady of marked comedy ability.

Educational's Branches will be pleased to screen CRASH for you, and a little later PITTER PATTER and ONCE OVER also.

We advise your early inspection.

Everyone of these motion pictures cost, to produce, as much in time, thought and money as was formerly spent only on feature pictures. Artists who have brought joy and laughter to millions will entertain you—such characters as:

Lloyd Hamilton
Bobby Vernon
Neal Burns
Dorothy Devore

George Stewart
Vera Steadman
Lige Conley
Jimmie Adams

and many others. The pictures are built up from genuinely humorous situations which are at the same time possible situations—ones you have been in yourself. Maybe, too, you would enjoy scenic dramas like the WILDERNESS TALES, by Robert C. Bruce, or current news as portrayed in KINOGRAMS, or the fine screen presentation of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

They are all EDUCATIONAL PICTURES, and can be identified by our trade-mark on posters and lobby-cards in theatre entrances.

YOU'LL rave too when you see this corking attraction. Every player a star. When exhibitors use adjectives you can bet a production has the goods. Don't we know! We couldn't drag it from Broadway. At the Capitol $48,000 rolled into the till in one great week. The Cameo Theatre packed them in for fourteen additional weeks and Moss' Broadway across the street followed with a smashing attendance. Right now the Stanley in Philadelphia is counting record money for a week's run. It's your turn to cash in right now!

A Ray For Every Theatre Patron

Charles Ray's "A Tailor Made Man" has everything in it for any theatre audience.

A beautiful love story with the star in a new romantic role. Delicious and uproarious comedy. Many of the most thrilling action scenes ever photographed.

There is Ray as the humble worker—The bashful lover—The novice in high society in his first dress suit—As the budding business man.

A Quail Every Day

For thirty days will sicken any man. The same kind of picture every day for a month will sicken any theatre patronage.

That's why exhibitors always seek something new, different and distinctly novel.

And that's what exhibitors get when they book

"The Glorious Adventure"

The first all-color feature-length photoplay.

This picture has everything any audience can want. It has spectacular melodrama—thrilling scenes of the great London fire—pirate ships—a midnight prison marriage—beautiful Lady Diana Manners—gorgeous gowns—glittering gems.

"AFFINITIES"

from the popular story by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART presented by Ward Lascelle

The only true affinity in the motion picture business is the sincere attachment that ought to exist between your box-office and the public's pocketbook.

You can encourage this friendship, silver-rivet it, and cement it into a lasting one, by running "Affinities" on your first open playdates.

"Affinities" is a picture that will be chuckled over by those who have been affinities, hugely enjoyed by those who are affinities, and enthusiastically whooped up by those who would like to be affinities.

Some of the really important affinities in "Affinities" are worth your careful consideration:

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART—The Author, who has been a literary affinity of the 2,000,000 weekly readers of the Saturday Evening Post for the past fifteen years;

COLLEEN MOORE, The Star, whose screen affinities run into the millions, who have never gotten enough of her and her inimitable characterizations on the silver sheet; and JOHN BOWERS, The Other Star, whose screen affinities are legion—but of a different sex from Colleen's.

Shake these up in your house, spell out "A-F-F-I-N-I-T-I-E-S" in your lights, and tell the property-man to put a new coat of paint on the S. R. O. sign.

That's "Affinities," in a nut shell, a rib-tickling comedy with a thousand laughs!

Carter De Haven Comedies

JUST as Gibraltar towers above the blue waters of the sea—just as the Woolworth Building looms above the teeming streets of New York—just as a diamond outshines a lump of clay—so Carter De Haven Comedies excel the tawdry, knock-about reels that clutter up the screen.

If you want DOWNRIGHT CLASS, with the suave smartness of the country club and the most delicious hoakum that ever swept an audience into hysterics, NAIL DE HAVEN!

A brilliant young showman himself, with his finger ever on the pulse of the box-office. De Haven has jammed his two-reel comedies with enough laughs to stand the whole bally nation on its head!

First run theatres everywhere are playing De Haven Comedies. "Roxie" Rothafel, greatest of exhibitor-showmen, has BOOKED THEM SOLID FOR HIS GREAT CAPITOL THEATRE, NEW YORK.

Book and boost them yourself but BOOK ESPECIALLY HIS L A T E S T AND GREATEST TWO-REEL SMASH.

AT the flood tide of glorious womanhood, with her abundant talents in full flower, Ethel Clayton delivers the most spectacular highlight of her brilliant career—

Book this sumptuous romantic drama, and BOOK IT NOW. Romance is getting the money because the whole teeming universe craves romance and is willing to pay to see it on the screen.

Here, in a vehicle with gorgeous scenes, bewilderingly lavish costumes, exquisite beautiful love interest and an incredibly fascinating star, F. B. O. offers a de luxe box office winner with which other romantic productions simply don't compare.

MI

THE story, adapted from the famous novel, "The Three Cornered Kingdom," by Du Vernet Rabell, and directed by Wesley Ruggles, is a peach and a pippin combined, to wit:

A prince—a girl—a gem—a whirl—a throne—a kiss—a dance—Oh bliss—a train—a dash—a plunge—then CRASH—sit tight—some fright—good night!

And a final rousing climax with Ethel Clayton in the arms of a stalwart Prince Charming, impersonated with true regal charm by Warner Baxter.

Imagine what a story to advertise!—Imagine what a story to exploit with F.B.O.'s special brand of exploitation and super-showmanship! A score of original ideas in the big press sheet—Posters rich in dignity and power—Everything the showman needs to whip "If I Were Queen" across to a bountiful clean-up.

Book it IMMEDIATELY. Write, phone or RADIO!

"Till We Meet Again"

A girl is loved by a rich young aristocrat, yet her heart is touched by the selfless devotion of a crook who had been her only friend in an hour of greatest need.

The stress of her indecision is experienced by the audience whose sympathies are equally divided.

Suspense reaches the breaking point when the two men meet and the drama ends with one of the most gripping climaxes ever screened.

Not one photoplay in a hundred carries the thought, power, beauty and sincerity of "Till We Meet Again," already declared by exhibitors a marvellous audience picture.

*Why—

WHEN the great manufacturer, Mr. Eastman, of Rochester, wanted a series of comedies for his matchless new theatre, he selected the Plum Centers! He booked them SOLID because he saw in them the sort of entertainment that appeals to the most exacting audiences. Because they have a profound human appeal as well as that delicious slap-stick that starts a laugh way down in the pit of the stomach and brings it crashing out of the mouth in a crescendo of joy and jubilation! Because he saw in Dan Mason, as the inimitable and incredibly funny "POP TUTTLE," a character whose wholesome good nature would get under the skin of a hippopotamus—and an old one at that! Because he KNOWS THE PLUM CENTERS ARE THE ABSOLUTE LAST WORD IN HIGH CLASS COMEDY ENTERTAINMENT. That's why he featured

AS "SURE-FIRE" a group of productions as has ever been offered in the independent market. Six pictures, six punches—a money-grabbing knock-out.

These pictures have everything to recommend them as box-office smashes—high-class productions and casts, expert direction, strong stories by popular authors, big publicity and exploitation titles.

"FINGER PRINTS", the first of the six, is now ready. Back of its striking title is a picture brimful of action and suspense, heart interest and dramatic power. Joseph Levering directed its splendid cast, and Joseph W. Farnham edited it.

"THE SEVENTH NOON", from the famous novel by Frederic Orin Bartlett, is in preparation.

Titles and other details will be announced shortly of the rest of the series—

NATIONAL ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs Is Pigs," and one of America's foremost writers, has written a series of six story advertisements for The Saturday Evening Post on "East Is West." Mr. Butler was invited to view the picture, and after seeing it, he was so enthused over its bigness and its fine entertainment value that he agreed to write a message to the American public on its merits. Think of the tremendous asset in having Mr. Butler write these messages under his own signature. No more capable writer could be engaged to undertake such a campaign. His high standing as a man of letters, besides his inimitable personal touch will make these advertisements convincing. This and other advertising direct to the public in fan magazines with a national circulation is creating an interest in the picture that paves the way for big audiences at your theatre.

DE LUXE POSTERS WITH PULLING POWER

To let you know what we think of "East Is West" we have put out the largest number and the most expensive posters ever issued on any First National picture. Where the ordinary poster carries four colors these posters are printed in six or more colors. They are on heavier and finer grade of paper which enhances their beauty and artistry. Special, high grade artists were engaged to design them. They have both artistry and pulling power. There is a 24 sheet, a 6 sheet, 5 styles of 3 sheets, and 2 styles of 1 sheet. Besides there is a mounted one sheet, an oil painting, beautifully lithographed in eight colors. The Saturday Evening Post advertisements written by Ellis Parker Butler have been enlarged and reproduced on half sheets, each of the six ads to a half sheet. This makes a most unusual lobby display and something that is sure to attract attention. Every one who has seen the ads in the Post, which has 10,000,000 readers, will stop to look at your lobby.

A SPECIAL EIGHT PAGE PRESS SHEET

"East Is West" is so unusual a picture and there are so many exploitation angles that a special eight page press sheet was required to give you all the news. You will find an exceptional line of advertising ready for use in your newspapers. They include besides reading matter, ad copy that will arouse tremendous interest, cuts, both line and half tone, in various sizes, for all requirements. You also will find an exceptional line of stories ready to clip for newspaper use—stories the editor will be glad to get. There are readers, reviews and prereviews of all lengths to suit every occasion. The accessories also are unusual. There are three styles of glass slides, a set of press stills for the photoplay page, a set of ad stills for your own advertising, a set of star stills for lobby card use, a special 14x36 rotogravure window card, a two color window card, regular size, a set of eight 11x14 and two 22x28 de luxe lobby display photos and a set of magnificent framed lobby paintings.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR EXPLOITATION

We have 30 experienced, live wire, go-get-em exploitation men at your command. You'll find them located in every key city ready at your call. Here is a picture that will make the money and add to your prestige, so it is worth while going to it hard. A little money expended to put it over means dollars at your box office. This is so colorful a romance that it lends itself admirably to special prologues. If you have room on your stage for a Chinese love boat, this is one of the most effective presentations. You can people it with beautiful girls arrayed in all the gorgeous colors of the Chinese costumes. A large flexible Chinese fan can easily be contrived. This with dancing girls dressed in Chinese costumes, with multi-color lights behind the fan give a beautiful and striking effect. Both these ideas are illustrated in the press sheet. The press sheet also gives a dozen or more suggestions for your lobby and special exploitation stunts that cost little money and add to your attraction.

Critics Call It Barthelmess' Best!

Read what the New York papers say of picture now playing to big success at the New York Strand:

"In 'The Bond Boy' Richard Barthelmess again enriches the screen. One indelible impression that stands out is the scene showing young Joe Newbolt wrongly condemned to death for murder, watching the shadow of the rope on the gallows swinging through the moonlight on his cell wall like the pendulum of destiny. It is a superb natural effect and one which alone could justify any picture for existing. Henry King, the director, could rest on his laurels after controlling this scene."—New York Herald.

"All the advantages of the screen are undeniably attained in 'The Bond Boy.' The picture has everything in its favor—Richard Barthelmess, discriminate direction, emotional appeal and an entire lack of bromidic banality."—New York American.

"Henry King, as director, has made many genuine motion pictures, and Richard Barthelmess, as the poor country boy who is bound out to an old skinflint and later accused of his murder, is true to his part."—New York Times.

"Richard Barthelmess scores again. 'The Bond Boy' is without question one of the finest motion pictures produced in many moons. It is the finest kind of drama. There are touches of deep pathos, expertly acted scenes that tug at the heartstrings and just enough of a let up in bits of comedy to relieve the tenseness of the excellent story. A decided credit to all concerned in its making. There have been very few pictures made that can compare with it, and this should go over to one of the biggest hits in the history of the screen. No one who appreciates real drama, a story that is of real life and acting that is real can afford to miss seeing this feature film. It cannot be recommended too highly. Richard Barthelmess has never done finer acting."—New York Morning Telegraph.

"Richard Barthelmess is a young actor from whom much is always expected on the screen. Yet the most ardent among his admirers must have been surprised yesterday by the excellence of his interpretation of the role of the bondboy. If it were merely written that this is the finest work Richard Barthelmess has ever done the statement would be the truth, but far from the whole truth. The actor revealed unguessed depths of sincerity and understanding and an ability to portray emotion that was astounding."—New York Evening Journal.

"That excellent alliance, Richard Barthelmess, the star, and Henry King, the director, has outdone itself with the production of 'The Bond Boy.' It cannot be told as effectively as Director King has pictured it, or as Barthelmess acted it. These two know how to express a thought or an idea graphically and they have the power to make a motion picture a vivid, real and actually fascinating thing."—New York Evening Telegram.

"Director Henry King has kept one more of his Southern stories on a very high level and Barthelmess again gives a performance that entitles him to a place among the screen stars who hold the altitude record for lofty acting."—New York Sun.

"'The Bond Boy' is another 'Tol'able David.' The big scene comes when Joe makes his escape from prison and is pursued by villagers and bloodhounds. If you don't grip your seat and pray for the success of that unhappy youngster you are a pretty hardened sort of film fan."—New York Evening Globe.

"Richard Barthelmess is stepping gradually upward with each succeeding picture. We think Barthelmess in 'The Bond Boy' has reached heights that even he did not dream of."—New York Evening World.

Directed by Henry King

Adapted by Charles E. Whittaker from the story by George W. Ogden; Photographed by Roy Overbaugh; Edited by Duncan Mansfield; Art Director, Charles O. Seessel.

It is put down here for the constructive good it may do.

This gentleman wants to take a hand—in a practical, modest way—in motion picture production. He has been making quite an effort to do so. Just now he has received an offer—from the field of work in which he has been engaged for some time—of a two years' contract at a thousand dollars a week. He waves aside the offer and wants to get into picture work at any nominal salary.

The reader, perhaps, will put the man down as agreeably insane.

Or he may question our gullibility as to the man's earning power.

So we hasten to assert that he is an artist of recognized genius and wide reputation. And, in the season of his work, he earns fifteen hundred dollars a week.

We have no doubt that his determination will get him into production; and we are as confident that he will express his ability successfully in pictures as does every artist who feels the picture urge and puts other considerations aside.

* * *

The incident was illuminating to us.

* * *

For a matter of ten years our daily contact has been with the following majority:

Salaried men who confidently expected of this field a wage several times greater than they were earning elsewhere.

Directors who talked and thought in salary figures.

Stars and would-be stars who confidently expected money, money, money—or at least handsome employment and fame where other fields of expression offered nothing.

Men—often highly successful in other industries—who wanted to produce pictures simply because, in this field they expected dollars to flow as pennies elsewhere are fought for.

Authors—novelists, short story writers, playwrights who came with a sneer for the movie but with a demand for a return for their wares away ahead of anything the publisher or the stage can pay.

And so on—and so on.

An unending procession spurred on by the dollar urge.

* * *

It is human to want to make money; and in most instances it is laudable.

The dollar lure has brought a lot of bright minds into this industry—minds that have sent it whirling along.

But there is this to be said of any industry: the leaders in it and the capable workers generally are, without fail, men who work for the love of the game. Money follows their effort; it doesn't lead it. That's the truest thing we know of.

And, more to the point, there is this to be said of the peculiar industry we are engaged in, which is an art—industry that the money lure does not make good product.

And good product must be had:—or we perish.

Put the dollar sign on a studio and only one kind of pictures will come forth—imitations. They may be costly, they may be perfect imitations, but they will be imitations nevertheless of the work of some fellow who originated the successful pattern because he wanted to express himself in pictures.

* * *

The public is mighty hungry today for the work of the artist who puts the joy of expression above salary—mighty hungry.

Wm. A. Johnston

LET us pay tribute to Richard Barthelmess. This young actor has just about distanced the field through his expressive pantomime. That he has been fortunate in having stories which were rich in drama and characterization must not becloud the issue that he has made these same stories unusually appealing through his capital interpretations. Mr. Barthelmess is not a Griffith discovery, although it took D. W. to bring out his latent talent in "Broken Blossoms." Under Henry King's direction his art has been developed into a perfect representation of what he portrays.

Once again he duplicates his superb expression so noticeable in "Tol'able David," in his newest study, "The Bond Boy." The mute, dumb suffering of the youth bound over to a cruel farmer—his sensitive face denoting black despair as he awaits his execution, the manner in which he suggests nervous apprehension when the noose swings back and forth in the moonlight suggesting a pendulum of fate—thus, Barthelmess makes the character a living, throbbing thing. There is something of the "hurt dog" look in the actor's countenance. He extracts the greatest sympathy and leaves a memorable impression. And he accomplishes his work with an economy of effort.

EXHIBITORS faced by the censorship problem may well study the methods being used in the campaign now under way in Massachusetts, where a "Committee of Massachusetts Citizens Against Censorship" has been formed. This body is described in greater detail elsewhere in this issue. A particularly meritorious feature of the campaign is the fact that it extends into all walks of life, and is aimed to reach every political, religious and social group. Samples of the literature being distributed, which reached the office of MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week, are attractive in appearance and carry a powerful message against censorship and autocracy of every sort. Ridicule, the most powerful weapon in campaigns of this sort, is also used to good advantage.

ALL of those who are sticklers for realities need not feel disappointed over "The Old Homestead." The older generation has tucked Denman Thompson's memorable play away in its heart as a tribute to sentiment. Now that it has found its way to the screen, we must give credit to its sponsors for retaining its vital atmosphere and background—its plot and characterization. Some directors would have attempted a modernization of the play, replacing the old-fashioned properties with up-to-date conveniences. But James Cruze has kept faith with the original.

Do you see flivvers, electrical lights, modern costumes? You do not. Instead, the period of the late eighties and early nineties is reproduced in every detail. The limitations of the stage give way to the broad scope of the camera. The pastoral shots, the snug homestead, the scenes of New York in the day of horse cars—the magnificent wind storm—these are but samples of life of decades ago. The picture isn't saturated with sentiment. True, it has its place. But Cruze has had much ground to cover and he has worked with speed. Therefore the vital parts of the play are in their accustomed places and they've all been enriched by a superb interpretation.

Those spectators who might be skeptical that Uncle Josh, Aunt 'Tildy, Reuben, Ann, Happy Jack, Lem, Eph Holbrook, Ike and the other characters would not be reproduced with a genuine likeness need have no fear on that score. Theodore Roberts actually does the best, most varied and human work of his screen career. He is Uncle Josh to the life—patient, religious, kindly, generous—a soul kindled with humor. Perhaps the camera has not been kind to the false beards worn by Roberts and Fawcett. But on the other hand to carry out a real similitude would have meant weeks or months of preparation when their services were, in all likelihood, demanded in other roles featuring smooth shaven countenances. Fritz Ridgway, as the orphan Ann, gives a performance marked by the utmost feeling and understanding. The awakening of young love and the bitter disillusionment are expressed in unforgettable scenes. T. Roy Barnes as Happy Jack is a tramp right off the broad highway—an easy-going, good-natured individual. These players never step out of character. All of them are correctly attired.

Yes, "The Old Homestead" lives again with all its sentiment, its kindly humor, its rustic romance and its homespun humanities. Truly, a distinctive achievement.

JAMES K. YOUNG, the director of Guy Bates Post's first two pictures, "The Masquerader" and "Omar, the Tent-Maker," is in New York this week making arrangements for a series of productions which he is to make on his return to the coast. It is understood that his mother will accompany him to the coast to make her home with him.

MOTION picture production is coming to the front in South America, and Argentina is beginning to lead the way, says Trade Commissioner Brady of the Department of Commerce, who has just returned to Washington. According to a New York World dispatch, the Commissioner goes on record in stating that there are a dozen established picture producers in Buenos Ayres, and there is considerable enthusiasm toward building up a local industry.

During the last year play production has been on a more business-like basis than what characterized it in the preceding years. It has passed beyond the "home talent" stage. Several companies are making efforts to train actors. Of late real Argentina film stars are being featured. Current events films are produced regularly by four or five companies who have exhibiting connections with picture theatres all over the republic.

This all indicates that Pictures and Progress go hand in hand. Film—positive and negative—is being carried to every port of the globe. And the universal language which it speaks may act as the medium which will eventually cement us into a real League of Nations.

WELL! Well!! Well!!! Here's "Manslaughter," the Cecil B. DeMille production, carrying on for a fourth week in the Reisenfeld theatres, the Rivoli and the Rialto, New York. This equals the record of continuous showing previously held jointly by "The Miracle Man," "Deception," and "Blood and Sand."

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, who has been in Chicago since his return from Europe, is in New York this week.

JAMES CRUZE has certainly peeked into Yesterday's Attic and carried away some impressions of a bygone day for "The Old Homestead." Remember the time when pap rode the high wheel? 'Member the time when your aunt or mother wore her hair in bangs and laced herself tightly? 'Member the lamp in the sittin' room which swung down from the ceiling? 'Member the old keystone shaped gas lamp which lighted the village street? 'Member when the older boys wore short cutaway coats with the two buttons decorating the back? 'Member when you lolled back in comfort in a deep-sea hack?

These properties and decorations of an ancient vintage spread a sentimental flavor over the screen version of Denman Thompson's celebrated play. The older boys and girls, we cal'late, will respond to these scenes. The years will fly away. Youth and romance will be theirs for an hour. Their children will likely remark: "Gee, the old folks had a pretty good time after all."

IT was a gala occasion last Saturday night when more than a thousand spectators witnessed the pageant-like presentation of "A Midsummer Nights Dream" in the Hollywood Bowl. The pageant was for the benefit of the Actors' Fund and presented under the supervision of the Directors' Association. The open air stage, with one hundred and twenty foot proscenium, enabled the use of hills in the background, on which a miniature Athens was built, to serve as scenery. An orchestra of fifty rendered a musical accompaniment, while the actors participating, numbered nearly a thousand. These players included practically every star and lead of pictures. Baby Paggy and Jackie Coogan were the only children featured in the show. Those directly responsible for the achievement were Frederic Sullivan, the producer, William Parke, the stage manager, and Thomas Brierly, the technical director. Art is not so decadent in Hollywood as the moral uplifters and the screaming headlines of the yellow journals would have us believe.

They looked at it, marked it as Exhibit A, tucked it away for safe keeping and finally returned to it for their final selection. The title is "Who Are My Parents?" The name of the lucky winner has not been announced.

Skouras and Paramount in Merger

Grand Central and Missouri Houses, St. Louis, to Consolidate Under Plan

NEGOTIATIONS have been practically completed between Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the Skouras Brothers of St. Louis for the consolidation of the New Grand Central and Missouri theatres in that city. Under the new arrangement the Missouri theatre will come under the Skouras banner. The New Grand Central has been heretofore a Skouras house. The merger will make the two theatres permanent homes for the Paramount product, though, according to announcements made from the Famous Players-Lasky headquarters in New York and sources in St. Louis, pictures other than those of the Paramount brand will also be shown.

To carry out the provisions of the merger a new company will be formed, to be known as the Missouri-Grand Central Corporation, the stock of which will be equally divided between Skouras Bros. and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The house management of the two theatres will be exclusively in the hands of Skouras Bros. In the general management of the combined properties, Herschel Stuart will be the representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The new company will have six directors, three representing Skouras Bros. and three representing the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Those who will serve for the first year are S. R. Kent, Spyros Skouras, Charles Skouras, Harold B. Franklin, Arthur Stickney and Ralph C. LiBeau.

According to word from St. Louis concerning the business arrangements, from the gross receipts would be taken $86,000 to be paid the Famous Players-Lasky for the use of the Missouri and $68,000 for Skouras Brothers for rent on the New Grand Central. After other expenses had been paid, the profits of the two houses would be split fifty-fifty.

Arrangements have also been made for the showing of Paramount Pictures in other of the Skouras theatres. In the operation of these theatres, however, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will not be interested.

The Missouri theatre is one of the finest picture houses in the country and seats 4,100 people. The Grand Central seats 1,800. Both are splendidly located along the principal thoroughfare of St. Louis.

Spyros Skouras and his brothers, Charlie and George, have had a wonderful career, rising to their present position of prominence in St. Louis' theatrical affairs from lowly beginnings.

Today Skouras Brothers Enterprises own the New Grand Central, Lyric, West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome. Spyros also heads the St. Louis Amusement Company, which operates Arsenal, Shaw, Pageant, Pershing, Shenandoah, Juniata, Novelty, New Lindell, Grand-Florissant, Lowell, Arco, Manchester, Lafayette and Gravois, Russell Airdome, Grand-Florissant Airdome, Crystal Airdome, Shenandoah Airdome. He is also interested in the Capitol theatre, owned by the Buena Amusement & Investment Company, and holds the lease on the Empress theatre, Olive street, near Grand boulevard.

The recent announcement from New York that William Goldman, managing director of the Missouri, had been promoted to assistant general manager of the theatre department of Famous Players-Lasky has been regarded as a step in the consummation of the deal with the Skouras Brothers.

The Famous Players Missouri Corporation in March, 1920, took over the Goldman, Koplar, Hamburg and Greater Amusement Company houses, eighteen in all, and Goldman was made managing director. The company opened the Delmonte in September, 1920; the Missouri in November, 1920, and the Criterion, Broadway near Olive, that winter. Last year, however, it changed its policy and sold the neighborhood houses, fourteen, to the City Wide Amusement Company, since consolidated with the St. Louis Amusement Company. In June, 2,700 shares in the Missouri corporation held by St. Louisians were purchased by Famous Players-Lasky for $100 a share.

Motion Pictures Are Trade Stimulator

Motion pictures as a trade stimulator with foreign countries are now being used extensively with the aid of the United States Government. Two government bureaus, the Bureau of Mines and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, have joined forces and are cooperating with American manufacturers in this respect.

The film is being made to act as a silent salesman for our product, according to an article by Morton F. Leopold, engineer in charge of motion pictures for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in the magazine, "American Industries."

Pennsylvania Censor Board Said Unaccommodating

WASHINGTON, D. C., film executives are contrasting the eminently fair and efficient attitude of the Maryland and Virginia censor boards with the unaccommodating attitude of the one-man Pennsylvania censorship. Pennsylvania has much red tape about the filing of news-reels accompanied by the certified check for the full amount of the censorship fee, and the amount of return delivery charges.

A Washington news-reel producer is up against a case of this kind. Two releases in the hands of the Harrisburg board have caused serious delay, holding up play date contracts with exhibitors for over a week at the date of writing, Oct. 5. This producer is his own distributor, and his product circulates from New Jersey to Texas. He says this sort of delay applies to all news-reels shown in Pennsylvania.

When the certified check payable to the censor board instead of the State Treasurer was delayed in the mails, the censor would not pass nor reject the film, but referred to petty technicalities of the law creating his office, and sent back the film which was later returned to him at Harrisburg. A money order, another certified check, and currency were successively rejected and returned. So far as the Washington man knows his product has never been looked at, while legal tender has been refused, the censor quibbling meanwhile over the certified check required by their censor office rules.

"Seeing It Through" Contest Winners Announced

The "Seeing It Through" contest inaugurated by MOTION PICTURE NEWS during the recent depression of the industry, in which cash prizes of $100 (first), $50 (second) and ten third prizes of $5.00 each were offered to exhibitors for the best articles on how to weather the storm, has been decided and the following have been awarded prizes:

First Prize, $100.00—E. J. Herslip, Lyric theatre, Brownwood, Texas.

Second Prize—Ralph Lieber, Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

Third Prizes—

Fred C. Hinds, Cresco theatre, Cresco, Ind.
Peter Bylsma, Victoria theatre, Napoleon, La.

E. L. Byers, Lyric theatre, Terrell, Texas.
A. H. Dearing and Sons, American theatre, Carthage, Ill.

Arthur E. Weld, Strand theatre, Waterloo, Iowa.

Reese B. Harrington, Opera House, Harrington, Del.

Bruce Fowler, Elmwood theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.

Phil Gerslof, Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

George C. Schade, Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio.

Barnet Zuckerman, Nostrand theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS expresses its thanks for the articles, and extends congratulations to the winners.

The series was of great interest to the trade and an inspiration to many exhibitors who found running a theatre at a profit a difficult task.

$250,000 Fire in S. F. Exchange Row

ONE person was killed and twenty were injured by fire and explosions in Film Exchange row in San Francisco the night of October 4. Many thousands of dollars of films were destroyed and many lives imperilled by flying debris which scattered over the streets when the shock from the explosions occurred. It is estimated the total loss may reach $250,000.

The cause of the conflagration is believed to be the explosion of chemicals in the building of the Independent Film Corporation, according to the police, although A. M. Bowles of the Tivoli Theatre said he saw the fire burst from a soft drink place.

The fire and explosions destroyed or damaged the Independent Film Exchange, The St. John Cooperative Film Exchange, The Alta Studio, slide manufacturers; American Photo Player Company, dealers in musical instruments; Sherman Clay & Co., organ department; Western Theatrical Supply Company, Clunie Film Exchange, J. M. Daniels Slide Company and the Western Poster Company.

Laemmle Talks On European Conditions

By CHESTER J. SMITH

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, just back from a trip to Europe where he went to investigate conditions in general, has no fear of an immediate menace to the industry in the United States from any European source. At the same time he is not willing to admit the impossibility of such a menace some time in the distant future. In England he found the greatest possibility of producing films that will go in this country.

At present in Europe they are doing everything possible to imitate American pictures, according to Mr. Laemmle. The imitation is still a long way from the original. The ultimate success, according to Mr. Laemmle, lies in the ability of the actor and actress to so perfect the imitation of the American actor and actress on the screen as to make it undiscernable to the naked eye of the American audience. That's how remote the menace is from that quarter.

"The English are trying in every way to mimic us, and are having more success at it than any country in Europe," said Mr. Laemmle. "It is customary over there for the young men to wear moustaches or small beard. Not only is the English actor appearing clean shaven, but he is affecting the American style of clothing and carriage. He is not doing the latter with marked success, but he is trying. They just naturally do not carry themselves or wear their clothes as the American does.

"I do not think an English cast will be able to make pictures, for some time that will successfully compete in this country against American made pictures.

"If the time comes when any of these foreign countries can produce a modern story as it is produced in America, then it will be time to worry. In fact, at that time it will be a case of run for cover, for we cannot begin to produce pictures here to compete with costs of production there.

"As an indication of their production costs as compared to ours, stars in Europe get salaries of about one-tenth of what we pay our stars. At one plant in Europe, I do not care to say in what country, the president told me they were paying studio laborers thirty cents a day and that the men were glad to get it. For the same labor in this country we pay from six to eight dollars a day.

"In Germany they can make a production for $20,000 that we could not duplicate here for $100,000. We could not produce for the same costs there, of course, because of the salaries we pay our stars and the costs of getting them there and maintaining them while there. That would more than offset other reduced expenses."

According to Mr. Laemmle, Germany is going along at a great rate of speed in the matter of production and is doing its best to produce pictures that will appeal to the American market. Realizing that its modern pictures are not salable here, the German producer is turning his attention to costume plays in the hope that he might popularize them with the American people.

"I tried for three weeks in both Berlin and

Municipal Amusement Tax at Moose Jaw Quashed

THE amusement tax by-law in force in the City of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, has been declared invalid and was quashed in a highly important decision handed down by Justice Ousley in the court at Moose Jaw on Oct. 3 in an application by Walter Clarke, a local exhibitor, to have the civic legislation declared ultra vires. In giving his decision, his Honor gave the municipality the right to appeal.

The case arose out of the action of the City of Moose Jaw in providing a scheme for a tax on tickets of admission to theatres, this tax practically duplicating the amusement tax which is collected by the Province of Saskatchewan. Justice Ousley, in his decision, declared that the civic tax was invalid because the municipality sought thereby to secure revenue by means of indirect taxation upon the people. In his opinion, the statute under which the city claimed to pass the by-law is also ultra vires. The Province did not have power to delegate to the city the right to impose an amusement tax through theatres. The tax should only be a Provincial tax.

The decision is highly important inasmuch as it affects the other cities in the province which had decided to collect an amusement tax or were contemplating doing so. The ruling stands as a complete victory for the exhibitors in the Province of Saskatchewan. There is no intimation that the City of Moose Jaw will appeal the case.

Vienna to make a picture," said Mr. Laemmle, "but found it impossible to get either a studio or a cast. Every studio is working to capacity and there are no actors or actresses available at the present time.

"While over there I heard of probably fifteen big spectacular costume productions which the Germans have made in the hope of disposing of in America, but I doubt if more than two or three of them at the outside will ever be seen here."

Excessive tax conditions in Europe were reiterated by Mr. Laemmle, who declared that the tax was by no means popular with either exhibitors or the theatre going public.

"The French tax is almost prohibitive for for us to compete with any other country," continued Mr. Laemmle. "The French, of course, favor their own pictures, but their export business is not big enough for them to produce even enough to supply their own demand. Under these conditions there is no money in the production end of the game there. They like our pictures in France, as they do in every country in Europe, but we must think twice, of course, before sending our pictures over there, because of the excessive tax. The French make good pictures for their own people, but not until they learn to please Americans will they have achieved much in the industry.

"Because of the scarcity of pictures in France there has been a falling off in business. Good American pictures that are being shown go from the first run houses down to the little fellows and then are brought back again to the first runs.

"European producers, I believe, do not feel that they are being discriminated against by the United States. I think they have come to a realization of the fact that while their stories please their own people they are not suitable for the American moving picture house patron. They know we have bought their pictures whenever we thought they had a good market value here, and consequently they know we are not refusing to buy from them because we fear their competition. If they had that thought they would not now be trying so hard to please us in their productions.

"Everywhere I went the American picture was well patronized. Of course Universal was the earliest company organized there, and our pictures are naturally popular because the people know our product. But both Paramount and Fox are doing a nice business in England as well as on the Continent.

"'Foolish Wives' made one of the big hits of the London season. It is now playing at the Oxford theatre, one of the largest and the highest class of the legitimate houses. We played to a $2 top and the prices ranged from that down to 50 cents to the gallery seats. We are playing to capacity business.

"Just how nearly impossible it is to produce pictures in America for distribution in Germany may be judged when I tell you that the admission price for the first run German houses is 100 marks. That in American money is equivalent to about six cents. If we could pay for our productions in marks we might put the product on a money making basis in Germany, but under such conditions as these it is practically an impossibility.

"These first run houses are no larger than ours in the way of seating capacity. The average capacity, I should say, was about 1,200. Why, in some of the smaller houses the admission price is fifteen marks, or about one cent in American money.

"The trouble with the exhibitors on the other side is that they are not sufficiently progressive. I should say that the average theatre in Europe is about ten years behind the times as compared with theatres in the United States. They don't use our exploitation methods over there. In fact, they do very little in the way of exploitation. What usually is done is to run a little notice in the newspapers to the effect that such and such a picture is coming to such and such a house next week, and let it go at that. England is quite an exception in this respect.

"Italy, once among the producing centers of the world, is now very quiet in the way of production. Ten or twelve years ago it was right up with the leaders, and now it gets about 60 per cent of its pictures from the United States. It also imports from France and Germany."

Next year Mr. Laemmle proposes to produce a modern picture, or several of them, in England with an American and English company. Until that time Mr. Laemmle, like others of the leaders in picture production in this country, is not going to lose any sleep over foreign competition.

A State-Righter's Principles of Success

Sidney Lust Offers Constructive Suggestions for Independent Exchangemen

THE state-rights field has been a fertile topic for film men to indulge in when beset by a trade-press representative, bent upon an interview. Not even the much celebrated "infancy of the motion picture industry" has been half as prolific as the well-known state-rights market. The state-righter and his domain have been digested, analyzed, and diagnosed into utter barrenness, until there is about as much chance of finding something novel in a discussion of the state-rights field as there is of locating a bona fide kick in a Volsteadian cocktail.

However, Sidney Lust of Washington has knocked that tradition into a semblance of last year's panama. Sidney has actually tackled the state-rights problem and threshed some new ideas, not heretofore seen in print, out of that much battered subject. This rather unusual feat took place during a recent interview with a representative of the News. Of course, Sidney, being just ordinarily human, could not forego a word or two on the dominating evil of the state-rights field; but aside from that single weakness he offered some constructive bits of wisdom on the successful operation of a state-rights exchange.

First, be it known that Mr. Lust is a film veteran both as to time and diversity of activities. Recognized in his own particular territory as a progressive theatre owner, he has also achieved the reputation of being a shrewd state-rights buyer. The carnage among the state-righters has been unusually heavy during the past year, but Sidney still survives the fray without even a scratch. With these credentials of experience and accomplishments properly registered, Mr. Lust proceeds to grapple with the state-rights problem about as follows:

To begin with the dominating evil: The "sharpshooting" producer, who oversells his product to the state-rights buyer after the aforementioned product has been rejected by the national distributor; the selfsame producer, who is long on promises of cooperation but short, in fact entirely absent, on action. There you have the evil genius of the state-rights field, says Mr. Lust.

But he doesn't oblige the "sharpshooting" producer to bear all the responsibility for past failures among the state-rights fraternity. He says the buyers themselves are largely to blame by their lack of plain, common horse sense. Their failure to insist on a contract with the producer that shall entail his sharing present and future advertising, and their assent to a purchase price beyond that guaranteed by the market from which they must in turn derive their profit—these considerations, too, explain why so many state-righters have gone under.

Briefly, here's Mr. Lust's state-rights code:

(1) Know the first-runs in the territory available for independent product; know, too, those houses not tied up with regularly contracted service.

(2) Key city hookings should realize two-thirds of their gross to finance the picture expense; the small bookings should provide for the exchange overhead and show a margin of profit.

(3) The exchange man should be governed by the foregoing as to the purchase price he shall pay for product.

Julian Replaces Stroheim on "Merry-Go-Round"

A WIRE from the coast this week stated that Rupert Julian had been assigned by Universal to complete "Merry-Go-Round," the Viennese story which Von Stroheim had under production, that company having severed relations with Stroheim.

Irving Thalberg, production manager at Universal City, declined to make any statement other than that "Merry-Go-Round," which is about one-third completed to date, has cost less than the same proportionate part of "Foolish Wives."

Julian had assembled a cast and was about to begin work on "Flesh," from an original story by himself. This has been postponed.

No information on either of these moves has been received at the home office of Universal in New York.

(4) In the contract guard against the omission of the words "exclusive rights."

(5) Watch the agreement to see to it that the contract covers more than merely "the right including one print."

(6) A state-rights buyer is entitled to five-year franchise. Three years is ordinarily not enough to enable an exchange man to get his money out of a territory before the territorial rights are up.

That is the Lust state-rights code, succinctly stated. Lest much of its force be lost in the brevity, Mr. Lust's remarks in full are quoted as follows:

"To my mind the great drawback in our business is the sharpshooting methods employed by many film producers, who make film or series of film product, at the present time. Before their product is offered to the independent exchange it is peddled to a releasing company. If they can't sew up the releasing corporation they then concentrate on the independent states-right man. What is the result? They come into the territory and find out what fellow or fellows have the sucker money. Finding him, they pat him on the back, tell him how good an exchange man he is, selling the idea to him that he can make thousands of dollars with the film dangled before him. Of course they feed him the line about the expensive publicity and exploitation they are backing the picture with. Over-selling him, they get a good, fat deposit, and when they have shipped his film, C. O. D., Mr. States Right Man lifts it, anticipating a wonderful price from the exhibitor. In the meantime there are no big ads in the trade papers or no exploitation of any account. Consequently the film man can realize no big price. Next in order, after a couple more bad 'buys' have cleaned him, he goes out of business.

"The exchange man must know thoroughly conditions in the territory. Knowledge of first runs available for the independent product must be his stock in trade. Likewise he must know any other theatres that are not tied up with Paramount service, First National service, etc. He must have this survey in mind so that he can at least figure on getting a fairly good run out of the key cities, then being able to book them into the towns. It is axiomatic that the key cities be played first in the territory. Key bookings should realize at least two-thirds their gross, just to finance the picture expense; while the small bookings should take care of exchange overhead and show a margin of profit, as otherwise the independent not make any money. According to this, the exchange man must take into calculation what he can expect from key city bookings to govern himself accordingly on his purchase price.

"The producer must realize in selling to an exchange man that if he wants him to stay in business he must give him a square deal. If the independent exchange man goes out of business, to whom is the producer, that independent producer, going to sell his product?

"Had I bought film in the past year, some of the independent exchanges I would be out of business. But I know conditions. I watch myself and try to be very careful in what I buy and what I pay. Although some of the producers sent their representatives down to see me and I went to see them while in New York, we could not get together, because the prices they were asking were absolutely prohibitive. The result was that I did not buy. While the sales talk they give some of the other exchange men was sufficient to sell them, results in our territory speak for themselves. During the past summer quite a number have gone out of business.

"I find in making contracts with some of the producers that the words 'exclusive rights' are omitted a great many times. Surely the old-time exchange man will notice this very quickly. Why this is left out of some contracts I don't know.

"I also notice in some contracts that when the producer sells an exchange a certain number of prints, he sells them the rights including one print, and he doesn't say anything in his contract about additional prints. The result is if an Exchange Man wants additional prints he can only pay for the print but pays rights besides.

"Some producers don't give a man a five-year franchise. They insist upon three years. Three years, in my estimation, is not enough. As many times it will take an exchange man to buy film in the summer time, at least six months or a year to get the films started properly, and before the film plays the territory the rights are up. We surely are entitled to a five-year franchise.

"Another thing: After an exchange has bought some film a year or two, they are unable to get advertising matter. It is exhausted. The producer won't re-order. The result is that the film is absolutely worthless.

"Under the above conditions how can a state-right exchange give the exhibitor a fair value when the exchange has to pay such prices to obtain film. The exchange man has to go out in the territory and get every dollar possible out of the exhibitor to 'cover' on film bought. The exchange man has to advertise his own film in the territory since the producer does not help him advertise. All this expenditure has to be borne by the exchange man, and naturally, as far as possible, it is passed on to the exhibitor."

Massachusetts Anti-Censorship Fight Is On

Committee of Leading Citizens Waging Campaign Energetically and Intensively

AFTER a period of several months in which the anti-censorship forces of Massachusetts seemed to be basking in state of voluntary inactivity, these same forces have been galvanized into sudden activity by the danger confronting them in this latest inroad upon personal liberty in the Bay state. They have organized systematically, and are carrying the offensive into quarters that count.

An impressive committee of distinguished citizens has been organized, state wide in scope, and headed by Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, former commander of the American Legion, and a man who entered the war as a private and emerged after the armistice with his present rank. They are carrying the fight into every corner of the Commonwealth, great results already having been accomplished where it counts most, in the labor circles among the unions where the mass of voters are to be found.

Other members of the committee include Edward A. Filene, one of the world's most progressive merchants; former Congressman William H. Certes, nationally known manufacturer; the Rev. William B. Geohagan, New Bedford, president of the Anti-Tuberculosis League; Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, well known in medical and fraternal circles; Charles S. Ashley, for 20 years mayor of New Bedford; Richard E. Warner, Taunton manufacturer; Dr. Timothy J. Reardon, Boston specialist; Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, society matron; Simon Vorenberg and Bernard M. Wolf, Boston merchants.

The committee members have set forth their stand in the following statement:

"We believe that the institution of a state censor is a dangerous precedent against local regulation, and savors of an autocratic control that smacks more of Prussian bureaucracy than of American democracy. We condemn the giving of autocratic power to one man and his deputy to dictate what over 3,000,000 citizens of the state shall see upon the screens.

"We know that censorship of motion pictures is merely the opening wedge to censorship of all information, instruction, and amusement offered by books, magazines, drama, newspapers, and advertising, as such purpose was openly proclaimed from the floor of the State Senate Chamber by a supporter of this measure.

"We know that it is a physical impossibility for one man and his deputy to review sufficient films to supply the 5,000 exhibitors of this state, and that means curtailment of exhibitions, higher admission prices, and the forcing out of business of most of the smaller houses, resulting in a great handicap on instruction and entertainment which rightfully belongs to the public.

"We consider the taxpayers sufficiently burdened without instituting a new and expensive department for the suppression of individual rights and privileges, without any consideration of public taste, morals or pleasure."

The Citizens' Committee is officered as follows: Chairman, Gen. Cole, Boston; vice-chairman, Judge Edward B. O'Brien, Lynn; treasurer, William H. Carter, Needham; secretary, Mrs. Albert T. Leatherbee, Boston.

Lumiere Wins Judgment Against Pathe

JUDGE MACK, in the United States District Court last week, rendered a decision against Pathe in the action brought by Lumiere, photographers, for infringement of copyright on photographs of Dolores Cassinelli.

Damages were awarded to the amount of $2,500, and in addition $500 attorney fees were allowed. Pathe has not yet decided whether an appeal will be taken from the decision.

Other members of the committee, all active in the fight, are: Brigadier-General John H. Dunn, Boston; W. Irving Bullard, Boston; Majors Carroll J. Swan and Charles R. Cabot, Boston; and more than two score others from every corner of the state, that run the gamut of all trades, callings, and professions, as well as the army, navy, clergy (well represented), and many of the most prominent society leaders of the state.

It is a list to conjure with, and that the work they have already put in shows well is evidenced by a constant flood of letters that have been loosed on the Boston papers, coming from every conceivable walk of life, and to the last one condemning any censorship of what the people want in no uncertain terms. A hard fight is still ahead in the short month till Election Day on Nov. 7, however.

An official labor committee has already been appointed that will work with the Stage Employees Union Committee, and plans are complete for visits to every local in Massachusetts toward defeat of the proposed censor law.

Another significant fact is that a great many of the candidates for important public offices have come out flatfootedly against the proposal to censor the pictures, the Democratic candidates being against it almost to a man.

Attorney John F. Doherty, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, says: "In its modern development the motion picture has become the greatest medium in the world for the transmission of intelligence. To place in any one man's hands the authority to determine what may be seen or read by all the people of a state is inconsistent with the ideals of democracy."

George E. Curran, nominee for the Governor's Council: "Under the guise of reform it is a deliberate encroachment on personal liberty. It can, and has been used as a weapon to destroy organized labor."

Mrs. Alice E. Cram, only woman nominee on either party's ticket: "The National Board is quite sufficient, and I shall elaborate those views as the campaign continues."

Wendell Phillips Thorp said: "The motion picture is coming into more use every day as an educational medium. It will soon be used more than ever to illustrate the great principles in which the public is interested. If we cannot always have freedom of the press, at least let us have freedom of the motion picture."

Other lines in which the campaign is being waged include a letter contest in a leading paper with large cash prizes, resulting in thousands of letters daily, and the passing of resolutions condemning the law by veteran organizations and trade unions all over the state. At an enthusiastic meeting of the Lynn Central Labor Union, boasting more than 12,000 members from all trades, resolutions were adopted against state censorship of pictures, and all members were urged to do everything possible to bring about the defeat of the bill at the November election. Committees were formed and every one of Lynn's 42 precincts will have organized labor representatives at work Election Day to defeat the bill.

The Springfield Chapter, Disabled Veterans of the World War, has come out in strong opposition to censorship, Commander Charles A. Costello declaring that it believes the public the best judge of what it wants. The federation of theatrical workers in that city also has officially expressed its antagonism to the bill.

Speaking at the closing session of the Massachusetts Parent Teacher Association, meeting in Gloucester, Mrs. George A. Skinner, wife of a New York picture producer, convinced the large assembly that; "Censorship does not take what is wrong out of pictures." The way to be sure of better pictures is to support good pictures was another strong point made by her.

Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, issued a statement Saturday, declaring that there is no place in Massachusetts for motion picture censorship, and calling on the men and women of the state to vote against the bill at the coming referendum. "There is no place in a free country in times of peace for censorship. The people of this state will resent having one man, a political appointee, telling them that they must see certain pictures and that they cannot see others," he said. He also declared that enough law already existed in Massachusetts to fine or imprison any theatre owner showing immoral or otherwise improper pictures.

A quantity of literature has been issued by the committee of Massachusetts citizens against censorship, including pamphlets, cards and the like. The booklets include: "The Motion Picture Problem," by Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, executive secretary, department of Christian Social Service, Protestant Episcopal Church; "A Square Deal for the Movies," "The Truth About the Motion Picture Situation in Massachusetts," "Editorial from National Catholic Welfare Council Bulletin Opposing Censorship," "What State Censorship Means," and "Labor versus Censorship."

The cards, which have been distributed extensively, carry a strong political message on one side and a series of cartoons on the reverse side, showing the Censor in an unfavorable light, gagging personal liberty, prying into other people's affairs, shackling Uncle Sam, dictating to citizens regarding what they shall see, and the like.

The Massachusetts Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars has sent out a letter to all members, speaking in no uncertain terms of the censorship measure, and calling attention to the debt every ex-service man owes to the motion picture for what it did during the war.

Hays Visits Eastman at Rochester

Studies Film at Source of Supply and Inspects University - Owned Theatre

WILL H. HAYS, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., swept into Rochester last Thursday week with his first assistant, Courtland Smith, to study film at the source of supply. They left, just before midnight, after a day of strenuous sight-seeing and campaigning, with Rochester and a large part of western New York converted to their view that the entire theory of political censorship of motion pictures is a fallacy.

The distinguished visitors were joined in their work of propaganda by their equally distinguished host, George Eastman, and the message was driven home that in so far as usefulness is concerned motion pictures are in their infancy, and are destined to prove one of the greatest forces for good known to the world today. In fact, General Hays, in an interview given wide circulation, declared that the humble "movie" is likely to prove the factor that will bring universal peace and relegate the armies and navies of the world to the scrap heap.

The visit of Hays and Smith grew out of the fact that exigencies in their office prevented them from accepting Mr. Eastman's invitation to the opening last month of the magnificent Eastman theatre, which he presented to the University of Rochester. So many unique phases of picture presentation and so many scientific and sociological and psychological developments have grown out of operation of the great university-owned and university-managed picture palace that General Hays and Mr. Smith made the deferred visit to acquaint themselves with that institution as well as to study at first hand the production of raw stock.

On their arrival from New York the visitors were met by a local committee and escorted to the Eastman residence, where they were met by George Eastman. Following breakfast in the conservatory, advantage was taken of the glorious day to enjoy a visit in the gardens, where an army of camera men representing the various news reels swooped down upon the party. A visit to Kodak Park followed, and there the "Dictator of the Movies" followed cotton from the bale through its various processes until it finally emerged as film.

Convention of Ohio Better Film Clubs Held

The first Annual Motion Picture Convention of Ohio Better Film Clubs was held in Cleveland Friday and Saturday, October 6 and 7, at the Statler hotel, under the auspices of the Cleveland Cinema Club. One hundred and thirty-five affiliated clubs, representing 80,000 women of Ohio, were represented at the meeting.

Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, president of the Cleveland Cinema Club and an active worker for better films for the past ten years, presided.

Following the preliminary introductions and formal opening of the convention, the first subject to be discussed was, "The Motion Picture as a Legitimate Interest of Club Organization." Mrs. W. H. Sharp, president of the Ohio Federation of Clubs, said that if the women of Ohio want better films they have to show the producer what they want, not only by talking better films, but by paying money to go to the theatres to see better films.

W. D. McGuire of New York, chairman of the National Committee for Better Films, advocated a national board of review whose duty would be to mould public opinion and offer selected screen material. He was backed up in this suggestion by Mrs. A. R. Purmost, president of the Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Children's programs have a distinct place on the motion picture program," said Mrs. J. C. Newman, "but they should not be shoved in on Saturday morning. Children attend picture shows in greatest numbers Saturday afternoon. That is the time the children's matinees should be presented.

Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, from the Educational Department of Pathe, threw a lot of light on the subject of educational films. Mrs. Dessez also answered questions from the floor, explaining the producer's attitude toward motion pictures.

M. J. O'Toole, Chairman of the National Public Service Committee of the M. P. T. O. A., arrived in Cleveland Saturday morning to make an address on "The Relationship of the Community to the Theatre." Mr. O'Toole wants the State Cinema Association to work in co-operation with the M. P. T. O. of Ohio and together solve all the problems that affect Ohio's 1,048 motion picture theatres.

E. C. Holah, local Hodkinson exchange manager, was elected by the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland to represent the exchange managers at the convention. In his remarks Mr. Holah went on record as pledging the support of the distributors for the Better Film movement.

The overlapping of theatrical and non-theatrical interests was debated with heat. Mr. Patterson, editor of the Christian Herald, said that he is forming a chain of exchanges for distribution of non-theatrical films, to overcome the continuous opposition of established theatrical exchanges to serve non-theatrical interests.

Exhibitors of Maryland to Aid School Loan Drive

THE Exhibitors' League of Maryland again will take an active part in civic affairs as the result of a resolution passed at the last meeting of the league under which all members will co-operate in laying before the voters details of the $15,000,000 School Loan to be voted upon in Baltimore in November.

Members of the league have offered to Mayor Broening the use of their screens and stages. It is anticipated that they will show special slides touching upon various phases of the loan campaign, and also that speakers will address the audiences on the loan.

The league has determined to delay action with regard to the disagreement on wage scales between exhibitors of Baltimore and the operators. The dispute has been for some weeks in the hands of an arbitration committee, and reports of progress from this committee led to the decision to withhold action for the time being.

Annual Wampas Riot Is Held on Coast

Members of that organization whose motto should be "We Tell the World," whose dignified name is the Western Motion Picture Advertisers' Association but nine times out of ten referred to as the Wampas, were host to Los Angeles newspaper dramatic writers motion picture magazine and trade press representatives Wednesday evening, October 4, at a Universal City Cafe, when the second annual Wampas riot was given.

This evening, the Wampas members agree is the one time in the year when they have the publishers' writers eating out of their hand. On this occasion they made the most of their opportunity.

Arch Reaves, president of the Wampas, was master of ceremonies and the evening's program of merrymaking moved swiftly, with the assistance of Mike Boylan and Ray Leek.

John C. Flynn, president of the A. M. P. A., introduced as one of the honor guests, responded to the hearty welcome extended him by the western association. Other members included a piano solo by Leo MacCarey, a vocal solo by Bessie Love, jazz songs and chatter by Chuck Reisner, Roy Atwell singing a parody on his famous bug song, and Neely Edwards and associates staged a clever tramp sketch.

Italy Loses Hold in Picture Industry

Italy, which ten years ago was among the leaders in the motion picture field, has lost its hold and is suffering serious depression, according to an article published in the current issue of the American Cinematographer by Charles Rosher, who recently returned from there.

According to Rosher, lack of proper organization methods is largely responsible for the condition. He likens the Italian films to the champion pugilist who has been defeated, and though trying to come back, does not have the confidence in himself he once enjoyed.

He declares the American product and possibly the German have rushed ahead so rapidly and gained such a grip on the world market there is scarcely a possibility for Italian product to catch up.

Jesse Lasky Strongly Denies Story of Quitting

UNQUALIFIED denial of published reports that Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was about to sever his connections with that company was made yesterday both by Mr. Lasky and Adolph Zukor, president of the company.

Informed in Hollywood that a vaudeville paper had printed the report, Mr. Lasky sent the following telegram of denial to the editor of the publication and also to the New York World, which reprinted the story:

"I have just been advised that you have printed a story to effect that I contemplate leaving Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. As this story is absolutely untrue and without foundation I will appreciate it if you will correct your statement by printing my absolute denial. I have no thought of leaving Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and my relations with its chief executive and president, Mr. Zukor, are most cordial as they have always been in the past."

In making public his and Mr. Lasky's denial, Mr. Zukor was vigorous in his denunciation of the stories.

Omaha Organizations to Join Forces

One of the most progressive steps taken by captains in the film industry in Omaha was outlined at a joint meeting of the Omaha Film Board of Trade and representatives of the M. P. T. O. A. of Nebraska and Iowa in that city recently. The conference was attended by representatives of every exchange in Omaha and by A. R. Pramer, and J. E. Kirke, president and secretary, respectively, of the M. P. T. O. A. of Nebraska and Iowa.

The keynote of the meeting was the question of co-ordination of the Film Board of Trade and M. P. T. O. A. that an association be formed of both exhibitors and exchange managers and that a special grievance committee be appointed to iron out the controversies between the separate organizations. The committee, it was announced, would be made up of two members from each organization.

Hope that the one large organization would be effected before the coming convention of the M. P. T. O. A. of Nebraska and Iowa in Omaha this month was expressed by Sidney Meyers, president of the Film Board of Trade.

Four Patents Granted to California Inventors

Patents granted to Southern California inventors recently, reported by Bradbury & Caswell, Los Angeles patent attorneys, include:

Film numbering machine, to Joseph Altschuler, Los Angeles. Mr. Altschuler has recently changed his name to Aller, and is a member of the Rothacker-Aller laboratories.

Magazine for kinetographs, picture studio, construction for motion picture cameras (three separate patents), to Lloyd Brown, Los Angeles.

Valentino Injunction Made Permanent

The temporary injunction against Rodolph Valentino was made permanent last week by Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel. Valentino is enjoined from appearing in any other picture than those produced by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The injunction grew out of an alleged breach of contract by the star, who must now accept the $1,250 a week from the company pending adjudication of the contract suit.

Babson Survey Results to be Published Soon

PUBLICATION of the results of the survey of the motion picture industry made by the Babson Statistical Organization in cooperation with MOTION PICTURE NEWS and Columbia University, will commence shortly in the NEWS.

Tabulation of the large number of questionnaires returned by exhibitors, and analysis of the figures obtained, has been proceeding for some time at Wellesley Hills, Mass., where the entire resources of the world's largest statistical organization have been made available, so that this survey might be thoroughly accurate and comprehensive.

The articles will be copiously illustrated with charts and diagrams, so that the information will be available at a glance.

Statistical work on the producing and distributing branches of the industry is now under way.

Massachusetts Paper Against Censor

With the fight in Massachusetts over the question of the referendum on censorship daily drawing nearer with the coming of election day in November, one of the leading newspapers of the state has taken a decided stand on the question of censorship and has naively demanded in a lead editorial just why censorship in Massachusetts is necessary when a statute already exists that fully covers the situation.

The following is an excerpt from the editorial which appeared in the September 26 issue of the Springfield Union:

"One very great trouble with censorship in general is that the censor comes to see evil where no evil exists. He is always looking for something that is not there and his point of view in time becomes warped and narrow. Many things are much better left to the public taste and the prevailing good sense of the people than to some pet formula of a custodian of morals."

Four Companies Enter New York Field

Four companies incorporated in the motion picture business in New York State during the past week, the records in the Secretary of State's office showing the following capitalization and directors: Distinctive Pictures Corporation, $1,000,000, A. S. Friend, H. M. Hobart, C. S. Hervey, New York City; Revue Productions, Inc., $10,000, Harry Kendler, Fay Fisher, Edith Gordon, New York City; Empire Play Company, $20,000, Everett Moses, H. W. Wack, New York City; F. X. Bannon, Newark, N. J.; Criterion Theatre of Utica, Inc., $3,000, James D. Smith, Clarence E. Williams, Utica; Winford H. Linton, Little Falls.

No Head Censor as Yet to Replace Mrs. Snow in Ohio

Vernon M. Riegel, head of the Ohio State Department of Education, of which the Ohio censor board is a part, announces that he is entirely satisfied with the work of the two assistant censors, and does not know when he will name a chief to replace Mrs. Evelyn Snow.

Washington Operators Are Granted New Scale

The recent controversy concerning operators' wages for the coming year in Washington, D. C., has been amicably settled, an increase of five per cent over the scale of August 31 being granted. This is retroactive to September 1.

Acting for the operators were the local officials of the stage hands, musicians and operators' union, Local No. 224, and the international's representative, Harry Spence, of the New York headquarters; while a Washington attorney, C. E. Linkins, represented the management end of the controversy.

Approximately all district playhouses are working under the agreement, as it was to cover all Class A playhouses. The four Class A houses—Metropolitan, Rialto, Loew's Palace and Columbia theaters, are all in this class, as they run continuously from 10:30 a. m. to 11 p. m. These are the old $60 scale houses which had paid $54, since last fall, when the $6 cut was agreed to due to the existent depression. In place of the restoration of the $60 basis, the year's contract now in effect is on a basis of some $57 per week for the first run houses.

New Companies Fewer During 1922

During the twelve months last year a total of 455 motion picture companies were formed and incorporated in New York state. These represented a capitalization that amounted to $28,373,400. During the nine months this year there have been 234 companies incorporated, with a capitalization of $9,688,100. Thus the nine months represent only about one-half of the total number of companies incorporated during the twelve months last year, and the capitalization is but a third of last year's total.

The largest single month this year occurred in March, when forty-one companies were incorporated in New York state with a capitalization of $1,712,000. The lowest month was April, which brought forth only fifteen motion picture companies, and these had a capitalization of only $274,000.

Survey of Newspapers Shows Better Times

HIGHLY optimistic reports as to the general business outlook for the coming fall and winter have been compiled by the Statistical Department of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from data supplied direct from the editors and publishers of representative newspapers in all parts of the United states, at the request of First National.

Ninety-seven per cent of the replies received from 700 queries were that the 1922-23 business season would be marked by a sharp recovery from the post-war depression. With the Government's August crop report indicating a $7,134,654,000 crop—a record production—with the total building construction in the United States during the first nine months of this year having reached the unprecedented total of $3,000,000,000, the general business outlook was regarded as more than "highly encouraging."

"On the strength of this survey," says a statement issued by First National, members of the motion picture industry who have big pictures to show may feel assured of a big year for such productions."

Trade Sees "Notoriety" in Boston

*Exhibitors, Reviewers and Other Guests
At Premiere of Will Nigh Picture*

EXHIBITORS, reviewers and others in the industry to the number of about 300 were the guests of Federated Film Exchange at a trade showing of the Will Nigh picture, "Notoriety," at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston last week. A reception and buffet luncheon preceded the showing of the picture, which was the first made by Nigh for Bobby North and L. Lawrence Weber.

Following the showing, dinner was served and several of the more prominent guests spoke, among them being Charles Pettijohn of the Hays organization, who urged strong opposition to the coming censorship referendum.

In charge of arrangements were Joseph L. Roth of the Federated Film Exchange, which is distributing the picture in New England, he having the executive end, while S. J. Davidson had charge of projection. The projection was by a special Motiograph De Luxe installation and was very good considering the trials of putting on a picture in any place other than that intended for such purpose. Lights from the orchestra dimmed the screen very badly at first, but after they were moved back of the audience the production was run off smoothly.

The story is in eight reels and is the tale of a girl of the tenements who seeks notoriety and gets it through the medium of a society murder, for which she later is arrested and tried.

Maurine Powers has the role of "Pigeon," the notoriety seeker. The balance of the exceptionally good cast is made up of Mary Alden, George Hackathorne, Richard Travers, Rod La Ronge, J. Barney Sherry, Mona Lisa, Ida Waterman, Bill Gudgeon and Anders Randolph.

The scenes are laid in the tenements and in and about the homes of the wealthy in both the city and country, many of the latter being artistically reproduced.

"Young Rajah" Is New Jazz Tune

They're whistling a new jazz tune around the Paramount offices these days, where advance copies of the new fox trot and song, "The Young Rajah," have just been received from the Coast. For the new composition words and music were written by Aubrey Stauffer, of the Lasky studio scenario staff, and has been published by Milton Schwartz Co., Hollywood.

Paramount exploiters are already making arrangements for tie-ups in connection with the forthcoming release of "The Young Rajah," starring Rodolph Valentino.

"The Christian" Is Given Preview

"The Christian," Goldwyn's production of Hall Caine's story, filmed largely in England and the Isle of Man, was shown in pre-view Wednesday night at the Paramount theatre, Hollywood, to an enthusiastic audience. The showing of the picture follows the custom of the company in exhibiting its pictures, as soon as completed, in a small theatre to get the reactions of an audience.

"The Christian" was directed by Maurice Tourneur, and the title role is played by Richard Dix. Mae Busch has the leading feminine role.

Brownell Made F. B. O. Scenario Chief

JOHAN BROWNELL, for the past six years connected with Universal in the capacity of Eastern scenario chief, this week became associated with the Film Booking Offices of America in a similar capacity. Mr. Brownell will have his office in the Home Office building of F. B. O.

The enlargement of the F. B. O. scenario department to include an Eastern representative will permit the purchase of the best available stories for production at the studios in Los Angeles. Mr. Brownell is considered one of the best judges of the picture values of stories in the industry and his long and varied experience in all phases of production and distribution work fits him perfectly for the work of selecting the stories for future releases.

Ruggles Starts Work on New Picture

Director Wesley Ruggles, who recently completed production of Ethel Clayton's initial starring vehicle for F. B. O., has started on a second picture with this star in the stellar role. Miss Clayton's first picture was a story of a mythical kingdom, titled, "If I Were Queen." This time the story is of the Orient and is an adaptation of Achmed Abdullah's story, "The Remittance Woman."

Director Ruggles is giving a great deal of time and thought to the beautiful Oriental settings and promises a big picture in every sense of the word.

F. B. O. to Release Ethel Clayton Picture

"If I Were Queen," the first Ethel Clayton production to be distributed through the Film Booking Offices of America, heads the list of October releases of that company. The F. B. O. advertising and publicity department has made elaborate preparations for the release of this production, and it will be issued with a complete service press book, and a number of attractive novelties.

Powers Buys Story for Harry Carey

"The Canyon of the Fools," a story by Richard Mathews Hallett, which appeared originally as a serial, has been purchased by P. A. Powers as a future Harry Carey production. The story was one of the most sensational of the outdoors tales which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post in some time, and caused considerable comment.

Gottschalk to Write Music Score

Louis Gottschalk has been engaged by B. P. Schulberg to write the music score for "Shadows," which starts its first run engagements this month. Gottschalk has been identified with the preparation of musical accompaniments on important pictures for a long time. Two of his recent scores were for "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "The Three Musketeers."

Fox Makes Statement On "Scenario Wants"

Because numerous inquiries have been received by the Fox Film Corporation as a result of a "scenario wants" announcement printed in many national periodicals, an announcement has been made by the company that it has no connection in any way with the movement, nor is any of its executives connected with it.

The announcements were made by Charles Donald Fox Photoplay Institute of Chicago. The Fox Film Corporation does not assert that the announcements made any misstatement or misrepresentations, but merely denies any connection with the enterprise. The Chicago Institute is entirely an independent concern from the Fox Film Corporation.

Arrow Special Picture Inspires Song

Arrow's special production, "The Streets of New York," has inspired a song which is to be published by the Cameo Music Publishing Company, Inc., and released simultaneously with this production.

This song, "Dear Old New York," was written by Larry Urbach and Victor Nurnberg, and is said to possess an extremely tuneful melody and especially clever words. Arrangements have already been made by Mr. Mintz of the Cameo Company to have this song reproduced on phonograph records and piano rolls and at the time of the opening of the picture the song is to be broadcasted by radio.

Plan Distribution for "Chicago Sal"

Negotiations were completed this week with Irving Cummings, the Coast producer-star, whereby Principal Pictures Company, the new independent producing and distributing company formed by Sol Lesser, Michael Rosenberg and Irving Lesser, will distribute his latest special, which is tentatively entitled, "Chicago Sal."

Included in the cast are Irving Cummings, Milton Sills, Alice Lake, Baby Richard Hedrick, Ralph Lewis and Gertrude Claire.

Sales Indicate Opening of European Market

THE fact that the East European market for pictures is opening up despite the unfavorable rate of exchange, was revealed this week by the announcement from the Thomas H. Ince Studios of the sale to the Chicago Film Company of a series of Thomas H. Ince special productions, including "Hail the Woman," "Lying Lips," "Mother O' Mine" and "The Cup of Life."

At the same time the two Hobart Bosworth Productions, Inc., starring Hobart Bosworth, "Blind Hearts" and "The Sea Lion," as well as King W. Vidor Production, "Love Never Dies," were disposed of.

The territory included in the deal was Austria-Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugoslavia, Poland, Greece, Turkey, Roumania and Bulgaria and was consummated with Rud. Vacek, the American representative of the Chicago Film Company.

Exploitation Assignments Given Goldwyn Announces Territories Given Staff for Assistance to Exhibitors

LAST week Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announced its list of exploitation men who would assist exhibitors in putting over its Big Twenty for 1922-23. Assignments of these men have been made as follows:

Atlanta—James Carrier, former general manager for the Harry Koplars theatres in St. Louis and later on the exploitation forces of Robertson-Cole and Selznick and most recently doing special work on the Pacific Coast in partnership with his brother.

Boston—John Wilstach, who comes of a family of famous advance men.

Buffalo—Irwin Zeltner, who for a number of years has been working on New York newspapers and in theatres, and more recently has been engaged in exploitation work for the home office, having assisted in work on "Remembrance" for its showing at the Capitol.

Chicago—Walter D. Nealand, whose experience includes exploitation work with Keith and Proctor, Savage, W. A. Brady, the Selwyns and the Sells-Floto circus, and who more recently has been engaged in exploiting big public events in Chicago, and the Wisconsin State Fair.

Cincinnati, Phil Gersdorf; Cleveland, Eddie Carrier; Dallas, James D. Stewart; Denver, Richmond Dorman; Detroit, Earl Payne.

Indianapolis—H. R. Snowden, who for two years was with the Robertson-Cole exchange in Detroit, for a year photoplay editor of the Indianapolis Star, press representative on the southern tour of "The Birth of a Nation" and more recently with the T. L. Kearse theatres in Charleston, W. Va.

Kansas City, William H. Branch; Los Angeles, L. W. Barclay; Minneapolis, Chas. C. Perry; New Orleans, Robert H. Clemmons; New York, W. R. Ferguson; Omaha, Howard J. Phillips; Philadelphia, Saul Silver; Pittsburgh, William Robson; San Francisco, Wm. A. Burke; St. Louis, H. H. Niemeyer; Seattle, Frank Burns; Washington, R. J. LaVoise.

Toronto—Ben F. Wolcott, who has been with the Fox exploitation department, a veteran showman and advance man for legitimate attractions. He has handled many motion pictures in Canada and his wide acquaintance there makes him especially suited to the post.

"Shadows" Set for Special Showing in New York

"Shadows," B. P. Schulberg's second picture for the Al Lichtman Corporation, will be given its premiere showing in the grand ballroom of the Biltmore, New York, next Friday evening, October 20. The showing is set for 8:30 o'clock, with special music and presentation features.

The picture was made by Tom Forman and is the first of his series. The cast includes Lon Chaney, Marguerite De La Motte, John Sainpolis, Harrison Ford, Walter Long, Priscilla Bonner and Buddy Messenger.

Nolan in N. Y. to Serve on Committee

Harry T. Nolan, President of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., of Colorado, reached New York Monday and began serving as a member of the First National Rotating Committee. Mr. Nolan is a successful Denver exhibitor.

"The fall outlook for motion pictures is good in our section," he said. "This is because the general feeling in business circles is much better, and confidence is returning with renewed strength. There is a good crop outlook out our way. People are working."

Distribution Deal Is Completed

Associated Exhibitors Contracts for Handling of "A Bill of Divorcement"

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that "A Bill of Divorcement," the Denison Clift production starring Constance Binney, has been placed with Associated Exhibitors for distribution. The picture is presented by Ideal Films. John C. Ragland, secretary of Associated Exhibitors, represented Associated in the negotiations which led to the signing of the contract.

"A Bill of Divorcement" is an adaptation of the play of the same name by Clemence Dane. Alan Pollock was the star in the play during its run at the Times Square theatre, New York, last year.

The screen adaptation was by Denison Clift, who also directed the production, and is said to follow the lines of the original play with extraordinary fidelity. Constance Binney is the outstanding figure, with Fay Compton, English beauty, playing a role of scarcely less importance, and Malcolm Keen impersonating the husband and father.

Denison Clift, besides being well known as a scenario writer and director, has won success and popularity as a short story writer, novelist and playwright. Among the picture stars whom he has directed in successful productions are William S. Hart, Louise Glaum, Henry B. Walthall, Sessue Hayakawa and Shirley Mason. During 1920 he devoted his time to the direction of Fox features exclusively.

Vitagraph Working on Many Pictures

The Vitagraph studio at Hollywood, Cal., is actively engaged in the making of winter productions which include a special, several features and a number of comedies.

Work has been started on a David Smith production, "The Ninety and Nine," adapted from Ramsey Morris' play of the same name. This will be released in the late fall.

Larry Semon is hard at work on a comedy dealing with the Northwest.

Earle Williams has just completed final shots of "You Never Know."

Alice Calhoun who has been taking a much-needed rest after finishing five pictures in record time is preparing to start on another story shortly.

William Duncan is taking a brief respite after finishing a picture of the West, in which feats of horsemanship played important roles. This picture is entitled, "When Danger Smiles."

Jimmy Aubrey is about to commence work on another comedy.

Pyramid Buys Rights to "Tatiana"

Pyramid Pictures, Inc., announces the acquisition of the screen rights to H. S. Sheldon's "Tatiana," a story of Russia during the 1917 upheaval, which will be directed by Ray C. Smallwood.

May Allison Star In "The Broad Road"

WITH a cast headed by May Allison as star, Associated Authors, John Howard Carr, president, started work last Monday on the first of six productions which it has contracted to make for release through Associated Exhibitors.

The first picture will be an adaptation of Hapsburg Leibe's "The Broad Road," a novel which was printed originally in Collier's and created somewhat of a furore. May Allison in the star role, that of Rosemary, will be supported by Richard C. Travers as leading man, Ben Hendricks, Jr., as the heavy, Mary Foy, Elime La Croix, Joseph Flannigan and Charles MacDonald.

All the exterior scenes for the production will be shot near Orlando, Fla., where Associated Authors have begun the construction of commodious studio buildings. After a few weeks the company will return to New York for the taking of the interiors.

Universal Officials at Prosperity Dinner

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and his associate officials of the Universal home office, were feted in Philadelphia Monday at a Prosperity Dinner, given in honor of the recent record-breaking business being done by Universal's Philadelphia Exchange.

Prior to the Prosperity Dinner, held in the Arcadia Restaurant, following a theatre party attended by the entire Universal force in Philadelphia, Mr. Laemmle and the other Universal executives were the guests of Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company, at a small dinner held on the Ritz-Carlton roof.

The Mastbaum dinner was attended by many of Philadelphia's leading film figures, including Messrs. Boyd and Einstein of the Stanley organization. Among the Universal officials from New York were R. H. Cochrane, vice president; E. H. Goldstein, treasurer; Ar Schmidt, sales manager, and F. J. McConnell, serial manager. Jules Levy, district sale manager for the middle Atlantic division, and V. R. Carriek, executive manager of the Philadelphia exchange, also were among the guests.

New Organization in Coast Production

The latest organization formed to produce pictures independently is the Regent Pictures Company. It is headed by E. D. Newman, formerly special representative on the West Coast for Associated First National Pictures Inc.

The Regent Company has already purchased the first story which will go into production, "The Drivin' Fool," by William F. Sturm.

Announcement of studio, director and cast for the first production will be made within a week.

Two Added to Selznick Publicity Staff

L. F. Guimond, recently connected with Realart Pictures Corporation, has joined the Selznick ranks in the publicity and advertising department. He will edit the house organ and will have supervision over a number of special advertising campaigns.

Miss Blythe Sherwood has also been given an assignment on the publicity staff. She will devote her time exclusively to publicizing Theda Bara.

Hodkinson Announces Personnel Changes

THE W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION announces the following changes in the personnel of the organization throughout its territorial offices.

Miss R. A. McNulty becomes Office Manager of the Boston Exchange succeeding J. M. Cummings who has resigned. C. M. Miller entered his duties as Office Manager of the Dallas Branch, while H. L. Bozeman becomes identified with a similar position with the New Orleans Branch. Mrs. F. Baker becomes Office Manager of the Oklahoma City Branch.

Firemen Picture Presented by F. B. O

A NNOUNCEMENT comes from the Film Booking Offices of America of a companion picture to "In The Name of The Law," the police picture which is meeting with such success. The new picture is also an Emory Johnson production and is called, "The Third Alarm."

As the first picture presented an intimate home-life drama of the American policeman, "The Third Alarm" will offer a true picturization of the life of a member of the big city fire department, and will consequently offer the same exploitation possibilities.

The cast is made up largely of those players who appeared in "In The Name of The Law." It includes Ralph Lewis, Johnny Walker, Ella Hall, Richard Morris, and the youngsters, Josephine Adair and Frankie Lee.

Emory Johnson personally directed "The Third Alarm."

Charles Christie Heads Realty Company

Charles H. Christie, prominent motion picture producer, heads the latest real estate organization to be formed in Los Angeles. It will be known as the Christie Realty Company, and consolidates into one organization all of the realty activities in which Mr. Christie and associates have been engaged for the past two years.

The purposes of the new organization, capital of which is already subscribed and paid in, are to acquire and develop property in Hollywood and adjacent territory on a large scale.

Mr. Christie will be president of the realty organization. Fred L. Porter is secretary, and William S. Holman, treasurer.

Picture Slump Over, Says Grainger Goldwyn Executive Enthusiastic Over Conditions Found in Key Cities

"THE slump in moving pictures is over." This is the definite conviction voiced by James R. Grainger, of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, on his return from a seven weeks' tour of the country.

Mr. Grainger visited every key city in the United States, talked with hundreds of exhibitors, came in touch with leading business men in all sections of the country and is back in New York fired with enthusiasm over the prospects for the new season.

James R. Grainger

His optimism is based on facts. He found: First—A quickening of activity in almost every line of business.

Second—The settling of strikes.

Third—The assurance of western and southern bankers that more money is being placed in circulation every week.

Fourth—An increase in freight transportation to such a degree that railroads are being taxed beyond their capacity.

Fifth—A confidence on the part of exhibitors that did not exist a year ago.

Sixth—The emphatic success of the first of the big pictures released this year.

"Every exhibitor I met was on his toes and looking for smashing, big productions," said Mr. Grainger. "The talk about lying low and waiting for times to improve has passed. It is agreed that now is the time to go out and get business. The public has money to spend, and it will go to picture theatres if we give the right sort of entertainment."

"Instead of figuring the cost of a show down to the minimum, exhibitors are more interested in the box office quality of a picture. They have had their fill of mediocre programs and want to gamble on getting big patronage with big attractions. This is a healthy condition. It means that we are out of a rut and creating a demand for the very best that the producers can supply."

Associated Increases Sales Staff

W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week the addition of three new men to the organization's staff of sales representatives.

Charles A. Kuehle joins the Cincinnati forces and will cover several Ohio counties, with Columbus as his central point.

W. W. Rowland, who was Metro's Cincinnati branch manager several years, and lately has been with Universal, also has been named to Associated's Cincinnati office. He has been assigned to cover the whole of Kentucky except for a few cities just out of Cincinnati.

C. H. Stewart has been added to Associated's sales staff in St. Louis.

Kate Lester Signed to Long Contract

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has just signed a long-term contract with Kate Lester, the grande dame of the screen.

The renewal of Miss Lester's contract with Goldwyn followed close upon the completion of Rupert Hughes' new picture, "Remembrance," in which she acted the role of old Pop Grout's wife, sharing acting honors with Claude Gillingwater, who was "Pop."

Schulberg Inaugurates New Plan

Co-operative Production Will Give Everyone Employed Financial Share

A CO-OPERATIVE plan of production has been inaugurated by B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, Inc., at his studio in Los Angeles. The new order of things will give everyone who shares in the actual production of various Preferred Pictures a financial share in the profits during the life of the productions.

Co-operative production has been discussed and experimented with by various organizations and individuals in the business for some time, but the exact measure of success attained by them is doubtful. Schulberg's extensive experience in all ends of the industry has brought him to the realization that production costs mount so high because of the unusual waste brought about by indiscriminate spending on the part of members of the working force.

"To accomplish anything properly there must be real co-operation, and with this thought in mind I worked out a plan for making my productions whereby not only the cost is minimized but everyone joins in with such a spirit that he gives us his very best efforts. Each person associated with the production is given a financial share in it. In this way his interest does not cease when he receives his last pay check but continues all during the picture's nation-wide run.

"I should like to point how, in one particular instance, the plan is working out. During the filming of 'Shadows' we struck very bad weather while taking our exterior scenes. We were way behind on our schedule and it was essential to speed things up.

"With many players I would not take a chance on making them hurry, but when I told Director Tom Forman and his company that we would have to work overtime they agreed without a murmur, and I knew that not a single scene would be slighted."

Fox Announces Release Date Changes

CHANGE of release dates for "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" and "Lights of New York," two specials for the current season, were announced by Fox Film Corporation this week.

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them," Paul H. Sloane's screen version of the story by the mysterious "Mr. X," which is about to enter the seventh week of an indefinite run at the Lyric theatre, New York, and which was set for release on October 29, will not be ready for general distribution until November 26, according to the announcement.

Publication of "Lights of New York" by the same author, has been set back from October 22 to November 12. This special was directed by Charles J. Brabin.

According to the present Fox schedule, another special, "My Friend the Devil," will be released November 19th. It was adapted from George Ohnet's novel, "Dr. Rameau."

Giblyn Will Direct in Holland

Producers' Security Corporation, which handles the productions of Hollandia Films, announces an acquisition to this organization in the person of Charles Giblyn, director.

Giblyn left Saturday on the S. S. Ryndam for Holland, where he will start production immediately on a feature titled "Hypocrites," by Henry Arthur Jones.

Ballin Starts Casting "Vanity Fair"

Mabel and Hugo Ballin left for Los Angeles last Wednesday afternoon. Immediately upon their arrival on the West Coast Mr. Ballin will start casting for his new special production, "Vanity Fair," in which Mrs. Ballin will be seen as "Becky Sharp." This picture will be a Goldwyn release.

Many weeks of research work on this subject have been put in by Mr. Ballin. "Vanity Fair" will be considerable of a screen spectacle, it is announced. Most of the scenes are laid in London in the very early part of the Nineteenth Century.

Famous London Music Hall Now Universal First Run House

A DISTINCT change in the English release policy of American Film Companies has just taken place with the completion of arrangements by the European Motion Picture Company, Ltd., distributors of Universal films in Great Britain, for the showing of Universal pictures in the New Oxford Theatre.

This is the first time pictures have been shown in this house, and its initial venture into the screen world, the recent presentation of "The Storm," Universal's Jewel production of Langdon McCormick's celebrated play, met with the greatest possible success, it is said.

"The Storm" will be followed by "Foolish Wives," and later by "Under Two Flags" and other Universal specials. This marks the first steps to be taken to carry out Carl Laemmle's recently announced policy of breaking the release dead-lock in England, and of showing American films in that country at approximately the same time they are presented in this country.

The Westminster Gazette, of London, commenting on the New Oxford theatre deal, said, in part:

"This change in the fortunes of the Oxford-street theatre synchronizes with the beginning of an important development in the kinema industry. It is due to the determination of Mr. Carl Laemmle president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, (one of the largest moving picture enterprises in America) to show the British public the newest pictures almost immediately after they have been produced."

"The Shriek of Araby," recently completed Mack Sennett Comedy released through Associated First National Pictures, features Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire

Goldwyn Employees Win Promotion

TWO employees in Goldwyn branch exchanges have just been promoted to be resident managers of exchanges.

Seth Perkins, for several years a salesman in the Los Angeles office, with an excellent record to his credit, has been appointed resident manager of the Los Angeles office succeeding M. Wolf.

Walter Eltries, booker at the Seattle office, has been promoted to the resident managership of the newly created Portland, Ore., branch exchange.

Harry Danto has been appointed resident manager of the Chicago exchange to succeed Harry S. Lorch who will take up other duties, the nature of which will be announced later.

Cast Is Announced for "Ghost Patrol"

Ralph Graves, discovered by Griffith and developed by Universal, has been cast for the role of the boy in "The Ghost Patrol," by Sinclair Lewis.

Edith Roberts, starred in her own right by Universal in big productions and recently with Lasky, has the role of the girl.

George Nichols will play the character role; that of the New York cop who wouldn't retire.

Max Davidson will have a serio-comic role as the cobbler of the story. Lydia Titus will appear as the irrepressibly Irish "Mrs. Murphy" while Dan Crimmins, of Crimmins and Gore, will be Murphy.

Paramount Releases Due October 15

Strong Casts Will Be Seen in "Burning Sands" and "The Ghost Breaker"

PARAMOUNT will release on October 15 the George Melford production, "Burning Sands," with Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills; and Wallace Reid in "The Ghost Breaker."

"Burning Sands" is being advertised as "A Man's Answer to 'The Sheik.'" It is taken from the novel by Edward Weigall, the scenario being by Olga Printzlau and Waldemar Young.

This picture, according to Paramount, is even more picturesque in settings and costumes than was its predecessor. There are hundreds of Arabs in their brilliant flowing robes, with scenes representing Cairo and desert oases offering beautiful backgrounds.

With Miss Hawley and Mr. Sills in the leading roles, a fine supporting company is seen. Jacqueline Logan is captivating as a French dancer; Robert Cain has the chief heavy role and Albert Roscoe, Cecil Holland, Winter Hall, Louise Dresser, Fenwick Oliver, Harris Gordon and Joe Ray are prominent in the supporting cast.

"The Ghost Breaker" might aptly be called a comedy-melodrama, for thrills are interspersed with fun in a most satisfying degree. It is an adaptation by Jack Cunningham of the stage play by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard. Alfred E. Green was the director.

Wallace Reid's role is that of a young American who undertakes to rid a Spanish castle of some undesirable ghosts who have taken up their abode there for reasons of their own.

Lila Lee is again seen as a Spanish senorita. Walter Hiers, in the comedy role of Rusty Snow, a negro valet, plays in black face for the first time, while Arthur Carewe, J. F. McDonald, Frances Raymond and Snitz Edwards complete the cast.

Feinman Joins Warner Publicity Staff

A. L. Feinman, motion picture publicist and exploiter of a number of big screen successes, this week joined the Warner Brothers' Exploitation Department, where he has been assigned to the direction of publicity, advertising and exploitation of the W. B. Exchange, which controls the rights to the Warner Brothers' product for physical distribution in the Greater New York territory.

This announcement comes simultaneously with the announcement of Feinman's resignation from the Fox Film Corp.

Sam Morris Becomes Warner Executive

Sam E. Morris has been engaged by the Warner Brothers, according to an announcement by Harry M. Warner. Morris will occupy an executive position with the organization.

Mr. Warner declared that the selection of Mr. Morris was made after a thorough canvass of the entire industry had been made to find a suitable person to occupy a responsible position in this fast growing Warner Brothers concern.

Three-Day Convention for Missouri

PLANS for the M.P.T.O. Missouri convention, at which Will Hays, President Sydney S. Cohen and M. J. O'Toole will be present, have become so extended that it has become necessary to make the meeting a three-day affair, two of work and one of "play." The convention will be held at Excelsior Springs, Mo., October 18, 19 and 20.

Scores of men of national importance, including Senators James Reed and Sheldon Spencer, in addition to the presidents of numerous state exhibitor organizations, novel athletic stunts, including a uniquely arranged golf tournament and baseball game, and innumerable other features will combine to make what it is believed will be Missouri's greatest convention since the formation of the M.P.T.O.M.

Brilliant Audience Attends Premier of "Knighthood"

On Wednesday, October 11, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," had its initial showing in Chicago. The occasion was held in Balaban and Katz Roosevelt theatre, and was the most pretentious affair of its kind ever known to Chicago.

A great audience packed the theatre to the doors and crowds were held out throughout the evening. Among those witnessing the performance were State officials, Mayor Thompson, Superintendent of Police Fitzmorris and many of the City Council. A large number of society people were in attendance, the social aggregation being headed by Mrs. Kellogg Fairbanks and numerous prominent people in Chicago business life.

Splendid stage setting and lighter effects had been prepared by Joseph Urban and a special orchestra rendered the musical setting used at the Criterion theatre, New York.

"Timothy's Quest" Will Have Coast Run

For the Los Angeles premiere of "Timothy's Quest," Kate Douglas Wiggin's story, distributed by American Releasing Corporation, Miller's theatre has booked the picture for three weeks beginning October 16.

Directed by Sidney Oleott with a cast including Joseph Depew, Baby Helen Rowland, Marie Day, Margaret Seddon, Vivia Ogden, Bertram Marburgh and Gladys Leslie, the quaint story of New England life has received unstinted praise from the trade press.

John Jasper to Re-Enter Ranks of Producers

JOHAN JASPER, general manager of Hollywood Studios, Inc., is en route for the East for the purpose of concluding arrangements for the production of five specials. While in New York, Mr. Jasper will conduct trade showings of two five-reelers recently completed under his supervision.

The first of these two features is titled "Over Here" and presents an all-star cast which includes Estelle Taylor, Tully Marshall, Wilfred Lucas, Snitz Edwards, Jean Perry, Ben Deely, and Kate Price. Bertram Bracken directed the subject. The other feature, titled "The Challenge," was produced by Charles J. Hall from an original story by Warner Van Valkenburg. Jack O'Brien directed.

Hilyer Is Directing "Miles Brewster"

Lambert Hilyer is directing "Miles Brewster and The Super-Sex" at the Hollywood Studios for distribution by American Releasing Corporation. The story is by Frank R. Adams and originally appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

The screen adaptation was made by Hilyer and the cast is headed by Robert Gordon. Other important roles are in the hands of Tully Marshall, Lydia Knott, Gertrude Claire, Charlotte Pierce and Kenneth Gibson.

"The Black Domino" is F. B. O. Release

Film Booking Offices of America this week announces "The Black Domino," a society drama directed by Harry Revier, as a future release. It is interpreted by a cast including Jack Connolly, Dorothy Revier, Harry Van Meter, Juanita Hansen, Eugene Burr and Lee Willard.

"The Black Domino" tells the story of an unscrupulous doctor who uses his beautiful wife to find subjects for blackmail. F. B. O. has not yet announced a release date on this production.

Bert Ennis Given New Assignment

Through a special arrangement entered into between Louis Weiss and Herbert Lubin, Bert Ennis has been loaned to Associated Pictures Corporation for the purpose of handling a special exploitation campaign in the interests of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the first of a series of S-L special productions being made by Herbert Lubin and Arthur H. Sawyer for Metro Pictures Corporation.

This work will be in addition to Ennis' duties as director of publicity for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation.

Beban Combination Is Doing Well

The first three of George Beban's season of thirty weeks in his novel combination of screen and spoken drama, "The Sign of The Rose," have met with pronounced success, according to the American Releasing Corporation, distributors of the picture.

At the California theatre, Los Angeles; The Miller at Wichita, and the Delnonte in St. Louis, four performances daily are said to have totaled an immense weekly business.

Publicity Concern Has New Affiliation

Harold C. Howe and B. M. Conlon, who conduct an advertising and publicity bureau in New York, announce that Rufus W. Gaynor, newspaper and magazine man, will be affiliated with their offices commencing next week.

Gaynor was for several years on the staff of the New York Evening Sun and later was on the editorial staff of the MacFadden publications. For two years he was confidential secretary to his father, the late Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York City.

Lichtman Exchanges Are Opened in South

THREE new Al Lichtman Exchanges are now operating in Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas. These are the offices which are to be conducted under the joint partnership recently entered upon between E. V. Richards, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Saenger Amusement Co. of New Orleans, and Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation. Henry Ginsberg, general salesmanager of the Lichtman organization, is back in town after spending some time in the South getting the Lichtman service under way. While in Atlanta he appointed R. A. Davis local manager.

In New Orleans, Ginsberg started the operation of the exchange to serve Mississippi and Louisiana. C. J. Briant will handle the business in those two states.

"Are You a Failure" Cast Selected

Lloyd Hughes, Madge Bellamy, Tom Sant-schi and Hal Cooley have been selected to portray the principal roles in "Are You a Failure?" which B. P. Schulberg placed in production last week on the coast.

The production is being directed by Tom Forman and will be the second of his series for releases through the Al Lichtman Corporation.

Remick Will Publish "Shadows" Song

"Ching, Ching, Chinaman," a song based on "Shadows," the new Preferred release through the Lichtman Corporation, will be published by the Jerome Remick Co., music publishers. The lyrics were written by Eve Unsell, head of the story department at the Schulberg studio, and the music by Louis Gottschalk.

Selznick News Reel Made Part of Eastern Unit

THE Selznick News Reel has been definitely made a part of David O. Selznick's Eastern production unit. This arrangement put the news reel together with the Theda Bara special production under David Selznick's sole supervision. While the current events pictorial unit was at first jointly supervised by Myron and David Selznick, for some time past it has been entirely in the hands of the latter as managing director. The arrangement has been made permanent and given official approval.

The staff of the Selznick News is continually being enlarged, the latest addition being Agnes Smith, formerly of the New York Morning Telegraph and recently engaged in production work of the West Coast. Miss Smith is exceptionally well equipped for the position of associate editor and is expected to enhance the value of the Women's Supplement as well as the reel in general.

Lawrence Darmour, editor-in-chief, has given the matter of foreign service close attention and the Selznick News now has one of the best foreign staffs in news reel circles, every civilized country in the world being covered.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

Among the Exhibitors

CHARLES J. SCHAEFER has purchased the Garfield Theatre Building, for a cash consideration of $60,000. The house, which is located at 2844 W. Madison Street, has a seating capacity of seven hundred and two stores adjoining. The lot is 125 x 72 feet. Mr. Schaefer has been the lessee and has paid rent for this house for thirteen years. The Garfield was one of the first movie houses on the west side, having been erected in 1909. Manager Charles F. Ryan reports that no change in policy is contemplated.

D. Frisini has purchased the Gem theatre at Litchfield, Illinois, from W. B. Kneeder. Mr. Frisini is already interested in houses which he operates at Taylorville and Kincaid.

The opening of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," for an extended run at the Roosevelt theatre, brought several representatives of Cosmopolitan Productions to Chicago, including H. B. Carver, in general charge of the production; Joe Urban, who arranged the stage settings and lighting effects, and Publicist Richardson, who is collaborating with the Balaban & Katz publicity staff in putting the picture over. A special orchestra director and a number of musicians, who will augment the regular Roosevelt orchestra, also were brought on from New York for the run.

L. H. Gumbiner, who is interested in the De Luxe, Bertha, Parkside and other Chicago theatres, has left for Los Angeles, where he owns the Garrick theatre. Mr. Gumbiner has been in Chicago since last Spring and expects to spend several months on the west coast before returning.

Manager Sparr is again running the Village theatre at Wilmette, after a year's absence in Florida. Jim Salter, who has been manager during his absence has gone east and it is understood may accept a position there.

Frank Thielan is recovering from the effects of injuries received recently when a heavy stone fell from a building, fracturing his skull. He was able to go to his office for the first time last Saturday. While it will be necessary for him to go slow for a while, his friends will be glad to know that all danger of serious complications seems to be past, and it is expected that he will progress until he is again as strong and well as ever.

A party of Chicago exhibitors left to attend the convention of the Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners, at Flint, Michigan, on Monday night. Those making the trip were Messrs. Fitzpatrick, McElroy, Louis Frank and John Silha, President Al Steffes of the Minnesota Motion Picture Theatre Owners, made the journey from the Windy City to Flint in company with the Chicago exhibitors. The Flint convention was expected to be the largest and most important meeting of Michigan exhibitors ever held and among national celebrities expected to be present were Will Hays and Sidney Cohen.

Mrs. Pearce has sold her New Brookline theatre at South Chicago Avenue and Cottage Grove Avenue to Karb & Lang, who will continue operating it as a high-grade house.

Director Eddie Laemmle and Production Manager Martin Bendheim, stopped off at Chicago for several days last week, en route to the coast where Mr. Laemmle will start work on a new serial. They had just returned from Europe, where Mr. Laemmle was to direct a picture but was incapacitated from going through with the schedule by illness. This young director was kept busy receiving congratulations on the splendid success of his "The Days Of Buffalo Bill," in the Chicago territory, and many hopes were expressed that his next big serial or feature will have the same Americanization and entertainment value which he incorporated into "The Days of Buffalo Bill."

C. D. Siegler is putting the finishing touches on his eight hundred seat Eastside theatre, which is located at 10555 Ewing Avenue, and expects to open it at an early date.

The admission prices for the run of "Robin Hood" at Cohan's Grand, will be fifty cents to two dollars, according to a decision arrived at early this week. Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, as well as many notables prominent in political business and social life, are scheduled to be present at the opening performance on Sunday night, October 15th.

Around the Exchanges

CRESWELL SMITH, manager of the United Artists Chicago exchange since its opening, has been called to the New York headquarters of this organization and will leave shortly to assume his new duties. The post made vacant by his promotion will be filled by E. J. Eichenlaub, also widely known in the central west film circles, who recently severed his connection with Associated First National, with which organization he had been associated for the past three years, latterly as manager of the exchange.

Mr. Smith has been actively engaged in the motion picture business in Chicago for seven years and has a very large number of friends in the industry, who regret to see him leave, but unite in congratulating him on his advancement.

Manager Maynard Schwartz of Educational's Chicago exchange, reports business good and that his salesmen have brought in many desirable contracts recently, including one for the entire Educational product to be shown at Ascher Brothers houses, and another lining up Balaban & Katz, and a third with Lubliner & Trinz, to show the Sherlock Holmes two reelers every other week. Educational now has its bookkeeping and film distributing departments located on the same floor as its offices at 831 S. Wabash Avenue and is in better shape than ever before to give first-class service to exhibitors.

Frank P. Ishmare, star Metro salesman, is back on the job after being ill for a week, and showed us a list of new contracts signed up. The total runs well up into five figures and brings the total far past his best previous record for a like period.

A trade showing and lunch was held at the Blackstone on Tuesday with Manager Rozelle of Metro as host and Max Graf, producer of "The Forgotten Law," and who recently signed up to distribute his pictures through Metro, guest of honor. "The Forgotten Law" was screened and very well received by the large party of exhibitors and representatives of the trade and daily press, who were present at the luncheon.

Herman Stern, sales manager of Universal's Chicago exchange, put on a special midnight pre-view of "The Kentucky Derby," heralded as "the greatest racing picture of the age," for members of the theatrical profession now appearing in the city, and motion picture exhibitors, at the Randolph Theatre on Thursday night. A large and appreciative audience, including many prominent in theatrical circles were present and gave the picture a great reception. Reginald Denny, whose Leather Pushers series has won public favor, is star of the new feature and does excellent work throughout.

L. A. Rozelle, manager of Metro, and for a long time one of the eligible bachelors of film row, stole a march on his friends last week when he was quietly married. Mrs. Rozelle, before her marriage, was a resident of Baltimore, Maryland, which accounts for several hasty trips which the popular Metro manager has recently made to the home of the diamond back terrapin and the mallard duck.

Film Booking Offices of America held a pre-release showing, with de luxe orchestra accompaniment, of "In the Name of the Law," at Aryan Grotto on Monday of this week. A large and representative audience of exhibitors attended and comments on the feature were decidedly complimentary.

Lee Woodyatt, well known film salesman, is again connected with Select Pictures and will cover Illinois and Indiana territory for Manager Eddie Silverman.

At the annual meeting of the Chicago Film, Board of Trade which was held at 804 S. Wabash Avenue last week, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Eddie Silverman, president; Joe Friedman, vice-president; J. A. Steinson, secretary; and Maynard Schwartz, treasurer.

M. M. Hirsch has been promoted from sales manager of Paramount's Milwaukee exchange, to manager of the Peoria exchange, which has just been opened. Mr. Hirsch is well known around Chicago, where he was connected with the film business for several years.

Exchange Manager Clyde Eckhardt, has appointed George Oldfield sales manager for Fox Educational in this territory. Mr. Oldfield is well qualified for this position having had valuable experience both in the amusement and educational fields.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Pink Gods—

Bebe Daniels' popularity sufficient to carry it through. Theme too far fetched some patrons said. Excellent receipts. (Middle West.)

Favorably received at my house. Good business. (West.)

Bebe Daniels is popular here and this one went over big for a week. (Middle West.)

Manslaughter—

Extensive exploitation made this picture go over big with us. Holding it over a second week. (Middle West.)

Started on Thursday, it did a lockout business. Next day was rainy but business was good just the same. It hasn't broken any house records but might yet. Meighan's pictures take and the story seems to have been widely read. (Middle West.)

Lacks story but brimful of gorgeous stuff that pulled well with women; held up fairly well for two weeks. (Middle West.)

One of the best made and acted features that we have had. Great audience film with sustained interest. Great business. Best Thomas Meighan has had. (East.)

The Old Homestead—

This picture has some great photography, but seemed below average and brought fair business only. A too obvious attempt to spread a 3-act stage production into feature film length. (East.)

While Satan Sleeps—

Good story but no particular drawing power. Held up fair for one week. (Middle West.)

Very interesting picture. (Middle West.)

The Man Unconquerable—

Business not so good. The title seemed to be puzzling. No other special reason except that the picture wasn't strong enough to pull them in. (Middle West.)

Burning Sands—

Good picture and box office bet. (West.)

The Bonded Woman—

A good attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

The Face in the Fog—

Splendid mystery picture marked by fine acting of Lionel Barrymore. Good box office puller. (Middle West.)

Appropriate ad copy used by Walnut theatre, Cincinnati, on "The Eternal Flame"

FIRST NATIONAL

Kindred of the Dust—

A week of good attendance with this one. (Middle West.)

The Eternal Flame—

Proved a very profitable attraction. Norma Talmadge has an immense following and they all wanted to see her first of the new season. (Middle West.)

The Bond Boy—

Pleased my patrons and good business resulted. (West.)

The Woman He Married—

Very good picture. (Middle West.)

The Silent Call—

Went over big for one week with special exploitation. Fine outdoor picture. Drew big with young folk. (Middle West.)

The Cave Girl—

Just ordinary. Held up three days. (Middle West.)

Lorna Doone—

Beautiful picture. Recommended by Better Films Clubs. Photography fine. Educational and entertaining at the same time. Business fair. (Middle West.)

FOX

A Fool There Was—

Those who saw it seemed to like the picture which has been given good production. But the manager's opinion is that people expected something spicy and found this too moral to suit. (Middle West.)

Matinees fair, nights capacity for week run. Great attraction for class that attends this house. (East.)

For Big Stakes—

A Tom Mix of not unusual kind. Did pretty good business. Nothing to kick about. (Middle West.)

The Fast Mail—

Very good picture of the melodramatic type. Did not draw so well because of hot weather and possibly because it is altogether different from the kind of features the house has been running. (Middle West.)

Excellent melodrama, that did fairly well considering a week of 80 degrees temperature at this time of year. (Middle West.)

Monte Cristo—

Opened to capacity, but fell off last half of week. An attraction that interests a certain class only. (East.)

The Yosemite Trail—

A great scenic picture and one that holds them to the last. Did very good business here.

Nero—

This proved one of the biggest audience pullers of the season with an increased admission. Packed with thrills. (East.)

Just Tony—

Up to the good things said about it. Entire families came to see. Great business. (Middle West.)

METRO

Broadway Rose—

Spectacular feature in which Mae Murray does good work. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

Knocked box office records for a goal. S. R. O. all week. Patrons enthusiastic. (East.)

I Can Explain—

A very pleasing picture with humorous touch. Drew very well. (Middle West.)

The Five Dollar Baby—

Fairly good entertainment and box office value. (West.)

Youth to Youth—

The first starring vehicle of Billy Dove. It had its world premier here and if success here is a criterion it will succeed everywhere. (East.)

The Prisoner of Zenda—

This picture did not do as well as was expected. The advanced prices may have had their effect. Anyway it did not seem to strike the heart chord of the public. (Middle West.)

Hate—

This one held up fairly well, but not very strong as a box office attraction. (East.)

SELZNICK

Love Is an Awful Thing—

A real comedy that is packed with true laughter. Best liked here of anything that Owen Moore has done, and played to very good business. (East.)

Fine picture with good business. (West.)

Star hasn't drawn so well in former picture, but this one seemed to be better liked. Did satisfactory business. (Middle West.)

Comedy in which Owen Moore makes good. Holding for second week on account of big business. (Middle West.)

John Smith—

Picture drew satisfactory business with nothing rushing about it. Star seems well liked. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Human Hearts—

This one drew well for a week's run and won favorable comment. (Middle West.)

Homespun drama which our patrons liked. Business good. (Middle West.)

The Storm—

Played to consistently big business all week. This is a picture that cannot fail to make a hit. (Middle West.)

The Long Chance—

Fair production and average box office receipts. (West.)

ALLIED PRODUCERS AND DISTRIBUTORS

The Glorious Adventure—

Tremendous advertising campaign created unusual interest in the star, and brought big business. Picture was only fair, but curiosity to see Lady Diana Manners crowded the house. (Middle West.)

Seemed to be well liked. At any rate business was good. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

A Rogue's Romance—

Did so well the first week that it was held over for a second week's run. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

The Sign of the Rose—

The biggest sensation of the season. Not widely advertised in advance but played to capacity throughout the week. (Middle West.)

EAST AND WEST COAST PRODUCTION NOTES

Studio and Player Brevities

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

Here and There

Irving Cummings' next production for Principal Pictures Corporation will be "The Last Days of Pompeii." Cummings is now editing "Chicago Sal."

Charles Seeling has completed "The Purple Dawn" for independent release and will shortly go to New York to complete distribution arrangements.

Henry McCarty is directing Lester Cuneo in "The Devil's Ghost," with a cast including Thelma Worth, Lafayette McKee, Clark Comstock, Olin Frances and Phil Gastrock. Production is under supervision of Charles Mack.

Jess Robbins has begun his third comedy drama for Vitagraph, featuring Edward Horton, at the Fine Arts studios, from an original story by Alfred Goodrich, temporarily titled, "The Trouble Buster." The cast includes Edith Roberts, leading woman; W. E. Lawrence, heavy; James Corrigan and Lloyd Ingraham, character leads. It is a story of small town newspaper life.

Dick Hatton and players are filming "Playing Double." Ethel Shannon is the feminine lead and Dick Rush is directing.

Joe Rock has completed his fourth two-reel comedy for Federated, titled, "Shipwrecked." His previous comedies have been titled, "Little Red Riding Hood," "Aladdin," and "Ali Baba."

Myrtle Stedman will play the name part in "The Famous Mrs. Fair," the first Fred Niblo production at the Mayer studios. Carmel Myers has been added to the cast.

John Stahl left Tuesday for New York with "The Dangerous Age." Reginald Barker continues editing "Hearts Aflame."

Victor Schertzinger, directing Katherine MacDonald in "The Scarlet Lily," and a company including Orville Caldwell, Stuart Holmes, Edith Lyle, Adele Farrington, Russell Gordon and Grace Morse, has gone to Arrowhead for exteriors.

The Tom Forman company is at Eureka, Cal., making lumber camp scenes for "Are You a Failure?" by Larry Evans.

Gasnier is now filming "The Hero," from a continuity by Eve Unsell. The cast includes Gaston Glass, Barbara La Marr, David Butler, Doris Pawn, John Sainpolis, Martha Mattox and Ethel Shannon.

B. P. Schulberg is at Kansas City for a conference with Al Lichtman.

The J. K. McDonald Productions, Inc., announces the engagement of "Little Ben" Alexander for the company supporting the youthful star of the Johnny Jones comedies.

Irene Rich has been cast for one of the leading feminine roles in "Michael O'Halloran," the first of a series of adaptations of her popular novels which are being produced by Gene Stratton Porter at the Thomas H. Ince studios. Miss Rich plays the role of Nellie Min-turn. Other members of the cast include Josie Sedgwick, Charles Clary, Charles Mailles, William Boyd, Claire McDowell, Harlette Laurel and Ida Schumaker. Leo Meehan is directing, under the personal supervision of Mrs. Porter.

The Arrow Film Corporation is in receipt of a telegram from Dell Henderson who is at the present time in Maine engaged in the production of "Jacqueline" for the Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., to the effect that, owing to the forest fires which are raging in that state, he has engaged the services of four additional camera men for the obtaining of such scenes as under different conditions it would be absolutely impossible to get.

Philip Hatkin, cameraman, has just returned from England after an absence of over two years. He went over with Harley Knoles to photograph "Carnival," and has remained in England and Germany since that time, working for Alliance and other companies.

Research work and costume designing have begun for Charles Ray's most ambitious photoplay production, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," which will follow "The Girl I Loved," a film version of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, cutting of which is now well under way.

Ruth Stonehouse has finished work in "The Flash," a newspaper story, produced by Premium Pictures in Portland, Ore. She has accepted the offer to appear in another Premium production, "The Firebrand," filming on which will begin at once.

Madge Kennedy, following her stage appearance in the Little theatre in "Spite Corner," last Friday evening, sat in at the first showing of the completed print of "The Purple Highway," her first motion picture production in over two years.

With nine production companies now at work at the Fine Arts studios in Hollywood, Cal., the management of the plant has announced that present indications are that the studios will soon be filled to production capacity. Among the producers working there are G. M. Anderson, Charles Mack, Charles R. Seeling, Jess Robbins, Finis Fox, Victor Halperin and others.

G. M. Anderson's latest two-reel comedy, starring Stan Laurel, is a burlesque on the recent success, "Blood and Sand." The story has been titled, "Mud and Sand," and is being directed by Gil Pratt.

Work is progressing steadily on the first of the new Frankie Lee two-reel comedies. It is believed that production will have been completed by the latter part of October. The title of the first Frankie Lee production is "Last Night When You Kissed Blanche Thompson," an adaptation of the American Magazine story by Bess Aldrich.

Production has actually started on the first Fatty Karr comedy. In an interview recently sent out by a large newspaper syndicate Fatty Karr told of his ambition to fill the gap left by Roscoe Arbuckle. He stated that he had an opportunity to imitate Arbuckle about three years ago but would not stoop to mere imitation.

Unity Pictures, Inc., producers of the society and domestic drama "Why Do Men Marry?" announces that the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, its parent organization, has approximately forty big special film productions ready for release. Its second production now in preparation is called "A Woman's Story." It is something of a screen novelty, being told in diary form.

Mary Alden will leave San Juan, Porto Rico, the latter part of next week and immediately upon arriving in New York will start a new motion picture production.

Ward Lascelle has completed his production of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Mind Over Motor," starring Trixie Friganza.

It is reported that the title of Charles Chaplin's comedy will be, as originally planned, "The Pilgrim." Many comedy novelties are presented in the course of the action. A fire scene, it is said, reaches the very height of absurdity and hilarious burlesque.

When Norma Talmadge returns to Hollywood, she will find waiting for her the completed script and continuity for "Within the Law" which Director Frank Lloyd is busy with just now.

Mack Sennett has selected Roy Del Ruth to direct the next Ben Turpin comedy special. Director Del Ruth is at present busy with the scenario staff, under the supervision of Mr. Sennett, preparing the script for this Turpin picture.

Teddy, the Mack Sennett comedy dog, in company with his trainer, Joe Simpkins, took leave of the big comedy lot in Edendale, for a brief period, during which he will appear in vaudeville, on the Orpheum circuit.

Richard Jones, the director, is back from spending a month in New York, where he made tests of leads in several stage successes for Sennett. He reports several contracts signed, which will be announced upon the termination of the players' present contracts in New York. Jones will direct Phyllis Haver in her first multiple reel feature.

Mabel Normand is expected back this week.

Harry Garson is now editing "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," from the James Whitcomb Riley poem of the same name.

Warner Brothers Items

The cast for "The Little Church Around the Corner," adapted by Olga Printzlau from the novel by Marion Russell, to be directed by E. Mason Hopper, will include Claire Windsor, Kenneth Harlan, Bessie Love, Walter Long, Winter Hall and Carl Harbaugh. Production starts this week.

Monte Blue and Marie Prevost will be the leads in "Brass," under the direction of Sidney Franklin, from a continuity by Julian Josephson. Production will commence on Oct. 23.

William Seiter has completed shooting all scenes for "The Beautiful and Damned."

After a week's try-out in Long Beach, Wesley Barry, Warner Bros. popular boy star, has taken his brand new vaudeville act and hied himself to the San Francisco Orpheum, where he will play a week. He comes to the Orpheum, Los Angeles, next week.

An informal preview of Wesley Barry's latest starring vehicle, "Little Heroes of the Street," which is a Harry Rapf production, will be given about the middle of next week. The cutting and tiling has been completed.

On the Goldwyn Lot

Kate Lester has been put under contract by Goldwyn.

"The Christian" was given its initial try-out preview at the Paramount theatre, Hollywood, last Wednesday.

Frank Urson, director, of the Neilan staff, is recovering from a major operation at the Good Samaritan hospital.

At Universal City

"The Madonna of Avenue A" will be Gladys Walton's next vehicle. The story is an original by Bradley King, adapted by Hugh Hoffman. King Baggot will direct. The picture is now being cast.

The complete cast for "The Ghost Patrol" includes Bessie Love, Ralph Graves, George Nichols and Lydia Yeamans Titus. It will be directed by Nat Ross.

Edward Kull has completed "Tales of the Fish Patrol," from the Jack London stories, with Jack Mulhall and Louise Lorraine.

The Lumberjack series, starring Roy Stewart, and "The Leather Pushers," starring Reginald Denny, have been completely filmed.

Robert Hill, directing the serial, "Wolves of Society," has Jack Mulhall and Margaret Livingston as leads, and Robert Anderson, Lucille Rickson and Wade Boteler as principals.

William Worthington has completed "Kindled Courage," starring Hoot Gibson.

"It's All Prepared"

If you find the press book has failed to arrive—or you have misplaced it and you must get your newspaper advertising exploitation out in a limited time without immediate means of securing the information you most need—what a wonderful relief it would be to you to have a competent assistant tell you "It's all prepared. I have 'doped' out several ideas. Take your pick. I know they are good because they have proven successful in localities similar to this."

You would congratulate yourself on having such a man in your employ.

THE BOOKING GUIDE is that kind of an assistant. Use it in connection with your NEWS files and do away with your exploitation worries.

THE NEXT ISSUE WILL BE READY SOON.

Fire-Trucks Aid Campaign on "The Storm" at Frisco

San Francisco, Cal.—Manager F. A. Flader of the Frolic theatre caused great excitement during the showing of "The Storm." The first day he had fake telegrams from prominent men all over the United States posted on the front of the house. The Postal Telegraph Company fixed these up. For Saturday and Sunday nights a permit was obtained from the city to run fire-trucks blowing sirens down the street at approximately forty miles an hour. However, as the policeman across the street had not been advised of this permission, he arrested the manager, but it was soon fixed up and taken as a joke. That "stunt" caused a great deal of comment and attracted attention. Just as the truck arrived in front of the Frolic, a large sign slowly dropped from the roof which read, "'The Storm' Is Here."

Cut-outs were used in the marquee and when the trucks arrived smoke was shown in the lobby. This, together with the special lighting effects, caused still more excitement and comments. Manager Flader stated the idea paid well.

Girl Journalist Gives Boost to "Hurricane's Gal"

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—"Downey Downer," Milwaukee's expert girl journalist, who tackles a different job every day as a novelty feature writer for the Wisconsin News, became a combination aviatrix-exploitee in one when "Hurricane's Gal" played the Strand theatre, Milwaukee.

Manager Weisfeldt conceived the bright idea of sending this journalist, whose articles have been a fad in Milwaukee, up with an aeroplane artist who was to drop passes from the sky. "Downey" had been a shoe black, newsboy, ballyhoo artist, conductress and policewoman the first five days of the week and the sky had no terrors for her. Her articles in each of her temporary employments created a sensation and made her writings a fad in Milwaukee.

In addition to the publicity on the flying stunt, Manager Weisfeldt, in this manner secured a follow up in "Downey's" article that was good for comment as long as "Hurricane's Gal" ran at the Strand.

"Eternal Flame" Exploited by 'Rickshaw at Boston

Boston, Mass.—Manager Hookilio of the Olympia theatre took the angle of exploiting by contrast in putting "The Eternal Flame" over recently. The obvious thing, of course, for a street ballyhoo was a French, horse-drawn cabriolet, but there were none available in the city.

Refusing to be beaten, the resourceful manager went to the other extreme and decided upon a ballyhoo which, if it didn't express the story, would attract attention by contrast. He engaged a 'rickshaw and had it drawn by a coolie dressed in the costume of 1820. The sign on the coolie's shirt read:

Norma Talmadge never rode in a 'rickshaw but she is wonderful in "The Eternal Flame" now playing at Gordon's Olympia theatre.

Famous Boardwalk Sees "In the Name of the Law" Stunt

Atlantic City, N. J.—The famous Boardwalk—stringently guarded against advertising—was the scene of exploitation on "In the Name of the Law" when that picture played the Criterion theatre here. Charlie Giegerich, exploiteer, won the co-operation of the police, and the picture was brought to the attention of all who promenaded the famous avenue.

The special novelty, police hats, which were issued by the department of publicity and advertising of the F. B. O. did the trick. These hats were distributed to hundreds of newsboys and other youngsters of the city, with instructions that the wearer "do" the Boardwalk during the entire day. Five thousand of these youngsters brought the attention of the picture to five hundred thousand on the Boardwalk. This is believed to be a proof of the value of such inexpensive novelties, inasmuch as any more ostentatious form of advertising would have been tabooed by the authorities.

Mr. Giegerich also was able to plant the three-sheet cut-outs, which decorated the Grand Central Terminal during the New York run of the picture, in all the railroad terminals in Atlantic City. This was done with the permission of the police officials, and visitors to the famous resort were all apprised of the coming attraction.

Ladies, of the American Legion auxiliary wore these costumes to exploit "Cardigan" at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

House Dressed Elaborately For "Blood and Sand"

Baltimore, Md.—With a special stage setting, costumed house attaches, a lobby orchestra and a decorated front, the Century theatre, largest of the Whitehurst chain, put over "Blood and Sand" with a loud bang.

The entire front was draped with yellow and red streamers reaching from the roof to the top of the marquee. The marquee lights were alternate yellow and red. Outside the theatre throughout the performances were stationed two employees in toreador costumes whose task it was to keep the patrons properly lined up for the box office. Inside the lobby was a four piece string orchestra, also in Spanish costume.

Doorkeepers and ushers were garbed as Spaniards, even to the dashing little "side-boards" for the men and combs for the girls, and a special prologue, in which Bobby Tremaine, Spanish dancer, and Joseph Parsons, baritone, singing the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen," were featured, was put on just before the feature was shown.

The stage setting arranged for the production consisted of rich draperies of rose hue, on which strong rose lights were thrown. The set was erected under supervision of George A. McDermit, general manager of the chain.

Ford Converted Into Trackless Engine for Ballyhoo

PASADENA, CAL.—Manager N. J. Fleming, of the Pasadena Theatre, desired a vehicle for a street ballyhoo exploiting "The Crossroads of New York." So he secured some beaver board, and a sign painter. These were all that were necessary to turn a Ford coupe into a smoking engine, the hood serving for the boiler, with a smoke stack, bell and cord attached, while the body was painted gray with dots to represent the rivets. Mr. Fleming managed to get artificial smoke from the stack, and the incongruous mess was enough to attract attention, and according to the management the contrivance served as one of the best ballyhoos yet.

Messenger Boys Get Quincy, Ill. All Excited Over "The Storm"

Quincy, Ill.—The Star theatre, Quincy, Ill., put over "The Storm" big, playing to capacity crowds for five days. H. E. Nelson, owner of the house, aided and abetted by Maurice Engel, publicity sleuth of the St. Louis Universal office, had the town dizzy for a day or so. They were wondering what was going to happen until Nelson relieved the suspense by telling them that "The Storm" would break at the Star on August 21.

Here's the plot: A few days before the opening a number of lads toggled in messengers' uniforms, dropped in on busy merchants and handed them a telegram which read: "Warning! 'The Storm' is coming. Star theatre." About 5,000 of the messages were distributed.

The first night the street cars couldn't get by. They kept coming until the last reel was shown.

In addition Nelson put on a contest on the Quincy Herald and got some real space. Prizes were given for the best answers to the query: "Which should she choose, a city or an out-doors man?"

Baby Contest Film Aids "Five Dollar Baby" in Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis.—By tying up with the Wisconsin News, the Strand theatre recently put over a baby contest stunt in connection with the showing of "The Five Dollar Baby" that brought extensive publicity.

A week before "The Five Dollar Baby" was booked to be shown at the Strand the News carried a front-page story about the contest. It announced that it would take motion pictures of babies in Washington Park on Thursday afternoon and on Friday afternoon at the Lake. These pictures, showing the children in action, would be flashed on the screen the following week at the Strand, along with the feature, "The Five Dollar Baby."

Upon entering the theatre each patron received a blank ballot. After the film showing the baby contestants was run off each spectator filled out the ballot giving the number of the child which he considered the "cutest" baby.

Five prizes were awarded to the five leading contestants in the final rating. The first received a savings account of $5 each month for six months. The baby given second prize received $5 a month for three months, and the next three babies were presented with savings accounts of $5 each. All five savings accounts were opened with the American Exchange Bank in Milwaukee.

Complete Campaign Promotes "Great 8" at Columbus, Ga.

Columbus, Ga.—Major I. C. Holloway of the Rialto theatre put over a campaign recently that is applicable to any "Great Pictures Season," "Better Pictures Month" or any such special series. Holloway called his group "The Great 8," all to be played during the month of September. The object of booking and grouping eight big attractions at this time was to make a decided effort to stimulate business at the beginning of the new season.

The campaign was started about two weeks in advance by teasing over the phrase "Great 8." Small cards, about 6x6, with just this phrase printed on were tacked all over town, attached to automobiles, left on store counters, etc. Several large beaver board 8's with the word "Great" painted across were cut out and displayed in prominent places. Mr. Holloway mounted one on his car.

Special one-sheets were printed and posted all over town, announcing the "Great 8" season. Three of these were posted with each 24-sheet used on the various attractions as they come along.

Three thousand large size blotters were printed with a calendar for September on the face. Each three days, except Sunday, was boxed in with a light line and the name of the attraction for that three days included in the box. On one side of the calendar was an announcement of the "Great 8" at the Rialto. Now instead of following the line of least resistance and distributing these blotters in offices and banks, a number of young ladies were secured to go from house to house, tell the people something about the attractions, and leave a blotter as a souvenir. And incidentally the young ladies secured information that will be of value to the theatre. This included names and addresses and birthdays.

Novelties Tied Up with Song to Aid Police Picture

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa.—The distribution of novelties was handled in a new way by Charlie Giegerich, Philadelphia exploiteer, recently, when "In the Name of the Law" ran here.

One of the novelties issued by F. B. O. on this picture is a police whistle, and Giegerich tied up with a burlesque show which was playing in the town at the same time by having the chorus distribute the novelties from the stage during the singing of a number called "Whistle." The audience was invited to blow the whistles as an accompaniment to the song.

This unique way of distribution not only helped to advertise the picture but proved of equal benefit to the burlesque show, putting the song over in a bigger way.

"Grandma's Boy" Put Over by Stunts at Orlando

Orlando, Fla.—Manager M. F. Estes, of the Beacham theatre, with an attractive, flashy lobby display and a couple of stunts, put "Grandma's Boy" over to the best business of the summer.

Slides were run calling for fifty boys who wanted to earn free admission to be in front of the theatre at 10:00 a. m. on opening day. More than a hundred showed up, but that made it all the better. Fifty of these were given Harold Lloyd spectacles and two large banners reading, "On our way, etc.," and told to march about town until 1:00 p. m. About fifty other boys decided that, even if they couldn't get free admission, they wouldn't miss all the fun, so they joined in the parade.

A special appeal was made to grandmothers by announcing that every grandmother accompanied by two paid admissions would be admitted free. Quite a few took advantage of this offer.

For the lobby display the front was closed in with beaver board except for entrance and exit doors on the sides. Against this background cut-outs from both styles of 24-sheets were posted. The blank spaces were filled in with hand lettering and a decorative painting of a picket fence. On the sidewalk at each side of the lobby stood 6-sheet cut-outs of Lloyd.

Another large cut-out was mounted on a construction fence directly across the street from the theatre.

Kansas City Police Act to Aid "In the Name of the Law"

Kansas City, Mo.—With the aid of the police department and a movie camera, Dave Harding, manager of the Liberty theatre, and Hal Horn, exploiteer, succeeded in obtaining highly valuable publicity for the showing of "In the Name of the Law." The stunt is best described by the following, from the Kansas City Journal:

"Stop! In the Name of the Law!"

As the sharp command rang out on the air yesterday afternoon, near Ninth and Walnut streets, pedestrians turned in alarm to see a man, revolver in hand, fleeing down the street with a policeman in close pursuit.

The man turned and aimed the revolver at his pursuer and snapped the trigger, but the weapon missed fire. The man darted ahead with renewed speed as the officer reached for his own weapon.

As the fugitive reached Ninth street there was a quick rush of whirring motors as several motorcycle policemen rounded the corner from the east. At the same moment an automobile filled with policemen came up the Ninth street hill and turned into Walnut street. In an instant eight policemen armed with riot guns jumped out and with motorcycle policemen quickly captured the fugitive.

Pedestrians lined the curb and crowded all the windows along the street. There was much excitement coupled with anxiety, as a fusillade of bullets was momentarily expected.

But the only shooting that occurred was the shooting of a scene for a motion picture. The film is being made under the supervision of the Film Booking Offices of America.

The scene will be shown in conjunction with "In the Name of the Law." The first showing will be in the Liberty theatre next week. The various phases of the police work in the capture of the bandit who attempted to hold up the Liberty theatre will be shown.

Tie-up with beauty parlor made by the Liberty theatre, Pittsburg, Pa., consisting of a window display of cosmetics

Beauty Parlor Makes Tie-Up on "Skin Deep" at Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The title of "Skin Deep" offered an attractive possibility of a tie-up to the manager of the Liberty theatre, so he arranged for a co-operative window display with a beauty parlor.

The result was a seven-day display on the attraction. The window featured cosmetics, powder, paint, hair bobbing and other kinds of hair, around a huge sign that announced the store's "make up" to be unexcelled and then featured the fact that Milton Sills was playing in "Skin Deep" at the Liberty theatre.

The fact that the featured player has the role of the ugliest man ever created as Bud Doyle in this production prompted the store to add: "Don't be a Bud Doyle."

Lets Uncle Sam Bring in Picture Patrons

Sabetha, Kans.—An inexpensive and practical method of reaching country people with advertising is being used by the Royal theatre, One-cent government post-cards bearing printed announcement of the current picture and one or more small illustrations are mailed to country patrons of the house.

The theatre management reports that this scheme is effective and was especially successful during a recent showing of the Vitaphone picture, "The Prodigal Judge."

"Put and Take" Program Issued by Kirksville, Mo., House

KIRKSVILLE, Mo.—A program that is novel and original has been issued by the Liberty theatre and will come out regularly hereafter. It is called a "Put and Take" program, and the cover reads:

"Put me in your pocket.
"Take me out every day from Sept. 4 to 9 and I will tell you what's going on at 'The Home of Perfect Pictures.'
"Put away all care.
"Take the whole family there."

Series of Numbers Make Odd Teaser Campaign

IMA, O.—Howard Phillips, manager of the Sigma theatre, used a teaser campaign recently that is applicable to almost any picture, and which he reports as highly effective.

For four days before announcing the feature, Phillips inserted in the newspapers daily a list of numbers, placed each day in different formation. The numbers read "1-3-5-7-9." The first ad contained the numbers and the words "Watch" and "Wait." The second ad in which the numbers were differently arranged said "The same numbers—what does it mean?" Three and four were similar.

The numbers it was explained finally were the hours at which the feature picture would begin to be shown at the theatre.

Old and New Dances Given as "Nice People" Prolog

BALTIMORE, Md.—One of the most picturesque prologs staged in a local theatre for some time was shown at the Century theatre when "Nice People" was the feature. The number was called "Fifty Years Ago and Today," and consisted of two dances.

The first was a minuet, of course in appropriate costume, danced by Doris Stanley and Thomas J. Tobin, and the second was the jazziest of modern jazz, performed by Theodora Loper and Ferdinand Frush. An added point of interest was the fact that Miss Loper only a short time ago won second prize in a contest for the most beautiful girl in Baltimore.

The prolog was arranged by Eugene N. Daley, new manager of the Century theatre, under supervision of C. E. Whitehurst, president of the company.

Plunkett Gets Original Dancer for "Two Flags" Prolog

New York, N. Y.—Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand theatre, by luck was able to obtain the services of Wilberta Babbidge, the dancer, who appeared in "Under Two Flags," to do the same dance as part of the prolog for the showing of the picture at the Strand. Dressed in colorful fez, jacket, skirt and boots of the Ouida heroine, Miss Babbidge looked not unlike Miss Dean.

The prolog was laid in an Algerian courtyard. More than a score of persons were used in the set, dressed as Algerian natives or French soldiers. The scene opened with a whirling dervish, followed by the dance by Miss Babbidge, applauded by natives and soldiers. Then followed a bit of coquetry between the dancer and the man representing the hero of the picture. The prolog ended with a baritone solo by this character, played by Joseph Martel. He sang "Less Than the Dust," with appropriate lighting effects.

This prolog expressed to an unusual extent the theme of the picture and prepared the audience for the exotic sequences of the film which followed immediately.

Police Parade Staged to Aid Picture at Augusta, Ga.

Augusta, Ga.—Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska theatre arranged an unusually thorough campaign on "In the Name of the Law," an important feature of which was a police parade. The police department, including the mounted squad and motorcycle division, and preceded by a band of 40 pieces, held a parade on Wednesday evening. After parading the main streets, they halted in front of the theatre, where the band gave an hour's concert.

The police department gave the theatre the privilege of billing the city as it saw fit, and for two weeks in advance of the showing all of the traffic towers were plastered with one and three-sheets. The police patrol was also decorated with a large banner reading, "See 'In the Name of the Law' at the Modjeska theatre." At all of the main street intersections were placed cut-outs made from the three-sheet. These cut-outs were made solid by placing them on heavy iron bases, which were loaned by the police department.

On the first day's showing, a band of 30 newsboys was corralled. These were turned loose near the local newspaper offices with the heralds on this picture, which were printed in the shape of a newspaper marked "Extra" and bearing the bold headline, "Bandits Rob Bank." The public scrambled for a copy of this "extra" and the stunt created much excitement.

For the first time in the history of the city, mounted twenty-four-sheets were stretched across the sidewalk, immediately in front of the theatre. A small passageway was cut in each, so that all passersby were forced to walk directly through the posters.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts were donated to the police benefit fund.

The police of St. Joseph, Mo., staged some real raids, of which motion pictures were taken, as part of their co-operation on "In the Name of the Law" at the Colonial theatre. W. M. Reinke, manager.

Masquerade Dinner Dance Used as "Masquerader" Stunt

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Masquerade dinner-dances were introduced at the Plantation Club, near here, to coincide with the playing of "The Masquerader" at the Kinema theatre. A personal appearance by Guy Bates Post, who gave a loving cup to the best dancers on the floor, drew a big attendance and warranted abundant newspaper space on both the club and the dance.

A masquerade dinner-dance is an effective tie-up on the picture, regardless of whether Guy Bates Post is available for a personal appearance.

Even further reaching in its radius was the tie-up made with Florient Face Powder, as the result of which an artistic window was put in the Owl Drug Store and 30,000 attractive packages of the powder given away by a masked ballyhoo artist in evening dress. The packages all bore the announcement that Richard Walton Tully would present Guy Bates Post at the Kinema theatre in "The Masquerader."

Ties Up with Postal Telegraph on "The Eternal Flame"

Louisville, Ky.—A tie-up with the Postal Telegraph was made by Manager George A. Sine of the Mary Anderson theatre on the world premiere of "The Eternal Flame," by which the telegraph company split costs on the distribution of 50,000 facsimile messages announcing that Louisville was distinguished by being the first city in the country to be permitted to show this picture. A desk and a messenger boy were put in the lobby to hand these out.

In the window of Geiger, the jeweler, a life size portrait of Miss Talmadge's head was installed, calling attention to the gorgeous pearls worn by the star in the picture.

A victrola dealer gave up his window to a miniature screen, upon which trailers of the picture and advertising lines for the Mary Anderson theatre were projected. There was no reciprocity for the dealer in this except that he recognized the advertising value of drawing crowds before his window.

Adjoining the theatre, a window display was installed that aroused enormous attention. The masked figures about to brand the fainting Duchess de Langeais were shown before a back drop opening upon a burning furnace. The arrangement was made from cut-outs and one painted drop, but it was an eye arrester.

Complete Campaign Put on "My Wild Irish Rose"

Denver, Col.—An unusually complete all-around campaign was put behind "My Wild Irish Rose" for its showing at the Isis theatre. Some of the features were:

The Denver Post, inspired by the little freckled face and big brown eyes of Mickey Daniels, started a freckle contest. And O, boy! how that contest drew. The Isis offered $100 for the freckledest kid. Denver's crop proved to be a large one. There were 197 youngsters left over after the prize winner had been announced. Mr. Bonfils, of the Post, rather than disappoint the children, added a new $1 note to the prize money for each of the 197.

The Isis put in a beautiful lobby for the opening, with an attractive young woman in Irish peasant garb distributing heralds. All Fox theatres ran the slides and trailers, and a singer furnished by Witmark & Sons sang "My Wild Irish Rose" at each performance in each theatre.

A private showing of the picture was arranged for the Catholic priests of the city, and a free matinee for the children of the orphan asylums.

A special matinee for the ladies, at which 1000 white carnations, dyed green, were given away.

Cards were prepared for the fifteen most popular soda fountains around the city, advertising "My Wild Irish Rose Sundae."

The music publishers dressed the windows of all music stores with special editions of the song and attractive advertising matter.

Witmark & Sons arranged for the two city bands playing in the parks to feature "My Wild Irish Rose" at each concert.

The Denver Post Radio Broadcasting station sent out a "Wild Irish Rose" night program of Irish melodies on opening night.

Manager Charles Sasseen, of the Tremont theatre, Galveston, arranged this beauty shop window on "The Beauty Shop"

Bugler on Street Advertises "One Clear Call"

La Crosse, Wis.—An effective stunt, which nearly any theatre could employ, was put over recently by W. H. Laurance, Minneapolis, First National exploiter, in cooperation with the manager of the Rivoli theatre, on "One Clear Call."

The campaign was begun some time in advance of the play date by a man dressed in civilian clothes who appeared at the principal corner in the city promptly at 5:45 and gave one long bugle call. Finishing, he disappeared as quickly as possible, avoiding the many questions directed at him. This was repeated every night at exactly the same time up to the opening day.

Shortly before the opening of the picture the bugler left the theatre dressed in full clan regalia and stationed himself at the usual corner where he gave the clan call from "The Birth of a Nation." As the last notes died away nine robed and hooded horsemen dashed out from an alley beside the Rivoli and lined up behind the bugler who led them in single file down the main thoroughfare, sounding his call every two or three minutes.

Every man, woman and child in La Crosse who could hear and move got out on the streets to see what the excitement was all about. By the time the theatre doors were ready to open there was not a person in town who did not know that the Rivoli theatre was putting on "One Clear Call."

Child Song Revue Contests Are Popular in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—M. B. Horwitz, who directs the fate of some eight prominent neighborhood theatres in Cleveland, listed under the Washington circuit, is having great success in several houses with the Child Song Revue Contest. Certain nights in the week are designated for the contests. On those nights any child in the neighborhood may compete for a prize—a five pound box of candy. The children enter the contest, sing from the stage, and the audience is the judge. The child getting the most applause wins the prize. This stunt is a great aid in bolstering up bad nights.

Music Conservatory Tied Up for Prolog

NORFOLK, Neb.—Big city prologs aren't feasible for theatres such as the Grand, but Manager R. A. Ballantyne was determined to make a special showing on "Smilin' Through."

Nearby was the Norfolk Conservatory of Music. He tied up with it for his exploitation and prolog. The girls distributed exploitation for the picture and twelve of them were engaged for the prolog. There were nine pianists, two violinists and a singer in the most elaborate showing ever staged at the Grand.

Bakery Distributes Slips with "Monte Cristo" Message

DALLAS, Texas.—The management of the Washington theatre made a tie-up with a local bakery and a laundry in connection with the showing of "Monte Cristo," by which slips advertising the picture went out in each loaf of bread and package of laundry. The slip sent out with the bakery products read:

"Best food for body—Butter Krust Bread.

"Best food for thought and pleasure—'Monte Cristo,' Washington theatre, Sept. 3. The mighty drama of the year."

More than 60,000 of these announcements were sent out, the only cost being the printing of the slips.

Junior Naval Reserve Night Is "Trouble" Booster

Boston, Mass.—Manager Hokailo, of Gordon's Washington Street Olympia, worked out a novel stunt during the run of "Trouble," starring Jackie Coogan. Though the stunt had no immediate connection with the theme of the film it certainly brought them in. He held a "First Junior Naval Reserve Night" all through the week, with officers of the reserve on hand at all times, and "jackies" in the lobby to distribute pamphlets.

He announced the special event by a large stretcher just under the lobby arch, hung a twenty-five foot stretcher labeled with name of star and picture under the arch, six feet deep, and surmounted the arch with a cut-out head of Jackie Coogan standing about eight feet high. Announcements of the event were also heralded via the screen and slides.

The week had its climax on Thursday, the real Junior Naval Reserve Night, when many prominent state, city and navy officials were invited to the theatre, many of them, including Mayor Curley, giving short speeches from the boxes.

Varied Campaign Put Over For "Penrod," at Anniston, Ala.

Anniston, Ala.—"Penrod" was exploited from several angles by Manager Roy Smart, of the Noble theatre.

Two weeks in advance the campaign was opened with a series of slides and a display of photos in the lobby. Then about one week in advance a prominent window was secured and a display of cut-outs, photos, cards, etc., was put in. The store that supplied the window sold 100 tickets at one cent each. They advertised this as a sale of tickets to the Noble, just as they would advertise a sale of calico. The tickets were good for the first show on opening day only.

On opening day the town was covered with ballyhoos. Six boys wearing barrels were walking and running all over town and making plenty of noise while doing it. The barrels had been painted white and lettered with ads for the show. And the boys wore very abbreviated clothing, making it appear that their only covering was the aforesaid barrels.

Guy H. Aiken, assistant manager of the Capitol theatre, Macon, Ga., prepared this lobby display on "Just Tony"

Patrons Grow Fat Looking at "Grandma's Boy"

SPARTANBURG, S. C.—A distinctive and ingenious stunt was used by Manager A. C. Cowles of the Rex theatre during the showing of "Grandma's Boy" that could be used on any featured comedy.

A pair of Toledo scales were borrowed and a card placed on them reading, "Laugh and Grow Fat. Weigh as you go in and again as you come out. It's free." The scales were left unmolested during the day, but, in the evening, when the crowd had gone in and the house was packed, the scales were set to weigh 10 lbs. more than the correct weight. Patrons leaving the theatre stepped on the scales and found they had gained 10 lbs. Of course they knew it was a trick, but they smiled just the same.

Oscar White, manager of the Rex theatre, Sumter, S. C., transformed his lobby into a temporary school room, for the play date of "School Days"

Map in Form of Window Card to Boost "Across the Continent"

Sandpoint, Idaho.—Local State maps were used by the Gem theatre to exploit "Across the Continent" by Manager Jack B. Gardner. These were ordinary road maps issued by the Oregon Tourist and Information Bureau for tourists and vacationists, which were decorated with a water color effect in red, with "Wally" Reid in the center, while in blue letters followed, "In 'Across the Continent,' the Gem, Wed., Thurs." These were pasted on cardboard and placed in windows where, J. E. Lindgren, publicity director of the theatre, states, they attracted gratifying attention.

Free Passes to "School Days" Make Kids Boost Picture

Columbus, Ga.—When Manager I. C. Holloway of the Rialto theatre ran "School Days" he had 100 walking representatives among the kids of Columbus. And all because he used his head a bit in distributing "dunce caps." One week before play date he gave out 100 dunce caps to the small boys, with the understanding that each cap was good for an admission to see the picture, provided it was worn to the theatre that day. After that the kids couldn't talk about anything else but their caps and the Wesley Barry picture they were going to see free. When the time came to admit them each boy was inspected to see if he had any other cap in his possession. The rule was that he was to wear the dunce cap, not just bring it. So if he brought another hat or cap along he was turned down.

For the engagement a large blackboard was placed in the lobby and a $5.00 prize offered for the best five word review of the picture. This board was completely covered before the end of the first day and additional boards had to be secured.

'Monte Cristo' Treasure Hunt Staged at Altoona, Pa.

Altoona, Pa.—The inhabitants of Altoona recently engaged in a spirited hunt for buried treasure, an exploitation stunt in connection with the run of "Monte Cristo" at the Capitol theatre put over by Manager Russell.

For several days prior to the opening of the production newspaper advertisements carried the announcement that certificates for a number of gold watches donated by a leading local jewelry dealer would be hidden underground within a certain radius of the theatre and that the persons digging them up and presenting them at the store would receive the presents of the Count of Monte Cristo.

The watches were placed on display in the windows of the store and an elaborate window arrangement embellished its exhibition. Because the name of the dealer was used in all the newspaper advertisements, and because his name was tied up with the entire stunt, the four timepieces were obtained without cost to the management of the theatre.

On the day designated for the treasure hunt, squads of townspeople were organized to excavate the large open district—comprising almost three acres—in search of the golden watches. Many clubs of young boys were formed, the purpose of which was to divide their spoils should any be found. Women and even small children took a hand in the hunt, as the advertisements announced the caskets containing the certificates would be buried no deeper than six inches from the surface.

Large Wine Glass Built for "Nice People" Lobby

DALLAS, Texas.—Manager Raymond Willie of the Palace had his art department build a large wine glass of beaver board, painted in bright colors, for his lobby on "Nice People."

In this wine glass could be seen small cut-outs of the characters in the picture. The characters were seen in different poses—some smoking, some dancing and some drinking. Across the top of the lobby of the Palace theatre were tacked paper streamers, which gave a carnival effect to the entire display.

Norma Pearls Contest Excites Hartford, Conn., Girls

HARTFORD, Conn.—Manager Needles of the Princess theatre will have a lot to answer for from complaining employers of girls, for large numbers of them forgot their work recently in their interest in the contest staged by the theatre in connection with the showing of "The Eternal Flame."

A string of Norma pearls was given to the girl most closely resembling Norma Talmadge, and some 200 girls thought enough of their similarity to the star to enter the contest, affording the picture no little publicity.

Storm Flag in Color Makes Novel Mailing Card

EVANSTON, Ill.—A storm warning flag, such as used by the U. S. Weather bureau, printed in red and black, on a standard 1c. postcard made a novel mailing card on "The Storm" for Manager W. G. Sturdivant of the Hoyburn theatre. Below the flag appears the name of the theatre and play dates, and above is the wording, "The Storm Is Coming!"

This two-color cut, a pressbook feature, was also used by Manager Sturdivant on his program cover for the week.

Bamboo Cage Used in Window as "Gilded Cage" Tie-Up

Montgomery, Ala.—Manager H. C. Farley's campaign on "The Gilded Cage" for its showing at the Empire theatre included window tie-ups and special distribution of rotogravure heralds. He arranged with the Montgomery Journal to distribute 1,000 rotogravures in their city circulation on Sunday before the picture opened on Thursday. These were placed only in the papers covering the best sections of town.

About a week in advance six art cards containing stills from the picture were placed in prominent windows in the downtown section.

An elaborate co-operative window display was arranged with the leading millinery store. A gilded cage made of bamboo and wooden strips was placed in the window, surrounded by a display of fall hats. In the cage was a cut-out of Swanson and a special model hat. A neatly lettered and framed card under this hat read, "The GLORIA Model. Approved by Miss Gloria Swanson as being the model she will wear this season." In the window was also a decorative card giving title, date, etc., and displaying one of the most attractive stills from this picture.

Railway Tunnel Front Made for "The Fast Mail"

Pittsburg, Pa.—An unusual front and lobby decoration was used by the management of the Blackstone theatre in connection with the recent run of "The Fast Mail." Beaver board paintings representing the entrances to tunnels were imposed over the two doors leading from the lobby into the auditorium. The words "The Fast Mail" written in streaky letters were at the top of the tunnel and over these was a cut-out painting of a city sky-line with a long train in the foreground. In the center of the tunnel brick-work, an opening was made for the ticket window which bore a sign reading "Ticket Office To All Points With 'The Fast Mail.'"

Danger signs made of cross boards and erected on six and seven foot stands were stationed about the lobby. Several of these were also placed at various corners and prominent locations about the city. They read: "STOP! LOOK!! 'The Fast Mail.' The Knickerbocker theatre." In the lobby were used six sheets, framed one sheet, hand made posters and sets of stills.

In the windows of several downtown department stores decorations were made representing the wreck of a train with a poster background.

By tying up with a local tractor dealer, a farm tractor was driven about the streets of the city drawing behind a trailer bearing twelve sheets of the picture.

This float received a silver cup when Pyramid Pictures Corp. entered it in the Coney Island, N. Y., Mardi Gras for "Queen of the Moulin Rouge"

Attractive Lobby Exploits "The Timber Queen"

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—Manager Cheatham of the Ottoway theatre concentrated on an attractive lobby display for his exploitation on "The Timber Queen," using poster cut-outs and other stock material.

He converted his box-office into a cabin of pine logs, with a clock surmounting the roof-peak indicating the hour of screening the first episode. The cabin front, and built-up cliffs on either side were used for the display of "Timber Queen" posters. The crowning achievement was a gigantic cut-out of Ruth Roland on her galloping steed suspended above the cabin in such a way that the galloping movement of the figure was easily sustained from within the booth.

Foolproof Safe Outside House for "Fools First"

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Ten dollars in gold was placed in a safe outside of the Palace theatre, with an invitation extended to anyone to open the safe and take the money, as a stunt in connection with the showing of "Fools First."

There was a hitch, of course—the safe was one that couldn't be broken into.

The stunt was put on in co-operation with the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company, which wanted some free advertising—and got it. The safe people were so certain of their product that they absolutely guaranteed the theatre against loss. All the time that "Fools First" played there the safe stood outside with the printed invitation that there were ten good dollars inside available to anyone who got the combination. All kinds of shady characters appeared, but even the shadiest admitted themselves beaten.

To clinch the bargain the Herring-Hall-Marvin people have offered to duplicate the stunt anywhere in Iowa. They have instructed their salesmen to offer the same co-operation to other exhibitors playing "Fools First" in Iowa and guaranteeing them against loss. They claim the combination is fool-proof and stand ready to back up their claims.

Yogi Love Powder Boosts Love Week at Lyric, Marion, Ind.

Marion, Ind.—A simple and ingenious novelty throwaway was used by the Lyric theatre to call the attention of Marion residents to "Love Week" at this Frank Rembusch house. Small envelopes, such as are used for pay envelopes, were specially imprinted and a spoonful of powdered sugar placed in each. The imprint read:

"Yogi Love Powder.—Years ago in the Himalayan Mountains lived a bashful suitor who loved but was without the courage to propose. His sweetheart, in desperation, asked Yogi, an ascetic, for advice.

"Yogi prayed to Hymen, the God of Marriage, who gave him a wonderful Love receipt, a powder, harmless, sweet and almost tasteless. After the suitor partook he immediately proposed and they lived happily thereafter.

"Ever since these powders have been used throughout the world. They can be given in secret in food or drink. It makes husbands and wives more devoted, sweethearts true, and will gain the love of the one you desire. It sweetens every one.

"Directions: Take this powder; then go to the Lyric theatre, Love Week, Sept. 24th to 30th, and see Mary Pickford in 'The Love Light' and Richard Barthelmess in 'The Love Flower.'"

Instead of a prologue, the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, presented the "fur show," represented by the above, after the showing of "Nanook of the North." Pretty mannikins paraded in coats of sable, seal and snow white ermine. The "stunt" was completed with the opening of a door at back, through which could be seen the limousine, waiting without, for the smart appearing customer

Replica of New York Theatre Used as Window Display

Toledo, Ohio.—An unusual window display was used in connection with the showing of "Broadway Rose" at Loew's Valentine theatre.

Metro publicity director, C. C. Deardourff, arranged with a local florist for the use of one of his big windows. The big feature of the display was a miniature duplicate of Loew's new State theatre in New York City. The entire window was a duplicate of Broadway. Auto buses and kewpie dolls, automobiles and traffic policemen made up the traffic. A large basket of flowers at one end of the window and a window card announcing the Mae Murray feature completed the display.

In addition to this display, the Valentine theatre co-operated with the Toledo Blade in a contest to determine whether the women of Toledo want to wear short skirts or long skirts. The contest extended over a period of seven days, and the newspaper carried a front page story of the contest every one of the seven days. The opening story carried photographs of three women of Flint, Mich., members of the No Long Skirt Club of Flint. Fifteen dollars in prizes were awarded to the writers of the two best articles. Free tickets were sent to the next ten in order of their merit.

Fashion Show Tied Up With "The Eternal Flame"

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Tivoli theatre management recently took advantage of the opening of the fall fashion season just at the time of the showing of "The Eternal Flame," and staged a fashion show in the lobby of the theatre.

The fact that the star is known for her becoming gowns made the display appropriate. The ushers were models and the latest styles were loaned by a fashion shop only too ready to seize upon the golden moment for some free advertising.

"The Norma Talmadge gowns" as they were known, were used throughout the week. Handsome in coloring, artistic in design and graceful in movements, three of the best creations received immense favorable comment and were photographed by the daily papers.

Makes 24-Sheet Road Map for "Dangerous Curve Ahead"

OWEN SOUND, Ont.—Manager D. C. Brown of the Griffin theatre, in exploiting "Dangerous Curve Ahead," evolved a striking 24-sheet from a service book suggestion.

Taking a hint from the suggestion that a "road map of matrimony" be drawn and placed in the lobby, Mr. Brown had a blank 24-sheet posted on a bill-board in one of the main thoroughfares of Owen Sound and then set his artist to the task of drawing the road map on the white paper. The result was very effective and attracted a lot of attention.

At the top of the poster were painted in large black type the words, "Road Map of Matrimony," the title of the picture coming under in much smaller type, the map using the rest of the space.

Merchant Tie-Up on Title, "Over the Border"

KENOSHA, Wis.—When "Over the Border" was booked to play at the Burke theatre, Kenosha merchants found it an excellent title to tie up to.

Bob Gary, Paramount exploiteer for Wisconsin, worked up a window card reading:

For Fair Dealing—Shop Here. Our Prices Never Go "Over the Border" of Justice and Fairness.

Practically every merchant in town filled his windows with these cards. The theatre then bought teaser space in the newspapers for ads reading:

Patronize Kenosha Merchants. Their Prices Never Go "Over the Border" Of Justice and Fairness.

The town was all sold on the title before the Burke tied it up with its program. The merchants were not only pleased with the idea but jumped out of their boots at the kind of co-operative spirit which impelled an exhibitor to give them newspaper ads.

Street Ballyhoo Minus Signs on "Zenda" at Baltimore

Baltimore, Md.—A "teaser" campaign in which richly uniformed men strolled about the downtown district drew real attention from the crowds of shoppers during the week preliminary to showing "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the New Theatre last week. The crowds had the way neatly paved to be introduced to the advertising of the feature.

The men, who wore uniforms brilliant enough to be striking without being obviously advertising stunts, strolled or stood on corners, and their presence was noticed by nearly everybody. They carried no advertising matter, and the observers naturally were led to speculate upon their purpose. The answer was found when similarly-uniformed men were found at the entrance to the theatre.

A false front for the box-office, depicting it as a turretted and closely-guarded tower was a neat lobby touch, and the front of the theatre was draped with blue and white bunting and flags.

Continuity of "Nice People" Printed as Supplement

Omaha, Neb.—Harry Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, put over a new one on "Nice People" when he tied up with the Sunday News on a magazine supplement in which was reprinted the complete continuity of the picture, by arrangement with the Paramount home office.

The supplement was in three colors, twelve pages, ten of which were used for co-operative ads and the continuity. The first cover had a special drawing in which some adaptations from the press sheet ads were made.

The revenue from the co-operative ads practically paid for the sumptuous affair. The copy in all cases tied up with the title. There isn't one person out of a thousand who isn't interested in that back-stage attraction, the scenario, which accounts for the fact that Mr. Watts' stunt took the public by storm.

School for "Nice People" Is Novel Tie-Up

STERLING, Colo.—The title, "Nice People," was sold in unique fashion by Manager E. P. Briggs of the Rialto theatre.

Mr. Briggs has a large stage in his theatre and this has been used during the summer months by a young lady dancing teacher for her classes. When Mr. Briggs received the articles on etiquette by Bebe Daniels supplied by the publicity department, he hit upon the idea of tying up with the newspaper and conducting a school for "Nice People."

The local paper fell for it, published columns of publicity including the articles on etiquette, and stood sponsor for the school.

Children between seven and 15 years were trained three mornings each week until public school opened.

When Mr. Briggs plays "Nice People," a prologue, "Sterling's Nice People" will be staged, in which 20 children will take part.

Star Identification Stunt Is Hooked Up with Bakery

Billings, Mont.—Rolla Duncan, manager of the Regent theatre, and Kenneth Renaud, exploiter, put over "A Trip to Paramount-town" without a cent of extra advertising cost.

They hooked up with the Purity Bread company, who took a full page in the Gazette, in which pictures of twenty-two stars were displayed. The pictures were without captions telling who they were. Persons clipping the ad, identifying the stars correctly, and bringing the correct solutions to the bakery company's offices received a free ticket to the performance.

Auto Dealers Tie Up for Page on "The Bonded Woman"

Evansville, Ind. — Seventeen automobile dealers tied up with Manager C. F. Lewis of the Criterion theatre for a full page ad on "The Bonded Woman," in the shape of an automobile identification contest.

Each ad contained a small picture of a well-known automobile with the sales slogan. For example: The big car with the fluted hood had this slogan: "Ask the man who owns one"—which was immediately recognized as the Packard ad.

A smaller car had: "Two brothers made me," which was the Dodge.

Any person bringing the page ad to the newspaper with each automobile correctly identified received a free ticket to "The Bonded Woman."

Mr. Lewis ascribes the success of this stunt to the fact that automobile merchants have seldom approached as a body with a proposition like this, and fell for it more readily than the over-sold dry-goods merchants.

Prolog Given Repeat Showing at Howard Theatre

Atlanta, Ga.—Several weeks ago the Howard theatre carried a prolog called "By the Waters of Minnetonka," which was so well liked that at popular request the prolog was again presented in connection with "The Valley of Silent Men."

The curtain rose on a mountain scene. Night had fallen and a light snow was falling. In the foreground seated around a small bonfire were four men, dressed as miners. As they sang the opening number the sound of a woman's voice was heard to break through their song, as if coming from a distance, and then suddenly one of the mountains in the background seemingly opened up and a vision of a woman was plainly visible. As she sang, the men in the foreground turned and then broke in with her song with harmony. At the climax of the song the vision faded, leaving only the cold, rugged outline of the mountains. It was well executed and brought down the house, and was commented on by all the papers. Enrico Leide was responsible for the presentation. Mrs. Riley Eakin and the Howard male chorus were the players.

Paints Auto to Exploit "When Romance Rides"

M. T. VERNON, WASH.—A simple and appropriate means of exploiting "When Romance Rides," adapted from "Wildfire," was used by R. K. Dunham, manager of the Rex theatre.

He took his automobile, gave it a new coat of red paint with a sign painted in white on each side and on the back. The wheels were also painted white. On the rear of the car was painted the name of the photoplay and the name of the novel from which it was adapted. The ads on each side gave the name of the theatre, the date of showing, and a descriptive phrase in addition to the title.

The red automobile was driven through the city for several days and attracted much attention.

Insuring Film Gets Space for "Monte Cristo"

Charleston, W. Va.—An insurance policy was taken out on the print of "Monte Cristo" during the showing of that picture, which resulted in a considerable amount of newspaper space, of which the following story, from the Charleston Daily Mail, is typical:

"The picture, 'Monte Cristo' is the first that has ever been insured in Charleston. The management of the Capitol theatre, realizing the value of the films, and taking into consideration the expense to which they were going to get it, have followed in the line of many other amusement places, and taken out a policy for $50,000 insuring the films against loss by theft or any other manner. There have been but few copies of the picture made, and the showing in Charleston is the first outside of New York where it is now playing.

"The firm of Patterson, Bell and Crane, through H. B. Littaker, their agent, issued the policy, and one of the clauses called for an armed guard to accompany the film from the station to the theatre. Patrolmen Marion Childress and L. R. Williams were assigned to the machine that carried the tin boxes.

Identification Contest Held on "While Satan Sleeps"

Salisbury, N. C.—In exploiting "While Satan Sleeps," Manager Alex P. Roberts of the Strand theatre employed the circular Paramount star heralds in a novel way.

These heralds carry the pictures of seventeen stars and the director general, and ask the question, "Do you know who these are?" Roberts had the blank back cover imprinted, offering free admission to the first twenty-five persons who correctly listed the photos and turned in the heralds to the box office. Then he got an aeroplane to go up above the city and scatter these heralds to the four winds. Roberts himself made the flight as passenger, and he reports that when he got back to the theatre eighteen correctly filled in heralds had already been presented.

This aeroplane stunt created so much interest that the newspaper gave it a big write-up. And this particular newspaper is hard-boiled when it comes to giving free space. But in this case they not only wrote up the stunt but they paid tribute to Roberts and his theatre.

"The Lone Hand"

Universal—4570 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE mixed in a generous assortment of thrills and laughs for Ed Gibson's latest release, "The Lone Hand," thus making it a fit companion piece to "The Galloping Kid." The Universal star has come along so fast in the last few weeks that the spectator doubtless looks forward to seeing him on every possible occasion. His popularity is firmly established now, because he is sincere in his work and his stories are not the cut and dried patterns which have made so many patrons tired of westerns. Gibson would have you understand, too, that he has discarded his nickname of Hoot—now that his pictures are dignified with real merit.

"The Lone Hand" presents him as a bashful cowboy who loses his horse during a journey to visit a friend, and he wanders, dressed up like a boob slicker, over to a cabin which harbors a girl whose father holds the secret to a valuable mine. The owner chases him off the premises, and after his visit to the friend's camp, returns in a suit of armor—in order to protect himself from stray bullets. The comedy goes on apace up to this point, after which the thrills dominate the action. Gibson puts it over the villains, locates the mine in novel fashion and saves the heroine's father who has been spirited away.

There are some highly picturesque shots during the melodramatic scenes—one of which shows the flooded mine and the old man's plight at the bottom of the shaft. It is a swiftly moving story carrying plenty of adventure and romance. And while there is some hokum, the incident moves along releasing good suspense interest. Really the thrills are unusual. Hunting for a lost mine has been used as a plot many times before. But in this picture the idea is dressed up just a little bit differently. Gibson has a good cast. Your folks will like him in his latest feature.

The Story—Bashful cowboy loses his horses while on journey to visit friend at latter's camp. Discovers girl alone in her cabin and beset by villains, who are trying to learn location of a lost mine. He rescues the girl, but her father is suspicious of his actions. The youth continues on his way, but returns to girl's cabin, clad in a suit of armor. Succeeds in saving life of girl's father and frustrating plans of villains to gain possession of mine.

Classification—Western melodrama carrying a strong vein of comedy. Typical Hoot Gibson story. Action and humor.

Production Highlights—The easy performance of star. The well-rounded cast. The excellent exteriors. The snap and ginger of story. The good direction.

Exploitation Angles—Feature this as one of the better westerns. Play up Gibson as a star who is coming along fast. If you played "The Loaded Door," and "The Galloping Kid," your crowd will want to see this one. Put on the cowboy quartette, etc.

Drawing Power—Should prove popular in all downtown houses and in the neighborhood houses.

"Thorobred"

Clark-Cornelius—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

ALTHOUGH this one has an old, old story, Helen Gibson, the star, is winsome to look upon and is a good rider. Furthermore, there is sufficient hard riding, thrilling climaxes galore and a carefully realistic "Wild West" atmosphere which should help much to put the picture over in theatres where "westerns" are as the breath of life to patrons. Almost from the start of the film it becomes apparent what is going to happen all the way through; but after all, a picture of this sort always leaves one in suspense, for it seems incredible that no new twist will be put into it anywhere.

There are some highly colorful dance-hall scenes and some beautiful exteriors—that is, the settings are fine. A chance has been missed in the photography, however, for there is a curious flat quality about these out-dood scenes, as if there had not been proper allowance made for the light. Helen Gibson is an attractive person, who can ride like a streak and also can act to a considerable extent. Jack Ganzhorn's portrayal of a "bad man" is very good indeed, while the remainder of the cast is satisfactory.

But they really ought to have something new about the story. Is it possible that ideas for "westerns" are running dry?

The Cast

Ben Grey.....Ed Burns

Written and Directed by George Halligan.

The Story—Helen Martin takes her father's place when he is too ill to carry out his duties as Sheriff, and followed by Jim Grey, tracks down Blackie Wells, notorious "bad man," who has shot up a town. The trail leads over prairie and woodland, ending when Helen assumes the part of a dancing girl in the Last Chance saloon and learns the hiding place of Blackie and his associates.

Classification—Western melodrama, hoary with age as to the idea.

Production Highlights—The dance hall scenes. The "bad men's" hiding place. The fight in the saloon. Helen's seizure of Blackie at the point of her pistol.

Exploitation Angles—Helen Gibson in a character she has played successfully before. Fine riding and hard fighting; but nothing to boast about.

Drawing Power—Neighborhood or small downtown houses where they like westerns ought to accept it.

"Beware of the Law"

Jawitz-State Rights—4700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE bootlegging industry as it is carried on along the Canadian border comes in for a severe indictment in "Beware of the Law." The author has apparently followed the facts as they have been outlined in the newspapers for his plot and characterization are recognizably real. There is the "old soak" who has been kicked out by his daughters, leaving them to run the grocery to suit themselves; there is the local prohibition agent who, before the story is finished, is killed by the rum runners, a pair of New York crooks; there is the government agent sent up to the border to get evidence and is nearly killed by the Volstead enemies, and for company they have a flock of villagers and several well paid employees of the whiskey runners.

The story doesn't wait to get started. The villain gives the government agent a ride in his roadster and jumps in the nick of time, the car plunging over the cliff. They haven't been very convincing in this scene, inasmuch as a doctor isn't called, and the hero takes a terrible fall. Yet he suffers no injury beyond a scalp wound and a general shock. The older daughter of the "old soak" nurses him and falls in love. Meanwhile the father is stealing liquor from the cave and selling it at so much a drink. There are considerable "goings on" along the main highway. Cars are loaded and unloaded, and it looks easy for the rum runners, until the hero, fully restored to health, resolves to capture them. A shooting scene follows and the crooks are caught. And the romance continues.

The picture could stand a little better editing in the way of captions. And a few close-ups should have been employed in the big fight. You can't tell the characters apart so fast do they work. The film carries more episodes and incident than it does a straightforward story. However, it is timely and reads like a visualization of the back page of a newspaper which features rum running along the border. The cast is unknown, but the players contribute first rate performances. A good program offering.

The Story—Prohibition agent is sent from New York to capture rum runners along Canadian border. He is nearly killed by one of the bootleggers but is nursed to health by daughter of local bootlegger. He resolves to get men higher up by arresting girl's father. A gun battle occurs and the crooks are captured. Love triumphs.

Classification—Melodrama dealing with bootlegging on Canadian border. Some romance and humor.

Production Highlights—The timely plot. The appropriate atmosphere. The gun fight. The plunge of the car over the cliff.

Exploitation Angles—This is a story of bootleggers and if your audience is much pro-Volstead, play it up. Feature it as a timely story having to do with breaking the law. Use atmosphere for lobby and prologue. Use a snappy teaser campaign. Get the press sheet issued by Jawitz.

"The Forgotten Law"

Graf Production—Distributed by Metro—
Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS is a novel eternal triangle offering made notable by the work of an unusually fine cast. The plot also is based on a "different" idea and is worked out in a series of tensely dramatic moments. Cleo Ridgely returns to the screen in this picture and puts over a "mother" role of real appeal, registering some emotional work that will stand with the best of the year. Milton Sills has the leading male role and can always be depended upon to give us something worth while. As Richard Jarnette, the man who refuses to believe that his brother is a cad and who insists on carrying out the profligate's last wishes that a baby shall be taken from its mother's care and given to him, gives us another portrayal that will be classed with his work in "Skin Deep."

A foreword explains that the plot is based on a law that was actually in force in an eastern state, but was repealed recently. The law permitted a man to will his child away from its mother. Jack Mulhall appears as the unfaithful husband who upon his marriage finds that there are a number of bridges to his past life that refuse to be burned. In spite of his marriage he continues to build these bridges of infidelity and deceit until the disturbing element in the form of these "other women," creeps into his home. There is a "scene" between husband and wife leading up to the decision to change the will and take the baby from its mother. Then comes the murder of the husband in a dramatic scene which is well staged and calculated to thrill observers.

Some of the most delightful moments are furnished by Muriel Francis Dana, a charming little child actress who has real talent. The reading of the will gives Miss Ridgely opportunity for emotional display of high order. The scenes between Alec Francis and Sills in which the former proves to the latter that the brother was a "bad egg," is one of the high lights of the picture. "The Forgotten Law," comes under the heading of "better pictures."

The Cast

Richard Jarnette.....Milton Sills
Victor, his youngest brother.....Jack Mulhall
Margaret, Victor's bride.....Cleo Ridgely
Judge Kirtley.....Alec B. Francis
Muriel.....Muriel Francis Dana
Rosalie.....Alice Hollister
Flo.....Edna Altemus
Mammy Cely.....Lucrecia Harris

Adapted from Caroline Abbot Stanley's novel, "A Modern Madonna," by Joseph Francis Poland. Directed by James W. Horne. Photographed by John Stumar. Produced under the personal supervision of Max Graf. Distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

The Story—Victor Jarnette, peeved at being rebuked by his wife for his unfaithfulness, changes his will, in which he leaves his child to his brother. He is shot by one of his flames whom he has cast aside. The brother, in spite of all pleadings, carries out the will and takes the baby from the mother. The court upholds the document, which is based on a forgotten law. In time the brother relents and in the end marries his brother's widow.

Classification—An eternal triangle story with a "different" twist filled with dramatic situations.

Production Highlights—Milton Sills' portrayal of the role of Richard Jarnette. The fine support. The shooting of the younger brother. The excellent direction, photography and mounting. The scenes between the wife and "the other woman." The willing of the baby to the brother, calling on an ancient law. Scenes attending the reading of the will.

Exploitation Angles—Milton Sills is rising swiftly to the top rung of popularity. Play up his name in this one. There are also some big names in the cast, notably Jack Mulhall, Alec Francis and Cleo Ridgely, who staged a great comeback. Tell mothers there is a wonderful child actress in the picture.

A scene from "The Old Sea Dog," the second two reel comedy starring "Snub" Pollard with Marie Mosquini, for Pathe release.

"The Plaything of an Emperor"

Jesse A. Levinson-State Rights—5300 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

WHILE a number of foreign made pictures have failed to register sufficiently to hold their own in the American market, now and then we strike a good one. For instance "The Plaything of an Emperor," a worthy specimen of its kind, one that deserves unbiased praise and likely to meet with favor wherever it is shown.

To begin with the photography is unusually good, the settings unique and interesting, exteriors quaint and characteristic of the country wherein the story is laid. The cast has been carefully selected and may be said, as a whole, to be entirely adequate. Rodolph Lettinger, as Napoleon, is very like in stature and general appearance to the description history has laid down regarding the famed Emperor of France.

There is, also, a story founded upon historic incident, during the reign of Napoleon, that has been moulded into an interesting screen narrative, a departure from overdone melodrama, quite refreshing. The editing and subtitles play a prominent part in fitting this offering for general consumption, since every possible move that the period might otherwise have rendered confusing, is explained, holding close to the main theme and culminating in an interesting photoplay, decidedly out of the ordinary.

The Cast

Napoleon, Emperor of France.....Rodolph Lettinger
Countess Walewska.....Marjorie Verlaire
Count Walewska, her husband.....Henry Keyes
Count d'Eviens.....Anthony Lannister
Duroc, Prince of Friul.....Charles Magnes

Story suggested by John Nattford. Directed by Arthur Rippert. Edited by George Martin.

The Story—It tells of an episode in the life of Napoleon, when passing through the country he met with a young girl charged with a personal appeal to the Emperor in behalf of her people. Napoleon admires and desires to meet the lady again, ordering that she be present at a grand ball. Her refusal to accept the honor of leading the grand march with the great ruler, excites his determination to change her regard for him. There follows an extended romance, bringing about considerable opposition, and ending in Napoleon's triumph in winning the affection of the haughty countess.

Classification—Costume drama of the period when Napoleon reigned in the height of his Napoleon into the territory, where he meets Marie. The execution squad preparing to take the life of an officer, formerly in the ruler's career, embracing a love story alleged to have been a romantic episode of the Emperor's life.

Production Highlights—The coming of retinue. The final scene when Marie defends the life of the officer by confessing her affection for Napoleon.

Exploitation Angles—The period; the historic interest and value. Can tie up with book stores, shops where antique furnishings may be had, jewelers.

Drawing Power—Should go very well in houses of any class. Has general appeal.

"The Bond Boy"

Inspiration-First National—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE hero of this morbid tale of vengeance and self-sacrifice is convicted of murder upon pretty flimsy evidence. If a word spoken by one of three characters or by all of them the story would have lost its entire substance. By sending the boy to prison the plot is able to release considerable dramatic tension even if it defies logic.

The story is grim, morbid—unrelieved by a single flash of humor. This youth—poor white trash—is bound over to a cruel farmer to save his mother from the poorhouse. He is whipped and abused. And the farmer's young wife finds in him a bond for sympathy. She also is subject to much abuse. So when a fast talker comes from the city and proposes an elopement she readily consents. The boy tries to prevent her, since he has a religious sense of honor. Then the farmer comes home and thinks they are plotting against him. He raises his rifle to shoot, but accidentally kills himself. So the boy gives himself up to spare the wife from losing her good name.

The courtroom scene is well done. But the high mark is the escape of the youth from jail, pursued by bloodhounds. It looks black for him when he is caught, but the wife, unable to withstand the strain of seeing an innocent youth suffer, confesses her infidelity and her husband's death by accident. Henry King has another fine scene to his credit. It shows the shadow of the rope on the gallows swinging through the moonlight on the prisoner's cell wall like a pendulum of fate. He has told his picture with fine human touches and Barthelmess has attended to the rest with his sensitive, expressive face. Mary Alden is unusually fine as the lad's mother. "The Bond Boy" belongs to the better class. Henry King doesn't make any other kind.

The Cast

Joe Newbolt.....Richard Barthelmess
Isom Chase.....Charles Hills Mailes
Cyrus Morgan.....Ned Sparks
Colonel Price.....Lawrence D'Orsay
Lawyer Hammer.....Robert Williamson
District Attorney.....Leslie King
Sheriff.....Jerry Sinclair
Saul Greening.....Thomas Maguire
Mrs. Greening.....Lucia Backus Seger
Alice Price.....Virginia Magee
Mrs. Newbolt.....Mary Alden
Ollie Chase.....Mary Thurman

By George Washington Ogden. Scenario by Charles Whittaker. Directed by Henry King. Produced by Inspiration Pictures, Inc. Released by First National.

The Story—Youth is sold into bondage by mother to keep herself from poorhouse. The wife of the boy's employer seizes opportunity to find real romance with book agent. As they are about to elope, the youth prevents her. The husband returns home and mistrusting his wife and the boy, picks up his gun to kill them, but accidentally kills himself. The boy is indicted for murder. Eventually escapes and the wife confesses. Thereupon he finds real love and happiness with his sweetheart.

Classification—Grim melodrama with a touch of heart interest, laid in Kentucky mountains. Trials and tribulations of boy who conquers his misfortunes.

Production Highlights—Excellent work of Barthelmess and the pleasing portrayal by Mary Alden. The human touches. The realism. The courtroom scene. The pursuit of convict. The locations. The able direction.

Exploitation Angles—Why not put on a prologue with background representing log cabin set against backdrop of mountains—with quartette attired in homespun, etc., singing an old-time melody. Play up the star, telling of his rise to the heights through his able work in "Tola'ble David." Play up the human interest.

Drawing Power—Good for all big and little houses.

"Notoriety"

(Apollo-State Rights—8600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Leon J. Rubinstein)

THE author and director seem to have determined on getting away from the usual, at the same time taking a wallop at a question which has never before been handled in pictures. The fact that a great deal of newspaper notice has been known to bring joy and sorrow to those who have become its subjects is the theme. The logic is correct and the producer takes the stand here that the desire for publicity works peculiarly on the human mind.

In this case a gutter-snipe finds herself lionized merely because she is the innocent victim of circumstances, which make her an object of public notice. The story shows that rather than relinquish the attentions thus paid her, she lies by "confessing" to crime. To those to whom this may appear to be an incredible procedure, it need only be said that publicity obtained through lies and maintained through more lies is considered the usual thing. The girl here has merely borrowed a tenet from the press agent's code.

The story hinges well together and the characters are convincing.

William Nigh has incorporated a full quota of his well-known touches. Particularly commendable is a corking fight scene which carries action plus. The technical side of the production is excellent.

Maurine Powers in the leading part shows promise for the future and Rod La Roque comes up to all expectations in a difficult part. George Hackathorne likewise distinguishes himself in this picture. What completely overshadows cast, story and eye appeal of the production is the tremendously heavy dramatic effort which has been expended.

The Cast

"Pigeon" Deering Maurine Powers
Ann Boland Mary Alden
Arthur Beal Rod La Roque
"Batty" George Hackathorne
Horace Wedderburn J. Barney Sherry
Tom Robbins Richard Travers
Dorothy Wedderburn Mona Lisa
Van Dyke Gibson John Goldsworthy
Theatrical agent Anders Randolph
Mrs. Beal Ida Waterman
The hired man William Gudgeon

By William Nigh. Directed by William Nigh. Produced by Lawrence Weber and Bobby North.

The Story: Centers around young orphan girl of the tenement district who yearns for notoriety and who is encouraged in her desire by youth living in same tenement. A murder is committed and the girl, craving publicity, confesses to crime, though she is innocent. She dreads going back to her drab life, though in the end she is convinced that it holds considerable love for her.

Classification: Melodrama based upon craving for publicity by girl who is innocent of crime, though she pleads guilty.

Production Highlights: The unusually vivid fights. The skilful handling of plot. The good work of cast. The atmosphere and technical detail.

Exploitation Angles: Play up Nigh as director of "Rags to Riches." Feature the big fight scenes. Link up with press. Title suggests some snappy ideas.

Drawing Power: Will go in any kind of house.

"One Exciting Night"

(D. W. Griffith, Inc.—Twelve Reels)

(Reviewed by Richard Spencer)

A TRUE drama of suspense, and though far, far different from anything the "Wizard" has heretofore attempted, it is none the less successful for that. Griffith has done away with his old standard chums, mob, costumes, and spectacle, and in a straightforward manner he has evolved a highly thrilling, gripping, and above all lovable story. Words fail in an attempt to describe its grip. More than that he has created effects never before seen. It does not need the enticing title to draw after the first audience in a city has seen it.

Hull as John Fairfax often seemed too enthusiastic over trivial matters, and indulged in gymnastic gestures that grated at times. That too was, however, trivial in itself, and was forgotten almost as soon as seen. It is saying a lot for a film when one minor flaw is the only one to be found. Griffith has also done wonders for Carol Dempster, who, always good, is in this latest production, showing the hand of the "Wizard" himself. She should take place among the highest after "One Exciting Night" is well known.

As what might be termed a waif of Africa, though legitimate heiress to a vast English estate, and deprived of her lawful heritage, she portrays the modern girl in all her intensity of life, play, and frivolity, bobbed or not, but above all sincere and sweet and right when the things that count enter her life. Her acting in the storm that brings the climax is superb; and that storm! New effects! A storm that it is hard to believe within the reach of photography! Obviously Griffith has made another masterpiece. The work of Porter Strong was fine. Photography, direction, lighting, and settings unexcelled.

The Cast

Agnes Harrington Carol Dempster
John Fairfax Henry Hull
J. Wilson Rockmaine Morgan Wallace
The neighbor C. H. Crocker-King
Romeo Washington Porter Strong

Story by Irene Sinclair. Musical score arranged and synchronized by Albert Pesce. Photography by Hendrik Sartov. Directed and produced by David Wark Griffith.

The Story:—The death of her mother following news that her father has succumbed in the African wilds, Agnes Harrington is taken to America as a babe that her father's younger brother may inherit the vast English estate. The plot deals with her trials in the late teens of her life.

Classification:—Mystery comedy-drama that is nearly all suspense.

Production Highlights:—First and above all, the storm. Wonderful and masterly handling of the mystery element. Total unexpectedness of the villain's identity. The excellent comedy of Porter Strong.

Exploitation Angles:—The two best bets are the storm and the mystery side of the picture. The title also holds great chance for good work in this line, particularly on a publicity tieup. The fact that Griffith produced and directed the play.

Drawing Power:—It is hard to imagine a film with greater possibilities for shattered attendance records than this once the word has gone around just what it is like.

Arthur Trimble, junior star, and Bessie Love, who appear in the two reel offering "Prince Courageous."

"Calvert's Valley"

Fox—4500 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture isn't quite up to the mark. In the first place it carries a story which gets nowhere because its theme is so easily punctured. In the second place it is more sensational than logical. If you can believe that a hero may become so intoxicated that he doesn't know whether he killed a man or not—then you can swallow it. John Gilbert is this youth, and the picture will not add to his popularity. He is a stranger in town and he is present when a rejected suitor of the heroine tumbles over a cliff and meets his death.

The picture being so slight of material, drags along, releasing no suspensive interest on its journey. The hero becomes conscience-stricken and finally wanders into a church and confesses to the crime. This scene is followed by the inevitable courtroom sequence, which carries no smashing climax. Since a demented character has been introduced without making his purpose in the story clear, it is certain that he will be employed to clear the complications. In other words the burden of being the criminal will be placed upon him. The incident reveals the murdered man's brother attempting to fasten the crime upon the hero, although it is rather far-fetched. Eventually an elderly widow, the mother of the half-wit comes forward and saves the hero by telling that her son killed the rejected lover. The hero has performed this amazing sacrifice to relieve the heroine of worrying over the fact that she prompted the victim to kill himself.

The situations are unpleasant and morbid. And the story is not well constructed. Too much stress is placed upon the incident. It's a picture which doesn't carry any impression, though there must be an audience for it, else it wouldn't have been made. Gilbert is handicapped with the plot and the figure he is called upon to portray. His support is capable.

The Cast

Hester Rymal Sylvia Breamer
James Calvert } Philo McCullough
Eugene Calvert }
Judge Rymal Herschel Mayall
The Widow Crowcroft Lulu Warrenton

By Margaret Prescott Montagne. Scenario by Jules Furthman. Directed by Jack Dillon. Photographed by Don Short. Produced by Fox.

The Story:—Youth journeys with companion to timber region and the latter is pushed off a high cliff and killed. The hero confessed to crime, although he is innocent. The fiancée of the victim thinks that he killed himself because of unrequited love. Eventually it is proved that the hero is innocent. Thus he is left free to find happiness with girl.

Classification:—Melodrama of northwest locals based upon self-sacrifice. Righteous hero triumphs.

Production Highlights:—Creditable work of Jack Gilbert. The exteriors and atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles:—This is just another western so play up the star as your best angle for exploitation. Feature him as the star of "Monte Christo." Use a teaser campaign.

Drawing Power:—Likely to please in neighborhood houses catering to program offerings.

Buffalo Briefs

Eddie Weinberg, now that Edgar Weil has recovered his health and is on the job at the Syracuse Strand, is back in Buffalo where he will have his tonsils removed and anything else that may be annoying him. Soon he will depart for Troy where he will prepare for the opening of the new house which the Strand interests are building in the City of Collars.

Commencing Monday, October 16, the Loew State will celebrate its first anniversary and Manager Al Beckerich is planning an elaborate program in honor of the event. Mr. Beckerich is to be congratulated for his fine work in connection with the State. He has brought the house to a place where the S. R. O. sign is never taken down.

The Western New York unit of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., has opened an office at 313 Lafayette Square Building and from there is directing a campaign against the daylight saving ordinance which comes up for referendum at the November election.

Ira M. Mosher, former president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association and for several years manager of the Palace, before Howard J. Smith took personal charge of the house, came home from the theatre on the evening of October 4 and found that burglars had ransacked his home at 435 Delaware avenue. Mr. Mosher is now engaged in educational film pursuits.

Word has reached Buffalo that its former prominent exhibitor, Harold B. Franklin, is now occupying a new home in New Rochelle, N. J. Mr. Franklin is now in charge of theatre interests for Paramount.

M. Shea, of Feiber & Shea, was in town on a booking tour on Wednesday, October 11.

N. Dipson, prominent Batavia exhibitor, has returned from a trip to Europe. He thought he better get home before the ocean froze over.

M. J. Kallet who owns the Strand in Rome, N. Y., has purchased the Star in that city from Kaufman and Shane.

George Miller has taken over the Elite theatre at Main and Cleveland streets, Niagara Falls, and after redecoration and remodeling has opened it with first-class pictures.

Vaudeville has been added to the Amendola theatre bill in the Cataract City and Manager John Amendola reports it going over strong with patrons.

In the Buffalo Exchanges

P. H. SMITH is still going around with his office in his hat. Because of the big success of "From Rags to Riches," at the Capitol, New York, Warner Brothers' officials have been unable to get to Buffalo to aid in the search for a permanent exchange location. P. H. is kept busy, however, as he has a print himself of the Wesley Barry production. He screened it for M. Shea of Shea's Hippodrome, Bill Callahan of Rochester and others. When the exchange is finally located, a complete sales staff will be engaged as well as an office force.

The New York exchange will soon be ready for occupancy. It is located in North Pearl street, almost opposite the big film building. When ready, it will be dedicated with suitable ceremonies and a big party for exhibitors, newspaper men and others. Manager Charles Johnston announces that "Monte Cristo," at the Hippodrome and "A Fool There Was" at the Lafayette Square both attracted S. R. O. business the past week.

Sydney Samson of Grand & North announces the forthcoming release in western New York of "The Jungle Goddess," the Selig serial, as a successor to "Miracles of the Jungles." Syd is already filling his books with dates on this one.

Fred M. Zimmerman of Nu-Art Pictures corporation is in receipt of a letter from Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y. in which the latter tells of the enthusiastic reception given his presentation of "Up and Down the Swanee River," a Burlingham Adventure Scenic.

Joseph H. Berdel, former Beau Brummel percentage checker for the local Fox Exchange, is back in town after a jaunt through Germany and France and is now a member of the Evening Times reportorial staff.

Max Graf of Graf Productions, Inc., was in town last Thursday evening for a talk with Henry W. Kahn, Metro manager, on his new production, "The Forgotten Law," which Metro will release in November. Mr. Graf was on his way from New York to the coast. Mr. Kahn has returned from a business trip to Penn Yan, Warsaw, Waterloo and other big cities in the territory.

M. W. Goosman and J. Bruggy were in town last week installing a new billing system in the advertising department of the First National exchange. Manager E. J. Hayes is looking forward to the early springing of his famous fur-collared overcoat on Film Row. We anticipate several protests. He looks like Richard Mansfield in the height of his success.

Howard Riehl, formerly with Grand & North, is now a member of the Hodgkinson exchange staff. He is covering the Syracuse territory. Jock Thomson has been transferred from Syracuse to the Rochester district. Office Manager J. L. Daly journeyed to New York with his pal Bob Murphy of Filkins & Murphy for the World Series. Must be money in this here exchange business.

T. C. Leonard, Universal exploitationist, is back in the city after a big publicity offensive through Northern New York.

The Film Clubs of the country will soon be functioning again, according to a local exchange manager. They will be under the supervision of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. A meeting will soon be called to reorganize the Film Club of Buffalo.

In Cleveland Film Centres

EDDIE CARRIER, who has travelled widely since he exploited Select pictures in Cleveland three years ago, is back in town again. This time it's Goldwyn pictures that he is exploiting for the benefit of the Northern Ohio exhibitors.

E. Mandelbaum, president of the Associated First National Company of Ohio, is back again at his desk after a four weeks' rest cure at Battle Creek, Mich.

Milton Mooney, chief of the bookers at the Cleveland First National exchange, is still on the First National payroll, but he is now listed as "salesman," not as booker.

H. H. Hurn, Hodgkinson district manager covering the central division, was in town several days this week.

E. W. Penrod, of the local F. B. O. exchange, has just returned from a tour of the surrounding country. Having only recently arrived in Ohio after a ten-year sojourn in Indianapolis, Mr. Penrod gets a clearer vision of things as they are than those who have travelled the path regularly.

H. A. Bandy, First National district manager covering the Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Indianapolis offices, started the Cleveland salesmen off on their eight-week sales contest with a boosters' dinner party. The five officers are competing for sales honors. Prizes of $300, $200, $150 and $100 will be awarded to the four winners. There were twenty-three present at the dinner.

Cleveland Paragrapns

Samuel R. Bradley, who directed the making of the feature photographs "False Front," "Women Men Love" and others, has recently incorporated the Bradley Pictures Company for the purpose of making industrial films and local news weeklies. The Bradley Pictures Company is making the Cleveland Plain Dealer Weekly, which is being shown in all the leading local theatres, as well as throughout the state. They are located in the Film Exchange Building.

August Ilg of the Wonderland theatre, Lorain, and a frequent visitor to Cleveland, says that the picture business is slow picking up in Lorain. He gives as the reason, the sameness of feature pictures. Ilg says that whenever his patrons think that a picture has some new angle to it, he has no trouble filling his house. Novelty is the keynote to business these days, says Ilg.

Hippodrome theatre, Youngstown, under the management of Mr. Miller, has shifted from a straight vaudeville policy to vaudeville and feature pictures.

Joe Trunk of the Dome theatre, Youngstown, has just taken over the lease on Capitol theatre, so the announcements read. "Prisoner of Zenda" was the first attraction booked to re-open the 1200 seat house on October 12.

Sam Barck has added another theatre to his present belongings. This time it's the Temple, East 55th Street and Central ave. And they're to have colored vaudeville in conjunction with pictures.

L. W. Chapman, formerly associated with the Masterpiece Film Exchange of Cleveland, is now managing director of the Bannon Theatres Company, Elyria, Ohio. The Bannon Theatres Company comprise a circuit of three downtown houses, the Colonial, Dreamland and Strand.

Max Lefkowitz, owner and manager of the Gaiety theatre, East Ninth Street, Cleveland, was playing a Wm. S. Hart feature one day last week. Just as the hero was brandishing his pistol the most, a shot was heard in the theatre. A man in the audience was discovered with a bullet in his leg. When the excitement was over he said his gun went off accidentally. Lefkowitz says he thinks the picture was too realistic for him, and unconsciously he pulled the trigger.

Carolina Close-Ups

The Strand Theatre at Charlotte, N. C., reopened its doors Monday after several months with the Universal picture, "The Storm" after a week's advance newspaper campaign anent the opening and the picture. On the Sunday preceding the opening the Charlotte Observer carried a full page hook-up and the lobby of the theatre was appropriately decorated.

The executive council of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs has made recommendations for three new departments in accordance with the action taken at the last session in Nashville. Mrs. M. N. Whitaker has been appointed chairman of the better films department. Chairmen were appointed for two other departments that in a way touch on the theatre business in that state.

H. Turner Jones, public relations representative of Southern Enterprises, spoke at the meetings and urged the formation of the better films department and it is principally through his endeavors that the idea was carried through.

Mrs. Whitaker stated that she will use the Atlanta, Ga., committee on Better Films as an example for the work of her department.

The name of the Piedmont theatre, Charlotte, N. C. has been changed to the Alhambra and will present a season of stock with the Francis Sayles players as the attraction.

Providence, R. I., News

The Victory theatre announces that it has procured the exclusive showing in this city of the United Artists program. The first was shown during the week of October 9. The Victory also carries the Vitagraph and Pathe programs.

Fay's theatre is running a motion picture contest. They send out a camcraman weekly, and on the following week show the "important personage" films he procures. A man and woman are picked weekly from the film for the prizes, the awards being made to the first who notifies the management that he or she has identified himself.

The Strand and Modern theatres have begun following the style of other houses in using drawn advertisements instead of typeset copy. The two houses blossomed out last Sunday with their copy put together by hand work.

James P. Powers is handling the publicity work for the Victory theatre, having taken the place of Clara Blaney, who was employed by publicity director of the Keith interests in this city for many years.

David Wark Griffith was in Newport, R. I., last week to witness the presentation of "One Exciting Night," his latest film, which is later to be shown in New York and Boston. The picture will be cut some before having its premiere in those cities. Mr. Griffith was given an ovation when he stepped onto the stage. He was in a jovial mood and talked several minutes before telling his audience how pleased he was at the way they received his picture.

With the Washington Branches

BEN PITTS of Fredericksburg, operating the Opera House and Leader there, called at Vitagraph, Goldwyn and other exchanges during the week.

Messrs Douglas, of the Crisfield Opera House, Mitchell of Easton, and Brown of Cambridge, were Maryland exhibitors calling at the Vitagraph exchange. The Crisfield Opera House secured a contract for a year's service from the Vitagraph, with one feature weekly.

Miss Calhoun, booker for Educational is on her vacation.

Sam Flax is serving on the District of Columbia Police Court jury, and has been absent from film row for several days.

A new arrival at the local Goldwyn exchange, last week was District Manager George A. Hickey, who is to make his headquarters at the Washington office. Goldwyn branches at Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Washington are under his general charge.

Jean J. Crandall of Associated Exhibitors was a Pathe visitor.

Adolph Loeffler, after several years with the Vitagraph exchange is now handling similar duties as booker and assistant manager in the local F. B. O. Bob Folliard is now on the road for the same exchange. Bernard Davis is a film inspector in their shipping department.

Dick Simon recently a salesman for F. B. O. is now handling the business of the National Screen Service, Incorporated.

Manager Jerry Marks of the Independent Films of Washington is resigning to take up his new duties with the Progress Pictures of Baltimore, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Washington, in charge of their Southern office at Washington. Marks had previously been connected with Metro for over four years.

J. S. Hebrew, manager of the Fox Film Exchange in Washington for several years, has severed his connection with the local office and returned to his residence in Philadelphia. Nothing is known here in regard to Mr. Hebrew's future plans. George Roberts, assistant manager since June, has been appointed manager of the exchange here. Mr. Roberts came here, after several years in the Ohio exchanges of the Fox corporation.

John Dermody, formerly in the Contract Department of the New York office of the Fox corporation is now performing the duties of assistant manager, having been transferred here by the home office. William Aireye has been employed in the sales force relieving Mr. Binns, who has resigned.

Around the Carolina Exchanges

M. C. WHITE, traveling auditor of First National, spent a few days in the Charlotte office before leaving for Atlanta where he will take a squint at the books there.

R. H. Page, formerly Carolina representative for Pathe, has resigned and accepted that same territory for Goldwyn.

Claude Ezell, personal representative of Myrin Selznick, was in Atlanta last week in conference with J. U. McCormick, of Charlotte, and the Atlanta manager.

Perry Spencer, formerly manager of the Pack theatre, Asheville, N. C., has gone to Brunswick, Ga., to manage the Grand theatre there for A. G. Moore, of Savannah.

J. F. Worsley, who handles the attractions of the Southeast for First National Exhibitors Circuit, spent several days in the Charlotte office last week.

The Charlotte office of Southern Enterprises is trailing the Atlanta office for first place in the race to see which exchange can do more to sell "a million dollars' worth of films in ten weeks." Manager Peppiatt has been out himself in an effort to win the contest and is still hopeful.

"Doc" Koch, of Goldwyn, was in the Carolinas last week with a print of "Remembrance."

U. T. Koch, formerly manager of the Goldwyn exchange, has been appointed manager of the F. B. O. exchange to succeed Mr. Davis. Mr. Koch's position has not as yet been filled.

Sixteen Houses in San Diego Open Shop

Sixteen of the motion picture houses in San Diego, Cal., and immediate vicinity, are now operating "open shop" in all departments, following the strike of the musicians and stage hands, which became effective on Tuesday night, Sept. 19. The operators had previously gone out on Sept. 2.

The owners and managers of the San Diego houses believe that the "open shop" policy will soon be the rule in practically all of the coast cities, it being declared that a large number of the Los Angeles houses are already following that policy.

The San Diego houses have found no difficulty in securing competent men to take the place of the striking operators, musicians and stage hands, and the houses are running as usual. The strike of the operators was over a matter of compensation, the owners refusing an advance and, on the other hand, offering a scale which pre-

Canadian Brevities

The annual revival of the English film comedy, "The Better 'Ole," is taking place in Toronto, Ontario, and the engagements arranged at seven local theatres are arousing considerable interest. The series of three-day runs at the various houses opened at the Beach Theatre on October 9, this booking being followed by presentations in succession at the Danforth, St. Clair, Beaver, Bloor, Parkdale and College Theatres.

In view of various conditions affecting the moving picture theatre business during the past year or more, it is somewhat astonishing to note that admission prices for Allen's Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, have been permanently advanced. Manager J. C. Kennedy of the Regent has announced a new scale which ranges up to 50c as the evening price for an orchestra seat, tax included. This is ten cents higher than the previous orchestra floor rate. Along with the advance in admission prices at this house, however, came an increase in the size of the regular orchestra to 15 pieces with a weekly symphony concert each Monday evening by an augmented orchestra of 22 musicians. The Ottawa Regent has always been considered one of the best houses on the Allen chain.

Two special D. W. Griffith productions formed the attractions at two rival Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week of October 9, when "Orphans of the Storm" was presented for its second week at the Centre Theatre and "Way Down East" was shown at the Regent Theatre, this being the third local run for "Way Down East." Manager Stapleton raised prices for "Orphans of the Storm" at the Centre, evening prices being 80c for an orchestra seat and 60c for the balcony, this being considerably above the regular scale. In spite of the higher admissions, the feature ran for two weeks.

The first theatre in Canada to arrange a special benefit performance for the relief of sufferers in the terrible forest fire in Northern Ontario, October 4-5, was the Loew Theatre in Ottawa, Ontario. Capt. Frank Goodale, manager of this theatre, conducted a special show on Sunday evening, October 8, for this purpose in cooperation with the Lions Club of Ottawa of which he is an active member. Musicians, operators and all other employes of the theatre donated their services for the occasion.

After several years as manager of the Francais Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Mr. Val Bureau stepped out of the position on October 9, his successor being Mr. A. Donaghy, manager of the Monument Nationale Theatre some years ago. Mr. Donaghy has taken a long term lease on the Francais, it is announced, and will conduct the theatre himself. For four years, Donaghy has been a film exchange manager and exhibitor at St. John, N. B., and other points in the Maritime Provinces. There will be no change in the policy of the Francais Theatre for the present.

In the Canadian Branches

MR. AND MRS. DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, accompanied by Mrs. Charlotte Pickford and Mr. and Mrs. John Fairbanks, were given a taste of real Canadian hospitality during the first week in October when they made a trip across the Dominion on their way to New York. At Winnipeg, Manitoba, the screen stars were given a great reception in which local exchange managers and exhibitors took a leading part under the direction of Cecil Wilson, manager of the United Artists exchange. At Montreal, Mary and Doug, were mobbed by a multitude of fans. Canadian newspapers gave considerable front page space to reports of receptions.

J. W. Margetts, former Universal manager at St. John, N. B., has arrived in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he has been installed as manager of the Winnipeg office of the Famous-Lasky Film Service.

R. G. March, former manager of the Pathe exchange at St. John, N.

B., has been appointed manager of the St. John office of the Fox Film Corporation, in succession to W. J. Melody who has been transferred to the Toronto Fox headquarters.

E. A. Browne, Toronto, has been engaged as special representative for Ontario of Stephenson's Attractions, Ltd., Toronto. Harry Price, of Toronto, has been engaged as Western Canadian representative for Stephenson with offices at Winnipeg.

C. R. Dippie, of Vancouver, B. C., is the manager of the Vancouver office which has been opened by Educational Films, the appointment being made by Mr. Hanson, of Toronto, Canadian general manager for Educational.

Norman Smith, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, formerly in charge of the local Pathe branch, has been made manager of Regal Films, Ltd., at Calgary, Alberta. Mr. Smith is a former resident of Calgary. Regal Films now handles Pathe distribution in Canada.

St. Louis Film Row News

THE St. Louis film colony gave a stag at the De Baliviere Tea Rooms the evening of October 8. Short talks by prominent film men and vaudeville and plenty of eats and smoke marked the event.

Mike Newman, formerly with Educational, is now making Southern Illinois for Paramount.

Tom Reed, of Duquoin, was a visitor to Fox headquarters. Henry Lowrey, of Highland, Ill., was another caller of the week.

Joe Fessaoro, of Taylorville, Ill., surprised Picture Row with his first visit in many weeks. He signed up for a number of features and comedies before returning home.

W. A. Clark, of Golconda, Ill., was seen at Paramount headquarters.

John Koenig, office manager, and Bill Wondell, booker for Paramount are vacationing in Kentucky. They have promised to bring back enough fish to put on a real fry for the Paramount organization. But of course the biggest ones will get away.

On October 15 Harry Niemeyer, former director of publicity for the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, will take charge of publicity and exploitation for the Goldwyn Pictures in the St. Louis territory. He will have headquarters in St. Louis.

Niemeyer thoroughly understands publicity. Prior to joining the Famous Players he was with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and is regarded as among the leading journalists of this section.

Around the Omaha Offices

F. B. SANDERS, W. D. Singleton, C. T. Lynch, salesmen; L. A. Freiberg, booker; and B. B. Reingold, manager of Goldwyn in Omaha, participated in the August bonus offered by the Goldwyn corporation for sales.

Charles A. Powell has joined the sales forces of the Omaha office for Pathe and will cover the northern part of Nebraska as well as a few counties in South Dakota and the river towns in Iowa.

Organization of film men in Omaha for social and athletic purposes is under way with Robert Gorham, booker at First National, and Elmer Sedin, office manager of Select in that city, taking the initiative. The first meeting of the tentative organization was held on September 25.

Harold Horne, Mid-West exploitation representative for the Film Booking Offices of America, and his wife were seriously injured on October 1 when an automobile in S. J. Donelson, Central City, Neb.

which they were riding with a friend crashed into a telephone pole in Omaha. At this writing both are still confined in a hospital, Mr. Horne with a probable fracture of the skull.

Exhibitors who visited Omaha film exchanges last week were: C. E. Robinson of the Home theatre, Blair, Neb.; John Goldsman of the Grand theatre, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; W. J. Lyon, who operates the Besse auditorium, Red Cloud, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. George Munroe, Clinton, Ia.; H. W. Kerr of the Kerr theatre, Little Sioux, Ia.; Hobart Swan, Kearney, Neb.; H. T. Kennedy, Broken Bow, Neb.; E. Cashman, Greenfield, Ia.; L. Beach, Central City, Neb.; Tom Brown, Iowa City, Ia.; O. Van Husen, Schuyler, Neb.; Harry Savage, Kimballtown, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Holdrege, Shenandoah, Ia.; Robert Booth, Nebraska City, Neb.; Ralph Brown, Neola, Ia.;

St. Louis Slants

William Goldman, manager of the Missouri theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, the big Famous-Players Missouri Corporation first run house, has been promoted to assistant general manager of the theatre department of the Famous Players-Lasky organization. Harold Franklin is head of the theatre department.

Herschel Stewart of Dallas, Tex., formerly general manager of the Southern Enterprise houses recently acquired by the Famous Players-Lasky organization, has been acting manager of the Missouri during Mr. Goldman's absence in the East. He probably will be awarded the post permanently.

W. B. Kneedler has sold the Gem theatre, Litchfield, Ill., to Dominick Frisini, who also controls houses in Taylorville and Kincaid, Ill.

Official announcement is expected from New York within the next few days of the consummation of a working agreement between the Famous Players Missouri Corporation and Skouras Brothers Enterprises on first runs and long-run super-productions.

The Famous Players owns the Missouri theatre and Skouras Brothers the New Grand Central, which occupy opposite corners at Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, the hub of St. Louis night life.

The Missouri has approximately 4,000 seats while the New Grand Central accommodates but 1,800. According to Nathan Frank, president of the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, under a plan under consideration the New Grand Central would be used for long run pictures while the Missouri would continue to change its programme every week.

Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises has made several trips to New York recently in connection with the deal.

This was a great Summer for the St. Louis airdomes, as less rain fell than in any Summer in fifty-one years. The Weather Bureau has been keeping records during that period. On only about five or six nights was it necessary to call off out-door shows because of rain. And in addition the city enjoyed a protracted Indian Summer, cool weather making its first real appearance on October 7. The Weather Bureau reports that from May 1 to October 1 the rainfall was 8.76 inches. The average is 18.71. From October 1 to 6 there wasn't any rain and the last four days of April were also dry. St. Louis was further blessed by an absence of a daylight saving ordinance.

Frisini Brothers now have the Gem theatre, Taylorville, Ill. Spalding Brothers formerly had the house. The latter company has taken over the Gem theatre, Litchfield, Ill., lately conducted by G. W. Kneedler. Frisini Brothers have houses in Taylorville, Auburn and Kincaid, Ill. All parties to the deals were in St. Louis during the week explaining the situation to exchange managers and making the necessary changes in contracts.

Kansas City Flashes

Fate still is smiling kindly upon the anti-censorship proposal now before the constitutional convention of Missouri. The proposal, which would place the screen and press upon the same basis, was believed to be in great danger when an immediate action upon the measure was expected. However, as the matter now stands, other committee reports now are ahead of the Bill of Rights committee report, which carries the proposal, thus affording sponsors of the proposal more time to prepare for the presentation of the measure and combat any radical opposition that acts as a barrier.

William Andlauer, official Kansas City cameraman for Pathe and the Newman theatre, who also has been making industrial films, has sold his interests to G. B. McGeary and will depart for New York to enter business. Howard Curtis, in charge of the photographing department, will continue with Mr. McGeary.

Kansas City exhibitors have just completed one of the most prosperous weeks at the box office since the bygone war days. With the annual resumption of the Priests of Pallas at Kansas City came thousands of out-of-town visitors with easily as many "uneasy" dollars. Attractive and elaborate programs at all first run houses, as well as at the suburban theatres were rewarded by standing room patronage.

Fire prevention, rather than fire extinction, in motion picture theatres was the keynote of the Kansas State Firemen's Association convention in Salina, Kans., this week.

"Fire chiefs are responsible for much of the disaster which has resulted from poor arrangements regarding motion picture operators and booths," Thomas R. Johnstone of the Indianapolis fire department said. "They have been negligent and the fire chief who sees those things and takes no steps to alter them is as much a murderer as though he hit people over the head with an axe."

For the second time in two weeks, C. H. Burkey, owner of the Summit theatre, Kansas City, and a member of the M. P. T. O. M. executive board, was held up and robbed by bandits Tuesday of box office receipts, which he was taking to the bank. This time the amount was $217.50. As was the case week before last, two bandits jumped upon the running board of Mr. Burkey's motor car and forced him to drive to the edge of the city, where he was robbed of his car and money.

Springfield, Ill., Items

Lee Burnstine spent two days in St. Louis taking in the Veiled Prophets parade and transacting film business the week of October 5.

The Strand will celebrate its first anniversary the week of October 8. The attraction booked is Wm. Fox's "The Fast Mail." The Strand opened a year ago with "No Woman Knows." The theatre has been ex-

Kansas City Film Centres

KANSAS CITY loses one of its best and most popular exploitation men in Howard Kingsmore of Paramount, who left Friday for Pawtucket, R. I., to assume the directing management of the Strand theatre, a Paramount. His appointment as managing director of the Strand comes as a reward that was due him.

E. J. Neubeler is the new manager of Kansas City's Hodkinson branch. The selection came last week with a visit to Kansas City by L. W. Kniskern, southern division sales manager. Neubeler has been in Kansas City only two weeks, having come from Buffalo, N. Y., where he was associated with Select. Coincident with this event, Tommy Taylor, for the sixth time, re-joined the Kansas City Hodkinson force.

So rapidly is business increasing with Truly B. Wildman, manager of the Kansas City Enterprise office, that three additional salesmen have been put on the road, R. J. Rogers, in the Missouri territory; J. H. Minns and John W. Mangham, jr., in the Kansas territory.

One of the largest contracts ever closed by an independent exchange in the Kansas City territory was made last week when Samuel Harding of the Liberty theatre, Kansas City, and president of the Capitol Enterprise, contracted with Al Kahn of the Crescent exchange for Warner Bros.' eight big specials which will be shown at the Liberty and all Capitol Enterprise theatres.

With the Des Moines Branches

PAUL ROBEY, manager of Adel's theatre, the Palace, was a visitor at the First National exchange this week.

Mrs. Leslie Wehlan, wife of the exploitation manager of Famous-Players at Washington, D. C., has been visiting relatives in Des Moines.

Louis Clements, assistant in the accessories department for Famous-Players, resigned his position to go into business with an independent concern in Omaha, Copland, who takes Clements' place, was formerly in the business office at Universal here.

Faulkner, special representative for Famous-Players, is in Des Moines to help in the moving of the exchange into their new building at 1117 High street. Moving day is set for about Wednesday, maybe Tuesday.

John F. Friedl, of Famous-Players exploitation, has been putting on some winning exploitation stunts in connection with a style show with "The Bonded Woman," Miss Bonnie Murray, Iowa's winning beauty of the state fair, appearing for the style show.

tremely successful, doing a good business since the day it opened.

George Koehn, of the Empress, reports business as being on the increase since the mines have reopened.

The Capitol is giving radio concerts daily in addition to its picture program.

Ben Rovin has booked some two-reel Westerns to go with his Sunday and Monday programs. Ben's patrons are strong for that kind of entertainment, especially on Sundays.

The Savoy continues to make money for Louis Kerasotes. This theatre has long been one of the best money-makers in the city.

The Lyric is making ready to install a new pipe organ.

"Manslaughter" had a good week at the Princess. The Journal critic knocked the story but lauded the acting and production.

The Lyric is making a lot of noise over the coming of Mae Murray in "Fascination," scheduled for the week of October 8. "The Prisoner of Zenda" is another big feature booked in at the Lyric.

"The Old Homestead" comes to the Gaiety October 8. Norma Talmadge is due at the Princess the same time in "The Eternal Flame." The Vaudeville will have "The Beauty Shop." All three are Watts houses.

Des Moines Notes

W. F. Smith, of the Colonial theatre, Clarion, reports that he likes the fall lineup of pictures and that he's glad to see the time of the fall opening here again.

Dr. Bill Pence, manager of the theatre at Columbus Junction, also takes a flier in scenario writing.

F. J. Hemke, manager of the Strand theatre, Pomeroy, completed the second coat of paint on his home this week. It was just last June that he sent out the "At Home" cards.

J. E. Craven, Crystal theatre, Kellogg, was a visitor at the Universal exchange last week. Mr. Craven has reason to believe that he will be a member of the State Legislature. He is not taking any chances and his coming campaign will be elaborate and thorough.

Theodore Braynt, manager of the Gem theatre, Oelwein, has secured the lease of the large theatre at Independence, Iowa, from E. A. Boss, of the Boss Hotels Company, who purchased the Gedney Hotel which houses the theatre within its building. The theatre has been elaborately redecorated and rewired and it has a new entrance way. It looks quite metropolitan. It was christened the "Grand" and opened September 4.

Seattle Snap Shots

George E. Bradley, publicity and exploitation director for the Seattle and Portland Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., returned to this city a few days ago after a short trip to Bellingham, Blaine and one or two other small towns near Seattle. While in Bellingham Mr. Bradley attended the reopening of Fred Walton's American theatre, which has just undergone $12,000 worth of repairs. In Blaine Mr. Bradley was the guest of Charles Grieme at the Ivan L. theatre, one of the most beautiful small town film houses in the local territory.

The news has just been made public that John Hamrick, local theatre man, has recently acquired ownership of the Star and Liberty theatres in Astoria, Ore., making a total of three of the four houses in the town that are owned and operated by Mr. Hamrick. A month ago he opened the new Blue Mouse theatre in that town, and his acquisition of the two other houses leaves only the Columbia, a second run house, under outside ownership. Gene O'Keefe, who was placed in charge of the Blue Mouse upon its opening, has also been given charge of the Star and Liberty. These two houses were formerly owned by Cy Danz, and were sold by him to Mr. Hamrick. The theatres are undergoing repairs at the present time, the Liberty being closed and being to a great extent remodeled.

Arthur Hile, a theatre man well known in this territory, and most recently connected with the Ansonia Amusement company of Montana, has just joined John Hamrick's organization in this city, and is at present situated in the Blue Mouse theatre.

Minneapolis Personals

Joseph M. Feldman has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis American Releasing exchange, succeeding Frank Mantzke, who has been made district manager of the company with headquarters in Chicago.

Eph Rosen, manager of the Minneapolis Universal exchange, was honored the week of Oct. 2 by "Rosen Week," with 422 theatres in the territory participating in a rush of bookings. "Let's Pin a Rose on Rosen" was the slogan of the Universal employees.

Max Doolittle, Paramount exploiter, was taken sick while at Sioux Falls, S. D., and forced to return to his home in St. Paul, where he is convalescing.

The two biggest contracts in the history of the Hodkinson exchange are claimed by Earl Reynolds, manager of the branch, who closed the larger of the two with the Ray theatre Dickinson, N. D., and Jack Flannery, special representative, who closed with the Strand theatre, Duluth, for 50 weeks. Reynolds' contract will run for a year and a month.

Cincinnati Paragraphs

Feature pictures will be shown at the Empress theatre in the future in connection with stage productions, according to an announcement by Jules Frankel, Cincinnati theatrical man, who has assumed charge of the theatre. Mr. Frankel has been in the theatrical business for more than 10 years, and in addition to his new acquisition, controls and manages a number of other theatres, including houses in Dayton and Columbus, Ohio. At the Empress theatre he will be assisted by Ben Roth, also of Cincinnati.

Numerous changes are to be made in the new theatre, including complete renovation. New lighting effects will be installed and new scenery is being painted. There will be a daily matinee at 2 o'clock and two evening shows at 7 and 9 o'clock. Saturday and Sunday of each week the performance will be continuous from 1.30 to 11 p. m. Prices, including Government tax, will be as follows: Auditorium, 35 cents; balcony, 25 cents, and boxes, 40 cents.

A special committee of the Clifton Community company has been appointed to secure subscriptions for an increase in their capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000, in order to finance the repurchase of the Clifton theatre on Ludlow avenue. The company acquired the property for $10,000, with the privilege of repurchase at that figure after two years. It was arranged to exercise this privilege and an agreement was entered into to sell the property for $21,000, to be used as a public garage. However, the residents of the community objected to the garage, and following a court fight, they were sustained. The Community company now proposes to lease the place, to be operated as a motion picture theatre.

Attorney Jacob Stegler has been appointed receiver of the Middle-West Film Amusement company, 138 West Seventh street, as a result of a suit filed by Lawrence Bueche, Sr., President and Manager of the concern.

Bueche says the company, which is an Ohio corporation, has an authorized capital of $200,000, of which $62,000 in preferred and $41,000 in common stock has been issued. He says he is surety for the company upon notes for more than $10,000, which the company is making no effort to redeem, and alleges that the company has difficulty securing funds to pay its operating expenses and to meet its other obligations. He states that the assets exceed the liabilities, but these may be dissipated unless a receiver takes charge.

It is stated that Bueche has been president only about a year, and that the small amount of assets, considering the amount of stock issued, caused him to seek the receivership and an investigation.

Albany Gossip

Dan Keegan, whose theatre, the Regent, was partially destroyed by fire several weeks ago, announces that the house will open in the near future. The house is one of Troy's residential theatres.

George Loomis, of Frankfort, was in Albany the past week, visiting along Film Row.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, was in Albany the past week on his way to Danbury, Conn. Once a year Mr. Smalley goes back to his home town, where his aged mother resides. While in Albany the other day he said that he intended to bring back his mother in order that she might spend her remaining days with him in Cooperstown. Mr. Smalley has a chain of six theatres.

A. J. Herman, manager of the First National Exchange in Albany, spent the week visiting Northern New York houses, and brought back a bushel of contracts.

Michael Kallet, owner of houses in Oneida and Rome, spent a few hours in Albany this week on his way back from New York.

"Nate" Robbins, of Utica, announced this week that he would erect a million dollar theatre and office building in Utica next year. The house will be called "The Robbins" and will be six stories in height, the theatre part seating 3,300. Mr. Robbins has a chain of theatres, including two in Watertown.

Frederick W. Mansert, of Glens Falls dropped in at the First National exchange in Albany this week, and reported business as first rate.

The Van Curler in Schenectady is now running pictures on Sunday.

Mrs. Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, is recovering from an operation. Mr. Buettner is one of the officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State.

Gardner Hall in Troy, operated by Armstrong and Miller, after being closed for the entire summer, will reopen this month.

H. Calvin Ford, who runs the Capitol and Majestic in Pittsfield, Mass., was in Albany this week.

Bridgeport, Conn., Brevities

A. A. Spitz of Providence, R. I., and Charles H. Stedman of Cranston, R. I., operators of 26 theatres in New England, have assumed a 99-year lease of the so-called Vaughn property between Rose place and Ferry street at Norwich, Conn., from T. C. Murphy and William P. McGarry of that city, upon which they plan to build a theatre, to cost approximately $200,000 and which will seat 1,900. The deal involved more than $750,000, making it one of the largest realty deals in that city and vicinity for many a week.

The buyers are associated in business as the A. A. Spitz Amusement company, which conducts New England motion picture houses under the name of Empire throughout New England. The proposed Norwich theatre will be strictly what is known as a ground floor house. The main entrance is to be on Rose place and there will be a Rose place exit and exits on Ferry street, as the building will extend from street to street in a diagonal way across the lot, cutting slightly across the Vaughn office building, which fronts on Ferry street. The stage, which, it is claimed, will be the largest in any Norwich theatre, will be at the Ferry street end of the building. Fire proof construction will be used throughout.

Provisions are to be made in the plans for a store of approximately 28x50 feet, entrance to which will be through the theatre foyer on Rose street. Murphy & McGarry have taken a lease on the store, but state it is not for their present clothing business on Main street. The garage of Hayes Brothers, now located on a part of the property, will continue to occupy this site, at least for a time, until progress in the theatre building makes it necessary for a change. The lessees plan to have work started at once and rushed.

For the past four years the Rhode Island lessees of the property have been seeking a suitable theatre site in Norwich and have negotiated for other pieces of property at various times. So far as is known, this is the only 99-year lease ever executed in Norwich and filed in the town clerk's office.

The Rialto Theatre Company has been incorporated at Norwalk, Conn., to operate a high-class motion picture house. Capital stock is set at $50,000, with business to start with $8,000. Incorporators are Arthur Ferris, Albert Hamilton and John J. Cuneo.

The Crown theatre at Hartford, Conn., one of the Capitol City's best known motion picture houses, partly destroyed by fire last December, was reopened this week, being credited as the "last word" in fire proof construction. Nothing from floor to ceiling of an inflammable nature has been used. This safety provision is added to by the fact that there are five exits, all readily accessible and leading directly to the street. Interior and exterior is decorated in a dignified and attractive manner.

What is credited as being a somewhat unusual feature in motion picture houses is the construction of the floor. So as to provide a direct and clear view of the screen from all parts of the house, the floor is built on a double incline from the stage. A gradual slope to the center, as well as to the front, results in an unimpaired vision from every seat, doing away with the grotesque appearance of characters viewed on the screen from an angle. The opening feature film was "To'le David," featuring Richard Barthelmess, a Hartford favorite because he was once a student at Trinity college in that city.

Boston Notes

All departments of the huge building recently erected by Marcus Loew for the State theatre, Boston, are now functioning. Last Monday the Henry Jewett Players moved into the Fine Arts theatre on the second floor and presented their first offering for the season. The large ballroom is also going full swing, Baron Arsenian and Miss Frances Aldrich have been engaged for exhibition dancing. All of the score or more stores facing on Massachusetts avenue have also been taken.

A 1,500 seat motion picture theatre will soon be added to the long list already doing business in Somerville, Mass., its site being in the Winter Hill section between Davis and Ball squares. The theatre is being built for John E. Locatelli, whose son, Albert, is manager of the Central Amusement Company, now operating the Central theatre in that city. The sons will manage the new house.

Henry J. Steinberg, Webster, Mass., who is erecting a new theatre in that town, in the Holden block, has announced that the building will be ready for the opening by Thanksgiving Day, and will operate on a straight picture policy.

The Pioneer Film company, Boston, held its first anniversary during the last week, and Pres. Harry Segal achieved the signal accomplishment of moving into his own building in observance of the first milestone. He was showered with congratulations by the fraternity over beyond Park Square, and announced that he will have a monster opening in the middle of the month. Also he says the films are going to come fast.

Verily, the motion picture has spread into fields that a few years past were undreamt of. The New England Bakers' Association, holding forth at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, in solemn conclave as to what next year's bread was going to contain, closed a couple of days ago with a motion picture show depicting the raising and harvesting of raisins, though the accompanying lecture by Sec. John M. Harpley of the National Retail Baker's Association, did not say whether they were intended for solid or liquid food.

Gordon's Central Square Olympia, Cambridge, Mass., has started a new policy, showing two feature films every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The programs will also include organ recitals and orchestra concert.

Jake Lourie's Park theatre boosted the admissions to an 85 cent top during the past week for the showing of "Nero," the Fox spectacle, and he had the house full for all shows, too.

Last Monday all the theatres in Worcester were out of commission for nearly an hour when in the middle of the evening shows the Webster street plant of the Worcester Electric Light company staged a breakdown. Naturally all the rest of the city got it too, but the audiences stuck.

More than 300 happy boys from the Brightside Home for Orphans in Springfield, were guests of the management at the Fox theatre one day last week for a showing of "Grandma's Boy." Between the picture and the huge sticks of candy that they were given, they enjoyed the day.

8 GREAT INCE SPECIALS for 1922-1923

The day of the mediocre screen production is past.

Appealing novelty is the demand today of the great screen following which has grown from a handful of curiosity seekers gathered in a two by four theatre, badly lighted and more badly ventilated, to vast audiences from every walk of life.

The motion picture has become the great American amusement.

Why?

Because countless millions are being spent each year for ideas, settings, faces, costumes which are novel, which give the world at large something new to think about, something new to talk about; which furnish entertainment that take people out of the rut and routine of prosaic every day life into the electrifying atmosphere of the dramatic and the romantic.

In all my forthcoming specials for the coming season—I have kept in constant sight the audience value of appealing novelty. Each production has been based on a story of intrinsic merit.

There never has existed a public which will pay money to be bored.

I send forth my late productions in full confidence that the box-office gauge which is an unfailing test of public favor will register a record high water mark.

"BELL BOY 13"

with DOUGLAS MACLEAN

A snappy, sparkling comedy that every member of the family will love

One of the cleverest and funniest farces yet produced for the screen, and it carries a pleasing love interest. Douglas MacLean has never been closer to his own winning personality since "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave." A bellboy's job isn't as simple as it sounds especially after one's most serious efforts have been toward college social triumphs.

MR. EXHIBITOR

In the preceding insert you will have gathered something of the bigness of the eight Thomas H. Ince productions which are being released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

We have seen several of these pictures, and we can assure you that they are both BIG and UNUSUAL, with EXCEPTIONAL BOX OFFICE VALUE. We wish to congratulate Mr. Ince on the rare artistry and entertainment value and the keen sense of showmanship in their production, and we are proud to offer them to exhibitors as First National releases.

We can not emphasize too strongly the large number of really big, smashing releases which First National is offering you in its Great Fall Selection. We believe that we have the greatest line-up of really Big Time pictures ever offered under a single banner. And they are coming fast—ONE BIG ONE RIGHT AFTER ANOTHER.

We are giving you the pictures, and it is up to you to make the most of them. A little extra effort in exploiting them means EXTRA DOLLARS at your Box Office. Every one of them is deserving of special mention. You may make good without effort, but every ounce of energy you spend in exploiting these pictures means dollars and cents at the Box Office. It's up to you. Go to it!

Eight Productions from Thomas H. Ince Studios

Each Story Entirely Different: Investment in Negatives Alone Totals $2,500,000

EIGHT special productions by Thomas H. Ince have been completed and will be released shortly through the Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

These eight new Ince pictures, it is said, constitute probably the largest individual unit of productions scheduled for the coming season. They represent an estimated investment for negatives alone of $2,500,000.

Each story is totally different in construction and treatment and each contains some unusual feature of appealing novelty. The locales shift from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but the "Ince punch" always is in evidence.

The list of releases includes "Skin Deep," "Ten Ton Love," "What a Wife Learned," "The Hottentot," "A Man of Action," "Bellboy Thirteen," "Sears of Jealousy" and "The Sunshine Trail."

"Ten Ton Love" is an unusual story of a forlorn circus waif and her elephant, "Oscar." When a storm blows over the circus tent one night, they run away into the Canadian backwoods, where they meet many strange adventures. An elephant is used as a star for the first time in this picture, with Madge Bellamy playing the part of the quaint little "elephant girl." An entire circus was used to get shots of the sawdust ring which are shown in the first reel of the picture. John Griffith Wray directed.

"Skin Deep" is an out-and-out melodrama based on the theme of the change wrought in a man's character when he gets in an aeroplane smash-up and plastic surgery restores an ugly face that has stamped him all his life as a crook. A railroad train and an aeroplane have been combined in an interesting prison "break." Milton Sills plays the part of the gangster who finds himself, with Florence Vidor in the role of a hospital nurse whose influence combines with that of surgery to make a new man of the ex-convict.

In "The Hottentot," Mr. Ince presents his screen version of William Collier's big Broadway success, a play that rocked the entire country for two seasons. The picture, besides retaining the witty lines and absurd situations of the play, incorporates a big steeplechase. Shots of the horses in action were made from pits dug beneath the jumps; from an aeroplane and from a hillside to get novel race effects. Douglas MacLean plays the part of Sam Harrington, the yachtsman who, terrified of horses, is mistaken for a famous rider and ashamed to own up even when he finds himself forced to ride in a dangerous race. Madge Bellamy appears in the role of "Peggy Fairfax," with endless trouble for poor Sam.

Raymond Hatton as the eccentric butler who makes

"What a Wife Learned" tells the love story of an ultra-modern woman and a primitive man. A twentieth century romance is presented from a new angle with a western country flood scene as a big photographic feature. Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers and Milton Sills, head a big cast. The story is an original by Bradley King with John Griffith Wray directing.

"A Man of Action" is another story from the pen of Bradley King.

It is a mystery comedy built around situations that keep one guessing until the final unexpected denouement. Douglas MacLean and Raymond Hatton put on some mirthful team work with Marguerite de la Motte in the leading feminine role and James W. Horne directing.

A real forest fire has been screened in "Sears of Jealousy," a drama of a proud family of the old South and a strange hill people. A lynching scene and a novel escape from the forest flames by means of a flume are features of the production in which Frank Keenan, Lloyd Hughes and Marguerite de la Motte appear under direction of Lambert Hillyer.

Douglas MacLean is the laugh-maker in two sparkling comedies, "The Sunshine Trail," and "Bellboy Thirteen." In the former he has the part of a guileless young rancher who is robbed by strangers whom he tries to befriend in accordance with his motto about "scattering sunshine on the way." In "Bellboy Thirteen" he gums things up as an absent-minded young chap, just out of college, who dons a strange uniform because he disagrees with his uncle on the subject of a suitable wife.

Elephant Starred in Ince Special

A dog, a horse and a walrus have been starred in motion pictures but the newest animal star of all is "Oscar," the elephant, which gives a remarkable performance in Thomas H. Ince's "Ten Ton Love."

"Oscar" tips the scales at a figure which subdues all argument in animal circles as to who is the "biggest star of all." Other animals have been content to follow directions but "Oscar," to prove that he has a mind and a will of his own, improvised some of his own "stuff" in the Ince picture.

The elephant's trainer was distinctly nervous the first time that "Oscar" faced a battery of cameras and bright lights, for when one of the big chaps is overcome by a fit of temperament a studio lot is crowded quarters for comfort. The elephant, however, posed as calmly as if there had been a movie camera behind every bush and tree of his native African jungle. He developed a distinct case on Madge Bellamy, with whom he was working, and would follow her about like a dog.

In two scenes, however, when he thought she was getting too much attention, he improvised some "bits" that would keep him in the limelight. The first time he did this was in a scene outside a circus tent when he steals the clown's cap, and the elephant girl, snatching it away, scolds him for being naughty. Oscar was supposed to look contrite, but instead he reached down and caught hold of the cap Miss Bellamy was wearing, lifting cap and girl and all from the ground.

Thomas Ince Celebrates Fourteenth Anniversary

THE fourteenth anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture field will be celebrated by Thomas H. Ince this fall. With one hundred and fifty successful productions to his credit, Mr. Ince states that the eight productions just completed for the coming season are the best of his career.

Ince first won recognition in the days of Biograph when he directed one-reelers. He was one of the first, if not the first, to make a two-reel picture. He blazed the trail of motion picture production westward, producing some of his early successes in the foothills outside Santa Monica, where "Inceville" soon attained fame.

Since his earliest days he has been known as a maker of stars for he brought out and developed such screen stars as Charles Ray, William S. Hart, Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennett, Bessie Barriscale, Hobart Bosworth, Sessue Hayakawa, and Frank Keenan. Those who have followed his career attribute his success to the "Ince" punch, the showman's touch which always seems to put his productions over with a bang.

Trying to analyze a "punch" is something like attempting to dissect lightning. The men and women who work about Ince at his studios explain it by saying that the man is dynamic. It's the personality that he injects into all his work; the time he devotes to personal supervision. Every story which goes into production in his studios gets his O. K. before the first wheel is turned. When a scenario is completed, it needs the same O. K. before it is ready for the director. As a result the film is in such condition when it reaches the cutting room that before the picture is completed, the producer himself, as is his habit, can run through it with practiced eye and deft hand, making quick alterations until the polishing off is completed—and the "Ince" punch is there with its wallop.

Ince Studios a Distinctive Achievement

By Clark W. Thomas

General Manager Thomas H. Ince Studios,
Culver City, Cal.

I WOULD like to point out, first of all, the difference between the Thomas H. Ince Studios, at Culver City, and other motion picture units on the Pacific Coast, to support the statement often made that the Ince plant is the most complete in the west.

In the early days of the business, studios were makeshift affairs, with stages built in vacant lots or barns fitted up for lighting. From this modest beginning, the production end of the film industry has grown until today, the most magnificent studios in the world are located in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Pictures made in the west, as a rule, are cut and edited locally, but then the negative is shipped to New York where the commercial prints are made to be distributed throughout the United States to exhibitors.

In the fall of 1918 Thomas H. Ince built the Ince Studios in Culver City on a tract of land which comprised ten acres. The studios were designed to provide complete facilities for the efficient and artistic production of motion pictures. In addition to the administration building, stages, projection rooms, property buildings, electrical and technical departments, and other features of the average studio, the Ince plant included a laboratory which I believe is one of the finest in the industry.

In other studios in the west, the laboratory is used to develop and print the "daily rushes" in order that a director may see his work on the screen the day after it is filmed. Sample prints are made for the cutting room, so that the production can be edited into final shape, but the commercial prints are made in large laboratories in the east, after the valuable negative has been shipped across the continent from the studio.

The Thomas H. Ince studios complete the entire production within its own plant. After the film has been cut and edited, the negative is matched and hundreds of commercial prints made right in our own laboratories. These are then shipped direct to the exchanges throughout the country and from there distributed to the exhibitors.

Time is saved by this method from the completion of a picture until it is in the theatres, but this is not the important factor. I think that everyone who understands motion picture production will agree that printing the film at the plant in which it was made insures greater care and better artistic results. Our laboratory men are able to give each scene in a picture individual attention, they shade it to the proper degree and tint the celluloid to perfection, for the reason that they are not rushed. The plant is not a commercial organization, but the last step in a process which has for its aim efficient and artistic production.

The studios, as a whole, are among the most attractive in the west, in addition to their efficiency and their completeness. The administration building is a two-story structure of white Colonial design. In this building are the executive offices of Mr. Ince, his private projection room, the production offices, scenario department, "exhibitors' service" department, casting and auditing offices and still photograph department. Facing the inside of the studio, on the south exposure of the building, are the dressing rooms for stars and principal players.

For interior production there are three large stages of seventy by one hundred and eighty feet dimensions. These provide thirty-seven thousand square feet of stage space. Two of the stages are roofed with glass and have sides of canvas fitted into frames, which makes possible the opening of all or any portion of the sides. Dark sliding curtains overhead can be drawn across to darken any portion of the stage in order to photograph by artificial lights. The third stage, constructed of concrete, is dark and artificial light entirely is used for production.

A number of permanent sets have been erected on the lot, such as village street fronts of buildings, the front and side elevations of fashionable homes and cottages, humble peasants. These sets can be dressed to fit the particular picture for which they are used, but the main parts of the structures are left intact, minor changes only being made.

The electrical department of the studio is complete in every detail. Much of the lighting on the stages is done with artificial lamps and even on the glass stages they are necessary for high lights and to supplement the sunshine.

To supply the current there are two General Electric Company converters. One is a 100 k.w. converter and the other of 300 k.w. capacity. The equipment includes 110 W. field Kerner arc lamps, 30 Crescent spots and innumerable smaller lights. Two portable electric plants, one a 50 k.w. mounted on a two-ton Moreland truck, and the other a 100 k.w. mounted on a three-and-a-half ton Mack truck, make it possible to "shoot" scenes in any location and to take night exteriors on the stages.

In the laboratory, which is fitted with the most modern equipment on the market, using Bell and Howell printers, perforators and splicers, there are two drying rooms, fur cutting rooms, a splicing room, three inspecting rooms, a polishing and shipping room, perforating room, where the raw stock is received a printing room, two dark rooms, a wash room and a color room.

Westinghouse motors are used to turn the drying drums in the laboratory and other Westinghouse motors are employed in the projection rooms to turn the Simplex and Powers machines.

Thomas H. Ince was the first motion picture producer to use art titles in pictures. He began with simple little drawings and worked up this department until today it includes eight artists, a camera man, clay modelers and others who are called upon to aid in the work. The staff of nine regular workers in the art title department have turned out some of the original title effects, com-ceived by Mr. Ince, that have become important features of his productions. The artists are ever attempting new ideas and even though practically all producers have adopted Mr. Ince's ideas for their own pictures, this studio is continually introducing new effects which keep the titles in Ince productions ahead of screen plays from the other studios.

Art posters, billboard designs and lobby displays are also produced by the art department.

A Westinghouse and Fairbanks-Morse generator set are used in the art title department for the illumination in photographing the drawing. Four Cooper-Hewitt mercury vapor lights are also used for this purpose. There are two large property buildings on the lot for furniture and hand props. On the second floor of one is located the drapery department. Costumes, lamp shades, table and bed linen, draperies and other necessities in the way of cloths are manufactured in this department. Costumers and designers are constantly at work turning out new wardrobe or altering and repairing old costumes. The staff shop is an interesting department, for it is there that most of the miniatures are made. Papier mache and plaster work of all kinds is turned out. Cities, buildings, hills, deserts, dams, trestles and a thousand other things are constructed in miniature.

The camouflage artist also works in this department. His task is to make new things look old, or to construct make-believe structures and give them the appearance of reality.

In little separate buildings are the four cutting rooms. These are grouped around a steel vault in which the positives of Ince productions are kept. There are four projection rooms in the studio, fully equipped similarly to a modern movie theatre, with Power and Simplex projection machines, rows of regular seats and a silver screen.

Three dressing room buildings provide ample space for any number of players in even the largest scenes. The stars' dressing rooms are located in the administration building and are fitted with every comfort possible.

In the camera and machine shop every sort of equipment necessary to care for the dozens of Bell and Howell cameras, and other work of a mechanical nature, has been installed.

The carpenter shop is equipped with various kinds of wood working machines and the paint shop is well stocked with paints and wall paper for use on the sets.

The receiving and store room resembles a country mercantile store. It is filled with hardware, drugs, stationery, cloth and almost every commodity that would ever be needed for dressing sets or for actual use.

A completely fitted-up hospital, with all essentials from the smallest detail to an operating table, is also maintained in the studio.

In the still department, which handles all photography for the "exhibitor's service" department, such as intimate "shots" of players off stage, scenes from the productions for newspapers, magazines and lobby displays, 2,000 prints are turned out each day. It is equipped with electric washers, printers and dryers.

In the technical shop, where the technical and art directors plan and execute the details of set building, are located the architects and draftsmen. The plumbing shop houses essentials, such as pipe, fittings and meals which are frequently used in construction work.

A well organized fire prevention department, with an experienced head, aids in minimizing danger to the plant and its workers.

The transportation department operates a fleet of touring cars and trucks which are ready at all times to transport members of the staff or a company of players a few blocks, or hundreds of miles on location trips.

Tourneur Adapts "Lorna Doone" for Screen

FROM the successful romantic novel of "Lorna Doone" which has run through countless editions, Maurice Tourneur has brought to the screen a remarkable photodrama of finished technique and vivid drama.

Tourneur has achieved the distinction not merely of winning the favor of the motion picture "fans" but also of the educational and literary world with his film adaptation of classics.

A student of art and sculpture before he entered the realm of moviedom, he brings to the filming of every production the artist's sense of composition and harmonious beauty. Combined with this is a wide knowledge of dramatic values which has been built up from years of stage apprenticeship and more years of motion picture production until he is able to sense to a fine point just what the public wants.

Tourneur was born and educated in Paris. He tried many different avenues of expression in his youth. He was in turn a designer and interior decorator, an illustrator of books and magazines, the creator of lace curtain and fabric designs. For a short time he had the privilege of studying sculpture with Rodin and later he mixed colors on an artist's palette under the supervising eye of Puvis de Chavannes, the famous mural decorator.

The war turned his attention to affairs more worldly and as an officer of the French cavalry he brushed shoulders for three years with men of every walk of life and had a chance to act a small part in the world's biggest drama.

At the close of the war he was given an opportunity to play a small part in the stage company of the famous Madame Rejane whom he accompanied on a world tour. The illness of a director gave him an opportunity to prove his ability in this line and when he returned to Paris from this trip, he stepped forth on his own as a director. Associated with the well known Andre Antoine, he directed more than four hundred performances at the Odeon, Libre and other theatres of Paris.

Always alive to new methods of expression, he watched the development of the motion picture with keenest interest and was finally convinced that the photodrama was the greatest vehicle of artistic expression of the modern day. Each of his big productions has been proof of his contention that the world will support "really good" pictures, for his adaptations of classical literature have proven enormously successful.

"Lorna Doone" is said to be the biggest picture of his career. In photography, costuming and massive "sets," the "poet producer" has outdone himself. The stirring adventures of the captive maid of the "bloody Doones" and her peasant lover, John Ridd, have been screened with an artistic realism that doubtless will further endear this favorite novel of seventeenth century romance.

Madge Bellamy plays the title role with John Bowers as the lover and Frank Keenan as the picturesque bandit leader.

Left, a thrilling moment from "Lorna Doone," a Thomas H. Ince production, directed by Maurice Tourneur; right, a scene from "What a Wife Learned," an Ince production. Both are for First National distribution.

John Griffith Wray Directs Ince Specials :

TWO of the featured specials on the Thomas H. Ince releasing program for the coming season were directed by John Griffith Wray. In "Ten Ton Love" and "What a Wife Learned," Wray has had an opportunity to show just how much can be made of two totally different stories—one dealing with the unusual adventures of a sad little Cinderella of a circus and her elephant, "Oscar"; the other with a romance of a primitive man and a "new" woman.

Wray had a number of seasons of dramatic experience on the legitimate stage to his credit before he entered the realm of moviedom and has found his years of preparation invaluable as a preparation for a directorship. Graduated from normal school, he taught school for eight months in order that he might get two years' credit in the University of Wisconsin, where he intended to study law. The "dramatic bug" hit him, however, and instead of "digging into" the dusty volumes he went on to New York to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

He appeared in a number of successful stage productions, but realizing that his lack of inches would be a hindrance in this line, he soon got into the business end of the game, directing and traveling with his own companies throughout the United States. Twice he took companies on tour to New Zealand and Austria and five times he journeyed to the South Sea Isles, so that when a question of exotic atmosphere is under discussion, his word is authoritative.

At Oakland, Calif., continuing as a director, Wray opened the only theatre in the world that has a revolving stage and upper structure. The unique arrangement, which permitted unusually interesting scenic effects, attracted nation-wide attention. The director showed the same inventive streak in the presentation of stock plays by rewriting many of the scenes of the dramas he used and injecting dramatic touches that built up a big following.

Wray was so successful in training his stock actors and actresses that his work attracted the attention of the motion picture producers. Whenever new "finds" were made who needed a little dramatic training and stage experience, they got the habit of sending them to Oakland for several months' work before using them in pictures. Leatrice Joy, Enid Markey, now starring in New York, and Marjorie Bennett, who is starring in Australia, are three of the graduates from the Wray school.

Inevitably he was drawn into the motion picture game and for three years he has been directing special productions for the Thomas H. Ince studios. His "Hail the Woman" met with marked favor. In "What a Wife Learned" and "Ten Ton Love" he has given his best work, and innumerable original touches bear witness that the inventive genius which was responsible for his success as a stock company director has broadened and developed in his work with Thomas H. Ince.

An original scheme was tried out by Thomas H. Ince during the production of his "Ten Ton Love" when he "rented" a real circus for two weeks for the making of several scenes. For the first time in motion picture history circus performers and "movie" actors worked together under the same canvas.

During the entire time that the first reel of the film was in production Madge Bellamy and "Oscar," the elephant, who share starring honors in this original picture, appeared each day in the regular circus parade. ate circus food and learned the "lingo" and all the tricks of the circus. They absorbed "atmosphere" to such good advantage that Miss Bellamy had become an expert "elephant girl" and Oscar had learned to mooch peanuts, popcorn and sugar in approved "ring style" before they severed connection with the sawdust ring.

It took lots of nerve for a young girl who never before had seen an elephant except at a safe distance to let a "ten-ton" chap get familiar and lift her about with his trunk or step over her in a lordly masculine fashion, but Miss Bellamy proved proficient as a "big top" performer and handled the elephant with an adeptness that will win the admiration of every picture fan.

The shots of the circus ring in action are the first of the kind ever made. There is a drunken bear, all kinds of high school horses and trained dogs, camels and clowns and lions and all the other animals familiar to the circus-loving public, in addition to all the circus freaks. The idea of using an entire outfit to get the scenes desired in the picture is absolutely original.

"What a Wife Learned," directed by Wray under the auspices of Thos. H. Ince, presents some clever animal stunts also. "Patch," a Airedale dog, is only five years old, but he has been making "screen appearances" ever since he was six weeks old. He is ready to obey every command of a director and sometimes figures out stunts for himself. In one scene he was told to carry a suitcase up some steps. The staircase was too narrow for him to get up, but after setting it down and apparently thinking it over, he picked up the case again and hopped up the steps sideways on his hind legs, carefully holding the case in his mouth until he got to the top of the steps. In "What a Wife Learned" he does some unusually clever stunts.

Seventeen head of cattle were killed in a cattle stampede, which is one of the spectacular features of "What a Wife Learned." The cattle on the ranch where some of the scenes of the picture were made got so excited when they were stampeded for a scene that a number of them were trampled to death, and John Bowers, who plays one of the leading roles in the picture, narrowly escaped a serious accident.

In the scene, "Jim Russell," the westerner, steps out in front of a madly racing herd of cattle and stops their stampede by waving his arms. It looked for a while as if the cattle were going to trample Bowers to death, but he held his ground and the cameras caught an unusual scene.

Filming of "Skin Deep" Hazardous Enterprise

"Skin Deep," a new Thomas H. Ince melodrama, nearly cost two lives in the making. In one scene an aviator rescues an escaping convict from the roof of a train going at fifty-five miles an hour, by means of a rope ladder. On the first attempt the man on the train missed the rope ladder and barely saved himself from falling under the train. The aviator meanwhile missed hitting a house by inches. On the third trial the stunt was successfully executed.

"HAIL THE WOMAN"

Bradley King's Contributions to Screen :

BRADLEY KING, a member of the Thomas H. Ince staff of screen writers, is a girl in her early twenties. She has contributed a number of continuities and originals to the silver sheet.

Bradley King

Miss King was born in New York and received her schooling at the Sacred Heart convent. Upon her graduation she traveled for several months, until reaching California, where she decided to make her home.

In 1917, "having nothing on my mind, I wrote a few poems," according to Miss King. These were sold to magazines and spurred by this success, she began writing short stories. The first one was purchased by the editor of a magazine, and each succeeding story also brought a check. In addition, the screen rights to every short story was purchased by film producers.

It was this remarkable success in the world of fiction that brought Miss King to the attention of Thomas H. Ince. He sent for her and she began work as a member of the Ince staff. It was less than a year between the time Miss King's first story appeared in a magazine and the day that she went to work on contract with Mr. Ince.

Among her short stories that have been given screen productions are: "Footlights and Shadows," an Olive Thomas vehicle; "Beyond the Cross-roads," with an all-star cast; "The Hundredth Chance," a Roland West production; "The Open Door," made by an independent company; "The Miracle of Manhattan," and "The Girl from Nowhere," with Elaine Hammerstein.

"The Girl at Hell's Delight," another published story, has been given production as stage play.

Since commencing work for Mr. Ince in the spring of 1920, Miss King has written the continuity for "Lying Lips," "I Am Guilty," an original story for the screen. "What a Wife Learned," another original story, directed by John Griffith Wray, and "A Man of Action," a Douglas MacLean feature, a mystery farce comedy.

Ralph H. Dixon Veteran Film Editor :

AN experience in film editing which dates back to the days of the first serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and "The Spoilers" at the Selig Polyscope Studios in Los Angeles, and continuing down to the present time in the principal studios on the West Coast, has given to Ralph H. Dixon an insight into this important work of film play completing enjoyed by few of the profession.

Mr. Dixon had his first schooling under Gilmore Walker when together they reduced the great amount of footage taken of the first serial to fifteen two-reel episodes. Following this they edited thirty-five thousand feet of "The Spoilers" taken into the first big American made feature of twelve reels.

For two years Mr. Dixon was in charge of the film editorial department at Universal City, supervising the work of twelve editors, and it was there that he personally edited "Hell Morgan's Daughter," starring Dorothy Phillips, the subject which is accredited with elevating this actress to stardom. Following that engagement Dixon was with the Triangle for a year and his most important work there was to put together the takes consisting of one hundred thousand feet into the film play which became "Mickey." When he began, Dixon had no script or titles, and the great quantity of film consisted of a number of sequences which were so joined without retakes as to make this subject the most successful one. Dixon also edited the "Dawn of Destiny" for Triangle and the Olive Thomas subjects. For the next nine months Mr. Dixon was film editor at the Fox Studio, where he worked on Tom Mix and Theda Bara subjects.

Three years ago Thomas H. Ince engaged

Mr. Dixon, and at this studio he has added a great number of the most successful plays the most recent being that of "Hail the Woman." At the present time he is working on a subject, "What a Wife Learned," from an original story by Bradley King. Other subjects Dixon has edited include six starring Dorothy Dalton, six starring Charles Ray, including "Hay Foot, Straw Foot," and "The Egg Crate Wallop." Another film edited by Dixon which was highly successful is "Stepping Out," starring Enid Bennett. The Louise Glaum subject, "Sex," was also edited by Dixon.

In reviewing the numerous films he has edited Mr. Dixon considers "Hail the Woman," and the one he is now working on temporarily titled "Jim," as the most important and believes they will prove the most successful film plays with which he has been identified.

Le Roy Stone Backed by Decade of Fine Work

A DECADE of associations with some of the biggest productions that have graced the motion picture screen is the record of Le Roy Stone, a member of the film editing staff attached to the Thomas H. Ince studios on the Coast. Mr. Stone is now entering his tenth year in the motion picture industry.

In his earlier career as a member of the Ince production staff, Stone was associated with the initial Thomas H. Ince spectacular achievement, "Civilization." Following his association with Ince, he worked with Charles Ray, Enid Bennett, Dorothy Dalton, William S. Hart and Irvin V. Willat. With each of these he established a reputation as a successful film editor of the first magnitude. Some of the greatest work done by these players and producers in the past have the name of Le Roy Stone intimately associated with them.

A list of the productions on which Stone has engaged as film editor would include many of the successes that marked the screen in former days. In his work under the banner of William S. Hart alone he has over thirty productions credited to him. These productions included such well-known "Bill" Hart offerings as "The Cold Deck," "Wold Lourie," "Selfish Yates," "Wagon Tracks," "Narrow Trail," "Poppy Girl's Husband"; and coming down to more recent productions made by William S. Hart—"The Toll Gate," "Sand," "The Testing Block" and "The Cradle of Courage."

After leaving the staff of William S. Hart, Mr. Stone became associated with Irvin V. Willat, for whom he completed two productions before once more signing up with Thomas H. Ince. Under his newly established connections with the Ince studios on the West Coast, Mr. Stone has completed three productions for distribution by Associated First National Pictures. These productions are "Blind Hearts," "The Cup of Life" and "Skin Deep."

Thrilling Racing Scenes in "The Hottentot"

Seven men were laid up in the hospital before the racing scenes of the steeplechase which is a feature of "The Hottentot" were completed. So much conventional "race stuff" has been used in picture productions that Mr. Ince gave orders that if his directors couldn't get original effects, the race scenes of the play were not to be used at all.

Accordingly a stiff course was laid out and a number of expert riders were gotten together to appear in the race. Del Andrews who was directing the scenes was dissatisfied with the first "shots" made so he sent for a slow motion picture camera without telling the riders and discovered that several of the men were pulling their horses at the big jumps. The following day a number of new riders donned the colors; the hurdles were made higher by two feet and there were seven spills so serious that an ambulance had to be sent for. But the director in cold-hearted fashion chuckled with glee when he saw the rushes in the projection room, for the cameras had caught some startling effects.

By digging pits underneath the jumps, cameramen were able to shoot upwards and catch the horses in such position that when shown on the screen they seem to be leaping directly into the audience.

POWER'S PROJECTION

IN THE INCE STUDIOS SINCE 1909

IT has been our delightful experience to have won and retained the good will of Mr. Ince and many other noted exhibitors and producers during all the years they have been in the Motion Picture Industry.

Gentlemen:-

It will no doubt please you to know that since the erection and completion of the present Studios by Mr. Ince, your projecting machines- Power's 6-B- have been used exclusively.

The same condition existed at the two previous plants built and equipped by Mr. Ince. This means that since 1909, when Mr. Ince took charge of the New York Motion Picture Corporation Studios, until the present time, he has used machines manufactured by your Company.

At the present time, the projection booths at the Ince Studios contain seven (7) Power's machines and every operator insists that equipment could not be bettered by the installation of other makes. In other words, they give your equipment unqualified endorsement.

Very truly yours,

Gentlemen:

It is difficult to imagine a studio
as being complete without Sunlight Arcs.

I don't believe it would be possible to get better lighting effects on big sets than can be had with Sunlight Arcs and certainly no better light has ever been devised for sunlight effect through win-itself.

I gladly voice my approval of them.

Studio Brevities

Al Kenyon, brother of Charles has been added to the scenario staff.

Alfred Allen has arrived at Universal City from New York to play a character part in "White Tiger," starring Priscilla Dean, under the direction of Tod Browning.

A cast of notable players has been assembled to play in "Flesh," original by Rupert Julien, who was to direct. Production has been postponed because of Julien's assignment to direct "Merry-Go-Round."

Alf Goulding is beginning a Baby Peggy comedy titled "Little Miss Spunk." The cast includes Arnold MacDonald, Jack Henderson, Joe Bonner and Paul Stanhope.

Harry Sweet has returned to Century and will shortly be seen in a Lee Moran picture titled "The Boarder."

Blanche Payson is now playing an important supporting part for Lee Moran in a comedy under the direction of Al Herman.

Around Metro Studios

Sawyer-Lubin begins "Your Friend and Mine" in ten days. It is now being cast.

A welcome-back-to-Los Angeles dinner was tendered Mae Murray at Brandstatter's Marcell cafe, Thursday evening, September 28th, when Ben F. Rosenberg, manager of the Los Angeles Metro exchange was host to almost one hundred prominent exhibitors of the Los Angeles territory and representatives of Los Angeles newspapers and the trade press. Following the dinner, a very elaborate affair, Fred Niblo acted as toastmaster and in behalf of Mr.

Rosenberg welcomed Miss Murray and her organization to Los Angeles.

Two additional members of the cast for the Rex Ingram-Metro production, "The Passion Vine," arrived in Miami this week, Leslie King and Bigelow Cooper. Harry Morey, who is to play the principal heavy role in this photoplay from John Russell's story, is the one member of the cast yet to arrive in Miami.

Acquisition of Clyde Bruckman and David Kirkland as members of his scenario staff has been announced by Hunt Stromberg.

Betty Francisco is to play the lead in the Hunt Stromberg production starring Bull Montana, titled "Glad Rags." Hughie Fay will direct.

Harry Beaumont has finished Viola Dana's "Miss Emmy Lou."

Irvin Willat's company filming "All the Brothers Were Valiant," with Lon Chaney, Billy Dove, Malcolm McGregor and Robert McKim, is back at the studio after a month on a whaling vessel out of San Francisco.

With Roach Comedians

Harold Lloyd's comedy, titled "Safety Last," will probably be finished this week.

"A Tough Winter," an Eskimo comedy featuring Snub Pollard and directed by Charles Parrott, has been shipped east.

With Paramount Units

James Cruze and the "Covered Wagon" company left Friday for Baker, Nev., to film exteriors. They will be gone a month or six weeks.

Skeletons of dinosaurs and other prehistoric monsters are being built for the prologue to Cecil B. De Mille's next subject, as yet untitled.

Wallace Reid this week began "Nobody's Money" under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

George B. Fitzmaurice on Saturday filmed the first scenes for Pola Negri's subject, consisting of interior scenes of the Savoy hotel, London. Claude King has arrived to play the role of Doctor Isaacson in this production, "Bella Donna."

The experience of a famous actress on her return to her old home town forms the basis of the plot for an original story by Clara Beranger, titled "Paths of Glory," now being produced by William DeMille.

The consul general for the Argentine Republic is at the Paramount West Coast studios to aid the technical staff in reproducing the interior of the Argentine House of Congress for Sam Wood's production, "My American Wife."

In production are: "Sacrifice," starring Mary Miles Minter, direction of Charles Maigne; "Making a Man," starring Jack Holt; "Singed Wings," all star cast, direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws.

R-C Production Notes

Carter DeHaven is back from his tour of exchanges, and has begun making the last half of his comedy series under the direction of Henry Lehrman.

"The Canyon of Fools," by Richard Matthews Hallet, is to be Harry Carey's next subject. The cast will include Lillian Rich, Fred Stanton, Joseph Harris, Carmen Arselle, Murdock McQuarrie, Jack Curtis, Charles LeMoyne and Lester Pegg. Direction is to be by Va Paul.

Mal St. Clair has completed the first H. C. Witwer western, "Fighting Blood," featuring George O'Hara and Clara Horton.

Christie Comedy Bits

Jimmie Clemens, director, is back at the Christie studios assisting Scott Sidney in the staging of "Hazel from Hollywood," featuring Dorothy Devore.

In Al Christie's cast for "Choose Your Weapons," featuring Bobby Vernon, are Charlotte Stevens, Earl Rodney, Victor Rodman, Lincoln Plumer and Maude Truax.

Neal Burns will make his next appearance in "Ocean Swells," a comedy of houseboating which is now being produced.

Around the Fox Lot

Rowland V. Lee has finished directing "A Circus Story," starring Shirley Mason. Cutting and titling are proceeding under his direction.

Last week the filming of the exterior scenes of "Custard Court" in the special production of "Penzie," featuring Mary Carr were started upon by Director Brenon. In order to have the correct atmosphere for the cluster of dwellings which gave the Florence Bingham Livingston book its title of "The Custard Cup" a reproduction of the place was built over on Long Island, complete in every detail.

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Becker Seeks Release for Trimble Subjects

THREE two-reel "specials," featuring little Arthur Trimble, five year old headliner-to-be, are ready for trade pre-views, through producing director Frederick G. Becker, who frankly announces that a distribution contract in keeping with the quality of the productions, is desired. According to Mr. Becker his concern has already received several flattering offers, but no agreement will be made until every channel of distribution has been surveyed.

Bessie Love is the principal support of the junior star in the first three productions and will be retained for the remainder of the series of twelve pictures scheduled. The series will be known as "The Strange Adventures of Prince Courageous," and each will be a complete tale of an adventurous child in the middle ages.

Rain Interrupts Work of Taking Exteriors

The recent rainy spell in San Francisco halted the outdoor work planned for the opening episodes of the ninth of a series of twelve Plum Center Comedies, starring Dan Mason, for F. B. O.

In this new film "Pop Tuttle," character interpreted by Dan Mason, and his old horse "Wildfire," will be put through a great deal of hilarious action to work out the story written by A. H. Giebler, scenarist of the company.

Wilna Hervey will play the leading feminine role, and Edward O'Brien, Charles Gerson, Eddie Harris and other well known players will be seen in important supporting parts.

Two Burr Subjects O. K'd by League

"The Enchanted City," love fantasy by Warren A. Newcombe, and "Fresh Fish," an Earl Hurd Comedy presented by C. C. Burr, are the latest releases to be listed in the Bulletin of the Motion Picture League as "Family Films," recommended for both adults and young people.

"The Enchanted City" is a romance told in a series of beautiful paintings transferred to the screen. "Fresh Fish," like the other pictures in the Earl Hurd Comedy series, is a combination of photographs of living actors and animated cartoons.

Educational Offers New Series Single Reel Rough and Tumbles to Be Known as "Cameo Comedies"

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has just announced the forthcoming issue by Educational of a series of single-reel rough and tumble comedies, to be known as Cameo Comedies.

The first of this series, titled, "Crash," will be released early in November. Releases will follow, two each month, there being twenty-four subjects in the series.

"This series of one-reel comedies is being started in response to a very definite demand from exhibitors," declared Mr. Hammons in making the announcement. "It is not our desire merely to add another single-reeler to the market, but after long study, we are convinced that exhibitors really need a single reel rough and tumble subject. Cameo Comedies are intended to meet this demand."

In "Crash" and also in the second picture of the series, to be called "Pitter Patter," the cast is headed by Jimmie Adams, supported by Virginia Vance.

Expert Horsemen in Sport Reel "Trail and Stirrup" and "Northwest Mounted" Ready for Release

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION is out with two one reelers, "Trail and Stirrup" and "Northwest Mounted," edited by Grantland Rice, produced by Jack Eaten for Artclass Pictures.

The first is a picturized account of a horseback trip through the Rocky Mountains. The four men who took the trip, and their pack animals are shown ascending and descending Badger Pass in the Canadian Rockies at a height of 8,500 feet, fishing for trout for their food and encamped along a mountain stream. While "Northwest Mounted" is devoted to the training of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada at the training headquarters at Regina, Saskatchewan.

With the arduous training which the Northwest Mounted receive before being accepted as a member of that famous police force, it is no wonder that as a body, and as individuals, it has such a record for efficiency, of always "getting its man" no matter how long the trail nor what hardships are endured.

"Speed" Heads Pathe Program New Serial Leads Release of Eleven Short Subjects

PATHE'S release program of eleven subjects for October 22 leads off with the first episode of the new Charles Hutchinson serial, "Speed," the initial chapter being "The Getaway." This establishes the athletic abilities of the young hero, falsely accused of embezzlement and murder, and indicates his interest in the girl whose future he is bound to protect.

In the same program is the release of "The Conflict," final episode of the serial starring Ruth Roland, "The Timber Queen." After clearing up the mystery about Ruth's father, which was established in the beginning, there is a sensational airplane chase and mid-air rescue of the heroine by her lover.

The Hal Roach one-reel release, entitled "Shiver and Shake," is also a part of the program. This comedy presents Paul Parrott and Jobyna Ralston in a newly-wed paroxysm of house hunting.

"The Romantic Mouse" represents the Aesop's Film Fable in this program, which illustrates the adage, "Marry in Haste and Repent at Leisure."

"The Rajah," with Harold Lloyd, is reissued, which will be remembered for the "crap-shooting" episode which he introduced in the Rajah's harem.

The two-reel comedy feature of the program presents Johnny Jones, with little Gertrude Messinger and a cast of clever children in "Broadcasting." With a radio equipped bicycle and a surprising knowledge of radio, the children prevent criminals from completing successfully a bank robbery and attempted murder.

The October 22 program also includes Pathe Review No. 178, Screen Snapshots No. 11, Topics of the Day No. 43 and Pathe News Nos. 86 and 87.

Hodkinson Issues Short Subjects

THE HODKINSON CORPORATION took a careful survey of the short subject market, and then selected a group that in their estimation would prove popular with the motion picture public. The first four of the series of Triart Productions, based upon master pieces by famous artists, have been meeting, it is said, with enthusiastic appreciation.

"The Four Seasons" and the Triart Productions, constitute the artistic of the Hodkinson program, while the comedy relief comes with the short reel laugh-maker "Fun from the Press" and the Bray Comedy Cartoons and Technical Romances.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"On Patrol"

(First National—Two Reels)

BILLY BEVAN as a janitor in an office building and later as a policeman, chases a robber through this film and encounters a series of horrifying adventures during the procedure. He is handcuffed, knocked unconscious, dressed as a convict by a fugitive who steals his uniform, himself pursued by police and at length finds himself in the lair of the robber. The film is of the "fast and furious" variety, and there is action in every foot of its length, several sequences developing real laughs. As with a good many comedies of the type, however, there is too much "chasing"—that aged effort at mirth-provoking which has been harped upon ever since the old days when the French comedies made us go into hysterics.—STUART GIBSON.

"Hop, Skip and Jump"

(Fox—One-Half Reel)

TO most persons who look at movies intelligently, cartoon comedies always carry an interest entirely apart from their entertainment value, for the wonder of this near-creation is still upon them. "Hop, Skip and Jump" concerns the adventures of Mutt and Jeff with a pair of kangaroos and several young kangaroos. There is a ride for both of Fisher's characters in the portable nurseries affected by kangaroos, and some funny episodes of the sort that are possible only in cartoon pictures. It is a pity a subtitle couldn't have been worked in on the famous old wheeze about the Irishman who, when told at the zoo that the kangaroos were "natives of Australia," exclaimed in great horror: "Holy Hiven! My sister married wan of them."—STUART GIBSON.

"The Romantic Mouse"

(Pathe—One Reel)

HERE we have Thomas Cat, a roller skating champion; skates on all fours in addition to his tail. He "rolls" into a courtship between Milton Mouse and Mary Mouse, thereby making life difficult for the lovers and occasioning attempted suicide upon the part of the disappointed male, introducing some clever cartoon novelties.

Having accomplished many villainous purposes in keeping the mice apart, Thomas Cat makes a temporary disappearance while the troubles of the mouse family are being fixed up. Finally the cat faces retribution, and a watery grave, while the fable fades into the old adage: "Marry in Haste and Repent at Leisure."—LILLIAN GALE.

The Graphic Screen Magazine

(Educational—One Reel)

AN interesting departure from ordinary excerpts, compiled into a film magazine, is this sort of animated rotogravure. Three have been shown. Each offers four integral subjects, incorporating interesting topics, closing, in each instance, with "As Ollendorf Sees It," a combination of cartoon and living illustrations, one dissolving into the other. These are of general interest, something for everyone.

"Man vs. Beast"

(Educational—Two Reels)

THRILL, adventure and exciting incident vividly illustrate how Louis Shuman, hunter of "big game," led his expedition into the wilds of Africa and there encountered some of the most ferocious specimens the jungle affords. What the leader and his helpers accomplished in securing specimens and a picture that offers as a good substitute for a similar trip, must be seen to be appreciated.

There is a marked continuity in presenting the series of adventures and captures, beginning with the expedition in full force, leaving the Hotel Maru, in East Africa. The first animal brought down by the great hunter in one shot, at a range of 100 yards was a giant gnu. The skin of the striped creature, hung up to dry, attracted the attention of a hundred pound hyena. His curiosity was costly to him and a noose saved the beast the trouble of attacking one of the crew.

One of the interesting species that posed, under protest, was a pelican, with a beak nine feet in length, while a trio of hippos seemed harmless, with only their eyes, ears and nostrils showing out of the water swamp until, in excitement, they rose up and were caught by the camera in a dangerously close view. These have nothing on the rhinoceros, whose customs are as startling as those of the native tribes.

This offering is in a class by itself. It is well photographed, entertaining, informative and one that is bound to interest 99 per cent of any audience.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Shiver and Shake"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THERE is plenty of action in this reel, and an amount of slap-stick and a number of laughable situations. It begins with the difficulties of a young couple who wish to embark upon life's marital sea. Finally, after securing father's consent to the match, the two find themselves in need of a house that will meet with their fastidious tastes and at the same time rent for an amount within their slender allowance. The only house available is one said to be "haunted." They scoff at the idea, take the house and then their troubles begin. A party of friends decide to make them a visit; "spooks" present themselves in various forms, making all laughably uncomfortable and keeping the comedy at the boiling point.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Kid Love"

(Century—Two Reels)

THE Century Kids are always quaint and funny. This time the little girls and boys who make up the company carry out a love affair with all the usual twists and turns, ably assisted by a dog. The "eternal triangle" enters into the matter, and likewise the Cinderella theme, since one youthful wooer is a rich lad and the other is possessed only of the dog and a peculiarly infectious smile. Naturally the small heroine turns her orbs last upon the dog-owning youth. As is usual in these comedies, some rather poor horseplay by adults is introduced, but it fails to spoil the picture, as is often the case.—STUART GIBSON.

"The Frozen North"

(Buster Keaton—First National—Two Reels)

IT'S about time that the "snow stuff" is buried. The authors of the conventional plots of the great white spaces have been getting away with murder for several seasons, and has taken Buster Keaton to poke fun at them in his droll way. Buster gets away with it in a manner which speaks highly for his originality. The offering contains several highly amusing episodes.

Even old hardy Nanook would laugh to see the sorrowful comedian approaching a spot where an Eskimo has made an opening in the ice to catch the walrus or the seal. Buster comes up behind him and drills another hole. Then their lines tangle and Keaton finally pull the hardy Northerner under. The manner in which this is executed is good for a large ribald laugh—even from an undertaker. What of that other novel touch—when Buster's sleigh is guided by dogs of every variety—from the squat pup to the rangy hound.

The comedy carries a lot of comic scenes. Trust Keaton to put mirth in anything. Booby "The Frozen North." It is a comedy which will set your horse rocking with laughter.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Show"

(Vitagraph—Two Reels)

LARRY SEMON in another dual role—that of property man at a theatre and that of a inebriated member of the audience—does a series of funny stunts and then, in a delirious dream does another series of positively horrifying things on top of a train, beside a train, under a train and, as it were, among a train, which in apparently fast motion the whole time. Children ought to howl at "The Show" and the grownups will get some laughs and some real thrills. There is a sort of plot, in the working out of which Larry saves the "jools" of the beautiful leading lady, foils the villain and incidentally gets a lot of hard bumps during the course of his efforts.—STUART GIBSON.

"Broadcasting"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THERE is a certain spontaneity belonging to children which reflects a decided atmosphere of cheer and humor on the screen. Especially is this so in the comedy depicting the experiences of Johnny Jones and Gertrude Mesinger with radio. There is considerable plot to the offering, also, enough to appeal to adults and delight the youngster. These children are splendid little artists and get just as much out of their juvenile roles as grownups could possibly do. They are surrounded with a number of other clever children, necessitated by the story which tells of a race for a Sunday School prize, consisting of a radio broadcasting outfit. Incidentally, a bank robbery occurs in the midst and with the assistance of the radio, warning is broadcast and help brought in time to prevent the grown up villain from escaping with the "loot." This subject is well photographed splendidly directed and acted with the usual ability shown by Johnny Jones and his youthful leading lady.—LILLIAN GALE.

Review Board Praises "The Bond Boy"

"The best of the Barthelmess pictures so far," reads a special report by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures on Richard Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy," a First National Attraction. Continuing, the report says:

"Similar in character to 'Tol'able David,' but with a story that involves more dramatic elements. Excellent characterizations by Barthelmess and Mary Alden, and the director has genuine cinematographic skill."

The report lists the entertainment value of "The Bond Boy" as "Very Good"; the artistic value as "Strong"; the acting is "Excellent"; photography "Excellent"; technical handling "Excellent" and moral effect as "Good."

Feature of Playgoers Draws Interest

Playgoers Pictures officials declare that very great interest has been aroused by announcement of the release October 22nd, of their five-reel feature "The Bootlegger's Daughter." Charming Enid Bennett is starred. Fred Niblo has the leading male role. The current offering was from the script of R. Cecil Smith, and the production was directed by Victor Schertzinger.

MetroProduct Warmly Received

First Group of Season Brings Bookings From Leading Houses All Over Country

AN indication of the response which has already greeted the first group of the season's releases of Metro Pictures Corporation may be had from the long list of bookings already recorded for these photoplays according to Metro. Exhibitors from every part of the country have expressed their confidence in Metro and in its releases not only by booking the early pictures, but by concluding arrangements to show all of the Metro output for the season 1922-23.

"I look upon these wholesale bookings of Metro films as a complete vindication of our policy announced several months ago," said E. M. Saunders, General Sales Manager, recently. "At that time we announced our intention—and we have adhered to it closely—to release only Special Productions. Persons who paid to witness a motion picture entertainment wanted more than an ordinary story, told with little originality and produced with no-more-than-necessary imagination."

"Metro sensed this specialization on the part of motion picture patrons. It was not only the conviction of the officials in the home offices in New York, but it was shared by the five district managers

—S. A. Shirley, Chicago; C. E. Kessnich, Atlanta; W. C. Bachmeyer, Cincinnati; E. A. Golden, Boston and H. Lustig, Los Angeles. Each of these Metro representatives made a personal study of the needs of the exhibitor in his particular territory, and it was the opinion of all that special productions alone would find widespread favor."

T. J. Connors, Assistant Sales Manager, furnished a sample list of bookings, the territory being New England and representative, in its yield of business to all other sections of the country.

This long list of bookings—only a partial record of one section of the country, provides several of the greatest motion picture successes of the year for these exhibitors. Among them is the Rex Ingram production of "The Prisoner of Zenda," a film version of the famous novel by Anthony Hope. Edward Rose wrote the stage version. This photoplay is at the present writing entering the ninth week of its showing at the Astor Theatre in New York.

Another Rex Ingram production, already completed, is "Trifling Women," based on an original story by Mr. Ingram.

"The Has Been" Cast Completed

Ralph Ince Engaged to Direct Production Scheduled to Start Next Week

RALPH INCE, who has been engaged to direct Murray W. Garsson's first special production, the working title of which is "The Has Been," has completed the casting for the picture, it was announced this week.

Actual production work will start next week, according to present plans. The interiors will be made in a studio near New York. The cast, which includes a number of screen celebrities, will be announced in the near future.

"The Has Been" promises to be something entirely new and novel in screen entertainment, being based upon a modern story which, in drama form, enjoyed a distinct success when presented at a Broadway theatre several years ago.

The casting also has been completed for Mr. Garsson's second screen special, "Way Down South," which will be directed by Roy Sheldon. The entire company will leave the latter part of this week for Albany, Ga., where the exteriors will be made.

Joe King has been engaged to play the lead and Jack Richardson, well known heavy, will have a prominent part in the production. King will be remembered for his excellent work in "The Valley of Silent Men" and other recent successes.

To Deliver Prints By Aeroplane

Unique Distribution Planned for Production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

CO-INCIDENT with the announcement of the formation of Associated Pictures Corporation, producing a series of super productions under the brand name of S-L Pictures, Herbert Lubin, of Sawyer and Lubin, organizers of the new company, has divulged some interesting plans concerning an extraordinary campaign to be accorded the first production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

This picture, which will be released by Metro as one of the most important of their special offerings in the near future, will be introduced to first-run theatres throughout the country in a novel manner.

In conjunction with the publicity department of Metro Pictures Corporation, arrangements are under way whereby a fleet of airplanes, driven by notable airmen in each instance, will carry to fifty first-run theatres on their opening day a print of "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

The airplanes will cover points as far West of New York City as Denver, and among the cities which will receive the benefit of this unique stunt, in connection with the first-run showings are Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Boston, Kansas City, Omaha, Portland, Seattle and several other cities of lesser population.

Pathe Smyrna Scoop Given Praise

Pathe News burning of Smyrna film pictures printed in at least one big newspaper in every important city of the United States with full credit, and usually accompanied by a story describing how these scenes were photographed and so speedily transmitted to picture audiences more than 6,000 miles away, marked universal recognition of a brilliant camera news "scoop." As an average example, the Chicago Daily Tribune of Oct. 3, printed an article with its Pathe News film enlargements, containing the following:

"Pathe News Gets Screen 'Scoop' on Smyrna Fire," reads the head. The article starts: "Pathe News has registered a big screen scoop in getting 900 film feet of the Smyrna holocaust to New York and other Eastern cities in just two weeks. The exclusive film of the fire and street scenes in Smyrna when the Christians were fleeing to the waterside pursued by soldiers, reached New York on the steamship Aquitania on September 30 and was shown in the theatres that night."

"Sherlock Holmes" Has New Press Book

The exhibitors' press and service book for John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes" is another of Goldwyn's new style press books for its "Big twenty" pictures for the new season. It is newspaper size in depth and almost as wide.

The back and front covers are printed in black and red, on calendered stock paper and reproduce the "Sherlock Holmes" cards and posters. One entire page is given over to illustrations of one-column advertisements that have been designed by Goldwyn's advertising and art departments.

A series of five finger-print teaser ads is pictured. The larger advertisements—up to a full page ad—are striking in design.

The four pages of press stories have been prepared with a view to aiding the exhibitor to capitalize on the vast popularity of the "Sherlock Holmes" stories.

"Broadway Rose" Wins Exhibitor Praise

The most favorably received motion picture in seven years, is the report of Karl A. Suelke, of the Liberty Theatre, Cape May, N. J., upon Robert Z. Leonard's presentation of Mae Murray in "Broadway Rose," a Metro release.

Mr. Suelke's communication to M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., was sent after a two days' showing ending September 15. It read:

"We have just finished a two days' run of your picture, 'Broadway Rose.' In my seven years in the business I have never run any show that received so much favorable comment as this one. I feel proud that we have the privilege of running a picture of this type. When they are not so good I say so, and by the same token feel that I should extend my compliments for making 'Broadway Rose.'"

Don't be Foolish

DON'T be foolish. Don't let anybody 'kid' you or pull the wool over your eyes regarding F. B. O.'s wonderful series, "FIGHTING BLOOD," which are now running in serial story form in Collier's Weekly and which are now in course of production at F. B. O.'s big new United Studios in Los Angeles.

H. C. Witwer wrote "The Leather Pushers," which created a sensation some months ago in Collier's Weekly. H. C. Witwer also wrote the "FIGHTING BLOOD" series, which are creating a bigger sensation in Collier's Weekly right now.

H. C. Witwer also wrote the following telegram:

"HAVE JUST SEEN SEVERAL THOUSAND FEET UN CUT OF FIRST EPISODE OF MY SERIES, FIGHTING BLOOD. AM MORE THAN DELIGHTED WITH CAST. PHOTOGRAPHY AND DIRECTION; FEEL SURE I AM GOING TO BE VERY PROUD OF HAVING ANYTHING TO DO WITH THE MAKING OF WHAT I AM CERTAIN WILL BE THE MOST POPULAR OF MY SERIES EVER FILMED."

Read the last eight words over again.

Here's the author's own personal word. You can't beat that nor can you even tie it.

H. C. Witwer is on the job himself, supervising the making of the "FIGHTING BLOOD" series and you can bet your last dime that not one foot of film will get by Witwer's critical eye unless it is a hundred per cent,—so Don't be foolish. Don't let anybody kid you. Don't let anybody palm off anything on you for the "FIGHTING BLOOD" series unless that series picturizes the life story of Gale Galen, and Judith Willcox, Young Spence, Nate Shapiro, Kayo Kelly, Rags Dempster, etc.

There is only one "FIGHTING BLOOD" series of two reels. No other film Company has them or will have them, though several film concerns sweated blood in trying to grab them from F. B. O.

They will be ready soon. WATCH FOR THEM. WAIT FOR THEM. They will be the outstanding box office sensation for 1923. Remember the title—"FIGHTING BLOOD."

Millions of people are reading the stories now running in Collier's. These and millions of others will be wild to see the series. Be FIRST in your territory to grab them.

Don't be foolish—and let your competitor grab them away from you. Speak to your nearest F. B. O. exchange for the "FIGHTING BLOOD" series now.

All Fifteen Logans in Personal Appearance

Showmanship extraordinary has to be credited to Manager William A. Downs, of Loew's State Theatre, Newark, N. J. Manager Downs has won the further distinction of having "put something new in the news" when he staged with each of fourteen screenings of a single issue of Pathe News a multiple "personal appearance" of the prize-winning Logan family—Father and Mother Logan and the thirteen "Loganettes," all thriving and happy residents of Newark.

Their fame was such—including the fame of Newark's largest family of children all under seventeen years old, and of Father Logan's human little speech—that the theatre was crowded, with hundreds turned away.

Pyramid Picture Has Montreal Run

For the first time in two years the Strand, Montreal, has booked an attraction for a full week's run. The picture which has broken this precedent is Pyramid's "Queen of The Moulin Rouge," distributed by American Releasing Corporation.

Directed by Ray C. Smallwood, the cast includes Martha Mansfield, Joseph Striker and Henry Harmon.

Charles Ray in Dramatic Role

Popular Star Returns to First Principles in "The Girl I Loved"

CHARLES RAY in a part of high dramatic intensity.

This popular star is returning to first principles in his second production for United Artists, "The Girl I Loved," which already is about two thirds completed. It was in this kind of role several years ago that he literally flashed into fame by starring in a picture in which he was cast merely as juvenile support. Immediately he was lifted to the rank of star.

For a long time chance threw Ray into bucolic plays and the charm, humor and humanity he put into them won him enormous popularity. All this time he has craved for a chance to show his mettle in the weightier drama. Now he has it in "The Girl I Loved," based on the poem of that title by James Whitcomb Riley.

In a sense, Mr. Ray is not leaving the "rustic" realm, for the action of the piece takes place entirely in rural Indiana from 1840 to 1860, and he appears as a country boy and a young man. But the events suggested by the poet's lines form a drama of immense punch, albeit their basis is a pastoral poem.

Humor, Pathos in New Release

Dependable Pictures, "Till We Meet Again," Arouses Favorable Comment

"TILL WE MEET AGAIN," the Dependable Pictures offering which Associated Exhibitors is releasing October 15th, is declared to be a photoplay whose humor and pathos strike the deeper emotions, while the plot and characterizations are destined to hold the interest of every onlooker from first to last.

Announcement that the Dependable organization, of which Morris

Kohn is president, had placed this six-reel feature with Associated, headed by Arthur S. Kane, aroused favorable comment by exhibitors everywhere, partly because it brought into association again two former presidents of Realart, each of whom occupies a high place in the industry.

Interest was heightened by the fact that the picture is a William Christy Cabanne production,

Castle Promenade Is Successful

Fashion Show In Connection With "Slim Shoulders" Brings Good Reports

CONTINUED gratifying reports are pouring into the Home Office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in reference to the success which the Irene Castle Promenade is experiencing throughout the United States in conjunction with the presentation of "Slim Shoulders," featuring Miss Castle.

One of the latest reports of successful exploitation came from Edward L. Hyman, Managing Director of the Mark Strand Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. According to the report Mr. Hyman took advantage of the Fashion Show suggestion and made a strong tie up with one of the biggest and most exclusive creases. As a prologue to "Slim department stores in Brooklyn. Martin's arranged to have replicas made of the costumes worn by Irene Castle in "Slim Shoulders" and presented these frocks in the Fashion Promenade held daily in the store.

A full week in advance of the play date of "Slim Shoulders," Hyman distributed 15,000 heralds. Linking up street cars, bill boards and the Mammoth Strand electrical signs with the rest of his campaign, Hyman had 900 dashboard cards on the Brooklyn street cars, and thirty twenty-four sheets, some electrically illuminated, posted in advantageous sections of the city.

"Knighthood" Showings in Big Cities

"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," Cos-

mopolitan's production of Charles Major's famous historical romance, now drawing record audiences to the Criterion Theatre in New York, will shortly have its initial presentation in other large cities throughout the country.

Arrangements have already been completed for the showing of the picture in Chicago, Los Angeles and Boston.

In Chicago, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," will open at the Roosevelt Theatre on October 11; Grauman's Rialto in Los Angeles will house the production starting on October 11, while in Boston the first presentation will be made at the Park on October 25. Preparations for the showing of the film in other cities are well under way.

Cosmopolitan Productions will give "When Knighthood Was in Flower" the same elaborate presentation in other cities as it has given the picture in New York.

"Grandma's Boy" Still Breaking Records

"Grandma's Boy," the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors super-attraction, produced by Hal Roach, which is said to have smashed all local records in a large number of cities and towns, continues its triumphal march across the country, with the rush for bookings increasing constantly, according to information given out at Associated's offices in New York.

Oklahoma City is the latest to report the passage of previous high-water marks in attendance figures. This telegram to Associated's officials from Samuel Henle tells of the record-smashing there:

"Grandma's Boy," with Harold Lloyd, opened this city today (October 2nd), playing to 3,465 paid admissions, with seating capacity of 984. Largest crowd of the year 1922."

"The Dangerous Age" a Stahl Achievement

In "The Dangerous Age," a First National attraction, presented by Louis B. Mayer, it is claimed John M. Stahl has achieved another triumph in his climb toward the top rung of the directorial ladder. The beautiful and elaborate sets, the subtle touches of humor, make it a worthy successor to this director's last two pictures, "One Clear Call" and "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

"The Dangerous Age" presents Lewis S. Stone, Edith Roberts, Myrtle Stedman, Ruth Clifford, Cleo Madison, James Morrison, Helen Lynch and others of note among its list of screen artists.

Wallace Reid Will Do "Nobody's Money"

Again one of the season's most successful stage plays shown on Broadway, Los Angeles, falls to the lot of Wallace Reid as a Paramount starring vehicle. Reid's next picture, which started Monday, will be a screen adaptation of "Nobody's Money," a farce-comedy by William Le Baron.

"Nobody's Money" first opened at the Longacre theatre, New York, in the summer of 1921. Wallace Eddinger was the star. After a run there it was played in stock in Los Angeles.

Wallace Worsley will direct Reid and Wanda Hawley will play the feminine lead. Others in the cast are Harry Depp, Robert Schable, Richard Tucker, Josephine Crowell, Julia Faye, Charles French, Will R. Walling, Warren Rogers and Eileen Manning.

Eastman Theatre Books "Hands of Nara"

The Eastman Theatre, Rochester's new $5,000,000 motion picture playhouse, has booked the Metro release, Clara Kimball Young, in "The Hands of Nara."

Inasmuch as this theatre selects its pictures solely on a basis of their intrinsic merit, the addition of "The Hands of Nara" to the schedule of the Eastman is regarded by Metro officials as a confirmation of their already firm belief in the value of the photoplay.

"The Hands of Nara" was written by Richard Washburn Child. The picture is owned and copyrighted by the Samuel Zierler Photoplay Corporation; and except in New York and northern New Jersey, is distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Authority on Costumes Approves Picture

Dwight Franklin, sculptor and authority on the costumes and manners of historic periods, has given high praise to the Paramount production of "To Have and To Hold," with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell. According to Mr. Franklin, the production has absolute historic accuracy, even down to the smallest details.

"I have never seen a costume picture more true to the period it represents," said Mr. Franklin. "The costumes are particularly good, and especially the women's costumes, which is the point at which most pictures of the kind fall down. Even the head-dresses, the buckles, and all the small details are in keeping with the period."

Elaborate Posters for "East Is West"

Elaborate posters on Constance Talmadge in "East Is West," produced by Joseph M. Schenck, have been issued by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which is releasing this picture.

The posters consist of two styles of one-sheets, three of three-sheets, one of six-sheets and one twenty-four-sheet. While only four colors are generally used in posters, each of the "East Is West" posters contains six colors.

"The Bondboy" is Highly Praised Barthelmess and Production Win Approval of Critics of New York Newspapers

RICHARD BARTHELMLESS in "The Bondboy," a First National Attraction, opened at the New York Strand theatre, Sunday, October 8. Managing Director Joseph Plunkett, of the Strand, arranged an effective prologue for the presentation.

The motion picture critics of the daily papers were practically united in praising "The Bondboy," which was produced by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and directed by Henry King. Following are some of the comments:

Herald—"In 'The Bondboy,' disclosed yesterday at the Strand, Richard Barthelmess again enriches the screen with a portrayal of a poor Cracker white in the South."

American—"All the advantages of the screen are undeniably attained in 'The Bondboy,' the presentation at the Strand theatre. The picture has everything in its favor—Richard Barthelmess, discriminate direction, emotional appeal and an entire lack of bromidic banality."

Times—"Henry King, as director, has made many genuine motion pictures, and Richard Barthelmess, as the poor country boy who is bound out to an old skinflint and later accused of his murder, is true to his part."

Morning Telegraph—"Richard Barthelmess scores again in his latest contribution to the screen, decidedly so, in 'The Bondboy.'"

Evening Journal—"Richard Barthelmess is a young actor from whom much is always expected on the screen. Yet the most ardent among his admirers must have been surprised yesterday by the excellence of his interpretation of the role of Joe Newbolt, the bondboy."

Evening Telegram—"That excellent alliance, Richard Barthelmess, the star, and Henry King, the director, has outdone itself with the production of 'The Bondboy,' the latest Barthelmess starring vehicle."

Evening Sun—"Director Henry King has kept one more of his Southern stories on a very high level and Barthelmess again gives a performance that entitles him to a place among the screen stars who hold the altitude record for lofty acting."

"Tess" Approved at Screening United Artists Claim Mary Pickford's Reproduction Best of Star's Career

"THE crowning achievement of Mary Pickford's career," declared Hiram Abrams, President of United Artists Corporation, as the final scene in Miss Pickford's new 1922 reproduction of that famous screen classic, "Tess of the Storm Country," flashed across the silver-sheet at a recent private showing in New York for Miss Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, others in the Pickford-Fairbanks party, and executives of United Artists. This verdict was indorsed unanimously by all who saw Miss Pickford's own version and own recreation, just completed, of one of her early picture triumphs.

Miss Pickford's reproduction of "Tess of the Storm Country," marks the first time in the motion picture industry that any great star has seen fit to remake in later years and as an independent producer a photoplay which earlier had served as one of the big steps toward placing her in the forefront of cinema artists.

That Miss Pickford has taken full advantage of every one of the tremendous improvements in photoplay making that have come into the industry since the first "Tess of the Storm Country" was made is apparent to even the novice when the new picture is seen. Even the story itself, taken from that widely read and immensely popular novel by Grace Miller White, is vastly improved upon under Miss Pickford's personal handling, while in the matter of direction, settings, art work and photography, this 1922 reproduction is so far superior to the original of eight years ago.

"Knighthood" Is Hit in London Audiences Reported Warmly Receiving Elaborate Production of Cosmopolitan

COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS' "When Knighthood Was in Flower" continues to break the attendance records at the Scala theatre, which has been the Mecca of London theatregoers since the night the picture was presented, with the Prince of Wales attending, according to word from the Cosmopolitan office. This sumptuous picture of the time of Henry VII is being warmly received by audiences of distinction because of the seal of approval placed upon the production by the heir to the throne, and the attention to detail given to the filming of historical settings.

Since the opening night London is said to have taken "When Knighthood Was in Flower" to its heart.

The fact that in making an appearance at the initial presentation of the picture the Prince of Wales did so in an official capacity for the first time at any film production—especially as he had previously viewed it at a private showing—is taken as an unusual expression of his approval of this American made picture.

The production is characterized by the London Daily Telegraph as "one of the most beautiful specimens of the film producers' art the world has ever seen."

First National Has New Star Puzzles

So intense has been the interest in star identification puzzles run by First National exhibitors and newspapers throughout the country that First National has, in response to numerous requests, prepared a set of mats that will do for every section of the country.

The set is made up of all First National stars and featured players with the features covered by a mask, to allow for the identification possibilities. These sets will be distributed to exhibitors who wish to build up interest among their patrons in their First National programs.

"Remembrance" Gets Red Cross Showing

The first of Goldwyn's "Big Twenty" pictures, Rupert Hughes' "Remembrance," was recently shown to the patients of the hospital for tuberculosis victims maintained at San Diego, Calif., by the American Red Cross Service, and proved so engrossing a film that John I. Hinkle, director of the American Red Cross Service, wrote a letter about the screening and the effect of the picture upon the patients, expressing his appreciation.

Nick Carter Series Is in Production

PRODUCTION plans for the remaining eight of the series of twelve Nick Carter detective stories being produced by Murray W. Garsson are rapidly being completed, according to an announcement by Mr. Garsson this week.

The first four already have been completed and are available for screening for state rights buyers, it is announced. They are "The Spirit of Evil," "Unseen Foes," "A Game of Craft," and "The Last Call." They were produced under the personal supervision of John J. Glavey.

Offers have been received from a number of territories according to Mr. Garsson.

Warners Report Many Contracts

Twenty-One Exchanges Report Unusual Number of Bookings on "Rags to Riches"

FOLLOWING the announcement of the release of "Rags to Riches," featuring Wesley Barry, the Warner Brothers report the receipt of hundreds of inquiries and contracts from first run theatres throughout the country. The success of the Barry picture at the Capitol Theatre, New York, is declared to be in some measure responsible for the increased interest by exhibitors seeking the production.

The twenty-one exchanges that have contracted for the entire series of the Warner Brothers seven pictures are said to report an unusual number of bookings in their respective territories.

Finkelstein & Rubin in Minneapolis, Balaban & Katz in Chicago, A. H. Blank Enterprises in Des Moines, the H. Lieber Co., Indianapolis; Skouras Enterprises, St. Louis; A. H. Fabian, New York;

Regal Films, Ltd., Canada, and the many others handling the Warner product are said to be unanimous in the belief that "Rags to Riches" will eclipse the box-office records already created by "School Days" in their territories. These beliefs are based on the large number of contracts already made with exhibitors.

"Rags to Riches" is said to tell the story of young Marmaduke Clarke (Wes Barry), who in his eager desire to be a regular boy, encounters a series of thrilling adventures, interspersed with romance, pathos and laughter. In the supporting cast are Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Minna D. Redman, Richard Tucker and Eulalie Jensen. The picture was directed by Wallace Worsley and the story was written by Will Nigh and Walter De Leon.

Foreign Rights Sold on Chaney Picture

FOREIGN rights to the new Lon Chaney success, "Flesh and Blood," the Principal Picture Company special which is now being shown at first run houses throughout the country, were sold this week by Irving Lesser, the eastern manager. This deal involved the first foreign transaction closed by this new company which has for its officers, Sol Lesser as President, Irving Lesser, Vice President, and Michael Rosenberg as Secretary-Treasurer. The sales follow: David P. Howells, for continental Europe distribution; Wardour Films, Ltd., of London, for Great Britain; Associated First National Exhibitors, Ltd., for Australasian countries; John Kunzler of Societa Cinematografica, for South American countries.

Amalgamated Starts First Picture

Work on the Amalgamated Exchanges of America's first production to be distributed on the Independent franchise plan starts this week at the company's studio in New Rochelle.

The first picture is adapted from Edward Owings Towne latest book, "The Madonna In Chains," which is now on the presses for publication. The cast includes E. K. Lincoln, Martha Mansfield, Mrs. Rodolph Valentino, De Jari, W. H. Tooker, Marion Haslup, Baby Peggy Rice, Leon Williams and Bessie Allison. The latter two are colored performers and have made an exceptional name for themselves in vaudeville and legitimate.

C. B. C. Lining Up Exploitation

Tieups Being Arranged With Department Stores For "Only a Shop Girl"

WITH production on "Only a Shopgirl" not yet completed, word comes from the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation offices of exploitation ideas already lined up on this feature that will include among other things the tying up with a large department store or novelty shop in every large city in the United States on a cooperative campaign.

Because of the title and content of "Only a Shopgirl," which is the second of the C. B. C. series, there is opportunity for many novelty tie-ups of this kind, according to the releasing company.

Things at the C. B. C. offices are moving with such speed that Joe Brandt, President of the organization, who returned only late last week from a two-and-a-half months' trip throughout the country, left again early this week on another trip that will probably keep him away from New York about six weeks.

The purpose of this trip is to get first-hand and definite details on the possibilities of this plan so that its details can be worked out and ready to put into effect when the picture is ready to launch shortly.

He will work in cooperation with the exchanges handling "Only a Shopgirl," with exhibitors, and with Chambers of Commerce in the various cities and will line up the exchanges, and through them the various territories, on other stunts and ideas that have already been worked out in detail.

Because of the way "More to Be Pitied" has already gone over, and the fact of the all-star cast of "Only a Shopgirl," including Estelle Taylor, Wallace Beery, Mae Busch, James Morrison, Tully Marshall, Claire Dubrey, William Scott, Willard Louis and Josephine Adair, it is believed that the possibilities for exploitation on this feature are tremendous.

Burr Recalls Prints on "I Am the Law"

Affiliated Distributors, Inc., through its president, C. C. Burr, announced this week to the trade and exchange men who have bought "I Am the Law" for release in their respective territories, that in compliance with the decision of Judge Knox of the Supreme Court, he has ordered all prints on "I Am the Law" returned to his offices. As soon as these prints are received the name of James Oliver Curwood will be stricken from the main title, and the confession scene which was the basis of court action between Affiliated Distributors and International, taken out entirely.

It is also reported by Affiliated that all paper on "I Am the Law" bearing the name of James Oliver Curwood has been discarded and replaced in accordance with the decision of Judge Knox.

Second Burr Comedy Is Under Way

PRODUCTION on the second of the "All-Star" comedies, featuring Ray McKee, Mary Anderson and Charlie Murray, being produced at the Glendale Studio by C. C. Burr for release through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has begun in earnest with a majority of the interiors already filmed. It is temporarily titled "Her Rich Uncle." The company in charge of Director Gregory La Cava spent two days on location in the environs of Richmond Hill, Long Island, the latter part of the week and some excellent scenes are said to have been obtained.

With the first of the "All-Star" comedies completed to the entire satisfaction of the Hodkinson officials, Director La Cava is determined to supercede "Faint Heart" with the second of the series. When "Faint Heart" received its test premiere at the Gotham Theatre in New York City last week, the officials of the Hodkinson Corporation, C. C. Burr and his staff and the audience present were apparently greatly satisfied with its success.

"More to Be Pitied" as Single Feature

Proof of the unusual strength that exhibitors are attaching to "More To Be Pitied" was given this week by the fact that this feature was booked as a single feature for the week-end Saturday, Sunday and Monday, at one of the best New York neighborhood houses, Oct. 7th, 8th, 9th, according to C. B. C. officers.

It is the policy of this theatre, the Crescent, to run "double" features excepting in such cases as the booking of a feature that is considered by the management sufficiently strong to pull in the crowds alone, and this policy of "single-feature" is usually played there over the week-ends.

Arrow Plans Campaign For New Picture

An advertising and exploitation campaign is now being planned by Arrow Film Corporation for "The Streets of New York."

W. Ray Johnston, vice-president of Arrow, said in a recent interview, "I believe that 'The Streets of New York' as a title presents more widely diversified advertising and exploitation possibilities than does any other name that has ever come to my attention."

Hyperion Offers Six Pictures "Finger Prints" First of Series for Release One Every Six Weeks

AN announcement of particular interest to the independent market is made this week by the Hyperion Pictures Corporation, which offers to independent exchanges an unusually attractive group of six pictures, for release this season.

"Finger Prints," the first of the six, is now ready, and the other five will be released at regular intervals of about six weeks. "The Seventh Noon," from the famous novel by Frederic Orin Bartlett, is in preparation and the titles and other details of the remainder of the series will be made public shortly.

According to the statement of the distributing organization, the series of pictures is being made by men who have intimate knowledge of conditions in the independent field, and these photodramas have been produced to fill the need now urgent in that field.

These six pictures, the company officials declare, will have competent direction and experienced casts, high-class productions, strong stories by popular authors, and titles with big exploitation and publicity possibilities.

A comprehensive advertising and publicity campaign has been laid out to get the utmost value for the exchanges out of the series. Trade papers, teaser campaigns, and attractive and practically useful campaign and press books will be used to put over each of the six.

"Finger Prints," the first release, is said to be a swift-moving feature from the pen of Alton Floyd, edited and titled by Joseph W. Farnham. It was directed by Joseph W. Levering, and includes in its cast Violet Palmer, the former Fox star; Arthur Donaldson, Aida Horton, Stanley Walpole, Louis B. Foley, Horace James, William Wells, W. J. Gross, Jack Sharkey, Louis Reinhardt, Charles Slattery and Emily Lorraine.

Elinor Glyn Signs With Lesser Dorothy Phillips Will Star in First Story For Principal Pictures Company

SIMULTANEOUS with the announcement from Principal Pictures Company, the new independent producing and distributing firm of which Sol Lesser is president, that it had acquired the services of Dorothy Phillips, one of the best-known stars in the business today, came word from the concern's New York office that it had signed Miss Elinor Glyn. Her first story for this firm will be "The World's a Stage." Production on this feature is now well under way.

The engagement of Miss Phillips is in itself a move of particular import to the independent market in general. Miss Phillips' pictures rank among the best sellers, this star having established a following in this country and abroad.

Having secured a remarkable story and a popular star, Principal Pictures Company has surrounded Miss Phillips with an all-star cast embracing such notable players as Kenneth Harlan and Bruce McRae. Several others are expected to sign contracts late this week. Colin Campbell has been engaged to direct "The World's a Stage."

Animal Subject Booked for New York Houses

"Man vs. Beast" two-reeler which Educational announced for release the last of this month, has been booked for the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, Broadway, New York.

Urban Home Again; Presides at Plant

CHARLES URBAN is back at his desk at Urban Institute, Irvington-on-Hudson, after a six weeks trip to Europe—and his eightieth journey across the Atlantic.

All of the Urban projects are now gathered at Irvington.

The big plant includes a tremendous film laboratory of the most modern industrial pattern, besides all the other great departments that go to make up Urban Institute.

The Official Urban Movie Chats, which are produced in conjunction with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation; and the Urban Popular Classics, which are released through Vitagraph, are being edited at Urban Institute, as are all the other pictures which bear the Urban imprint.

Mr. Urban brought home with him a large amount of material for his educational releases.

"Brass" in Production on West Coast

"Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce is in the course of production at the Warner Brothers west coast studios, according to reports received at the Warner offices from Harry Rapf.

This is the third production being made by Rapf for the Warner organization, the first two being "Rags to Riches," and "Little Heroes of the Street," both featuring Wesley Barry.

Sidney Franklin, who directed Norma Talmadge's most recent releases, is directing the Rapf production. Marie Prevost, the featured player, heads a cast of prominent screen favorites, the names of which have not as yet been announced.

"Wildness of Youth" to Open Run

"WILDNESS OF YOUTH," claimed as one of the finest productions ever put out by the Graphic Film Corporation, will have its first run at the Strand Theatre, Newark, beginning the week of October 14th and will run the entire week. An exceptionally large advertising campaign was inaugurated starting last Monday in all the Newark papers and the neighboring sections.

The cast includes Virginia Pearson, Mary Anderson, Harry T. Morey, Joseph Striker, Thurston Hall, Julia Swayne Gordon, "Bobby" Connelly, Harry Southard, Madeline La Varre and George J. Williams. The story and scenario are by Ivan Abramson and Don Dundas.

Exact Locations Used in Rogers Picture

By adhering to the exact historical locations as presented by Washington Irving in his classic "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which will be released November 5 by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation under the title of "The Headless Horseman," Carl Stearns Clancy, producer of the picture, has given to the screen a vista of picturesque settings, it is stated, wherein every point of interest that found its way into the minds and hearts of the millions of those who read the book, has been faithfully duplicated.

The countless who have followed the lives of these old historical Dutch settlers along the Hudson River will find, for instance, views of the old Dutch church, both interior and exterior in which Ichabod Crane sang.

Cartoon Series Named "Roving Thomas"

In the new output of Urban Popular Classics, which are being released by Vitagraph, is a series of travel pictures with a cartoon guide.

The series is known by its guide, "Roving Thomas," otherwise identified as the Urban cat.

"Roving Thomas" starts his tour in New York and goes around the world, pointing out the places of interest.

It is very much like a tour under the direction of a professional traveler, "Roving Thomas" being the professional.

The cartoons are the creation of John Terry; the travel scenes come from Mr. Urban's travel collection.

New Feature For Johnny Hines

Third Production Temporarily Titled "Luck" Under Way at Glendale Studios

C. C. BURR and Johnny Hines are off again on another extensive production campaign, this time with Johnny Hines featured again in a six-reel comedy drama.

Production on the third Hines feature, temporarily titled "Luck," from the story of the same name by Jackson Gregory, begins this week at Burr's Glendale studio.

Included in the cast up to the present writing are Edmund Breese and J. Barney Sherry, both of whom appeared to excellent advantage with Hines in "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" and "Sure-Fire Flint," Charlie Murray, veteran Mack Sennett star now associated with C. C. Burr in the production of the "All-Star Comedies" and Joe Kink who has appeared in a great number of the more meritorious productions made in the east in the past two years. Just who the female lead will be is as yet undetermined, since Burr is now conducting negotiations with three nationally known stars to appear opposite Hines.

It was producer Burr's original intention to secure the services of Doris Kenyon, whose work opposite Hines in "Sure-Fire Flint" was so commendable, but Miss Kenyon is now touring the country in her stage success "Up the Ladder," which made her presence impossible. C. C. Burr, however, promises within the next week to announce the signing of one of the nationally known female stars whose name with that of Hines and the high-caliber supporting cast should mean, along with a corking good story, an attraction that should be eagerly sought for by all independent exchangemen.

It is expected that this latest Hines feature will be ready for release December first.

Jawitz Will Distribute Picture

"Beware Of The Law", North Woods story, Will be Released This Fall

JAWITZ PICTURES CORPORATION announce that they will contribute to the Fall releases on the independent market, a five-part drama of the North Woods, entitled "Beware of the Law." The picture, from a popular magazine story, was directed by W. A. S. Douglas and features Marjorie Payne and an all-star cast.

It is said to be unusually well balanced, in that the story contains strong drama, mystery, and a wholesome comedy relief. Marjorie Payne is seen as Rose LeBarbe, a girl grocer in a Canadian border village, who innocently becomes a factor in the schemes of a desperate band of whiskey smugglers, while at the same time falling in love with a handsome young revenue officer.

While in every way an interesting picture for adult audiences, the absolute cleanliness of the feature is shown by the fact that the New York State Motion Picture Commission approved it without a single elimination or change.

Jawitz claims that the press-book issued in connection with "Beware of the Law" is unusually practical, containing a dozen cheap exploitation stunts, well within the means of the average house, which are sure to draw because every one promises entertainment by handing the crowd a laugh. Lithographs and exploitation material of equally strong sales appeal will accompany the feature.

Diminutive Heroine For Frankie Lee

Negotiations will be completed soon and announcement made regarding the engagement of a prominent child actress to play opposite Frankie Lee in his new series of two-reel comedies. The initial assignment will be the part of "Blanche" in the first of the series to be made under the working title of "Last Night When I Kissed Blanche Thompson," a role that requires a child of decided histrionic ability.

Frankie and the little girl will have the central parts, and will be supported by a cast of well known adult players. Clarence Bricker will direct the series.

"Famous Mrs. Fair" Under Way Soon

Fred Niblo has commenced preliminary work upon James Forbes' stage success "The Famous Mrs. Fair," which will be his first production, presented by Louis B. Mayer, for Metro. The director of "The Three Musketeers," "Blood and Sand" and "The Mark of Zorro" expects that the material in this play which starred Henry Miller and Blanche Bates for two years will make the finest photoplay entertainment.

Frances Marion is working in cooperation with the director on the adaptations necessary for the proper translation of the stage success to the screen.

Movie Chat Depicts Sculptor at Work

Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, is starting on a four years' job, the creation of a Civil War memorial depicting the Southern view of the Civil War—or the "Lost Cause," as they call it.

The newest issue of the Urban Movie Chats shows him in conference with the owner of Stone Mountain in Georgia, where the memorial will be placed after its completion.

Big Campaign For "Notoriety"

Weber and North Contract for Large Appropriation Devoted to Advertising

CONTRACTS involving a large appropriation for outdoor billboard advertising and fan magazine announcements on the release of "Notoriety," Will Nigh's first independent production for L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, have been signed this week by the producers and distributors.

The reason for the unusual outlay, is the decision on the part of Weber & North to get behind a big picture when they have one.

In addition to the direct appeal to picture patrons by means of billboard and magazine advertising, Weber & North have already begun a trade-paper campaign for the benefit of state right buyers of "Notoriety." Exhibitors will be approached with inserts and double page spreads on the Will Nigh feature that will create demand for booking.

Short Subjects Chosen for Theatre Opening

Educational Pictures were represented on the opening program of the new Kentucky theatre at Lexington, Ky., with two subjects, a Christie Comedy and Kinograms, the news reel.

The comedy chosen for the first program at this fine new house was "That Son of a Sheik," a satire on the many Sheik dramas, featuring Neal Burns with Viora Daniel. This Christie Comedy, together with Kinograms, was advertised on the front page of a special Kentucky theatre section issued by the Lexington Herald.

Attractiveness for Combined Theatre and Store Front

Building Can Be Made to Arrest the Eye at Several Blocks' Distance

By F. S. Laurence,
Executive Secretary

National Terra Cotta Society

Two classes of business depend for patronage largely upon the attractiveness of the buildings housing them—stores and theatres. Both must rely in considerable measure upon strolling patronage and the casual action of this is often dictated by the unconscious promptings of interest aroused by the characteristics of exterior treatment which arrest the eye.

The vehicles for accomplishing this attraction are appealing architectural design and the materials used for its embodiment. Among these terra cotta is the most flexible medium for responding to the particular interest-compelling features which location and the character of patronage may dictate as advisable. Its ready adaptability to almost any degree of simplicity or elaboration and variety of color effects exceeds that of any other enduring material and carries with it the further advantage that it is instantly recognized as among the fireproof materials which contribute to safety.

Both in the store and theatre the impression conveyed by the use of a material of this kind is that the enterprise it houses must be of the class which yields good results in the service rendered for the money expended. Cheap and shoddy construction inevitably repels just as inordinately expensive finish in the use of very costly materials may frighten off with the implication of "too much class" for the average purchaser's pocketbook.

Here is where the problem of incorporating stores in a theatre building for rental revenue involves a nice calculation of the psychology of the two kinds of patronage to be attracted. If the stores are to be an integral part of the general front which encloses the theatre building it is obvious that their architectural treatment in design and material must harmonize in character and feeling with the treatment of the theatre entrance. As the aim of the store in respect to attracting the strolling passer is like that of the theatre the treatment and material most appropriate for the latter can be freely carried out in the general design of the entire front so as to produce the imposing effect of an important theatre no matter how small the theatre within may actually be. It is in other words a theatre building housing stores and not a store building housing a theatre. This is best for both the theatre and store so far as casual patronage is concerned.

In terra cotta, owing to the fact that it is a plastic clay material pressed from moulds, very rich and elegant effects of design can be obtained at a very moderate cost as the expense of ornament occurs chiefly in the original clay model from which moulds are cast and this can be of a design which repeats itself indefinitely. There is, therefore, no expensive carving

Early 90's Ushers in Beginnings of the Present-Day Projectors

(Editor's Note: In last week's issue was published the first installment of an article on the subject of "Historical Developments Leading to the Modern Picture" by C. Francis Jenkins. These articles are taken from a paper on the subject prepared by Mr. Jenkins and presented before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.)

By C. Francis Jenkins

Among the early English workers were Friese Greene and Mr. Evans who exhibited a camera before the Bath Photo Society, February 25, 1890, and in 1895 were working on a projector, work which was concurrent with the work of the Lumiere Brothers in France. The Lumiere camera was also used as a projector, however, and as such came to America in 1897.

The American Biograph, built by Herman Castler in 1896 was one of the very best of the projectors of these early development years. He worked on the theory that the larger the frame the sharper the definition on the screen because of the less enlargement required. This machine used $2\frac{3}{4}$ -inch width of film. The film, unperforated, was advanced through the projector by the gripping action of mutilated cylinders which contracted for only a fourth of a revolution. The resultant screen picture was excellent, but like all the other mechanisms employing film differing from the generally standard, had its day, played its part and dropped from sight.

In 1890, I began work on mechanisms for recording and reproducing motion. Two systems were developed side by side; one employed intermittent motion at the picture aperture, the other continuous motion. Cameras were first made, in which film was used, split to width in the dark from Kodak film brought in local photographic shops. These pieces were spliced into strips, sometimes twenty-one feet long, if I was lucky. Prints were made from negatives exposed in the cameras—usually in the continuous motion camera, for it made the steadiest pictures, though projection was mostly in the intermittent machine which had no interrupting shutter and therefore gave most illumination.

The continuous motion mechanism consisted of a rotating disc carrying a plurality of matched lenses arranged around its periphery and passing in single line sequence across an adjustable opening in exact synchronism with a film moving downward in the focus of the lenses. Different mechanisms were made, with an equipment of lenses ranging from five to forty-eight and in spaced relation depending on the height of the frame chosen.

Continuous motion mechanism with plurality of lenses

In the intermittent mechanism the film was illuminated for about seven-eighths and moved in about one-eighth of a period. A "beater type" was first employed and later followed by the geneva gear, a gear found in many makes of watches to prevent winding the spring too tight.

My work was my own, but viewing the art in historical retrospection from this late day, it is evident that the solution of the illumination problem was my only original contribution to the art as practised from 1890 to the present time. I must confess that I don't quite understand why the thing wasn't hit upon by someone previously, it was so simple as so perfectly obvious when once done, like half turn of the screw which made the constant contact transmittent, which, in its turn, made the telephone a commercial article.

As my old apparatus was acquired by the United States National Museum in 1895 and there it can still be seen (on exhibit in the Graphic Arts Department).

My projectors were motor driven and by some accident of design were built left-handed, a type which has since been followed, consciously or unconsciously, in the design of machines the world over.

Exhibitions to friends were given from time to time in 1891, 1892 and 1893, though my first exhibition of which any account appeared in printed publications, was in June of 1894.

In March following I secured the financial assistance of a local man and we built three copies of this early machine and exhibited them at the Cotton States Exposition, Atlanta, 1895. These were the first of picture shows in a building built exclusively for the purpose.

In the winter following, I demonstrated the original instrument, the Phantoscope before the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia and at the close of the demonstration it was voted that the matter should go before the proper committee to determine whether it ought to receive scientific acknowledgment. The Committee in due course recommended the Elliott Cresson Gold Medal and published its findings in the Journal for three months. Thereupon the proposed award was vigorously opposed by two interested gentlemen, but after many months of taking testimony and considering evidence and data submitted, the originally recommended award was made. Eighteen years later a second award was made, the John Scott medal, for improvements, i. e., lateral projection as demonstrated in a machine which I later christened the Graphscope.

Efforts have been made from time to time to exploit synchronized pictures and sound, but without success. There is no difficulty in synchronizing. This has been accomplished in several ways by those engaged thereon, my own scheme being to put the sound record on the film as a sinuous edge so that accidental destruction of a part of the film would take out as much sound as picture, and when spliced would still be in synchronism and without any adjustment of mechanism. The public, however, did not favorably receive any of the singing pictures and all such schemes disappeared when the novelty of a single exhibition had passed. The silent drama is attractive to a very large extent, I think, because it is the silent drama.

Stereoscopic motion pictures have been the subject of considerable thought and have been attained in several ways, as described in the October, 1919, transactions of this Society, but never yet have they been accomplished in a practical way. By practical, I mean, for example, without some device to wear over the eyes of the observer. It is generally conceded that its acceptable accomplishment would enhance the beauty of the motion picture.

Motion pictures in natural color have been attained by several persons, one of the first to have wide public exploitation was that employed by Smith and Urban (Chas. Urban, one of our members). The film had color stencil frames alternating longitudinally of the film and which were projected respectively through red-yellow and green-blue tinters so that the

It's to their eyes you are selling!

THE patrons of your theatre, the people who decide whether you are to be a failure or a success, whether your theatre or the "other theatre" is to be the leading one in town, make their decision on what they see — what they see on your screen.

Your imposing foyer with all its spaciousness, your soft plush carpet which gives that feeling of elegance and luxury, your courteous ushers, comfortable seats and music that ranges from soul soothing to soul stirring — all of them help you to please your patrons. But they are all incidental.

Only what you show on the screen is vital!

That is what makes them leave their comfortable homes to spend their hours with you. And what they see depends not only upon what pictures you select, but also on the light you use to project those pictures.

If you use the proper light, your pictures will show clearly and pleasingly. Or by improper light, you can tire their eyes with variations in intensity, flickers and "spots". And what otherwise would have been a pleasant evening is turned into a tiresome one.

The Wagner White-Light Converter provides from alternating current a clear, brilliant white light for projection. The light it furnishes is steady, even at change-over and is conveniently controlled.

We have made a study of this subject and have published it in book form. The title is "Light For Motion Picture Projection" and we would like to send you a copy of it. If you are at all interested in this vital subject, use the coupon below.

film running through the machine at twice standard speed produced a composite screen picture in natural color and motion.

Gaumont in 1913 had a color scheme in which three rows of frames were arranged side by side on a wide film, each row being projected through its appropriate tint and, superimposed, produced a screen picture in natural color. With a synchronizing attachment sound was also added giving "talking motion pictures in natural color."

As each of these schemes required special apparatus difficulty was experienced in exploiting these processes and they fell by the wayside.

The process which will succeed is that which fits standard machines without change. Such, for example, as that patented by Arturo Hernandez and skillfully developed by one of our members, Mr. Kelley. This was demonstrated at our Philadelphia meeting and described in the transactions of November, 1918, and April, 1919. It consists, as you will remember, of a double coated film, the red-yellow frames being on one side and the blue-green frames on the other side of the film, each side tinted in its proper color throughout the length of the film. Such a natural color film can be run in the standard projector without change, and can, and often is, put into a split reel with monochrome film.

The suppression of flicker (and resultant headache) was the next problem to attract attention and the first mention I find is in 1900 and the description says that "the shutter rotates once in the interval between the movements of the film." But as more commonly practiced flicker is subdued by adding one or more blades rather than by rotating the shutter oftener.

In France the Pathe Brothers have a notable establishment in which the requisites for the entire motion process are produced, i. e., raw stock, cameras, laboratory equipment, studio and projectors. In England Chas. Urban for several years maintained a similar plant and his accumulation of educational and scientific subjects are probably unequalled anywhere.

We have no similar establishment in America, the Yankee being more prone to specialize. And my sketch would be incomplete should I fail to mention the impetus initially given to quality picture production by Messrs. Bell and Howell, makers of fine cameras and printers. Another who has made himself paramount in his specialty, picture printing, is Mr. Rothacker. Both Bell and Rothacker are members of our Society. And just here let me note that quality production has been possible by the uniformly high standard of raw stock furnished by George Eastmann, represented in our Society by Mr. Blair.

Projection has not been developed to the same high degree, perhaps because the accomplishment is far more difficult. The analytical end of the motion picture process has always been the least troublesome, principally because of the ample time latitude of film movement in the camera and printer. The projector still lacks the 100% quality for 100% of time of a completely developed machine, in addition to an efficiency of but 50% in light utilization.

And yet I think it one of the most remarkable mechanisms extant. Consider its intermittent sprocket for example; it handles a hundred feet of fragile and delicate film per minute, with a start-and-stop motion, at a speed of 150 feet per second at the maximum point, stopping it with so nearly microscopical exactness that, magnified, say, four hundred diameters, and repeated sixteen times a second, the unsteadiness is almost nil.

As for players our art now has such popularity that few actors and actresses of the speaking stage have been able to resist the lure of the silent drama, despite their prejudice, though none of them has made so great successes as those of less or no foot-light experience. Apparently stagecraft and cameracraft don't "gee." Certain it is that new names have attained stellar brilliance in the pictures, the new medium of expression having developed a new type of artist both in acting and in direction.

But we should not forget that while our art as an industry is the fifth largest in the world, and money has been spent with reckless disregard of values, it was the courageous spirit who established the first 5c movie house who made such expenditures and such returns possible. This was the real beginning of the expansion which made an industry of a scientific plaything, and a film exchange system which has endured to this day. For just as the central exchange made the telephone widely useful, so the movie theatre made the motion picture a profit paying entertainer.

So, as Sargent happily puts it, for fifteen years now we have had a device for dramatic representation which has given us every form of entertainment known to man since the beginning of time. We present the story teller in a pantomime far more effective than mere words alone; we show every form of spectacular reproduction in a splendor never dreamed of by a Caesar; we present every human emotion known to exist in a realism and costume true to nature; we multiply the magic lantern a thousand-fold in every reel; we bring every distant country, every strange people, every quaint custom, every new and wonderful invention, every scientific discovery; all this we bring to the stay-at-homes and an humble coin pays the fiddler. The child of today has seen more of the world than did the traveler of yesterday.

Many great enterprises have begun with the doing of some very simple thing. So in motion pictures when the opening in the shutter was enlarged scientific grouping stopped and the development of an industry began, an industry grown already to great magnitude. But I firmly believe that because of its universal usefulness, the ability to convey information between all peoples of the earth (for you should remember that it is without language or literacy limitation), the motion picture is destined ultimately to be the greatest single industry known to mankind. I think, therefore, fellow engineers, we may justly be proud of our vocation.

Curves for Equivalent Focus of Objective, Throw and Picture Size

A short time ago this department carried a lense chart which was made up of actual numerical figures for the selection of lenses. This week is presented a lens chart in the form of curves from which all the data necessary for securing a focal length of the projection lens, length of throw and size of picture may be obtained. The chart was originally published in the bulletin issued by the National Lamp Works on Incandescent Lamp Projection.

In using this chart employ the following procedure:

When the length of throw from the objective lens to the screen and the size of picture desired are known—to find the equivalent focus of objective required—

On the right hand side of the chart and also extending up along the top are numbers from 8 to 25 which represent the width of picture. From among these figures select the width of picture to be used. Run down this line until it meets the line coming over from the scale on the left hand side giving the throw in feet. Then read the scale directly under where these two lines meet the equivalent focus of the objective lens needed.

For example, say we have a throw of 100 feet and want an objective lens which will give us a picture 15 feet wide.

Selecting on the scale on the left "Picture Width-Feet" the number 15, we run down this line until it meets the line coming out from the figure 100 on the scale on the right hand side "Throw-Feet," and then run straight down along the vertical line to the bottom scale where we find the reading "6." Then the equivalent focus of the objective lens required is 6 inches.

In the cases where the equivalent focus of the objective lens and throw are known or when the size of picture and objective lens are known, a similar procedure is followed by simply following the lines from the figures on the various scales which represent the known quantities.

"Punch Maniac" Loose Again

Dear Friends:

It has been quite some time since I've sent in anything, but have not been neglecting the page. Sure have had some excellent views lately.

Again I want to lay stress on the Punch Maniac. For a time it seemed as though we were going to do away with it. But of late I have gotten some mighty badly punched films, and new prints at that. To save the film, and not wishing to butcher it up, projectionists are putting small pieces of brown paper over punch marks. Of course these show when run through the machine, but do not look as bad as holes.

Recently I have got films with a strip of paper pasted over the entire scene for about four or five frames and these papers, about five feet apart, being all the way from four to six in number at the end of each reel. Sometimes there will be long strips of paper, punch marks, scratches, cross marks and silver contact paper. I wonder how many more things they could crowd on to the end of a reel to announce its approaching end? It is purely disgusting that an OPERATOR can't take down on a piece of paper the last subtitle and how many scenes follow it before the end. How simple it is to change over then, without a break in the picture, with the audience never knowing when the change takes place.

Not long ago I received a notice from a prominent exchange in Atlanta announcing that in future all films would be sent out on their own steel reels, and if these reels were not returned with the films a charge of fifty cents per reel would be made. The idea dawned upon me and I thought it would be an excellent plan for exchanges to patch up and remove all punch marks on their reels, or, if not on the old ones, keep an account of all new ones, and send out letters that there would be a charge of so much per reel for every reel returned to the exchange butchered up to any extent. I think that would put a stop to some of this folly. What do you think about it? Don't you think it would help? Placing a penalty on it is the only way we will ever get rid of it! There will always be stubborn heads and backwoodsmen among us who won't listen to reason, and I believe in MAKING them recognize the ethics of the profession! How many are with me?

required for the production of each unit. The surface finishes applied to the clay pieces which are pressed from the moulds can be anything in color from pure white to black or the most brilliant color or combination of colors desirable to arrest attention and please the eye. No other permanent material has any such chromatic range. Considering that the average city street presents an aspect of sombre gray it can readily be seen how the theatre building can be made to stand out in a treatment that will arrest the eye at several blocks' distance and be so compelling in interest that it inclines the stroller to wander that way for a closer inspection. If it repays in the interest and artistic character of its treatment when seen at close hand it is bound to set up the impulse which sooner or later will lead to its preferential patronage. In motion picture theatres particularly the appeal is to the eye and if this begins to operate in the street there is so much added satisfaction for the expenditure of the dime or quarter whether the person affected is aware of it or not. Unconscious promptings have a lot to do even with our seriously purposeful courses of action and psychological researches have developed this fact in a degree that would be astonishing to the general public if fully understood. In some celebrated cases which were the subject of analysis by eminent French psychologists it was shown conclusively that in many decisions reached by the subjects of this study in the course of their lives they were influenced by their instinctive preference for certain colors, in one instance a liking for the color blue bringing about events determining the choice of a career and many things arising in the pursuit of it. The person in question

Elsmere theatre, Borough of the Bronx, New York City. Shampan & Shampan, architects. Another dignified and attractive instance, executed entirely in white matt glazed terra cotta richly modeled would probably have been angrily astonished had anyone suggested that the course of events in his life could have been influenced by any such trivial prompting. Whatever the truth of these instances, merchants are beginning to appreciate the factor of unconscious prompting in the effect of the treatment of store fronts. This is increasingly evident from the attention given to this point in the leading trade publications of various industries.

As a medium for the sensuous appeal which is a great factor in this, terra cotta is unsurpassed. With the wonderful resources which exist in the possible adaptation of various motives of design and color treatment employed in great epochs of the past where terra cotta was lavishly used the opportunity which exists today for its exploitation is almost immeasurable. The coldly classical, pedimented and columned structure has been overdone along with the severely formal and conventional motives of design which have been spread all over our city streets in bank, municipal and store buildings and when adopted for the theatre leaves nothing.

hear me yell clear into the exchange office. There is no reason for any exchange to tolerate any "operator's" foolishness of destroying one print after another by using punch marks, cross marks, scratches on tinfoil where it curls up the film or any other method of change over which tends to destroy their property. They know to whom they send their prints and if they are inspected when they (the prints) leave the exchange office and also inspected when they are returned, then it looks as if there is some "don't care stuff" being pulled off at these alleged exchange inspection rooms, doesn't it?

The N. A. M. L. or any other organization pertaining to the projection room efficiency will always remain at a standstill unless there is some effort put forth by the editor of these columns to get the exhibitors and producers and exchange managers to pay a bit of attention to the Forum and see the efforts which 1,700 or more members of this League are putting forth for the betterment of the film services. I sincerely think that if the right effort is made their co-operation will surely be given to the League members. Some of the fellows didn't like my cue sheet idea. Well, for their benefit, I suggest that they try to do two things at a time and then try the idea again and maybe they can then watch for the cue and make a change over at the same time. Poor fellows, all they need is a little practice and less alarm clocks (referring to the square piece of tin idea).

Strong for the League

Dear Editor:

I wrote you some time ago about the requirements needed to become a member of the N. A. M. L., but you never heard from me since, but I am sincere in believing that the League is about the best thing that was ever presented to a projectionist. That is, with some of the films that come into the "Star." Just the other day I cut out twelve misframes from one picture, so I think I will frame them and put them in my booth until one of the film agents come around. Most of the exchanges of the state of Maryland depend upon the operator to keep their films in good shape and they are in fine condition when they leave the Star Theatre. But they are PUNK when they come in.

Will ring off for this time. Please accept me for a new member and find two bits enclosed for the button.

Good luck to all other operators and for better pictures. As ever,

DAVID B. MCGEE,
Box 601, Westernport, Md.

Dear Editor:

Have been putting off writing you long enough. One keeps quite busy down in this neck of the woods and don't get much time for anything else except work.

I am enclosing membership blank for my partner in the booth. I am quite an old member, as you will notice by my number, being 1030. Was down in George at the time I joined and it certainly is coming to the front lately. I always read the Forum and have got lots of valuable information from it. Hope you continue to give out and receive the good points.

You will also find sufficient amount of stamps to cover charge of button, and, Ed, you might also send in a supply of labels. Thanking you in advance,

Yours for better projection,

Dear Editor:

Capt. W. J. Redner, 4th Cavalry, E. & R. officer, called my attention this morning to the National Anti-Misframe League, and before I get busy and have no time I want to enter my application for a membership.

In the past couple of weeks I have had enough "grief" with films to last me the rest of my life, and you can believe me that I am strong for any organization which is for the prevention of cruelty to the inmates of the projection rooms.

I am using one of the blanks in your good magazine to enter my application, as we save every one of them for reference work when selecting pictures, motion picture supplies, etc.

Hope you have the bronze buttons ready for distribution and declare open season on all operators who do not wear them.

Keep the good work going and count on me to boost for every pound in me.

Very truly yours,

TONY C. CANTU,
Mercedes, Texas.

Stanley Company to Build in Atlantic City

Julius E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, has just completed negotiations whereby that organization acquires a site for a new motion picture theatre at the corner of Kentucky Ave. and the Boardwalk in Atlantic City, N. J. The structure is to be modeled upon the same lines as the $2,000,000 Philadelphia theatre. The site fronts 170 feet on the Boardwalk and 190 feet on Kentucky avenue.

Capitol, Hamilton, Ont., Reopens

The Capitol theatre in Hamilton, Ont., formerly Loew's, has reopened under the management of N. L. Nathanson. The house has been completely remodeled and redecorated. "The Prisoner of Zenda," was the opening attraction. I. Lomas is conducting the orchestra. John Arthur is producing the prologues and musical novelties.—Taylor.

Norfolk to Have Fine Theatre

Apparently the new Wells theatre, on Granby Street, Norfolk, Va., will when completed be far and away the finest picture house in this part of the South. The exterior is finished and presents a fine appearance from the street. It is slightly reminiscent of the California theatre, San Francisco, and of Miller's California, Los Angeles.—Knappen.

Change of Seats Increases Business

Restein's new theatre at Cape Charles, Va., a railroad town of only 2,400 people, has since its opening with five hundred regular opera chairs, in place of the three to four hundred temporary seats, available in their old location on a side street, improved its business enormously. While in Cape Charles last Saturday evening the News representative observed a sign on box office: "Tickets sold now will admit to second show only. All seats for first showing taken." And crowds of townspeople and visitors lined the sidewalk waiting for the second show, so they could get their weekly film entertainment.—Knappen.

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

ing distinctive of the latter enterprise in the result. We go to the theatre to be entertained. Gayety and the refreshing sense of change from the commonplace of surroundings and existence are the fitting and attracting elements in design and for these no style of architecture presents greater and more undeveloped possibilities than the early Spanish, Moresque and Italian architecture which is easily adapted to modern purposes in this line. Every architects' library is full of rich things of this description that can be economically realized in terra cotta and which they would be glad to so employ once the preference of the owners who are their clients manifests itself in a readiness to freely employ unhackneyed concepts of design.

In the matter of investment return as it may occur through the inclusion or omission of store space in the modern theatre building, this is entirely conditioned upon circumstances in ground value and procurable rents as against the possible return in devoting the same space to increased seating capacity, a consideration which suggests that inclusion of the store is more properly a function of the large than the small theatre building. This however, must remain for the owner and operator to figure out for himself according to local conditions.

Spectators Wear Color Screens While Viewing Stereoscopic Pictures

Stereoscopic motion pictures made by the Harry K. Fairall process were shown to an audience of five hundred at the Ambassador Hotel theatre, Los Angeles, Wednesday evening September 27th, at a demonstration preview. The audience was highly representative of the film industry, there being many executives, players, directors, writers and men connected with photographic side of motion pictures present.

The demonstration preview was prefaced with an announcement respecting the Fairall process. It was stated the negative film is exposed by a special camera having a double mechanism and two lenses. One of the negatives is photographed, the writer believes, through a red filter while a green filter is used on the second lense. In making the prints, two stocks are use, one tinted red and the other green. At the conclusion of the announcement, ushers handed to each member of the audience a pair of spectacles, each having a red celluloid for the right and a green celluloid for the left eye. Viewing the projected picture through the red and green spectacles, the viewer sees a black and white stereoscopic motion picture, the first the writer believes that has ever been projected. The tinting of the film and the wearing of glasses, of course reduces the brightness of the picture and at the same time destroys much of the sharpness possible in the ordinary black and white film. What is lost in the dimness is more than made up in the depth given to the views.

The spectacles act as filters for the eye, the red side dissolving out the green projected on the screen and the green dissolving out the red, thus perfecting an optical illusion that appears to the eye to be a black and white motion picture, the exact counterpart of what the eye would see if it viewed the scene photographed. With the glasses removed, the eye sees a black and white picture with fuzzy red and green images.

The feature production made by the Fairall process, consisting of six reels and titled "The Power of Love" which was shown at the demonstration was evidently written to meet the special needs or requirements of the Fairall process. The feature differs from the usual one of today in that there is almost an absolute lacking of close-ups and the action is slow in order that it conform to the requirements of the Fairall process.

The Fairall process brings to the screen an advanced step toward the stereoscopic motion picture goal. The process is not wholly perfected, as is indicated by the demonstration films, for there are some scenes which do not seem to be in clear focus and there is also slight eye strain. It is evident that speedier emotions or faster lenses, or both, will be necessary to enable the photographing of all kind of action necessary for screen drama.

Claim is made by the inventor that projection can be made at any distance, thus making the process available for any sized house. Harry K. Fairall has been working on the process for seven years and advises that he now has twenty-seven patents granted and pending for the making and projecting of stereoscopic pictures. Furthermore, any kind of a screen may be used.

The statement by the inventor follows:

"The stereoscopic method of projecting motion pictures is obtained by the projection on the screen of two positive super-imposed film simultaneously photographed through a single camera having two lenses, separated a distance equivalent to the position of the human eye.

"The films are treated in such a way as to allow projection at any distance. The use of viewing screen similar to spectacles, consisting of a blue and a red lense makes possible stereoscopic vision, in that each eye sees a single picture of its own. One eye cannot see the picture viewed by the other, which is necessary to obtain the relief and perspective.

"Furthermore, by the Fairall process of projection, the picture as shown on the screen has no distortion when views from any part of the theatre. The front corner seats are just as advantageous as the center seats, because the image squares itself to the individual."

Distributors Know

THE superiority of release prints from THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES is a matter of comment among distributors. The film wears longer, is perfectly waxed and patched with full hole patches. It is a finished product ready for the projection machine. Our prints save the distributor time, trouble and money.

HIS superiority is the result of years of study and scientific research. Producers depending upon us not only for daily work, but for release prints as well, are better satisfied than ever before. They agree with distributors that the camera-to-screen service of THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES is a matter of economy. They can't afford to be without it.

Bigger than "Blood and Sand"

At the Strand, Omaha, "The Old Homestead" broke the "Blood and Sand" record. Read this wire:

"Business steadily increased during our ten day run until we had the best Saturday of the year. It drew better than 'Blood and Sand.' Enthusiastically received by press and public."

A. H. BLANK.

And here's another:—

"'The Old Homestead' established a new record for the week at the Empire, New Bedford, Mass. This is remarkable in that all the theatres opened with new shows on our fifth day and still we broke records."

NORMAN H. DIXON.

"The Old Homestead" is the one picture in all the world that every human being, old or young, rich or poor, highbrow or lowbrow, will cry over, and laugh over, and thrill over.

And here's a friendly tip to exhibitors—PLAY UP THAT CYCLONE. You can't say too much about it. It's positively the greatest spectacular effect ever achieved in motion pictures, and it brings down the house every time.

"TO HAVE AND TO HOLD"
 is one of the four biggest pictures of the season. There's going to be a lot of argument among fans as to which of the four is the best, and that means money to you.

It's a real story of real people, staged by the master of spectacle and thrills. Fitzmaurice thinks it is the best thing he has ever done—and so will you.

The notable cast includes Theodore Kosloff, Raymond Hatton, W. J. Ferguson and Walter Long.

Thomas Meighan IN "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow"

By Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon.

Directed by Alfred E. Green.

NO story precisely like this has ever been filmed. It is the most unusual plot ever conceived.

It is so varied in incident that it is as good as two stories rolled into one. On one hand you see the hero living a wild, primitive life of adventure in the South Seas, on the other you see him struggling for fame and power in European diplomatic circles.

There are three thrilling romances—one with a South Sea Island girl, another with a society beauty, and a third with a Russian princess.

Cast includes Leatrice Joy, leading woman of "Manslaughter," June Elvidge, Theodore Roberts, Eva Novak, and John Miltern.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower"

At the Criterion Theatre, New York

"When Knighthood Was In Flower" is now in its sixth week. During that time there has not been a single vacant seat at any performance and the turn-away from the box-office has averaged a thousand daily.

At the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago

"When Knighthood Was In Flower" opened October 11th with thousands unable to gain admittance. In order to accommodate the enormous crowds the doors are now being opened at 9 A. M. and performances started at 10.30. Yet thousands are being turned away.

At the Scala Theatre in London

This American-made picture drew such a tremendous crowd at the opening October 2nd that the police had to hold back the throngs and traffic was retarded for blocks. It has been playing to the capacity at the Scala since.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower"

Also opens for indefinite runs at Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles, October 16th; Columbia Theatre, Washington, October 23rd; Park Theatre, Boston, October 26th; Garden Theatre, Milwaukee, October 28; Royal Theatre, Kansas City, October 29th, with other leading cities opening as rapidly as possible.

"The most amazingly beautiful picture ever made."

BEAST

Two Reels

MAN vs. BEAST has been edited by Educational Pictures from material which took two years' time of an enormous expedition to secure. Every moment of these two years was filled with constant danger.

Here is a picture made by a great scientist, who gave his life to his task, and edited and prepared for the screen on its entertainment value alone. Not only is this picture of immense historical value, but it is cram full of actual thrills which could not be produced in any studio.

The dank, dark jungles of Africa, reeking with dangers at every step, were the setting. Nature's most ferocious animals were the actors. Louis Shuman, scientist, sportsman and intrepid explorer, was the director.

Your audience will be thrilled by daring fights at close hand with the jungle's fiercest creatures.

WILL ROGERS

The "HEADLESS HORSEMAN"

The most sophisticated theatre audiences in America pay as high as $10 a seat to see Will Rogers, Star of the Ziegfeld Follies and one of the biggest drawing cards on the American Stage.

In "The Headless Horseman" you have six reels of the inimitable Rogers at his best!

As Ichabod Crane, in the picturization of "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," Rogers gives the screen one of the most finished bits of fine comedy ever run through a projecting machine.

Forty-eight publishers have issued this book in one form or another, and it is available in fifty-three different editions. Hundreds of thousands of copies have been sold; it is justly considered "The best known short story in the English language."

Here you have a ready-made audience that includes every man, woman and child who has ever languished with Ichabod over the charms of Katrina, or felt the goose-flesh creep at the weird and ghostly night-riding of "The Headless Horseman."

Every Exhibitor Who Has Seen this Picture Is Strong for It!

YOU'LL rave too when you see this corking attraction. Every player a star. When exhibitors use adjectives you can bet a production has the goods. Don't we know! We couldn't drag it from Broadway. At the Capitol $48,000 rolled into the till in one great week. The Cameo Theatre packed them in for fourteen additional weeks and Moss' Broadway across the street followed with a smashing attendance. Right now the Stanley in Philadelphia is counting record money for a week's run.

Here is a truly great motion picture attraction that means crowded houses and big money to you this Fall. "Sherlock Holmes" is a million copy best seller. John Barrymore is a star whose name spells certain money at the box-office. "Sherlock Holmes" was photographed in England, Switzerland and America.

"Human Hearts" Big Hit

Is General Verdict of Exhibitors and Exchanges Regarding Universal Jewel Picture

EXHIBITORS everywhere declare "HUMAN HEARTS," Universal's big Jewel production starring House Peters, as one of the best pictures of its kind. They point with pleasure to the wonderful business it has brought to their box offices, as indicated in a few lines culled from their letters and telegrams reproduced below:

"Booked for one week, but so tremendous were the crowds and so great the demand for a continued showing, that we were compelled to hold it over for an indefinite run."

—Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee.

"Exceptionally big picture and will make money for any exhibitor!"

—Ansonia Theatre, Butte, Mont.

"Full houses for entire booking!"

—Rialto Theatre, Allentown, Pa.

"Went over big and piled up business for us. Received with enthusiasm."

—Palace Theatre, Athens, Ga.

"One of the best in a year. This is the kind that builds business!"

—Hub Theatre, Mill Valley, Cal.

"I have had more compliments, personally, on this attraction than any picture I have ever played, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it to any exhibitor."

—Mission Theatre, Los Angeles.

"Never saw any picture draw such tremendous crowds. They came from every nook and corner of the city and from surrounding towns. Record breaking attendance. Every one lavish in praise!"

—Bijou Theatre, Racine, Wis.

"Immense business, crowds swarmed about box-office from opening to closing. Hundreds turned away."

—Cameo Theatre, Pittsburgh.

"Drew great big business all week!"

—Bijou Theatre, Richmond, Va.

FOOLISH WIVES continues to prove the sensation of the age, duplicating in foreign countries its remarkable success in the United States. Universal Exchanges report record breaking bookings for repeat play dates on Von Stroheim's masterpiece.

THE STORM, the biggest picture of the new season, is acclaimed in thousands of letters that have poured in to Mr. Laemmle as the greatest box office attraction that any exhibitor could wish for.

THE KENTUCKY DERBY, produced with a special cast headed by Reginald Denny, star of all the LEATHER PUSHERS, was directed by King Baggot. Prints are now being rushed to the exchanges where exhibitors will be able to see this stupendous romantic melodrama before booking.

THE FLIRT, Booth Tarkington's masterpiece, produced with an all-star cast under the direction of Hobart Henley, is hailed by Universal City authorities and artists as the finest production of its type ever offered the exhibitor. Some go so far as to call it the best picture Universal ever made.

BITTER SWEET is now in its final stages of completion at Universal City. A remarkable cast is headed by Lon Chaney, who has for his leading lady, Virginia Valli. It is being directed by Lambert Hillyer.

MERRY GO ROUND, with its great cast and typical Stroheim settings is going ahead under Von Stroheim's baton.

Universal

Carl Laemmle

From World's Studio

THE NEW LEATHER PUSHERS, in six rounds, with the original cast headed by Reginald Denny and including Hayden Stevenson, are now completed. They were made under the direction of Harry Pollard, director of the original series of six. Prints are on their way to all "U" exchanges.

UP THE LADDER, William A. Brady's big Broadway stage success by Owen Davis, has been purchased for Virginia Valli, who will star in the role made famous by Doris Kenyon.

THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME will be produced by Universal with Lon Chaney and one of the greatest casts ever assembled for any big picture. All filmdom is agog and wondering who the lucky director will be in the final selection. A list containing the names of the finest directors in the industry is now being carefully scanned.

WHITE TIGER, starring PRISCILLA DEAN, is rapidly nearing completion, with Tod Browning directing. This is said to be along the lines of "Outside the Law," but bigger and more elaborate in every way.

DRIFTING, the sensational Broadway stage success from the pen of John Colton, produced by William A. Brady with Alice Brady in the lead, will shortly be put into production starring PRISCILLA DEAN.

"Under Two Flags" Acclaimed!

Critics Hail Big Priscilla Dean Spectacle; Universal Exchanges Report Big Bookings

WHEREVER PRISCILLA DEAN'S greatest picture, UNDER TWO FLAGS, has been shown, critics have hailed it as the finest work of her brilliant career. This stupendous Universal Jewel had its world premier simultaneously at the Mark Strand Theatre in New York City and the Randolph Theatre in Chicago. It was an instantaneous success and was greeted as such by the critics, a few of whose opinions are herewith reproduced:

"As fine a sample of compelling action and photography as the screen has yet revealed. A compelling characterization that is bound to meet with public approval!"

—Motion Picture News

"Filled with action and spectacular situations. Staged in realistic fashion. Thrilling in the extreme."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review

"Excellent screen entertainment and should prove a hit with the majority of audiences, especially those liking stirring, thrilling melodrama."

—Moving Picture World

"A marvelous, vivid motion picture drama with Miss Dean in a wonderful characterization."

—N. Y. Eve. Telegram

"Vividly pictured. If excitement is what you crave, it surely comes in this film."

—N. Y. Eve. Journal

"Full of action. Priscilla Dean is irrepressible, impetuous and is always dashing."

—N. Y. Evening Mail

"Colorful, well acted and is entitled to rank among the leaders of the screen."

—N. Y. Times

"By all means see Priscilla Dean in 'Under Two Flags.'"

—N. Y. Eve. World

"It is exceedingly well done. An exceptionally good picture."

—Chicago Herald and Examiner

"A brilliant spectacle from beginning to end."

—Chicago Evening Post

"A vivid bit of screen portraiture."

SHADOWS

Presented by B. P. Schulberg

A Tom Forman Production

Adapted by Eve Unsell and Hope Loring. Photography by Harry Perry

CAST

IN keeping with our announcement that "Every Preferred Picture will be portrayed by a cast of artists whose names are well known to the public," we call your special attention to the cast of "SHADOWS."

Lon Chaney, in a Chinese character, does the finest work of his career—and he reaches your theatre just when his name is one of the greatest box-office magnets.

Harrison Ford, one of the most popular leading men in pictures, having shared honors with Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through" and made a hit in "The Old Homestead", appears in a powerful role as a young minister.

Marguerite De La Motte, heroine of "The Three Musketeers" and "The Mark of Zorro," and a girl of wondrous beauty and talent, has the finest opportunity of her career as the young wife.

John Sainpolis, incomparable artist and celebrated for his work in "The Great Lover," "The Four Horsemen," etc., gives one of his best characterizations as Nate Snow.

Walter Long, who added to a notable record as the bandit chief in "Blood and Sand," is here a wolf of the sea.

Buddy Messenger, the famous boy actor, is in the best part he ever had as "Mista Bad Boy."

STORY

WE proclaim "Shadows" the greatest story ever told in motion pictures because it has heart interest without hokum, love interest without mush, romance without riot, thrills without number and a climax without any ragged edges. It builds up continually and never lags on its way to a surprising and startling finish. It was written by Wilbur Daniel Steele, held to be America's greatest living story writer, and was the prize story of the Edward J. O'Brien selection. It appeared originally as "Ching, Ching, Chinaman" in Pictorial Review, and the 2,000,000 readers of that publication will form the nucleus of a far greater audience for the picture.

TITLE

SHADOWS" was adopted as the title, because it has mystery, meaning and merit as a box-office aid. It has the advantage of being a one-word title and lends itself admirably to advertising and exploitation.

DIRECTION

TOM FORMAN, director of "Shadows," needs no introduction to exhibitors who played the Thomas Meighan features, "City of Silent Men," "The Easy Road" and "White and Unmarried." His abilities were proved there, but they were only promises of the greatness he has attained in directing "Shadows." Here he takes his place among the real geniuses of photoplay direction.

PHOTOGRAPHY

EXHIBITORS and critics who appreciated the exquisite photography of "Rich Men's Wives," will get a thrill when they see the artistic results obtained by Harry Perry in "Shadows." Preferred cameramen, electricians and technicians worked day and night, unceasingly, for 72 hours making some scenes, and their efforts were rewarded with results that add to their own fame and enrich the artistic side of pictures.

*"The Story and Cast of this Feature
Eclipses Any Other Picture of its Type
— Motion Picture News"*

A rare combination.

Enid Bennett and Fred Niblo directed by Victor Schertzinger in a story by R. Cecil Smith.

Supporting cast includes Donald MacDonald, Melbourne McDowell, Virginia Sothorn, Billy Elmer and J. P. Lockney.

The "bootlegger's daughter" (Enid Bennett) is shunned by all good folks because of her father's shady business. She never had a chance until a broad-minded clergyman with a sense of humor (Fred Niblo) sets her right. In time the despised bootlegger's daughter becomes the town's pride and joy.

It's a drama, replete with romance and comedy. Rely on Enid Bennett and Fred Niblo for that.

Victor Schertzinger's big idea in directing is action, atmosphere and interest.

In its review the Motion Picture News said:

"Recently pictures built along the lines of this one had a very successful run, mainly because they were well exploited. The same thing can be done with this one. The story and cast of this feature eclipses any other feature of its type."

Excellent acting, beautiful photography and rich sets are outstanding features of this Travers Vale Production, a tale of stage life, adapted from a novel by Clara Morris.

"A Pasteboard Crown" is the story of a once wealthy girl who seeks a stage career after her family has been reduced to poverty.

The title of the production it is apparent, is one that arouses interest and readily lends itself to exploitation. The picture combines the rich embellishments of a society drama combined with the natural interest that attaches to a story of stage life.

AFTERNOON

A superabundance of entertainment is to be had this week at the Lyric.

"Up in the Air About Mary" is a breezy little comedy with a farmhouse background, the "old swimmin' hole" and a country youth, portrayed by Joe Moore, who is by no means the beauty of the Moore family, but shares the engaging mannerisms of his brothers, Tom and Owen.

Louise Lorraine, a pretty girl, who is a blended likeness of Norma Talmadge and Mary Thurman, is the heroine, and a group of bathing beauties add to the scenic charms of the film.

Katherine MacDonald's Best Box Office Picture

"WHITE SHOULDERS" unquestionably eclipses anything Miss MacDonald has done up to date. It is stronger in dramatic force; there is a more fascinating story; her character delineation is more vital and living; and it is a more finished and artistic production.

Ten million persons have thrilled to this story by George Kibbe Turner in the Saturday Evening Post.

The picture has audience appeal through its rare beauty and strong entertainment value.

It is a box office asset because of its wide advance advertising in the most popular story magazine circulated.

Presented by B. P. Schulberg; directed by Tom Forman; adapted by Lois Zellner, and produced by Preferred Pictures, Inc.

Vitagraph Announces Twelve Great Specials

A Notable Selection From the World's Best Available Screen Material

VITAGRAPH announces the acquisition of rights to novels and plays from twelve of the world's famous authors and playwrights—each story a masterpiece from the pen of a master. This series of special productions will be one of the greatest achievements in the history of motion pictures.

EACH story has been selected with the greatest care by men who know what the public wants. Although no two are alike in theme and plot structure, each embodies the necessary ingredients of strong human interest and vital, universal appeal that enter into the making of big, powerful, box office attractions.

STUDY the list carefully. Each one an assured success. Vitagraph's faith is pledged that none will be disappointed in the quality of the finished work.

VITAGRAPH feels that the public and the exhibitor will confidently look forward to the brilliant production of this illustrious series with something of the pleasure we take in announcing it.

S P E C I A L S

THE NINETY AND NINE

Hunted and haunted, he touches the lowest depths. The exalted faith of a girl lifts him from the mire. Through a blazing forest he drives, sacrificing all, to prove his redemption.

MASTERS OF MEN

An epic of the sea. On its merciless waters, a boy's character is moulded. The mountains from which he once fled, become mole-hills. He returns to play a man's part.

THE MAN NEXT DOOR

Scorning convention, she brings to the narrow city a breath of the wide spaces. But there is a charmed circle she cannot hope to enter—until she meets "The Man Next Door."

A READY MADE HUSBAND

She steals Tom's good looks, Dick's happy disposition, Harry's taste and breeding—and more,—and makes herself a perfect mate. Then what,—and what of the "remnant" youths?

HIDDEN HOUSE

A story of weird happenings and ghostly sensations. In the shell of this beautiful girl are imprisoned two natures—one fostered by the maniacs who reared her—the other crying for love—and release.

THE KIDNAPPED MILLIONAIRES

When several of the country's most powerful financiers are strangely missing, there is havoc in the world's markets. An heiress and an editor, after sensational adventures find them—and love.

MY MAN

Deserted by her husband, and with a baby to care for, she finds that society demands awful retribution for a crime. Through, the light of faith burns brightly, until vindication comes.

THE MAN FROM BRODNEY'S

An island rich with rubies and sapphires. Into the struggle comes the man from Brodney's. He is of fighting stock—luckily for him, and the Princess.

A SHOP GIRL

She is a shop girl—a model; while he is a millionaire. Love tries to bridge the gulf between them, while caste and convention seek to widen it. A world-old battle.

STEELE OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

A tensive drama of God's country, where the weak fall by the wayside—and only the strong survive. A tale of throbbing, vital impulses, told by one who has been there.

THE TENDERFOOT

A thriller of the West. "Tenderfoot" describes him—but he learns fast. The worm finally turns and, in turning, bumps into a lot of adventure and romance.

WHO'S WHO

Officially he was dead. Nor can he return to life without extreme peril to himself. Then comes news of the "dead man's" inheritance—and the girl, and he is in a quandry.

"SKIN DEEP" //

The story of a "gangster" whose entire character was changed through the "remaking" of his face by the mystery of modern plastic surgery. A powerful, fast moving melodrama with the Ince Punch—unique—different. It is now cleaning up for exhibitors at every showing. BOOK NOW!

By Marc Edmund Jones

Directed by Lambert Hillyer

The Pittsburgh Leader

"The influence of woman over man is strikingly brought out in Thomas H. Ince's latest picture, 'Skin Deep,' in which Milton Sills, Florence Vidor, Marcia Mannon and Frank Campeau are the featured players, and which is heading the program at the Grand theatre this week. The story is decidedly unusual and holds the spectator spellbound at the strange recital of a man's redemption as one woman loses her hold upon him and another comes into the ascendancy in his thoughts. Mr. Ince was assisted by Lambert Hillyer in directing the picture.

"Besides those already mentioned, the cast includes Charles Clary, Winter Hall, Gertrude Astor, Joe Singleton, Muriel Francis Dana and B. H. DeLay."

Motion Picture News

The Old Man of the Sea

FREQUENTLY we start to write an editorial on distribution—and quit off-hand.

It generally begins like this: "Distribution, this year, will be the big factor that will begin the reordering of this industry—"

And we quit because the revolution may not happen at all this year, and anyway we question whether the reader, intent as he is on the daily rush of his particular job, will get just what we are driving at, or at least see the dust cloud on the horizon as big as we see it.

But it seems to us, from where we sit, that pretty nearly every industrial problem of the day and the future security and health of the industry—all considerations, present and future, are revolving today, and critically so, about this selfsame matter of distribution.

* * *

Distribution is the basic factor in this industry.

* * *

Take any problem we have today; any obvious problem, and when you have followed it down to its source, you'll find it in the grip of this old man-of-the-sea—distribution.

* * *

There's the all-important box office cry for pictures—better ones. Better means—for one thing—and primarily, less sameness. It means the constant originality of theme and novelty of treatment that comes, with certainty only, from widespread creative effort. And this, in turn means constant independent production.

But the independent producer is wholly dependent upon adequate distribution.

Distribution is at the bottom of this box office problem. It is adequate distribution and that alone that will encourage the independent producer to do and keep doing.

There has been a wealth of discussion over a uniform contract.

This booking contract is the vital point of contact right along between distributor and exhibitor. If it could be solved successfully—with each party satisfied; if play dates could be made pay dates for one thing, then a lot of big wrinkles would be ironed away over night.

But contract evils arise, to a large extent, from uneconomic distribution, from policies that are wrong because they can't help be wrong. In other words, the trouble is deeper down—with distribution.

How can the surface be smoothed down when the wrinkles keep coming from below?

The industry, big and basic as it is today, needs the credit facilities that similarly large industries need and have.

This is an important matter. Not long ago a leader of the industry voiced it when he said: "Above all else this business today needs capital."

But capital won't enter from the production end to any regular extent until distribution is reordered and solidified; and credit on the exhibitor end can only be introduced by the distributor.

The business is constantly clogged with inferior product. Every sensible man knows that you can't cram poor stuff down the throat of the American public. Why then maintain a distribution policy that unloads this stuff upon the exhibitor that makes him take the poor with the good?

Is it reasonable?

As we conclude this slight treatment of so weighty a subject we revert to our premise: will any good come of it?

We are not so sure but we do know this: some day this distribution thing is going to be reordered. It may come soon; it may come late. But when it does come the whole industry will be reordered along with it.

DID you ever stop to think that the screen is able to make history quite aside from some outstanding photoplay? Think of the events in the March of Time which may be recorded by the camera and which, presented years afterward, enable us to get a true insight into historical facts—an insight which because of its visual nature carries more value than the words of the printed page or the still photographs accompanying them.

The International News Reel releasing through Universal takes us back to the San Francisco earthquake and fire which occurred April 16, 1906. The number is called "The Mirror," and is aptly named. The mirror reflects an amazing record of this terrible disaster which was visited upon the city by the Golden Gate. It behooves every exhibitor to take advantage of these historical records. Sixteen years have elapsed since 'Frisco was a mass of ruins. And by showing the progress of the fire, the stress of homeless natives, the debris-piled streets, the dynamiting of buildings in the path of the flames—then contrasting them with up-to-date shots of the magnificent city which rose from the ruins—the spectator can marvel at the ingenuity of the American race—the pluck and spirit of a people who never admit defeat.

An interesting phase of this feature is the almost total absence of motor cars from the streets. And the reel has its humorous side in the strange styles of clothing worn by both men and women. The screen is making colorful history every day. The news reel cameraman is always on the job. His illustrations are much more genuine than the written account of the events.

A NEW bank has been established in Hollywood to help carry on the identity of the thriving studio city and to encourage the film people to bank at home instead of depositing their greenbacks in Los Angeles and other municipalities. The bank is known as the Federal Trust and Savings Bank and its slogan is Hollywood Bank for Hollywood Folks. Among the officers and directors are the names of Cecil de Mille and Thompson Buchanan. This is a free advertisement.

THERE are four productions on Broadway this week which are adaptations of four famous plays—two of the plays have been adapted in turn from equally famous books. Gentlemen, we offer: "A Tailor Made Man," at the Strand, "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the Capitol, "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Criterion, and "Clarence" at the Rivoli.

THE New York Herald speaks right out editorially with an article entitled "Curbing the Screen Director." A few of the impressions gleaned from this indictment of the man with the megaphone who has inspired motion picture performers to air their troubles with the Actors' Equity Association are: "There must be something altogether wrong in that strange realm known as the world of the cinema when the mimes of the camera have the courage to complain of the hours they spend cooling their heels outside the door of the director's office."

"They protest against the demeanor of the director's underlings."

"They denounce the icy arrogance of the director's telephone operators."

"They resent the playful satire of the director's office boys, who, taking their cue from the director, so embarrass the oppressed players that the heads of various important companies are said already to have made a protest."

"It was the director who arbitrarily selected this actor or that as the best representative of a needed type, whatever author, manager or financial backer might say to the contrary."

"They have become the czars of the industry."

"But their subjects have now dared to raise their voices in rebellion."

"Authors might also have rebelled, since most of them agree that the best that was done for their work was done in spite of the director, and not through his efforts."

"Certainly there is in this fact evidence of just as much of a revolution in the camp of the moving picture makers as the public had begun to suspect."

And now comes a dramatization of Harry Leon Wilson's story, "Merton of the Movies." It has been said that the play by George S. Kaufmann and Marc Connelly will make more than one director—more than one star of limited talent wince in their seats as they catch a true value of themselves. The bags which carry the fan mail are liable to become quite empty.

The Shout—"The King is dead, long live the King," has been in vogue for centuries. The screen idol of today may be a forgotten Nobody tomorrow. Meanwhile he is airing his temperamental grievance. But he mustn't talk too loudly or too boldly, else the public might remark that the discussion is "Much ado about nothing."

THE industry is taking a forward place in the national sport of golf. At Adolph Zukor's private course last week nine ties at the ninth hole were required to break a tie between W. H. English and Oscar Morgan, while Arthur Stebbins, not a mean player, also figured in the tie for nine holes. And as we write this along comes an application for the Fall Golf Tournament from an exhibitor who admits that the par on his home course is 71 and that he goes around in 80. Fore!

PERHAPS some of you have wondered what has become of Enid Markey who decorated Triangle films in the days of Fairbanks, Hart and Keenan. She is on the New York stage in a play entitled "The Exciters," where she blossoms forth as quite a comedienne.

THE Associated Motion Picture Advertisers have taken up the practice of having someone of importance address them at their weekly luncheons. It was a goodly throng last Thursday which gathered to listen to Will Rogers, than whom there is no better humorous speaker. This star of the stage and screen has his own individual style—a style, both quaint and rich in delivery. And he always has something to say. And says it in a manner which starts his audience shaking its sides with laughter.

Will Rogers allowed as "it's quite a treat for an actor to get anything from a press agent, but before I leave, I expect to be handed the check." This was a good opener and he had the boys with him to the tune of much laughter and hand-clapping.

Standing behind a table, chewing gum violently and emphasizing his remarks with a knife, he started off on his keen thrusts at current topics, people in the lime-light and what not. "You know, fellows, I was interested in that there 'Blood and Sand' picture. I don't know whether the bull was tied by the hind legs or the tail, but this I do know, it was the best half-ended bull fight I ever saw." He skipped on and gave Doug a good kidding. "There was Doug, standing on a building across the way, trying to hit the Ritz. Of course if I had been there, they would have called it bow and arrow shootin' but it was called archery in this case on account of Doug's salary. He fired at the Ritz and hit a man on Second Avenue. My advice to him would be to stand on the roof of Gimbel's and try to hit the Pennsylvania station." Speaking of the Christian, he said, "it isn't the first time he's been done in pictures—they are still doing him."

Will Rogers is a man so blessed with a keen sense of humor that he can find a laugh in anything. He voiced his opinion of a much publicized murder over in Jersey, paid a comic tribute to the Turks, waxed serious now and then in defending Hollywood, and ended with a few laughable wheezes culled from his act in "The Follies." As the home town Gazette would have it—"a good time was enjoyed by all."

DOUG and Mary have returned to New York from Chicago, where they witnessed the world's premier of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." And next Monday night they will be among those present at the metropolitan showing of the picture. They will return to their ranch at Crescent Junction about the first of November to resume fall plowing and other activities. Meanwhile a trip is planned to the West Indies and Mexico. Doug and Mary visited Brooklyn the other night to see "Merton of the Movies," a dramatization of Harry Leon Wilson's story.

RAYMOND HATTON, who hangs up his hat in a Hollywood bungalow, is in New York for the first time in his life. This character actor of the silver sheet has never before been east of Denver. Mr. Hatton is in New York to play a part in a screen version of Hergesheimer's novel, "Java Head," which is being filmed at Famous Players' Long Island studio.

MARGARET TALMADGE, the mother of Norma, Constance and Natalie Talmadge, has written an intimate story of her talented daughters, the title of which is "The Talmadge Sisters," with an introduction by Ellis Parker Butler. The book is illustrated with many hitherto unpublished photographs. Few persons are better fit to advise young aspirants for the silent drama than Mrs. Talmadge, who has been the constant companion of her famous daughters. The authoress answers such questions as How can you get into Motion Pictures? What are the requirements for Motion Picture acting? How are various roles interpreted? Other chapters feature Natalie's romance with Buster Keaton, A Star in the Making, and Should the Professional Woman Marry? In a foreword to her book Mrs. Talmadge writes: "Perhaps it would have been more appropriate if someone other than I, the mother, had undertaken to write a book of this kind, yet I do not believe that it is possible for anyone, no matter how closely associated with my daughters, to present the subject with the deep knowledge and understanding that I have gained in the many years of careful observation of every step of their mental, physical and artistic development with an interest so deep and intense that surely only a mother can feel. . . . If in addition, this volume proves helpful to other mothers in assisting them to mould the futures of their children, whether in the great Motion Picture World or in any other field of endeavor, it will have served its purpose fully and satisfactorily."

DOUG was down at the White Star pier the other day waiting for Edward Knoblock to step off the gangplank of the Berangaria. The playwright and photoplay author

Unique silhouette of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, taken on the shore of Lake Louise during their trip through the Canadian Rockies, en route to New York for the opening of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" brought back the historical data for the forthcoming Fairbanks production of "Monsieur Beauchaire." By the way, Doug is out to let the world know that he wants a beautiful leading woman to appear in the picture. The character requires a tremendous charm, must be statuesque and dignified and capable of playing a role of quiet serenity. He is asking for suggestions. Have you any to offer?

FRANCE is preparing to celebrate with much pomp the centenary of Pasteur's birth. For this purpose an Exposition of Hygiene and the work of Pasteur is being organized at Strasbourg.

With the support of the public authorities of Paris and Strasbourg and various other municipalities and universities, Messrs. Jean Benoit-Levy & Tellier have begun the production of an official motion picture based on the life and the work of the great scientist who was the founder of bacteriology.

This film, which, directed by Jean Epstein from a scenario by M. Epardaud, is being made in close collaboration with the Pasteur family and Doctor Roux, director of the Pasteur Institute at Paris, will not confine itself to a view of the high spots and simple anecdotes of the life of the famous scientist, but will also reveal in a clear and comprehensible manner the main points of his scientific work.

The highly beneficent experiments of Pasteur are being reconstructed in the very locations where they were originally carried on. A great number of the scenes have been taken in the laboratories of the Pasteur Institute at Paris in close collaboration with Doctor Roux. The greatest care has been taken so that this notable film will be absolutely correct in every way and will be worthy of the work of the most famous figure of the great scientific geniuses of the nineteenth century.

AN invitation audience crowded the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore on Wednesday evening, October 18th, 1922, to witness the premier showing of "Secrets of Paris" and "Sure Fire Flint." Charles C. Burr and Whitman Bennett engaged the ballroom especially for the occasion and the gathering was made up largely of exhibitors and the press. Both features were enthusiastically received. After the showing an informal dance was held.

"Secrets of Paris," was adapted by Dorothy Farnum from Eugene Sue's novel "The Mysteries of Paris," and featured Lew Cody, Gladys Hulette, Montague Love, Dolores Casinelli, J. Barney Sherry, William Collier, Jr., Rose Coghlan and Effie Shannon. Charles C. Burr and Whitman Bennett are the producers. Kenneth Webb directed the production.

"Sure Fire Flint," a comedy-drama starring Johnny Hines with Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson, J. Barney Sherry, Effie Shannon and Charles Gerrard, was produced and presented by Charles C. Burr from a story by Gerald C. Duffy. Ralph Spence wrote the titles. Dell Henderson was responsible for the direction.

It was a gala event and men prominent in all ends of the industry were in attendance. Members of both casts were seen about the ballroom and were complimented for their work. Every seat in the place was filled and standing room was at a premium. If the reception accorded the pictures can be taken as a criterion they are due for remarkable success.

Penna. Exhibitor Against Percentage Dates

A. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pa., Sets Forth His Objections to Plan

Editor's Note—William A. Johnson's editorial on percentage appearing in the issue of October 14th, has brought forth a protest from Al. C. Werner, manager of the Royal theatre, Reading, Pa.

Mr. Werner is against, according to his letter, any and all forms of percentage, and relates his reasons for his stand.

Without attempting to argue that Mr. Werner or any other exhibitor is wrong when he comes out against ALL percentage plans, we do desire to call attention to one fact.

Playing pictures on percentage, as a policy, does not necessarily mean playing the kind of percentage that has been offered by the producers so far or obligate the exhibitor to accept the split wanted by the salesman when he proposes percentage playing dates.

In the latter instance this is particularly true. Mr. Werner's friend, looking at it from a desk in New York, made a bad deal when he consented playing on a 70-30 split.

However, we present Mr. Werner's letter gladly, as we will be pleased to do with any further arguments on this subject. Percentage is something that looms large in the exhibitors' horizon. The more the subject is discussed, the better it will be for all concerned. An exchange of ideas will be beneficial. MOTION PICTURE NEWS offers its columns to both exhibitors and producers in this important subject.

WHAT does it really mean to play percentage and how is it generally carried out? The exchange supplies the show, the exhibitor all the rest.

The gross receipts as a rule are divided something like this: The exchange, 70 per cent, the exhibitor, 30 per cent.

Let's see how that works out!

A friend of mine with a 550 seat house, averaging about $400 per week, played a well-known production percentage—70-30.

The five weekdays he averaged $50 per day, Saturday, $150. His expenses for rent, help, current, etc., are $130 per week. He ran the percentage show on a week day, showing continuously from 1 to 11 p. m., thus adding $14 to his expenses for the day. He grossed $180. The exchange got $126 and the exhibitor $54.

The result, as you see, was an increase of $4.00 in his receipts but also an increase in his expenses for the day of $14. Ten dollars to the bad, or—let's hope—ten dollars richer in experience. And that's only a fair example of percentage playing. I know of a number of cases much more aggravated than this one.

Why does an exhibitor play percentage anyhow? Because the exchange demands more for the picture than he can afford to pay.

Why should any exhibitor be compelled to play percentage if he wants to play certain shows?

Because the exhibitors do not stick together. They consider one another business rivals and

Italian Faction Would Stop U. S. Pictures

ITALIAN factions are said to be waging a controversy over the importation of American films. The Fascisti, of which all cinema workers are members, is threatening to take violent measures to exclude the American product. Resolutions are said to have been adopted by the organization calling upon the administration to stop the showing of American films and to impose a high tariff on all foreign films.

The action was taken because the Fascisti members have been out of work for some months, the reason being that Italian firms cannot produce films to compete with the American product.

The movement is being strongly opposed both by exhibitors and the picture-going public, all of whom demand American pictures. Italian producers are attempting to imitate American pictures, so great is the demand for the latter, but such attempts have not met with success.

their petty jealousies keep them busy plotting against one another instead of presenting a solid front against the greedy producer.

Why shouldn't a grocer, a butcher, a shoe or hardware dealer be compelled to sell on percentage? Shouldn't all honest business be based on the principle of live and let live? Why shouldn't a motion picture producer be satisfied with a fair profit instead of trying to hog it all? Why shouldn't he run his business along the same lines of economy practiced in other industries instead of with an extravagance both reckless and uncalled for?

A selling argument heard daily is the cost of the picture. What did, for instance, "Over the Hill" cost Fox and what did it net him? I could ask the same question about a number of other pictures and the answer would be almost similar.

The truth is that when a producer happens to make a 100 per cent box office attraction he wants all—or more—that the exhibitor can make. On his ordinary output the exhibitor may be lucky to make ends meet. And then when something comes along that he could make a dollar on, then it's your house on 70-30.

I bought sixty pictures from one exchange. On five of these I did a good business, fifteen were fair pullers, on ten I broke even, on thirty I actually lost money.

That's about the proportion in any block of shows.

The time has come when either lower film rentals must be granted or else possibly 50 per cent of the neighborhood houses will be compelled to close for good.

If you think percentage is the cure, why not apply it to all shows, good or bad?

Perhaps the producer might be set thinking if he saw the actual receipts on 50 per cent of his output.

It should also induce him to "can" some of the "lemons" he is now palming off as honest-to-goodness shows. But—you won't catch Mr. Producer playing percentage excepting where the profit is assured. He knows better than that. When it's a toss-up whether a picture is a winner or loser, then the exhibitor is welcome to the gamble. Mr. Producer only plays one way—his way.

My plea is for the under-dog exhibitor. Why not give him a chance to live?

Grand Opera Season Opens at Eastman Theatre

The grand opera season at the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y., opened Monday with brilliancy, temporarily halting the "picture palace" career of that University-owned and University-operated model theatre and transforming it into a Grand Opera House.

Fortune Gallo's San Carlo Opera Company came intact from a successful engagement of a month at the Century theatre in New York to inaugurate Rochester's musical season, which will henceforth monopolize the huge and beautiful Eastman theatre every Wednesday night throughout the winter. Nineteen star attractions have already been booked.

A splendid performance of "Aida" was given to an audience that taxed the capacity of the new theatre and resulted in many being turned away. It was a thoroughly representative audience, drawn from throughout western New York and from points as far east as Syracuse.

The San Carlo Opera Company will proceed from Rochester to Montreal following the performance on Saturday night, and on Sunday the Eastman theatre will revert to a motion picture policy with incidental music furnished by the splendid newly organized symphony orchestra, and soloists. The picture will be presented until Wednesday, when the first mid-week interruption in the interest of concerts will take place. After the Wednesday concert, a new picture program will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. This schedule will be followed thereafter, giving two three-day motion picture programs and one concert each week.

"Nanook of the North," with a special musical setting, is the picture selected to follow the opera season.

Sumatra Prefers American Made Films

C. O. Spanner, United States Consul at Medan, Sumatra, states that seventy-five per cent. of the film imported to the island is American-made. This he says is not only because of the spectacular effects that are usually to be found in American pictures but also on account of the care taken in the making of each scene, no matter how short or unimportant it may be.

Consul Spanner says that the European (white) population prefer high class society features, plus a dash of clean peppery comedy. Children's plays are popular, while "Westerns" are no longer fascinating to Europeans and high caste Chinese residents. For the masses of Chinese and natives, comprising the bulk of the theatre-goers all types of comics, westerns, and wild-beast films and similar short specials are in high favor.

Sydney Cohen Busy with Western Meetings

M.P.T.O.A. President Addresses Delegates at Chicago and Kansas Meetings

PRESIDENT SYDNEY COHEN of the M. P. T. O. A. is letting no grass grow under his feet in his tour of the west. An extensive program has kept him busy jumping from one place to another, addressing meetings and in conference with officials looking to improvements in existing conditions.

President Cohen was the guest of honor at luncheon given by the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners when he passed through Chicago last week.

The meeting was the first since the coalition of all exhibitor organizations in the state, and although hastily planned when it was found it could stop off in Chicago for a day, was a great success.

President L. M. Rubens, whose six months' tour abroad, followed by a prolonged illness after his return had kept him from active participation in the association's affairs, was in the chair and many members from nearby points were present.

In addition to Mr. Cohen, President W. A. True, of the Connecticut exhibitors; A. J. Moeller, general manager of the national body, and W. J. O'Toole, chairman of the National Public Service Committee, were speakers.

President Cohen in the course of an interesting and constructive address, praised the various accomplishments of the organization during the past year, but said that the real question for theatre men today was that of film prices. He stated that on his trip he had found an improvement in Michigan major cities and in many other parts of the country, but declared that in most communities the high film rentals are making profits impossible. According to Mr. Cohen, independent producers and distributors are complaining of distribution and returns on their products and must have better conditions or they may quit the industry.

Mr. Cohen congratulated city and state members of the Illinois organization on the unity now prevailing in Chicago.

President Cohen and his party left immediately after the meeting for Milwaukee, where he addressed the Wisconsin exhibitors on the 13th. He promised to attend the Illinois state convention, which will be held some time during December.

Those attending the Chicago meeting included: W. D. Burford, A. J. Moeller, L. M. Rubens, J. B. Dibelka, G. D. Hopkinson, J. J. Rubens, Wm. O. De Souchet, Julius Lamm, L. H. Frank, Joe Hopp, Louis Murphy, Harry Goldson, L. Siegel, S. Abrahams, M. Smalley, S. H. Selig, L. H. Mason, J. M. Schreck, Edwin S. Clifford, A. Powell, Peggy Kemp, Glen Reynolds, W. J. Sweeney, Ben. L. Berve, F. E. Allabin, John Silha, J. C. Miller, A. Sapperstein and M. Siegel.

President Cohen had an important conference with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis at Mooseheart, Ill., on matters affecting the cooperation of all theatre owners with this federal department in the work of aiding the advancement of progressive public programs.

Secretary Davis was accompanied to Mooseheart by Assistant Secretary Henning and General Manager A. J. Moeller, Chairman M. J. O'Toole of the National Public Service Department, National Director W. D. Burford, and State Executive Board Member

Rogers Defends Picture People at Luncheon

WILL ROGERS was a guest of the A.M.P.A. at its weekly luncheon at the Cafe Boulevard, New York, on Friday, Oct. 13. Vice President Victor M. Shapiro presided in the absence of John Flinn. Mr. Rogers was introduced by Harry Reichenbach. The guest of honor defended motion picture people. He said:

"When I first went to Hollywood I liked the looks of the place—liked the people there so much that I bought a house and lot for my wife and children. And I want to tell you that my family is going to live there, because I believe it is as clean and fine a community as can be found anywhere.

"There are some mighty fine people in Hollywood. I never had a better time with better or more moral folks. You've got to live among them to know them. In the colony you will find a lot of old-time actors who have gone into pictures. They have their church in Hollywood, and in the mornings you will see 700 or 800 people flocking to it. Of that number I expect 400 belong to the motion picture profession."

J. J. Rubens of Aurora were with Mr. Cohen. The conference was held in the Administration building at Mooseheart.

Special reference was made to the use of motion pictures in diversifying immigration. Secretary Davis is doing very commendable work in this relation, having studied every phase of this question until he has become exceptionally expert in the matter. He has set in motion the energies of his department toward making the location of the immigrant here fit into the economic needs of the country and the special welfare of the newcomer.

Secretary Davis hopes to so direct the immigration stream that further congestion of crowded centers will be avoided and agricultural and industrial needs in other places cared for. In this way the more general development of the nation will be accomplished, production increased, the dangers to morals, health and other civic phases lessened in crowded centers and a more constructive and progressive public policy put into force all around.

The cooperation of the farm organizations, city officials and civic bodies will be needed to make these plans effective, and Secretary Davis expects through this theatre screen service to carry this message to millions of Americans.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will also cooperate in this work to enable the agriculturally inclined immigrants to find profitable places as farm workers or, where desired, provide them with farms as proprietors.

The theatre owners of Milwaukee and adjacent sections in Wisconsin held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting at the Hotel Maryland last Friday. F. J. McWilliams, State President, and leading theatre owner at Madison, Wis., presided and a number of very instructive addresses featured the meeting.

Cohen spoke on the "Accomplishments of the National Organization," showing where the same exceeded all expectations and constituted real protection and business insurance for the theatre owners.

Motion picture theatre owners, public officials and leaders in civic bodies in Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kans., tendered a reception to President Cohen at the banquet hall in the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Monday night.

Cohen was accompanied on his visit to the Kansas City and Missouri exhibitors by A. J. Moeller and M. J. O'Toole. Lawrence M. Goldman of Kansas City, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, presided at the speaking exercises which followed the dinner.

One of the principal speakers was Mayor Frank Cromwell of Kansas City, Mo. He was elected on a progressive platform and is one of the most aggressive city executives in the middle west. He praised the motion picture theatre as a community center and said that when he was running for office all of the newspapers in Kansas City opposed him, and that he brought his messages on reform city government to the people through the screens in the theatre, and won out by a good sized majority. He told the exhibitors he believed they were real community leaders and should assert this prerogative in helping to advance the interests of their respective communities. He welcomed the cooperation of the theatre owners in everything that would advance the welfare of Kansas City and his people, and said they were giving wonderful service in this connection.

Mayor Burton of Kansas City, Kans., declared that he considered the motion picture theatre screen one of the greatest mediums of expression known, and said that it was destined to do more to advance the interests of nation, state and community than any other publicity feature now in the service of the people. He spoke in an intimate way of his connection and association with the theatre owners, and said the people of his city believed in an elevated and dignified form of amusement such as they were receiving in the motion picture theatres.

Both mayors spoke against censorship of the screen. Mrs. Ess, former president of the Women's Federated Clubs of Missouri and a leader in women's activities in the state, made an excellent speech in which she congratulated Mr. Cohen and other theatre owners on the advances made, and believed the theatre owners acting with the public were the best and most effective censors.

Mr. Cohen made a very interesting address in which he told of the activities of the motion picture theatre owners of America and the different state bodies. He said the theatre owners stood for clean, wholesome pictures with edifying and instructive messages to the public.

Mr. O'Toole spoke on public service work in the theatre, and Mr. Moeller on Movie Chats, the screen organ of the national body. He also told of the great advances made by the organization in its music department.

Propaganda Pictures to Bring Russian Boom

Soviet Travelling Kino Show Revival Will Develop Picture Demand, Says Authority

By Huntley Carter

HARDLY a year ago the Soviet Government swung round to the popular demand for concessions. One result was the reestablishment of Free Trade. Private initiative, instead of being hindered, was encouraged. Permission was given to rent and open shops and even factories which in 1917 the Revolution had handed over to the workers as their absolute property. Private ownership of theatres and cinemas was revived. In a word, the Soviet policy toward the Russian people became over-lenient.

So far as the cinemas were concerned, this was a great change and, on the whole, one for the better. In 1920 things had become so bad that there were no music-halls or private cinemas left, and all private enterprise in theatricals stopped before the year was out. The motion picture industry had passed entirely into the hands of the Soviet Government. Like the playhouse, the picture palace became a part of the machinery of the Department of Education, by whom it was converted into an educational-agitational instrument. Pictures were made and chosen to instruct the public into the mysteries of the Communist life and how it should be lived.

With the same aim specially equipped Kino-grains and Kino-motors were sent forth in battalions, so to speak, to cure the incurable illiteracy of the peasants. The Kino, like the great placards which literally covered Soviet Russia from end to end, was widely used for propaganda purposes. Its agitation groups traveled all Russia and reached the depths of Siberia. They might have gone farther, and fared worse, but Soviet funds gave out. Today this work is held up by the lack of resources, but the Soviet Government, so I was told at official headquarters in Moscow, proposes to return to it with the revival of industry in general.

As far as my inferences of the Russian villages go, the effect this use of the travelling Kino has had is not to remove illiteracy but to set up a demand for the silver screen where it did not exist before. It is just possible that when Russia gets going again every village in rural Russia will be asking for a cinematograph of its own and every one of the 130,000,000 odd peasants will be rushing around to look at the pictures. Which means there is going to be a motion picture boom in Russia.

For the moment the conditions in the cities—the great cities, Moscow, Petrograd and so on—do not fill the hearts of the private exhibitor and his audience with joy. Though the picture palaces have almost wholly returned to private management they have done so in such a terrible state and under certain crushing restrictions imposed by a passing Government control and strangulation rents and taxation, that the people in possession look and talk as though they would much rather commit suicide than cater to the new public demand for non-propaganda pictures.

In face of the fearful state of all the temples of the motion picture in Moscow and Petrograd, it is not too much to say that they want pulling down and rebuilding. They are worn out, dilapidated, filthy and lousy. Even the former palaces de luxe, such as "The Art Electric Theatre," "The Mirror," etc., look like penny gaffs that have wandered out of

Picture Conditions in Russia Discussed

THIS is the first of a series of three stories written by Huntley Carter for MOTION PICTURE NEWS. They give an intimate insight into motion picture conditions in Russia. Mr. Carter is in a position to write authoritatively on the subject as he has been well within Russia twice in the past two years. He has just returned from his second visit. The two remaining stories will run in next week's issue and that of the week following.

back shuns after being kicked and cuffed and spat upon by rowdies. The auditoriums are a deadly mixture of semi-darkness, crazy emergency furniture, broken fittings and fixtures, frouzy draperies where such exist, broken and patched walls and ceilings, the woodwork cries out for paint and the upholstery for disinfectants. There are bare, dirty floors or floors carpeted with rags that trip you up at every step. If the "fittings" were offered to a rag-shop dealer I don't think he would give a dollar for the lot. The cloak rooms are unused and there are no attendants, programs or refreshments. There is no ventilation and the air is foul and diseaseful. It is a wonder that there are any patrons for such dens. In my view no wise or careful person would venture into one of them twice. I was warned by a Russian cinema critic to keep away, which I failed to do. It was my business just then to sail right in—danger or no danger.

Of course the renters of these undesirable palaces have no money for repairs. What is left of their takings after deducting rent, taxes and working expenses would not make a sparrow rich. It is true that the prices of admission run into millions of roubles, ranging from four million roubles for a box to eight hundred thousand roubles for the cheapest seat. And there are five and six houses of an hour each a night and only one film exhibitor. But the rent and taxes run into millions of roubles a year and they are always being raised by the landlord, alias the Soviet Government. "This Kino business is all a gamble," said one enterprising but sad Kino proprietor. "If the rent and taxes are not raised for a time I can make a little profit on the increased prices. For prices go up automatically with other increases. In which case the gamble is all in my favor. But if there are several sudden jumps then I feel like this." He made a gesture of being strangled.

I painted the deplorable condition of the films. "We have no money for new films," he remarked apologetically. "We want them and I think the Government, who still keeps an eye on the movies to see that we do not introduce reactionary pictures, is willing to import. But think what it means to buy a Charlie Chaplin film with the rouble at 2,000,000 to the dollar. Why, it would take a man half a lifetime to count the cost. So for the present we are compelled to use old pre-war American and Russian stuff with sufficient of the proletarian spirit to prevent unpleasant Government interference.

"But though we give the public films with a proletarian purpose, some of them, especially the old foreign ones faked to appeal proletarian, it is none the less the fact that the working-class public, which is the only public left in Russia, is getting sick of propaganda. It wants some of the good old sob stuff. It has been fed on educational proletarian sops so long that it would like very much to be plunged into the depths of a bowl of bourgeoisie bereavement or heart-whole hope and despair by way of change."

On the whole the lot of the new private exhibitor in Soviet Russia is not a happy one. But as apparently he has come to stay, no matter what the Government proposes to do about reviving their all-Russia propaganda work when funds allow, we may believe that he will rapidly improve the conditions which surround him and do all in his power to revive foreign trade. In this he will receive a great deal of assistance from the changing mood of the public, and by the class distinction set up by a return to a sliding scale of charges in place of the free ticket system applied by the Government. Probably the better class and more expensive seats will become filled with an educated public with a mind capable of choosing its own form of motion pictures. "Wait and see," as a certain political gentleman once remarked.

Cleveland Exhibitors Elect Officers

Election of officers of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, postponed from last July, was held Wednesday, October 11, at the League headquarters. The results of the election are as follows: O. E. Bellas, president; S. Piotrowski, vice president; Martin Printz, treasurer, and Sam Bullock, secretary. Jim Scoville, W. J. Slimm, Jules Schwartz, Sam Schachtel and J. F. Hagaman were elected to fill unexpired terms of the Board of Directors. Frank Gross and M. B. Horwitz still have a year to serve on the Board.

This new line-up of officers of the Cleveland Exhibitors' League is very significant, not only to Ohio but to the country at large. It places the responsibility of operation on an entirely new personnel. The retiring officials have held office for the past three years.

Baltimore Stockholder Asks Receiver

Receivers and an accounting have been asked for the Circle Theatre Corporation of Baltimore, of which Alfred G. Buck, formerly of the American Theatres Corporation, Baltimore, is the head, by William J. E. Diven, a stockholder. John J. Carlin, treasurer of the corporation, has filed an answer denying Mr. Diven's allegations.

Diven maintains in his petition that the corporation has been handled loosely and that only the foundations of the theatre have been completed. He alleged that promoters of the enterprise planned to go no further. This was denied by Carlin, who said construction had been suspended pending general recovery from business depression.

Cinema Clubs as "Better Films" Stimulus

Ohio State Organizer Contends Movement Will Dispense With Censorship

By SAM BULLOCK

Ohio Cinema Clubs State Organizer

HAD the Cleveland Cinema Club been in existence on that dark and stormy night in March, eight years ago, when the politicians put across the Ohio Censor law without a public hearing, something constructive would undoubtedly have been done for the motion picture and its future, in place of the legalized imposition of a political ap-producing expedient—such as the Ohio censor law has proved to be after eight long years' trial.

It is not our intention to discuss censorship at this time. It is doubtful if our State Association will take any further notice of it unless its sponsors start something.

When the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio get ready to test the sentiment of its citizens upon this subject, that test will be made in ample time for the Secretary of State to certify the accuracy of not less than a million voters' signatures—without as much as "by-your-leave" so far as politicians are concerned, clerical or otherwise. This pestiferous nuisance and all others of a similar kind emanating from irresponsible cranks and jammed through the legislative hopper without public hearings or pre-campaign arguments, is due for a microscopic screen analysis at the hands of some five million and odd Ohio movie fans soon—very soon. "Close-ups" of facts labeled "The Truth in Advertising" (the motto of the World's Advertising Clubs), will enable Ohio fans to decide their problems for themselves.

We've been kowtowing to politicians long enough, and now "them days is gone forever" and the fade-out after our first big screen analysis in Ohio will prove it. This test may not, however, have to be made on censorship. It certainly will not be necessary if Ohio exhibitors will show faith and cooperate with the Cinema Clubs in their vicinity.

If exhibitors who know nothing of Cinema Club methods will reserve judgment until they do know, much worry will be saved them by waiting.

If Cinema Club methods and ideas prevail, censorship will die a natural death inasmuch as a constructive system of cooperation for "good films" will take the place of censorship and a new army of patrons will be created to fill the now vacant seats, due to the public "state of mind," such state of mind existing all these years simply because the six million humans of Ohio, like the poor "gell" in the song who had "nobody to guide her," except someone whose entire vocabulary consisted of the one word "Don't."

The Ohio Censor Board—and all others since legalized—have cut, chopped, hacked, butchered, manicured, chiropodized, eliminated and condemned for eight long years, to the monotonous tune of "Don't! Don't! Don't!" with never a change of music except several annual demands for more axes and sharper scissors.

All Censor Boards disapprove of Cinema Clubs, and the reason is obvious.

Meantime, the Cinema Club idea is growing among that vast army of good women who patronize picture theatres, but want their pictures "right" and are tired of the nega-

Better Films Idea is Spreading in South

THE Better Films Association idea is rapidly spreading over the Southeast as evidence of the fact that within the past two weeks four cities in the South have seen the organization of local committees for the betterment of motion picture films.

Nashville and Chattanooga, Tennessee, organizations are now functioning, with organizations in Charlotte, N. C., and Spartanburg, S. C., rapidly nearing completion.

Mrs. Jas. E. Reilly, author of the first bill for the censorship of pictures in the state, heads the organization in Charlotte which is composed of representative women of that city and has the support of practically every civic organization in Charlotte. The organization will have the undivided support of the film exchanges and theatres there.

Even more recent than the Charlotte meeting, fourteen men and women who have been sponsoring a movement of this nature in Spartanburg met and formed an organization with plans that are far-reaching and effective, their program involves many angles, all of which converge in the general plan for better films and more patronage therefor.

tive, destructive policy of the censorites and the fault-finding, non-patron of the movies. Exhibitors must encourage the growth of that idea. "Cinema," as the name indicates, pertains to the motion picture. There are hundreds upon hundreds of women's clubs under various names in Ohio.

The prejudiced enemies of the screen have for years used small groups—well organized minority groups—to influence these large bodies of well-meaning women for endorsements of ideas with barely more than "overnight" consideration of the same. It is only just and proper that any question pertaining to the motion picture and its effect upon Ohio's millions, should receive the attention of "experts" whose thought and attention have been centered on this one subject exclusively for years. Such women do not decide such momentous questions "overnight"—neither for the fanatic nor the exhibitor.

Many unthinking exhibitors, who, in the past, dubbed members of the Cinema Club "a bunch of skirts," very soon found, to their surprise, that those same women were better informed as to the details, angles and ramifications of the film business than they themselves were—all of which had been developed by a close, conscientious and patient study covering many years.

The methods of the Cleveland Cinema Club are now known the country over. Nearly all church and women's clubs now have special motion picture committees. It is proposed that Cinema Club groups, affiliated with all such organizations, be formed in all sections to facilitate constructive work conducive to "good films." The idea will grow because it represents honest effort for the public good. Exhibitors and producers can then meet for cooperative effort along these lines in perfect harmony.

These locals constituting a state body under one name, one idea and one method will in time reflect the true sentiment of the entire state—upon anything pertaining to the film industry. The idea will grow because it is necessary to save our business. The women delegates in attendance at the Hotel Statler convention, though few in number, represented hundreds of women's clubs and thousands of members all over Ohio—all of them well informed and enthusiastic as to the future.

They will spread the leaven of "goodwill and good films" in a manner to tickle the cockles of Will Hays' heart.

President Mrs. Elmer C. Derr, of the Ohio clubwomen, is the woman who made the 700 delegates to our Washington National Convention last May sit up and take notice of her rapid-fire, fifteen-minute delivery, and never at a loss for expression: punctuated at times with some unpleasant truths, but she was nevertheless greeted with the longest applause of the convention. With Vice-President Mrs. Gurwell, she "sat in" at every meeting and they were surprised that we had "no secrets to hide—not even the fights"—and it was to reciprocate for this that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio were represented at the Statler, while national headquarters sent Mr. M. J. O'Toole of the National Public Service Department. It is expected that hereafter state and national conventions will be held under joint auspices.

Why worry about censorship?

American Films Liked in Java, Says Consul

In Java, says Consul Parker W. Buhrman, of Soerabaya, Sumatra, there are 250 theatres. Audiences there are of three classes: Europeans, Chinese and natives. With all these movie fans American films are in the majority, and none other can compare with them in popularity. One of the largest theatres is built to seat 2,000 Europeans and 2,500 natives. The screen divides the natives from the Europeans in the audience in all Javanese theatres. The projector is behind the European section and the film is shown to both audiences from the one machine. The foreign orientals such as diplomats, Chinese and Japanese business men, Filipinos and families are seated with the white Europeans. Censorship is severe, and criminal or political suggestions are ruled out. Screen "westerns" are taboo; nor can any scurrilous reference to any one's nationality be shown. Approximately 35 per cent of the imported film are either barred or cut by the Dutch censors. Javanese exhibitors have organized, and some prospect of modification in the film censor regulations, providing for censorship prior to collecting duties. Up to the present the exhibitor has had no recourse; his duty was paid and although the censor might not pass his film, he was out the duty, and no legal way of securing a refund existed. Language employed in text and title is a serious form of annoyance. A Malay text would satisfy the natives, increasing their attendance. Titles now are in Dutch-English. The native, ignorant of either tongue, in many cases is thus at a great disadvantage. News events and current topics thus are in very slight demand.

Shakespearian Drama is Well Presented

Benefit by Directors' Association Shows Great Cast in "Midsummer Night's Dream"

BYOND a doubt the presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" under the auspices of the Motion Picture Directors' Association and for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America at the Hollywood Bowl on the evening of October 7th, can be considered by all those fortunate in attending as the most artistic staging of this delightful Shakespearean comedy drama. It is regrettable that inventive genius has not made it possible to extend the film presentation so that this monster all-star attraction can be shown to the amusement loving world outside of Los Angeles with all the glamour and color, the tuneful Mendelssohn music and the beautified natural settings, for if such were possible it would be the greatest advertising possible for the film industry.

The proscenium arch 125 feet in width and 80 feet in height framed for the audience of more than 10,000 a stage whose background was the hills 100 to 500 yards away, upon which the city of Athens was built about a bay. In the foreground of this natural setting was a forest in front of which the action of Acts 2, 3 and 4 was presented.

To give the names of the players would require reprinting of five pages from the program of the event, and so well did Producer Frederic Sullivan stage this production that it is difficult to designate which of the scores of players were the stars. William Desmond and Thomas Holding appeared as Lysander and Demetrius, respectively, while Hermia was played by Shirley Mason and Helena by Mary Miles Minter. Stuart Holmes was the Duke of Athens; Queen of the Amazons was

Jackie Coogan Contest Called Off

THE proposed cash awards to exhibitors by the Jackie Coogan Productions for suggestions and ideas in exploiting Jackie's recently completed and soon to be released "Oliver Twist" production have been cancelled.

The producers of the Coogan picture found that the Post Office rulings on contests of this nature interfered with their plans and they therefore called it off.

It was the intention of the Coogan organization to offer this as a special inducement to all exhibitors but unfortunately the manner in which the campaign was presented did not meet with the full requirements of postal laws.

played by Louise Dresser; William Farnum was Marc Antony; Puck was played by Viola Dana; Conrad Nagel was Oberon and Enid Bennett appeared as Titania, while the players of the burlesque troupe of actors were Charles Ray, Wilson Hummell, Mitchell Lewis, Larry Semon, Otis Harlan and Lionel Belmore.

Pageantry was added by the Rulers of the World assembling at Athens to attend the Duke's wedding. The great lovers of the world also came, as did the goddesses of Olympus. These parts were taken by stars and leading women, the list including Claire Windsor, Edna Purviance, Jane Novak, Lottie Pickford, Kathlyn Williams, Marie Prevost, Ruth Roland, Mae Busch, Helene Chadwick, Wanda Hawley, Anna Q. Nilsson, Carmel Myers, Florence Vidor, Mae Murray, Lois Wilson, Bebe Daniels, Agnes Ayres, Dorothy Phillips, Priscilla Dean and Pola Negri. Each was accompanied by a troupe of attendants.

The chorus numbered more than one hundred, with Constance Balfour and Florence Middaugh as soloists. A ballet of almost one hundred, with such solo dancers as Kathleen Clifford and Patsy Ruth Miller and others appeared in the Fairy Land scenes in which Jackie Coogan, Baby Peggy, Gertrude Messinger, Johnny Jones, Ben Alexander and others were prominent. The music was furnished by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Los Angeles, directed by Frederic Sullivan, with Henri Svedofsky as concert master, with the exception of between Acts 2 and 3, when Charlie Chaplin conducted during the rendition of "The Spring Song."

Frederick Sullivan was in charge of the production for the Directors' Association and James P. Hogan served as master of production, aided by William Sullivan and Clarence Geldert. William Parke was stage manager, assisted by Howard Mitchell, Murdock McQuarrie, Jack Ford, Ernest Warde, William Worthington, Gilbert Hamilton. Thomas Brierley, of Christie Film Company, was loaned to serve as technical director, and members of the Directors' Association are profuse in their compliments for his exceptional work. The business management of the presentation was under the management of Major Maurice Campbell, with Richard McFarland serving as manager, Sam Myers as business manager and Silas E. Masters, treasurer.

Michigan Exhibitors in Annual Convention

Mayor Welcomes Three Hundred Delegates at Session Replete With Action

THE third annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan closed with a two day session, which was held at Flint, Michigan October 10 and 11. Headquarters were established at the Hotel Durant where the business meetings and social affairs were held. There were three hundred exhibitors present from all parts of the Wolverine state along with many luminaries of the motion picture world. George W. McKeighan, mayor of the city, welcomed the delegates.

President Claude E. Cady of Lansing declared, in opening the convention, that the M. P. T. O. of Michigan have the strongest organization of their kind in the United States.

At the banquet held Tuesday night, J. R. Dennison of Monroe presided as toastmaster. Lieut-Governor Thomas R. Reed of Michigan, Judge Alfred J. Murphy, legal Counsel of the M. P. T. O., Michigan branch; Courtland Smith, representative of Will H. Hays, Sydney S. Cohen, President of the National Organization, J. O'Toole, Chairman of the National Public Service Committee and A. J. Moeller of New York were among the speakers. H. B. Richey, state general-manager, illustrated the advantage of co-operation.

National President Sydney S. Cohen, spoke at length, at the Wednesday session, of the many problems confronting the exhibitors of

First National and Griffith Join Hays Organization

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., and D. W. Griffith, Inc., have been elected to membership in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president. Inquiry at the M. P. P. D. of A. headquarters in New York on Wednesday of this week concerning the statements carried in the New York dailies on Monday and Tuesday brought official confirmation of the news that First National and D. W. Griffith had at last joined up with the Hays organization. Word from the First National home office and the D. W. Griffith office verified the report beyond any shadow of doubt. News that First National had joined the M. P. P. D. of A. was published a couple of weeks ago, but the report was emphatically denied by First National executives at that time.

The action resulting in the election of First National and the D. W. Griffith organization to membership in the M. P. P. D. of A. took place on Monday of this week.

the country; giving as his opinion, that there was a strong attempt being made to trustify the gigantic influence of the screen; to take it from the hands of the many and concentrate the business in the hands of the dangerous few. He urged the exhibitors to use their every effort to frustrate such a sinister attempt.

Absurd and high prices asked for rentals also received the respects of Mr. Cohen, in view of the fact that business is only slowly coming back from the most severe slump the industry has ever experienced. President Cohen's forceful and vigorous presentation of actual facts was received with enthusiasm by the members present. At the close of his speech, he was tendered a vote of confidence and co-operation. Additional addresses were delivered by Presidents R. G. Woodhall of New Jersey, W. A. Steffes of Minnesota and W. A. True of Connecticut.

Sunday closing and censorship were two important subjects due to come up at the next session of the legislature, Mr. Cohen stated, and he urged the state association to be awake to the fact.

The treasurer's report by Fred Rumler showed the association to be in a sound financial condition.

The following new officers were elected for the coming year: President, Wirt McLaren of Jackson; Vice-President, Phil Gleichman of Detroit; Secretary, H. T. Hall and Treasurer, Fred R. Rumler.

The 1923 convention will be held in Jackson, Michigan.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS ON TIMELY TOPICS

Over-Exploitation Condemned

EDITOR, MOTION PICTURE NEWS,

Dear Sir:

I note the paragraph in your letter wherein you state that you are starting a campaign in Washington to do away with the Admission Tax. It is hardly necessary for me to tell you that if you are successful in accomplishing this, that you will have earned the everlasting gratitude and friendship of every exhibitor in the country.

I also note your several questions and I want to say first, that the NEWS is the liveliest of all Trade Journals. I say this in all earnestness and not just because you have asked the question and I happen to be writing to you.

You also ask for suggestions, and put the question: "Can We Do More to Help You?"

I believe that the NEWS can do a great deal to help the industry as a whole if you will take up the question of exploitation as it has been practiced in the past and is being practiced at the present.

Everybody in this great industry, including the star, the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor have been prone to resort to misleading, grossly exaggerated and extravagant statements in their press agents' stories and in their display advertising, to such an extent that the public generally has lost confidence in our business.

It seems to me that the time has come when all of us who hope to see the industry survive must get away from our wild-eyed exploitation methods. We must try to raise our business above the level of the traveling carnival and circus, and try to place it in the high dignified place where it belongs.

The industry has been burdened with too many Sam T. Jacks and not enough David Belascos, and the Trade Journals have been largely responsible for this condition.

I hope that you will pardon my frankness but inasmuch as you have asked for constructive criticism, I want to give you my honest opinion. The Trade Journals in their anxiety to please their subscribers have given much space and much comment to exploitation stunts which in a great many cases have been of the kind that should have been frankly and conscientiously criticised instead of being praised, and because the Trade Journals have showered praise indiscriminately on all stunts that have come under their notice regardless of whether they had merit or not, they have encouraged this class of advertising to such an extent that it is miserably overdone.

The big producing organizations through their exploitation departments are just as guilty of over-exploitation and of really bad exploitation as the exhibitors are.

In fact all of the press sheets that come under notice, with very rare exceptions, are of such a nature that I often wonder what kind of a pull the manager of the exploitation department has with the distributing company in order to hold the job.

I am firmly convinced that the public is sick of all the painful attempts at exploitation that have been made by so many theatres on any and every kind of picture with the hope that patrons will be dragged in through that method of advertising.

An exploitation stunt, if it is clever and if it happens to be a perfect and complete tie-up with the picture, is all very good if it is not overdone, but it is unfortunate that so many exhibitors have been made to believe that it is necessary to pull some kind of a trick stunt on every picture they play and as a consequence a great many exhibitors came to the point, where they were buying pictures simply because those pictures had advertising value and paid no attention as to whether or not the pictures had entertainment value.

We must realize that we have reached a time when all our old advertising methods must be discarded, and when we must strike out along new and original lines in order to gain the confidence and interest of the public; and I firmly believe that all of us will accomplish a great deal in regaining that confidence if we will confine our advertising to methods that are a great deal more dignified than those we have used in the past.

Trusting that you will pardon this lengthy letter, I beg to remain

Yours very truly,

Indiana Paper Opposes Censorship

The cudgel against photoplay censorship is taken up in no wish-washy terms by the Indianapolis Star in an article featuring the theatrical section of Sunday, October 15. The article is one of the strongest arraignment of censorship ever made by an Indiana newspaper, and coming from the paper with the second largest circulation is considered of great value to those who seek to prevent legislation which unwisely restricts the entertainment business.

After citing almost a column of stupid acts by censors in Ohio, Pennsylvania and other states, the Star comments:

"The point of all this is to direct attention to the happy state of affairs in Indiana. Here do we have no such bigotry in the field of motion picture supervision.

"The arrangement of the indorsers of photoplays seems much more satisfactory than a censorship board could ever hope to be. Entertainment is, like religion, a matter of choice."

Canadian Publicity in Pictures

The annual report of the film activities of the Exhibits and Publicity Bureau, Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce, just issued for the last fiscal year demonstrates that the work of the Canadian Government's moving picture plant in producing the scenic, educational, travelogue and historical type of films has secured such world-wide distribution of the Seeing Canada and other Government releases that arrangements are now being made to increase the capacity of the present laboratory in Ottawa considerably.

Approximately twenty one-reel and six two-reel subjects were produced by the bureau during the past year, and the release of one picture every second week has been maintained.

Woods and Buchanan Leave Lasky to Form Company

FRANK E. WOODS, for five years head of the production department at the West Coast Famous Players-Lasky studios, has tendered his resignation to Jesse L. Lasky, to take effect in four weeks from date, or later if present work is not finished at that time.

Thompson Buchanan tendered his resignation Saturday, effective at once. Woods and Buchanan will be associated in the formation of an independent producing company which they have considered for several months. It is understood that they have several releasing propositions.

Woods stated that there has been perfect harmony, but that he is leaving to make certain productions which are impossible at a large studio where an immense amount of product is made. No successor has been named.

Woods' official title was "supervisor of production." This was later changed to "supervisor" and again to "production editor." Buchanan was associate supervisor and later associate production editor.

Seven N. Y. Companies Enter Industry

Seven companies entered the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, according to the papers filed in the secretary of state's office at Albany. These companies included Martino's Building Corporation, capitalized at $10,000, and having as directors Guigliano, Brooklyn; Play Finance Corporation, $5,000, James L. Robinson, Montclair, N. J.; Mercedes von Bredow, Henrietta Smith, New York City; Independent Pictures Corporation, $1,000, B. W. Rosenblum, J. H. Rosenblum, J. J. Goldberg, New York; Colonial Theatre of Jamaica, Inc., Jamaica, $230,000, William G. Willman, Suffern, C. G. Stewart, New York; Stanley Sharpe, Bayside, L. I.; May Waterson Vaudeville Attractions, Inc., $5,000, Herman Snyder, May Waterson, Jack Snyder, New York; Carlson Film Co., $5,000, John Carlson, Joseph J. Myers, R. F. O'Keefe, New York City; Cosmopolitan Corporation, $10,000, L. I. Fink, M. L. Elkin, Etta London, New York; Zeus Amusement Co., Inc., $7,000, Louis Lempel, New York; Grace Shapiro, Andrew Bellanca, Brooklyn.

Penn Exhibitors Plan Against Legislation

So that the motion picture exhibitors of Pennsylvania will be in a stronger position than in former years to combat any proposed legislation hostile to the industry that may be introduced in the bi-ennial session of the Legislature, which will convene early in January, it has been decided to hold the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania just before the lawmakers assemble or shortly after they come together.

The purpose of this plan is so that the organization will be able to take necessary measures to fight unfriendly bills at or near the time they are introduced, and it is probable that the convention will authorize the selection of a Legislative committee with authority and financial backing to look out for the theatres' interests in the legislative halls.

Special "Oliver Twist" Showings

Jackie Coogan Production Can Be Seen
by Every Exhibitor Throughout U. S.

A NEW and decidedly novel plan to present "Oliver Twist" to every exhibitor throughout the country has now been determined by the Jackie Coogan Productions with regards to "Oliver Twist."

This production will not only have the assistance of the many exploitation representatives now in the field under the First National banner, but it will be greatly aided by special representatives of the Coogan organization. Each key center will be accorded a trade showing of "Oliver Twist" supervised by the Coogan representatives and the exchange manager and exploitation man in each particular territory.

The important feature of this combination will be in form of a special preview in every large city. Max Roth, one of the Coogan representatives, has already departed on tour. Roth will visit each exchange, arrange for a theatre or hotel banquet hall, orchestra, proper projection, attaches to take care of the exhibitor guests and do all of the necessary preliminary work possible.

The exchange manager will send all exhibitors in his territory invitations to come as guests of the Coogan Productions and witness the trade preview of the Dickens film.

Harry Rathner, another Coogan representative, will follow on Roth's tour three days later. Rathner will carry the print of "Oliver Twist" and will supervise the actual trade showing while Roth, three days ahead is making initial arrangements in the next center.

In this manner each and every exhibitor interested in booking Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist" product will have the opportunity to see the picture under the proper conditions. There will be no theatre projection room showings without music and with frequent interruptions as is so often the case in looking over advance feature films.

This system marks a new and novel method of giving the exhibitor his first view of a proposed booking. No stone will be left unturned in the endeavor to properly present the picture. Details pertaining to each showing will be worked out by the exchange manager in each respective territory.

The Coogan special representatives will travel under the supervision of Irving M. Lesser, manager of the eastern distributing offices of the Jackie Coogan Productions.

Gould Named Executive with Garsson

Murray W. Garsson last week announced that he had signed George D. Gould, until recently Managing Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, as Business Manager of Murray W. Garsson, Inc. He will also direct publicity and advertising for the concern, which, in addition to offering a new series of twelve Nick Carter pictures, now has two units working on feature productions under the respective direction of Ralph Ince and Roy Sheldon.

Mr. Gould was for five years with MOTION PICTURE NEWS in various executive capacities. He has also had experience in the production end of the business. Prior to entering the motion picture business he was for several years on New York and San Francisco dailies.

"Cowboy and Lady" Due for Release

PARAMOUNT'S feature release scheduled for October 22 is "The Cowboy and the Lady," with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore, a picturization of the romantic Western stage play by Clyde Fitch in which S. Miller Kent starred on tour for a number of years.

Charles Maigne directed the picture which was filmed in the famous Jackson Hole country of Wyoming.

Views from "The Spirit of Evil," the first of a series of new Nick Carter productions to be made available to state-rights buyers by Murray W. Garsson, Inc.

Producer of the "Headless Horseman" Sails

The liner "France," which sailed last Monday, included on its passenger list Carl Stearns Clancy, producer of "The Headless Horseman," or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which will be released November 5 through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He will visit England, France and Northern Italy.

While in Paris it is understood that Mr. Clancy's intention is to have an interview with Vincent Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," regarding the filmization of some of this author's new novels.

Accompanied by his mother, Mr. Clancy will spend a month's vacation in Northern Italy, returning to the United States about the first of the year, when he will begin work on a series of six productions based on some of the best and most popular classic stories in American literature.

"Flapper Love" Given New Title

Pyramid Pictures, Inc., announces the change of title of "Flapper Love" to "What Fools Men Are," under which name it will be distributed by American Releasing Corporation.

This Eugene Walter play, which will come to the stage late this year, was first called "The Toy Girl," and afterward tentatively titled "Flapper Love."

Faire Binney, Lucy Fox, Florence Billings, Joseph Striker, Huntley Gordon and J. Barney Sherry as well as Harry Clay Blaney, who will produce the stage version, are members of the cast.

Striking moments from "Bulldog Drummond," on the W. W. Hodkinson schedule for distribution. The subject features Evelyn Greely and Carlyle Blackwell.

Cummings Completes Production Force

IRVING CUMMINGS, who is now engaged in producing "Chicago Sal," written by Harvey Gates, author of "Hell Morgan's Girl," "Hurricane's Gal," and other screen successes, has perfected his permanent organization for filming his series of three to be released and distributed by Principal Pictures Corporation.

William A. Crinley has been appointed production manager. Edward H. Hayden will officiate as business manager, while Charles Kerr will act as Art Director. All the Irving Cummings productions will be edited by Hal Kern.

Included in the cast in "Chicago Sal" are Alice Lake, Milton Sills, Ralph Lewis, Ben Hewlett, Gertrude Claire and Richard Headrick.

Following the completion of "Chicago Sal," Cummings will make a screen drama based on Bulwer Lyttons immortal story, "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Warner Buys Stories for 1923 Season

Just prior to his departure for the Warner Brothers' west coast studios, Harry M. Warner announced that he has purchased three stories for production and distribution during the season of 1923. Two of the stories are stage plays that are said to have enjoyed considerable success, and the other is an original script written by Elinor Glyn.

The stage plays are "Beau Brummel," a Richard Mansfield's success, written by Clyde Fitch; and "Cornered," in which Henry W. Savage presented Madge Kennedy the past season. The Glyn story is called "How to Educate a Wife."

Scenes from Buster Keaton's new comedy for First National titled "Day Dreams."

Scenes from the Rupert Hughes picture for Goldwyn titled "Gimme," in which Helene Chadwick plays the leading female role.

Doug's Latest is Warmly Received

Fairbanks and Pickford Given Huge Ovation at Chicago Premiere Oct. 15

A CHEERING, applauding throng, which packed Cohan's Grand Opera House, Chicago, from orchestra to the topmost gallery seat, voiced its approval of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at its world's premiere Sunday night. It was a triumph for Fairbanks, the producer, Fairbanks, the actor and for his master picture.

As the time for the performance neared, crowds massed themselves in the street about the theatre until all traffic was blocked, and when Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford arrived, they were given an ovation, the waves of cheering following them as they made their way into the theatre and to the stage box. The demonstration continued until both "Doug," and Mary made brief speeches of thanks and hopes that the audience would enjoy the picture.

As Musical Director Michael Mowschine waved his baton and the first notes of the musical setting, composed by Joseph Latteau, were heard, the audience settled back in its seats and quiet reigned as the picture opened and the great drawbridge was slowly lowered, revealing a scene which transported the assemblage as on a magic carpet back over the centuries to the days when knights were bold and barons held their sway.

As the magnificent pictures of medieval days followed in rapid succession with all their pomp and pageantry, and interspersed with fine acting of tense situations by the principals, applause was frequent, and when the six minute intermission arrived, the shouting and mad clapping focused until "Doug" was forced to leap to the stage, bringing his Mary with him, and in a neat little curtain speech quieted the throng.

The interest in the picture reached its climax when "Doug" as the noble and knightly earl of Huntingdon, returned to England and became the bold and merry outlaw, Robin Hood, to save his king, and from this on the suspense was sustained and the picture moved with a rapidity which kept the audience in a high state of tension.

One of the masterpieces of film art, as to story, setting and acting was the verdict of those who saw the world premiere.

The audience was a brilliant one, including, as it did, social and business leaders, and outstanding figures in the motion picture world.

Among those who witnessed the presentation as the guests of Mr. Fairbanks, were George M. Cohan, Mr. and Mrs. John Fairbanks, Allan Dwan, Dennis F. O'Brien, Frank Case, Harry Ridings, Maurice Cleary, and others.

H. D. Buckley, business manager for Mr. Fairbanks, was in charge of the opening, and Pete Smith director of exploitation.

As an atmospheric prologue, a baritone wearing chain armor of the period of the Crusades and carrying a huge shield sang "In Days of Old."

The Chicago critics are united in praising the beauty, spectacular magnificence and interest of the picture and without exception recommended it as a great feature.

Unity is Completing "A Woman's Story"

Unity Pictures, Inc., are preparing to market the special production, "A Woman's Story," which, it is announced, is now nearly ready. The cutting, titling and editing, however, will hold up the picture for nearly another month. It will be ready for release not later than the first of December.

American Releasing Closes Deal

Alliance Is Made With Wardour Films to Handle Product in United Kingdom

AN alliance has just been completed in England by Holmes C. Walton, head of the foreign department of American Releasing Corporation, under which Wardour Films, Ltd., become the distributors of the entire 1922-1923 output of American's releases for England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales under a long-time contract, according to announcement by Walter E. Greene, president, and F. B. Warren, vice president.

As evidence of Wardour's enthusiasm for the new product, announcement is made of the comparative complete overturn of the long-established British block-releasing system under which pictures from America and other companies formerly waited a year or longer for public release. Wardour has cut this time in less than half and will begin public release of the American Releasing pictures inside of six months from the date of the arrival of each picture in London. The first release will be made around holiday time and before New Year's Day, the first picture selected to lead off in England being Dirigo Films' production, "Timothy's Quest." This will be followed the next week by the release throughout England of Ray C. Smallwood's Pyramid production, "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," and next in order by J. L. Frothingham's picture, "The Woman He Loved," directed by Edward Slloman.

Wardour Films, Ltd., will release one big production received from its American ally each week in the year and delivery has been made by American Releasing of the first eight subjects, besides having placed in London other of its prior to September 1st releases for immediate screenings and trade showings. This contract between Wardour and American Releasing is the biggest distribution alliance effected between the two countries since Sir Oswald Stoll entered the distributing field five years ago to handle the Goldwyn output.

Messrs. Greene and Warren also announce the sale to Max Glucksmann, through Jacob Glucksmann in New York, of the entire output for Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Uruguay and Paraguay, and announce that twenty productions have arrived in Buenos Ayres and Montevideo for immediate South American release.

Holmes Walton will return to Europe shortly to close the company's deals for the continent.

Willard Mack Sketch to be Pictured

"Your Friend and Mine," a dramatic sketch by Willard Mack, which was also played in vaudeville under the title of "The Rat," will furnish the nucleus for the next Metro-S-L special production.

Arthur Sawyer of the S-L organization announced the purchase of this sketch following the completion of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which was the first Arthur Sawyer-Herbert Lubin special to be made for Metro. This picture will be released soon.

Clarence G. Badger, director of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," will stage "Your Friend and Mine."

William Fox Picture to Open in N. Y.

"The Town That Forgot God," a new photoplay presented by William Fox, will begin a limited engagement at the Astor Theatre, New York, Monday night, October 30th.

The story was written by "Mr. X," the scenario was elaborated by Paul H. Sloane, and the picture was directed by Harry Millarde.

Scenes from "Finger Prints," a Hyperion Pictures Corporation Production, for the State Rights Market

New Producing Company in San Francisco

The Fisher Productions, Inc., is the newest picture concern in California. Headed by Victor B. Fisher, this organization was formed last week in San Francisco by San Francisco men and with San Francisco capital. Production is to commence in two weeks at the Pacific studios in San Mateo.

Victor Fisher will be remembered as the general manager for the Associated Photoplays. He has been identified with the picture business both as a distributor and producer for a number of years. Fisher is supervising director of this company, which bears his name. A. L. Jaffe, prominent manufacturer of California, is president and business manager.

It is the intention of Fisher to produce from three to six super-pictures yearly. Virginia Lee Corbin, noted child actress, is under contract for five years and will head the cast of the initial production.

"Arabia" Next Release for Tom Mix

"ARABIA," formerly announced as "An Arabian Night," will be the December release for Tom Mix. It is a Fox production. The story was written by the Fox star and Lynn Reynolds, who also directed.

Mix is supported by a cast including Claire Adams, feminine lead; George Hernandez, Ralph Yeadsley, Norman Selby, better known as Kid McCoy, Eddie Piel, Hector Sarno, and "Tony," the famous steed who has been featured in many Fox westerns.

Fox Film Corporation has detailed the work of preparing the advertising and publicity background for the production to an expert group of writers and showmen. The matter will consist of posters, lobby photos, slides, heralds, press books, newspaper cuts, mats, etc.

The Metro picture "Quincy Adams Sawyer," boasts of an all-star cast and as many as twenty names known to all motion picturedom.

Metro Managers Win Tiffany Awards

THE $1,000 prize given by M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., to the Metro district manager doing the greatest amount of business in Mae Murray's pictures, in proportion to territorial quota, was won by W. C. Bachmeyer, of Cincinnati; and the branch manager's prize of $500 was won by C. E. Almy, of the Metro exchange in Cleveland. Mr. Hoffman advised the Metro home offices this week.

The Tiffany productions for Metro, presented by Robert Z. Leonard, are "Peacock Alley," "Fascination" and "Broadway Rose."

Mae Murray Starts on "Coronation"

Mae Murray lost no time after her arrival in Los Angeles in getting started on "Coronation." This photoplay, to be presented by Robert Z. Leonard, is her newest Tiffany production for Metro.

Less than a week from the time the star stepped from the train in Los Angeles she was before the camera for the initial scenes for the new picture.

Robert Frazer has arrived from New York to enact a prominent part in "Coronation." Rod La Rocque will have the leading male role.

Others in the cast are: Edward Burns, Jean Herscholt, Lionel Belmore, Herbert Standing, Mrs. J. Farrell MacDonald and Wilfred Lucas.

Great Composers Shown in New Series

The Zinkin Productions, a new organization, proposes to produce photoplays based on the biographical romances of the world's great music composers.

The first of the series include the stories of Beethoven, Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, Liszt, Berlioz, Brahms, Grieg, McDowal and Tschaiowski.

"Strongheart," the canine star, will be seen in the above scenes from "Brawn of the North," the Jane Murfin-Lawrence Trimble production, released through First National.

Jackie Coogan to Make Circus Picture

AT last Jackie Coogan is going to do what every kid in the world wants him to. Make a circus picture.

"Circus Days" is the title of the new production and work will start in the very near future on this story. United Studios, Hollywood, will be the seat of activity as usual. The story comes from the pen of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan. It is expected that the company will spend some time with a real circus under the "Big Top."

Garsson Not Selling "Sight Unseen"

With reference to a statement contained in the trade press advertisements on the Nick Carter series of twelve new pictures, to the effect that none would be offered state rights buyers "sight unseen"—a statement which has created widespread comment—Murray W. Garsson last week said:

"The state rights buyer is tired of promises, tired of being handed mediocre product which has been advertised to him with glowing adjectives as meritorious.

"I know what I have in this new series of Nick Carter pictures. When I advertise the fact that prospective buyers must first see a screening of them before sales propositions are entertained, I mean just that. I have every confidence in the product.

"If the exchanges prosper, so do I. That is why I aim to let the buyer see my pictures and be satisfied as to their merit first—and talk business afterward."

Victor Herbert Signed by Cosmopolitan

VICTOR HERBERT, the celebrated composer, has been signed by Cosmopolitan Productions to render his services as musical conductor in conjunction with the Cosmopolitan picture, "When Knighthood Was In Flower," starring Marion Davies, now running at the Criterion Theatre, New York; The Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago, and the Scala Theatre, London.

The engagement of Mr. Herbert is for two weeks, commencing Monday October 23. Cosmopolitan Productions also have an option for four additional weeks of the composer's services.

The engagement of Herbert follows in the wake of the success of his Marion Davies March, composed by him especially for "When Knighthood Was in Flower." This serves as the overture in the houses where the picture is playing.

Work Started On Richmond Films

Staten Island Concern Commences New Comedy Series for Clark-Cornelius

RICHMOND FILM PRODUCTIONS, Inc., has started production in its new studios at Broad and Van Duzer streets.

This company is officered by Joseph A. Richmond as president. Mr. Richmond is a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association and is also managing director of the company which bears his name. He is well known for his work with Edison, Selig and the U. S. Motion Picture Company, where he directed the Black Diamond comedies, the first to be accepted by Paramount.

G. B. Garrison is the secretary and treasurer of the company. Mr. Garrison is well known in the trade and was with Midgar Features, Whitman Features and with the Triangle Film Distributing Corporation. He will have charge of the business management of the company.

Harry G. Koch is vice president and attorney for the company.

It is the intention of this company to produce a series of two-reel comedies which will be distributed by the Clark-Cornelius Corporation. They will be produced and distributed at the rate of one a month. They are to be of a high grade with a distinct box-office value. Production will be increased, as the studio is sufficiently large for at least three directors working at once.

The Richmond Film Productions Company has been working quietly for the past three months installing lights and other equipment. On October 15 it put into production its first two-reel subject. Horace G. Plympton is camera man. He is well and favorably known. He was the camera man on the Black Diamond comedies, and his last picture was "Nero," made by William Fox in Italy.

Edward Noulder will be the juvenile lead. Opposite him will be a young woman of beauty and talent who is well known to the picture fans. Supporting these will be such people as William Favers and Jenny Harris, both known for their work in comedies.

The studio consists of three floors. The stage floor is 103 feet by 53 feet, with an overhead clearance of thirty feet. One floor contains the offices and projection rooms. Carpenter shop is in an adjoining building. The remaining floor will be used as a property room. An adjoining building has been erected for dressing rooms.

Helen Holmes Returns in Crime Story

Helen Holmes returns to the screen in "One Million in Jewels," a melodramatic story of the Secret Service, which J. P. McGowan is directing at the Brush Studios in Miami, Fla., for distribution by American Releasing Corporation.

Besides directing, Mr. McGowan assumes a leading role in the picture, which has a cast including Elinor Fair, Nellie Parker Spaulding, Charles Craig, Fred Kalgrer, Leslie J. Casey and Herbert Pattee.

Pearl Fisheries Story Being Produced

"The Vengeance of the Deep" Frank R. Adams' story of the South Sea pearl fisheries, is being directed by A. W. Barringer in Honolulu and surrounding territory for distribution by American Releasing Corporation, with a cast which includes Ralph Lewis, Virginia Brown Faire, Harmon MacGregor, Maida Vale, Van Mattimore and "Smoke" Turner.

Scenes from the William Christy Cabanne production "Till We Meet Again," for Associated Exhibitors.

Ziegfeld Expedition Back from Russian Trip

The motion picture expedition under the auspices of the Russian Pictures Corporation, of which W. K. Ziegfeld is head, has returned to New York with 40,000 feet of film taken in Russia and Siberia. W. K. Ziegfeld, Jr., was business manager, and Frank C. Zucker, head camera man of the expedition, which sailed June 17.

Through the cooperation of the Soviet government, the Ziegfeld expedition was enabled to photograph scenes and events which otherwise would have been impossible. It was the first cinema concern ever granted permission by the Soviet government to penetrate into Siberia for picture making purposes.

The members of the party penetrated the far reaches of the Ural mountains and spent some time in the Kuznetz Basin country, southeast of Moscow. The new industrial activities at Kemorovo, Siberia, were photographed, as well as the region in the neighborhood of Nebejdenski-Novod. Some very excellent panoramas were made of Moscow, with its hundreds of churches, its Kremlin and other historic buildings, as well as views of Petrograd, the harbor and its environs.

Cooper Tale of Plains to be Made

"The Deerslayer," James Fenimore Cooper's immortal tale of the plains, is to be Pyramid's next production for distribution by American Releasing Corporation.

Ray C. Smallwood, accompanied by Ben Carre, art director, is now in Los Angeles assembling the cast, most of whom have been engaged by wire, for an expedition to Glacier National Park, where the major portion of production will be staged.

"Tom Mix in Arabia" is the main title of the picture from which the above scenes are taken. It is a William Fox production.

Late News Briefs from the Coast by Wire

JESSE LASKY is the father of a baby girl, born Oct. 12. She has been named "Bessie."

Louis B. Mayer has purchased screen rights to "The Valley of Content," by Blanche Upright.

Arthur Jacobs will shortly begin filming production at United Studios. John Blackwood will be his chief assistant. The production is at present in the stage of casting.

Grauman's Hollywood theatre opens Wednesday night. Sixteen hundred seats at five dollars each have made it necessary to announce "Sold Out."

Charles R. Seeling is en route to the East with his production "The Purple Dawn," which he expects to market in New York. The picture was given a preview at Tally's theatre, Los Angeles, on Friday night, Oct. 16. In the cast are Bessie Love, Edward Peil, Bert Sproutte, William Aldrich, Priscilla Bonner, and others.

Jesse Hampton is in Los Angeles, selecting organization members to produce "The Spoilers" for Metro.

Doug's Production Has Great Coast Opening

In the following wire to Douglas Fairbanks, Sid Grauman tells of the enthusiasm at the premiere showing of the former's latest picture at Grauman's Los Angeles house:

"Every seat at premiere showing of Douglas Fairbanks in 'Robin Hood' at five dollars each was sold after the box office had been open only two hours. This I consider a marvelous compliment to 'Robin Hood.' The first tickets were purchased by William G. McAdoo, who stood in a line that reached completely around the block. 'Robin Hood' is over the top heavy."

Scenes in which Tom Moore and Mary Miles Minter appear in the Paramount picture, "The Cowboy and the Lady."

"Shadows" Premiere Is Postponed

Big Trade Showing Arranged for New Al. Lichtman Film

THE premiere of "Shadows," Ben Schulberg's second production for release through the Lichtman corporation, has been postponed from Friday, October 20, to Friday, October 27.

The reasons for the delay are two-fold. The franchise holders have wired in that they intend making up parties of important exhibitors to bring along with them and that they have found the time was too short under the present arrangement to do so. Lichtman also desired to put on a more elaborate presentation and therefore the showing was put off for a week.

The affair is rapidly taking shape as one of the important film events of the season. In point of numbers, the assemblage which will gather at the Biltmore on the 27th will rival the annual balls of the Motion Picture Directors' Association. Assurances have been received from an important list of film executives that they will attend the premiere. Schulberg and Lichtman have a host of friends in all branches of the industry who will be present. A number of requests have been received from out-of-town exhibitors and many film men in town.

All of the franchise holders who are within one night's travel of New York will make a special trip to town, bringing with them prominent theatre men from each exchange center. Invitations have been extended to the professional colony in New York.

The picture will be introduced simultaneously to the press, not only of New York but of the country and Europe as well.

Arrangements have been made for Erne Rappe, conductor of the Capitol theatre orchestra, to conduct the orchestra at the Biltmore showing, when Louis F. Gottschalk's musical score will be rendered for the first time. About 2,000 guests will be present, it is expected.

Regent Company Making "The Drivin' Fool"

Regent Pictures Company was recently formed in Los Angeles by E. D. Newman, who served as west coast fiscal representative for First National for a long period. The company has arranged to film "The Drivin' Fool" under the direction of Robert Thornby. This is a comedy drama from the Blue Book story, adapted for the screen by H. H. VanLoan.

Wally Van will play the name part, with Patsy Ruth Miller taking the opposite lead. Other principals in the cast are Alec Francis, Wilton Taylor and Ramsey Wallace.

Studio space has been secured from the Christie Film Company and work on the special production will begin immediately.

Universal Units Busy With Comedies

Two units are busily engaged at Universal City in the preparation of a varied selection of comedies for Universal's winter releases.

Neely Edwards' current comedy vehicle is "No Fare," directed by William Watson, with Gertrude Olmsted as leading woman. The picture is one of the "Nervy Ned" series, depicting the "romantic" adventures of a stylish hobo who is something of a small-time financier. These comedies have been under production on a regular schedule for several months.

Scenes from the Paramount picture "On the High Seas," with Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt in the leading roles.

Alice Lake Is Engaged to Support Owen Moore

Alice Lake, who has been a star in her own right, has been engaged to appear as leading lady in the next Owen Moore comedy for Selznick Pictures Corporation, according to announcement by Myron Selznick, president.

The Owen Moore picture, now being made under the title of "One Dollar Down," is one that has long been in contemplation for the star. The script is by Victor Heerman, who is also directing. Heerman has handled Moore in almost all of the big feature comedy successes in which he has appeared for the Selznick company during the past two or three years, and the "One Dollar Down" story has been developed to show the star in just the kind of screen acting for which he is best suited.

Betty Blythe Support Is Announced

The complete cast of "The Darling of the Rich," the second Betty Blythe starring vehicle, now nearing completion in the Whitman Bennett Studios in Yonkers, in addition to Miss Blythe includes. Montague Love, Charles Gerard, Gladys Leslie, June Jennings, Albert Hackett, Julia Swayne Gordon, Walter Walker.

In addition to the principals, there will be over two-hundred subordinate artists.

John Adolfi is directing the production.

Miss Cleveland Joins Distinctive Staff

Dorothy V. Cleveland has joined the staff of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, in their New York offices.

Miss Cleveland, who is originally from Atlanta, Ga., recently returned from an eight weeks' trip down South. For the past three years she has been writing advertising and publicity copy in New York.

In her new post Miss Cleveland will have charge of all magazines and newspaper publicity.

Goldwyn Acquires Several Well Known Stories

A NUMBER of well known stories have been acquired by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for its "Big Twenty" for the present season. Work on them will start shortly. Among others, the company has acquired the rights to Ethel M. Dell's new novel, "Top o' the World," recently published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, at a record price, for film rights to a novel, of $30,000. The story is said to lend itself admirably to screen treatment.

Marshall Neilan will make a film version of Edward E. Rose's new play, "The Rear Car," recently presented with such conspicuous success in Los Angeles. This play is a mystery melodrama and should prove an outstanding success as a screen story.

One of the most interesting acquisitions is that of the rights to Hard's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the special interest in this case being due to the fact that it will be a Marshall Neilan production.

The fourth new picture to be included in the twenty features will be a film version of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," which Hugo Ballin is to make.

Scenes from "White Shoulders," Preferred Pictures production, for First National

Edward Armstrong Made "U" Assistant Sales Manager

EDWARD ARMSTRONG, district manager of Pacific Coast Universal exchanges, has been promoted to Assistant General Sales Manager, with particular charge of the West Coast exchanges, according to announcement this week.

Armstrong started with Universal selling "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and was so successful that he was made manager of the Salt Lake City office. His promotion to a district managership followed last year.

His territory will include not only the five exchanges which are known as the coast exchanges, that is Spokane, Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, but will also include Butte, Salt Lake City and Denver territories, now designated in the Rocky Mountain territory.

Alice Brady's Next to be "The Leopardess"

An unpublished novel by Katherine Newlin Burt, "The Leopardess," will be Alice Brady's next Paramount vehicle, according to announcement made this week. The picture will be made at the Long Island studio under the direction of Henry Kolker, who produced "Disraeli," starring George Arliss, and who has just completed a picture with Madge Kennedy, "The Purple Highway." Work on the picture will be started in about a week from the scenario by J. Clarkson Miller.

The story is one of the South Seas with leopards, half-caste women and beach-combers. Miss Brady will have a role that very much suits her style of acting. She will be the half-caste girl whom the rich New York adventurer tries to tame as he tames the wild leopardess. The locale of the story is in the South Seas, New York and a country estate up the Hudson.

The supporting cast for Miss Brady has not yet been selected. Gilbert Warrenton will be the cameraman.

As an indication of the importance attached to the forthcoming release of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," it is announced that Sawyer and Lubin, of S-L Pictures, producers of this special, will combine their efforts for the purpose of exploiting this film to the trade and public.

In addition to an unusual campaign on the part of the Metro publicity department, S-L Pictures will expend a great sum in exploiting the screen version of the famous novel and stage play by Charles Felton Pidgin.

Herbert Lubin, of S-L, left New York this week for the purpose of visiting several key cities throughout the United States in the interest of the picture.

Hope Hampton Secures "Lawful Larceny"

Miss Hope Hampton has selected "Lawful Larceny" as her next production to follow her present picture, "The Light in the Dark."

"Lawful Larceny" was first presented to a New York audience by A. H. Woods at the Republic theatre the first of this year. It was among the season's successes. It is the first play to be written by Samuel Shipman without collaboration.

Miss Hampton will play the role of the wife as interpreted by Margaret Lawrence on the stage.

"The Fog" Will Shortly Enter Production

"The Fog," by William Dudley Pelley, will be picturized by Graf Productions, Inc., for release through Metro Pictures Corporation, it was announced this week from the New York offices of the distributing organization.

The first of these photoplays produced under the personal supervision of Max Graf, "The Forgotten Law," is soon to be ready for booking, and work will begin immediately at the western studios of the Graf company upon "The Fog."

Nickle Productions in Coast Field

A NEW motion picture company formed in Los Angeles, known as the Burr Nickle Productions, incorporated in California, is a heavily financed corporation, represented by notable and influential business men of Los Angeles, such as Burr Nickle, President and General Manager, Fred V. Gordon, Vice President and Richard Welty, Secretary and Treasurer.

Burr Nickle has been engaged in the picture business for the past eighteen years and is well versed with every angle of the business. F. V. Gordon is a successful oil man, having vast holdings in California, Texas and Mexico, as well as being an officer and director in several of the largest oil companies.

Nickle states he will have ready for release November 1st, "Sunken Rocks" from the story by E. Temple Thurston, featuring Alma Taylor and supported by a cast of finished players. Following the November 1st release the company will release one picture a month until a series of twelve have been sold.

These pictures will be sold on the State Rights basis.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 752 S. WABASH AVE.

Among the Exhibitors

TRAMP, tramp, tramp, the movies are marching. As in New York the great feature pictures are crowding out the speaking drama from the stages of theatres which have been dedicated to the latter, D. W. Griffith having taken over the Illinois, where he will open "One Exciting Night," on November 12th, for an indefinite run. This picture of mystery, of bootleggers, young ladies and detectives, is at present making a decided sensation in Boston. Complete plans for the presentation will be announced a little later.

The publicity campaign on "Remembrance," the Rupert Hughes success, which did a splendid business at the Chicago last week, was handled by Howard Dietz, who came on, especially, from New York for this purpose. A clever tie-up, such as a thousand automobile tags, telephone tags, and a flaming poster in every United Cigar store in the loop, called the attention of the crowds to the fact that Goldwyn's big special was in town.

The management of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," have announced that they will make ticket reservations for eight weeks ahead. Evidently the opening success of this splendid super feature has convinced them that it will enjoy a long run in Chicago.

Leo and Harry Brunhild and Nic Young, the three enterprising partners who compose the firm of Brunhild & Young, are scheduled to return in a few days from an extended automobile trip to Ashland, Wisconsin.

At the last meeting of the board of directors of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the appointment of the following committees, which will take up their duties at once were announced. Ways and Means Committee: Glen Reynolds, B. L. Berve, A. Dernbach, S. Abrahams, J. Hopp, S. H. Selig, L. H. Frank; Daylight Savings Committee: John Silha, A. Sapperstein, L. Siegel; Political Action Committee: S. Abrahams, S. Selig, J. Lamm, M. Siegel, D. J. Chrissis.

"The Prisoner Of Zenda," Metro's super special, has been booked into the Barbee for a week, beginning October 2nd, and following that will be shown at the Castle for two weeks. It goes into the Tivoli and Riviera on November 6th. This fine picture was having a very successful run at the Roosevelt, which was cut short owing to the necessity of putting in "When Knighthood Was In Flower."

John Silha is to attend the convention of Missouri exhibitors at Excelsior Springs this week. This is expected to be an important gathering of exhibitors as National President Cohen, W. A. True, president of the Connecticut Theatre Owners, and a director of the national organization, M. J. O'Toole, of Pennsylvania, and other men of national prominence in the industry, are scheduled to be present and make addresses.

The ceremonies of constitution of Illini Lodge of Masons were held Friday night and Joe Hopp installed as master. Illini Lodge is unique, as it is comprised almost entirely of film men, the idea of a moving picture organization such as this having originated with Mr. Hopp, who deserves credit for making his dream a reality.

W. W. Williams has been appointed Goldwyn manager at Indianapolis. Mr. Williams has been with United Artists for two years, but resigned to accept the new position.

Another former Chicago film man, E. Dawson, is now a United Artist representative at Indianapolis. He was formerly connected with Paramount.

Cupid has been busy around the Hodkinson office recently and it is understood that Clarence Phillips will marry Miss Helen Cohen on October 29th, and Charles Ludgren is planning to enter the holy state in November. Congratulations!

With the Exchanges

FOLLOWING the simultaneous downtown run of "The Wilderness of Youth," at the Castle and Barbee's Loop Theatres, Frank Zambreno, of Progress Pictures, reports that it is going over well in neighborhood houses. Included in the cast are: "Sunshine" Mary Anderson, Harry Morey, Virginia Pearson, Joseph Striker, Thurston Hall, Julia Swayne Gordon and the late Bobby Connelly.

The popularity of pictures in which Valentino appears is shown by the bookings of "A Rogue's Romance," which is being reissued by Vitagraph. Among the important circuits closing for this picture within the past few days were Lubliner & Trinz, Ascher Brothers, Schoenstadt's and Coston's Circuit.

President Carl Laemmle of Universal, and Art Schmidt, general manager of exchanges, were in Chicago this week conferring with Sales Manager Stern, of the local exchange, and other officials. Mr.

Laemmle made a brief visit to Milwaukee for a day and returned to New York late in the week with Mr. Schmidt.

District Manager Duncan, of Vitagraph, was back at the Chicago headquarters this week, after an extended trip which took him to many of the important key centers west of Chicago. He reports a noticeable improvement in conditions throughout the territory, and that the feeling among exhibitors and exchange men is much better, as they believe that business will continue to improve throughout the Fall and Winter season.

Manager Clyde Eckhardt, of Fox, has assigned Frederick Jacoby, a recent addition to his sales staff, to country territory. Mr. Jacoby formerly was a salesman for Realart.

Associated First National has completed arrangements for a trade showing of "Oliver Twist," starring Jackie Coogan, at Orchestra Hall, at 10:30 a. m., October 27th. Balaban & Katz's orchestra will furnish the music and a buffet luncheon will be served following the showing. According to early reports on "Oliver Twist," it is a remarkable picture in which the diminutive star does some of the best work of his career.

Bill Brimmer is a new member of Associated First National's sales force and will sell short subjects in Chicago territory.

Manager Eichenlaub, of United Artists' Chicago exchange, has added Herb Washburn to his staff of salesmen. Washburn worked under Mr. Eichenlaub for a long period during the latter's connection with First National.

Two new salesmen are now connected with Educational, Manager Schwartz having found it necessary to increase his staff to handle the business. They are Messrs. Stern and Posner, the former of whom was booker for First National, and the latter a salesman for Pathe in Northern Illinois.

Phil Dunas, who has been covering city territory for Associated First National, has been transferred to the Northern Illinois territory, formerly covered by Herb Washburn, resigned.

Walter Altman is now a member of the sales force of the Clyde E. Elliott Amusement Enterprises, and will cover country territory. Mr. Elliott and his salesmen are very busy booking the series of Betty Blythe pictures, which he recently acquired for Illinois territory. "How Women Love," the first of the features, will be released in this territory about November 5th.

Createore and Sousa at Minneapolis Houses

Createore and Sousa in the same week was the musical treat offered Minneapolis music lovers last week.

While Sousa appeared for one night at the Auditorium, Createore was here for the entire week, through the enterprise of the State. Createore was guest conductor at that theatre, wielding the baton of William Warvelle Nelson, the regular conductor. The orchestra was expanded for the week.

The concerts of Createore were greatly applauded by the crowds which jammed the theatre to see Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy."

The State theatre is becoming known for its music. Last season Pallma and His Band Supreme were popular, while this year Nelson and his orchestra have been equally well liked.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FOX

Nero—

Wonderful production, beautifully staged and well directed. Played to big business. Fortunately played it during week in which Columbus Day was celebrated and had the support of entire Italian population. (Middle West.)

Business only fair; my patrons like American pictures. (West.)

West of Chicago—

A well known jazz band pulled this one for a week run; they came to hear the band. (East.)

My Friend the Devil—

A very strong picture, thrilling, mystifying and a powerful sermon against Atheism. Exceedingly well liked. Excellent business. (East.)

The Yosemite Trail—

Fair picture with fair business. (East.)

A Fool There Was—

Was very well received, but attendance was nothing remarkable. Public fancy is turning from this class of picture. (Middle West.)

Lights of the Desert—

Bad picture with business fair. (East.)

The Queen of Sheba—

Business not so good; opinion is that those who wanted to see it at all attended the first time it played here. (Middle Wes.)

The Fast Mail—

Exciting as you make them and it did good business. People seemed to like it, having come with the idea of seeing just what they did see. (Middle West.)

Silver Wings—

Mary Carr popular but picture not up to her performance in "Over the Hill." Did only fair. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Always the Woman—

Picture and business both fell off. (East.)

Remembrance—

Not up to expectations and business not so good. (West.)

High class with plenty of heart interest. Picture went over very well during this week's run. (West.)

Good picture, but business off. (East.)

Sherlock Holmes—

My patrons did not turn out for this one. Picture not up to standard. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Bond Boy—

A well liked star and a good film. Played to good business. (East.)

Great picture; drew to fine business. (Middle West.)

Just as appealing as "Tol'able David." Fine acting for Barthelmess; pulled big houses for one week. (Middle West.)

This one drew only a fair attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Art with a capital A. Came up to "Tol'able David" and was equally as well liked by an audience that expected big things; good business week. (Middle West.)

A very nice entertainment. Richard Barthelmess does some real acting. Drew well during week's run. (Middle West.)

Gloomy story; business greatly helped by Victor Herbert's appearance. (East.)

Very well liked by audiences and business satisfactory. (Middle West.)

Great picture; going over big all along the coast. (West.)

Kindred of the Dust—

Good story, no particular pulling power. Held up fairly well for four days. (Middle West.)

As great as the novel itself; heard much favorable comment. Receipts satisfactory. (Middle West.)

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Old Homestead—

Opened to overflow, but fell off second day and continued to slump all week. Patrons want modern stuff. (East.)

Went over in fine shape here; good picture. (Middle West.)

The Ghost Breaker—

Good picture and attracted a fair amount of business. (East.)

Regulation Wallace Reid picture. I think our patrons are getting tired of Reid in these conventional pictures. Heard people say so on several occasions. Business not as good as with previous Reid pictures. (Middle West.)

Went across big. They all like Wallace Reid. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

Pink Gods—

Just the type of picture for present day audiences. Personal appearance of Kitty Gordon helped bring them in in such numbers that seats were at a premium. (East.)

Blood and Sand—

Did very satisfactory business all week in spite of second run. (East.)

The Siren Call—

Bad picture; business slumped with disappointed patrons. (West.)

Manslaughter—

Very fine picture; opportunity for big exploitation. Played two weeks and did better second week than first. (Middle West.)

This is the kind of business that makes them smile. Good all week in spite of some weather handicaps; jammed them in again on holidays. (Middle West.)

Business picked up with this one; cast great; picture only fair, business the same. (West.)

Burning Sands—

Picture and business both bad. (East.)

The Loves of Pharaoh—

Superb picture. Entirely too good for commercial value. (East.)

The Top of New York—

Box office returns on this one were good. (Middle West.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

One of the great pictures of the year. Spectacular and also interesting. Playing to great business. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Prisoner of Zenda—

Best characterized as a knockout. Did splendid business here. One of the best that Rex Ingram has done. Hundreds turned away. (East.)

Wonderful picture; drew big on two weeks' run. (Middle West.)

Broadway Rose—

One of Mae Murray's best. Elaborate settings and costumes helped to put it over to big crowds. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Heart's Haven—

A very good picture that went well here; very good business. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

My Wild Irish Rose—

Very well made film. Appeals to all. Intense Irish appeal. Excellent business. Held over for another week. (East.)

A Girl's Desire—

A very pleasing little picture and should fit into any program. Average receipts. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

In the Name of the Law—

Played to big houses for one week. Good tie-up picture. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

The Sign of the Rose—

The personal appearance of George Beban greatly aided this one to draw big for a week. (Middle West.)

ASSO-EX.

Grandma's Boy—

One of the best drawing cards in several weeks. Went over big for a week's run. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Confidence—

Nothing to rave about. Average entertainment. Business average. (Middle West.)

Not a picture to recommend. (West.)

The Storm—

A big picture in every respect. Criticisms of the best, and patrons liked it very much. Satisfactory attendance. (Middle West.)

Human Hearts—

Good picture and drew good business. (East.)

Under Two Flags—

Great drawing power; people pleased. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

How Women Love—

Picture and business both poor. (East.)

Ties Up with Loan Company on "The Old Homestead"

Philadelphia, Pa.—A tie-up with a building and loan association, executed by Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiteer, has broken ground for the exploitation of "The Old Homestead."

One of the largest of such organizations is the Greater West Philadelphia Building and Loan Association, at the head of which are a number of leading citizens. This association has received widespread publicity through its movement to build up West Philadelphia.

Orowitz sold this organization a herald with a front flap showing "Theodore Roberts in the Paramount Picture, 'The Old Homestead.'"

The tie-up line used on the front was: "All the money in the world isn't half enough to compare with the sentimental value attached to 'The Old Homestead.' If you want that once-in-a-lifetime thrill when you proudly say, 'I've got the h-o-m-e all paid for,' join the Greater West Philadelphia Building and Loan Association."

"In the Name of the Law" Is Given Novel Display

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The management of the Victoria theatre, with the aid of the police department, made up a novel and attractive lobby display for use during the run of "In the Name of the Law."

The stand was in the form of a folding screen on which were displayed various types of handcuffs and leg irons used by police, as well as several unique weapons taken from notorious criminals. Various identification cards and advertisements for the arrest of criminals completed the display. One of the most interesting specimens was a knife made from a bed post by a prisoner in his effort to escape.

Baseball Score-Card Used to Exploit "Gypsy Passion"

JOLIETTE, Canada—Manager Singerman tied up with a baseball game between Joliette and Ahuntsic recently to exploit "Gypsy Passion," which was booked to play his theatre shortly after.

Score cards were printed in red on lightweight, white cardboard, bearing the usual box scoring arrangement and an advertisement in French on both sides for "Gypsy Passion."

Elaborate Campaign on "Blood and Sand" at Charlotte

Charlotte, N. C.—Manager Ray Beall of the Imperial theatre began his campaign on "Blood and Sand" two weeks before play date with special heralds. These were on cardboard, size 7x7 inches. In bold faced block type in the center was printed "BLOOD and SAND." In the upper left-hand corner in small type the name RODOLPH VALENTINO. In the lower right-hand corner, IMPERIAL.

These were distributed throughout the town, and thrown in all automobiles parked in the business section. Immediately after the distribution of these teaser-cards a great many people inquired at the Imperial to know when this picture would be shown.

One week before play date the advance newspaper advertising was started. Also 2,000 of the regular stock heralds were dated and distributed from the Imperial theatre exits.

Sunday, before the opening, Monday, 1,000 postals were mailed to cover the Imperial's up-to-date mailing list.

A special lobby display was arranged one week in advance and consisted of a cut-out frame holding nine still photographs. Furthermore, Manager Beall was successful in securing the loan of a banderilla that was brought from Juarez, Mex., and that had actually been used in a bull fight. This banderilla was displayed in a one-sheet frame. One of the still pictures displayed with it was most appropriate, a shot illustrating how the banderilla is used in a fight.

The special lobby display during the run consisted of a presentation of a small arena or bull-ring.

Apologizes to Patrons as Ad for "The Eternal Flames"

DES MOINES, Iowa.—The Des Moines theatre used a somewhat unusual mail campaign recently to exploit "The Eternal Flame," when a card was sent to patrons, reading:

"CORRECTION—and an Apology. It was not our intention to mislead you when we made the statement that 'Smilin' Through' was all that the screen can give. We honestly believed it and so did the thousands of patrons who saw the attraction.

"We are forced to retract our statement by announcing that what we believe to be the peer of 'Smilin' Through,' the Drama Magnificent, 'The Eternal Flame' in which Norma Talmadge scores triumphantly is coming to the Des Moines next week."

Manager Charles H. Amos of the Strand theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., erected this lobby display on "Madame Peacock"

Thirty Foot Banner Carried on Airplane Over Hartford

Hartford, Conn.—Manager Harry Needles of the Princess theatre used an original stunt on "Hurricane's Gal" which proved somewhat hazardous but got results.

A plane flew over the city, dragging a banner 30 feet long and seven feet deep, about 250 yards in its rear. The papers called it the "aeroplane tractor," and the phrase was readily accepted and made a good newspaper story. The danger came in the risk of air currents with the "tractor" behind the plane, that made flying doubly hazardous.

Later on, the banner was put in front of the theatre with the caption: "The First Sign to Fly Over Hartford."

Street ballyhoos used by the Tower theatre to tell St. Paul residents that "The Fast Mail" was playing that house

Atmospheric Prolog Staged to "The Eternal Flame"

Lafayette, Ind.—Manager Herbert H. Johnson of the Luna theatre staged an effective atmospheric prolog to "The Eternal Flame" when that picture played his house recently.

The setting comprised dark draperies and a huge cauldron reposing upon a tripod in the center of the stage. From the cauldron there emanated a whitish smoke. Then there appeared a child dressed in the garb of Cupid. Into the cauldron he poured from a transparent decanter a deep red liquid. The he stirred the mixture with a silver arrow, whereupon it burst into a flaming shaft and at the same time, by cleverly manipulated electrical illumination, the entire interior of the theatre was suffused in a magnificent red glow.

Thus was "The Eternal Flame" exemplified.

Cleveland Street Ballyhoo Is Used on "Paid Back"

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Standard theatre used a street ballyhoo with excellent success on "Paid Back" when that picture was playing the Standard.

A neatly attired man, with panama hat and walking stick, walked about the streets with a sign on his back, reading:

"I loaned a friend 25 cents to see a great picture at the Standard theatre this week, and I have been 'PAID BACK.'"

Sills' Make-Up in "Skin Deep" Is Exploited

Chicago, Ill.—The make-up used in the early portion of "Skin Deep" by Milton Sills was capitalized by W. K. Hollander, publicity director for Balaban and Katz, when the picture ran at the Chicago theatre.

In the first part of the picture the featured player has a crook make-up that makes him unrecognizable. The publicity man used this picture in the papers before any announcement was made of "Skin Deep" and invited motion picture fans, under the caption of "Do You Know?" to identify the player.

More than 2,000 replies were received. Of these about 300 were correct. The right answer was given coincidentally with the first display advertising on the picture and made the tie-up which created a large audience interest for the run.

Display of 40-inch candle and butterfly used on "The Eternal Flame" at the Strand theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Ingenious sign over box-office of Phillips theatre, Orlando, Fla., on "Turn to the Right," W. F. Estes, manager

There are three entrances to the Strand theatre, Waco, Tex., but only two of them are used by patrons, so when an elaborate compo board front was placed on the house for the showing of "The Eternal Flame," a cut-out was placed in the centre entrance, against a curtain, with results as shown above

Butterflies and Music Exploit "The Eternal Flame"

Des Moines, Iowa.—Butterflies and music were the main notes in the exploitation campaign on "The Eternal Flame," staged by the Des Moines theatre.

The butterflies danced around the flames produced by two burning candles that have symbolized the exploitation on "The Eternal Flame." They were put in as a window display by Zavet, the jeweler, in connection with a profile of Miss Talmadge advertising the Norma Talmadge pearls as worn in the picture.

The candles, each three feet long, burned for forty-eight hours with the butterflies clinging to the mirror. The ideal way would have been to have an electrical butterfly that could fly around and flap its wings, but as a next best idea the theatre used the inanimate variety.

Although best sellers were on every shelf of the largest music store in Des Moines, "The Eternal Flame" based on the picture and dedicated to Miss Talmadge, occupied the center space in the long music stand, and it was advertised by a special, hand-painted sign right above the cash register. The close proximity of this sheet of music to the cash register saved the clerk a lot of walking.

Display of handcuffs, weapons, etc., used in lobby of Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., on "In the Name of the Law," through police co-operation

Housewives' Matinee Given on "Song of Life"

PADUCAH, Ky.—The Arcade theatre gave a housewives' matinee as an exploitation stunt during the run of "The Song of Life" at which valuable household articles were given away by three department stores that figured in the advertising on the picture.

Experts from these stores gave brief talks on housework and housekeeping science at the matinee and the performance scored one of the biggest hits of the year. The husbands weren't present but they showed their appreciation in other ways.

Fashion Show Prologue Used for "Her Gilded Cage"

Rockford, Ill.—Combining a style revue and a prologue was recently done successfully at Ascher's Midway theatre by Manager Charles H. Darrell when Gloria Swanson, in "Her Gilded Cage," was the attraction.

A platform was built between the screen and the orchestra pit. A runway was laid from either side of it to the exits flanking the proscenium. A cage was rigged over one of these exits, the set fitted with appropriate lighting, and in spite of the heat—the mercury sticking close to 100—the show was well received.

The fashion parade opened with the spotlight finding a young lady in the center of the stage on a small pedestal. In passing out on the side she ushered in a second mannequin and the display moved this way through forty-four changes in twenty minutes. Each model moved to a different piece of music which served to identify them in the various costumes. A clever little Rockford miss worked in a toe dance specialty as a variation. Appeal was made to mothers through a tiny little girl. The parade closed with some jazz steps by one of the models in ballet costume.

The title of the feature was worked in by a male voice rendering "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage," singing to a young lady soprano placed in the cage mentioned above, who carried the second chorus with the man in harmony.

Exploits War Angle in Putting "Skin Deep" Over

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Manager T. H. Boland of the Empress theatre, in exploiting "Skin Deep" discarded the traditional idea that the public won't stand for war themes. In fact, he concentrated on this angle.

His first stunt was a midnight showing to 150 ex-service men, members of the American Legion. They gave "Skin Deep" an official endorsement and tremendous word of mouth advertising.

Then Boland set to work on his lobby. Discarded army rifles, helmets, war torpedoes, flags and a pup tent with a wax sentry on guard constituted the display that not only threw the old ideas into oblivion but started the way for a record attendance for "Skin Deep."

Newsboys Given Free Showing of "The Devil's Foot"

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Central Amusement Company, which is running the series of two-reel subjects on "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," recently made a tie-up with the Indianapolis Star for a special Saturday morning performance of "The Devil's Foot" for Star newsboys.

More than 2,000 newsboys gathered in front of the offices of the Star and marched in parade formation through the downtown streets to the Lyric theatre, where "The Devil's Foot" was presented for their entertainment, together with a program made up entirely of Educational's short subjects. Other pictures on the program included "Rolling Stones," "For Land's Sake" and Lyman H. Howe's "Ride on a Runaway Train."

The Star printed several advance stories about this special showing and about the pictures to be presented at the Lyric and Isis theatres, and on the Sunday morning after the newsboys' program, carried a story and two big pictures under a three-column head telling about the great time the newsies had at their special performance.

Chariot Stunt Used on "Nero" at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—The management of the Bellevue theatre used the always effective chariot stunt as a feature of its exploitation campaign for "Nero" recently.

For an entire week prior to the opening, a two-horse chariot was driven about the streets of the city by a man attired in the toga and garments of an ancient Roman. The affair was constructed at little cost, the front wheels and tongue of a wagon and a simple box of painted tin being all that was used.

On the horses were placed large canvas signs identifying the theatre and the production.

Handsome Lobby Heralds Coming of "Broadway Rose"

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager Gus Carlson of Sobelman and Rowe's Blue Mouse theatre arranged an advance lobby display comprised of artificial roses, four oil paintings of the star, and other decorative ideas, for "Broadway Rose."

Patrons entering the lobby of the theatre saw first the four oil paintings of the star, all mounted on a wall of deep blue velour separated from each other by clusters of small artificial roses. In the inside lobby was another lavish display of the flowers which evoked many comments on their beauty. The roses were tied in heavy ropes, suspended in loops from the electric fixtures on the ceiling. At each door, leading into the theatre itself, was placed a large urn, on which were bunched more roses.

Above the doors another unusual effect was obtained. On each of the mirrors which are built in the wall above the entrance appeared lettering of red cardboard, reading "Coming Mae Murray in 'Broadway Rose.'" This unique bit added effectively to the entire decorative scheme.

Dollar Savings Account Given on "The Five Dollar Baby"

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager S. G. Lebedorff of the Liberty theatre found giving a dollar away with each ticket purchased for "The Five Dollar Baby" a highly effective exploitation measure. He had circulated handbills reading:

"We will give away a check for One Dollar Free to every person buying an adult's ticket during the showing of 'The Five Dollar Baby.'"

The stunt was made possible through the co-operation of a savings bank, whose practice it has been to credit every depositor of $5 for six months with $1, as an inducement to open an account. That is to say, if Smith puts $5 in the bank and guarantees to leave that $5 there six months, he has, at the end of that period, $6 to his credit.

The dollar the Liberty theatre gave away free was in the form of a check which, if deposited in the savings bank with another $5, would belong to the holder at the end of six months.

Lavish Fashion Review Staged at Stanley, Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa.—A lavish and elaborate stage setting was used by the Stanley theatre in connection with a Fashion Review presented under the auspices of Gimbel Brothers.

The Fashion Review was staged in three episodes, being a combination of motion pictures and displays by living models. The pictures, showing how Paris was brought to Philadelphia, were taken in France by a Stanley cameraman. They first show the establishments of Paris dressmakers, the world's famous mannequins, fashion's proving grounds, the great restaurants, the boulevards and Paris of the moment, and this episode concludes with the living models.

The second episode brings more motion pictures, showing Dame Fashion in varying moods at the famous Casino at Deauville, the great watering place, and then is shown the models in costumes for all hours. For the finale the film episode showed the famous couturier, M. Paul Poiret, his renowned gardens and his equally renowned mannequins. Then the lifting of the curtains reveals the stage set in reproduction of these gardens.

Actor Arrested as Stunt for "In the Name of the Law"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Policeman E. W. Meredith won a $50 prize by arresting Emory Johnson, a motion picture actor. It all evolved around a performance at the Strand when the picture "In the Name of the Law" was displayed and the proceeds that afternoon were used to defray hospital expenses of a certain policeman. The mayor, chief of police and other city dignitaries were in the parade.

Previously word had been sent out that Johnson was to parade the downtown section attired in the uniform of a policeman and that a $50 reward would be paid to the first policeman who recognized Johnson and brought him to the Strand theatre. That idea paid the management well also, for many spoke of it for days.

Candles and Pearls Combine to Exploit "Eternal Flame"

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—The Auditorium theatre, in its window tie-ups on "The Eternal Flame," used the odd combination, candles and pearls, to attract the attention of shoppers. Stills were used liberally, combined with the pearls, which are used in the picture.

The 40-inch candle won attention because of its novelty and the fact that shoppers were invited to make a study of it from a scientific angle and guess how long it would take to burn out in continuous minutes. The idea was tied up with the title "The Eternal Flame."

Grandma's Matinee Given for "Grandma's Boy"

GADSDEN, Ala.—Co-operating with the secretaries of churches, Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre obtained the name of every grandmother in Gadsden. He then made a personal call on them and extended an invitation to the first matinee performance of "Grandma's Boy." Publicity was given to the fact of this performance. The day of the showing, a special section of the theatre was reserved for the grandmothers, 64 of whom attended.

"Cinderella Contest" Used at Baltimore on "Zenda"

Baltimore, Md.—A "Cinderella contest" in conjunction with showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the New theatre, one of the Whitehurst chain, brought unusually good publicity for the film, the stunt being arranged in a tie-up with the shoe store of N. Hess and Sons, on a leading shopping thoroughfare. Slippers worn by Alice Terry, playing the lead in the picture, were shown in the store window with a descriptive sign which offered first and second prizes and free tickets up to a seventh prize. The first and second prizes were a handsome pair of slippers made to order for the girls able to wear the Terry slippers.

A large painting of Alice Terry and Lewis Stone in the picture formed a background, and the remainder of the window was given over to a special display of women's slippers on sale in the store. As a boost for the picture a local paper ran daily stories, starting with a picture of Miss Terry. More than an hour was required to allow "try ons" by applicants for the prizes.

The stunt was arranged by Leon Victor, publicity representative for "The Prisoner of Zenda;" Eugene N. Daley, manager of the New theatre, and Louis A. De Hoff, booking director for the Whitehurst chain.

"Grandma's Boy" Seen by 350 Grandmothers

Philadelphia, Pa.—Comparatively few exploitation stunts manage to get into conservative papers like the Evening Public Ledger, but it was accomplished by the Carman theatre with a grandmother's matinee on "Grandma's Boy," which the paper handled as a straight news story, under a three-column spread head and a layout. The Ledger said:

"Grandmothers—or at least 350 gray-haired, spectacled old ladies, who said they were grandmothers and very likely were. As George Gravenstine remarked, ladies at that age would hardly perjure themselves for the sake of a free admission to the movies.

"Incidentally, that's what it was—'Grandmother's Day' at Mr. Gravenstine's movie theatre at Hilton street and Germantown avenue. They came on the arms of little boys who, for the mere virtue of possessing grandmothers, were likewise admitted free, gratis, for nothing. There were in the bargain a hundred odd little girls, but from these, grandmothered or otherwise, the management collected admission.

"The idea came to Mr. Gravenstine a few days ago when he engaged for his theatre a Harold Lloyd movie called 'Grandma's Boy.' Emotionally, this picture sent Mr. Gravenstine's memory spinning back to the days of his own grandmothers.

"Be that as it may, anyone who doubted the virtue in Mr. Gravenstine's idea had only to watch the old ladies yesterday."

"For Sale" Tags Are Placed on 10,000 Auto Windshields

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Manager Greenman of the Fox Liberty theatre created sensation recently in his exploitation on "A Fool There Was," when he had more than 10,000 small cards hung to the windshields of automobiles on the streets.

Printed on light red board, the cards bore the following:

"THIS CAR is not FOR SALE because the owner is going to drive it to the Fox Liberty theatre to see 'A Fool There Was.'"

"This Car" and "For Sale" were printed in prominent type, with the rest of the wording smaller.

Powder Puffs Given Ladies as "Gilded Cage Stunt"

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager DeSales Harrison of the Howard theatre put "Her Gilded Cage" over largely by foyer advertising during the week previous to the showing.

A large and attractive gilded cage made of wooden rods and strips was set up on a box-like base in the center of the foyer. It was "roped off" by yellow ribbon passing around small upright stanchions setting about four feet back from the cage. The ribbons extended up the grand stairway to the mezzanine floor, making a narrow passageway down which a girl, dressed and made up to resemble Gloria Swanson, passed on her way to the cage.

Just before the start of each de luxe performance, afternoon and evening, and while the foyer was packed with crowds entering and leaving, a small orchestra on the mezzanine floor began to play. The plush curtains at the head of the stairs were drawn back and the girl stepped out and made her way slowly to the time of the music down the stairs and into the cage. There she picked up a basket of "Gloria Swanson" powder puffs and distributed them to the ladies. They were enclosed in envelopes that carried a cleverly worded ad for the picture. When the powder puffs were all distributed she returned up the stairs and vanished behind the plush curtains.

For this stunt Mr. Harrison was fortunate in securing a girl that resembled Gloria Swanson very much. This resemblance was enhanced by the costume and make-up.

Fake Summons Idea Used on "Reported Missing"

Darlington, S. C.—Manager Baxter of the Liberty theatre got out a fake court summons, in regular legal form, on "Reported Missing," which he reports as having gotten results. It was gotten up in regulation style on the outer fold, and the copy inside included the following:

"You are hereby summoned and required to be and appear at the Liberty theatre at one or more of the regular performances, that is to say, at 5:30, 7:15 or 9 p.m. on one or both of the calendar days Monday, the 11th, or Tuesday, the 12th of September, A. D. 1922, there to chuckle, laugh, roar and otherwise revel and delight in and over the greatest super-comedy-drama of thrills, surprises, and serio-dramatic punches yet produced, 'REPORTED MISSING,' of which the greatest dramatic critic, ALAN DALE, says: 'This picture whirls with incident, with rush and push and vigor and vim'—and DALE doesn't have to boost any man's picture!

"Failing to appear as above required and summoned, and 'REPORTED MISSING,' you are hereby sentenced to miss, forego, and forever regret passing up the greatest screen treat of your life, and in such event, you are warned to blame no man for your lack of wisdom and judgment."

Shoe Store Tie-Up Effective In Exploiting "Zenda"

Cleveland, O.—A co-operative arrangement with a leading shoe store materially added the Stillman theatre here recently in putting over "The Prisoner of Zenda."

In the window of the N. O. Stone Shoe company was shown a pair of slippers worn by Alice Terry, who plays the role of Princess Flavia in "The Prisoner of Zenda." A large sign was displayed, which read: "These dainty slippers were worn by Alice Terry, in the making of the picture production, 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' to be presented week of August 20th at the Stillman theatre. Can any Cleveland girl wear them? The following prizes will be given: First, second and third ladies whom the slippers fit, a handsome pair of slippers each, made to order. Fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh prizes, free tickets to 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' They can be tried on inside store in Ladies' Shoe Department Tuesday Morning, August 22 between 10 and 11 o'clock.

A large colored painting showing Lewis Stone and Alice Terry was exhibited in the window, and provided an attractive background. A large assortment of ladies' slippers completed the effective display.

The Cleveland Press published a detailed daily story about the progress of the competition. The first day's story outlined the general idea of the stunt, under a large picture of Miss Terry. It made an appeal to civic pride, in that it gave the opinion of experts that Atlanta, Pittsburg and Portland were the only cities in which "Cinderella feet" could be found. The story went on to give the average size of women's feet in Cleveland as $5\frac{1}{2}$, in comparison with the average $4\frac{1}{2}$ which these other cities boasted.

Each day the details of the competition were published. Photographs of contestants were printed, and on the day of the final choice of Cleveland's Cinderella, when the lucky woman was to get a pair of slippers, the shoe store was crowded with eager applicants for the coveted distinction.

Theatre Ties Up With Art Shop to Exploit "Out of the Dust"

BALTIMORE, MD. As an additional attraction for "Out of the Dust," while playing at the New Theatre, arrangements were made with an art shop of the city to accept seat coupons in exchange for prints suitable for framing, of famous paintings by Frederic Remington, great portrayer of western life.

Raffles Dodge Finally Pulled on "The Masquerader"

Indianapolis, Ind.—Ever since "The Masquerader" has been released, theatre managers have waited for some daring exhibitor who would be able to put across the old Raffles stunt so commonly suggested in connection with the picture. Traffic has become more congested and police departments have taken umbrage at any scheme which tends to increase their trouble. The question of inconveniencing a great many people has also been a factor.

In several places it has been started since "The Masquerader" was run but because of difficulties that arose it has never been consummated. The exhibitor who finally managed to straighten out all the kinks is Ralph Lieber, manager of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

In conjunction with the Indianapolis Times the Circle theatre engaged a man to roam around the streets as "The Masquerader from the Times." The individual addressing him by this title was entitled to the reward. The masquerader was at liberty for eight days before he was finally captured by a woman. In the meantime the reward had been raised from $50 to $100 as day after day passed during which the masquerader walked through holiday, baseball and fair crowds without being recognized.

Every day the Times carried a front page article, with a photograph of the masquerader that showed his clothing and stature but not the features of his face. The newspaper articles run in connection with the man hunt were gems of journalism in their by-play on human interest stuff.

The tie up wasn't neglected. The Times went to great pains in explaining that the Raffles stunt should not be taken as symbolizing the plot of "The Masquerader" and that the explanation was made for the benefit of those who were going to the Circle theatre.

Safety Campaign Tie-Up Wins "Manslaughter" Publicity

Baltimore, Md.—A publicity campaign in which the police department, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association, the Mayor, the Governor of the State and the Automobile Club of Maryland all took an active part and lent not only endorsement but active cooperation, has just been completed by the Century theatre here for "Manslaughter."

The publicity was particularly well done since the name of the film was mentioned only incidentally. For example, the city was posted with placards and posters calling attention to the need of safety first measures and the fact that manslaughter might be the consequence of failure to heed the warning. These posters were placed on traffic patrolmen's stands, police department signs and on buildings as well as on the usual boards.

The Automobile club, seeing the real opportunity in the scheme, arranged to have the watchmen stationed at automobile parking spots distribute several thousand windshield stickers bearing the words:

Be Careful! Manslaughter may result from carelessness.

The M. and M. association, Governor Ritchie and Mayor Broening all wrote endorsing the campaign and including in their letters matters pertaining to safety which could be—and were—printed by the city papers as straight news. Heavy advertising at the opening of the week emphasized the safety campaign feature as well as presented the picture. Eugene N. Daley, manager of the Century, and Leslie F. Whalen, publicity man for Paramount, put over the campaign.

Lobby Transformed Into Saloon For "The Kick-Back"

ATLANTA, Ga.—Manager G. M. Phillips of the Strand theatre brought back many old memories in exploiting "The Kick-Back," when his lobby was transformed into a replica of an old western saloon, complete in every detail. On the right hand side was a regular bar where soft drinks were served to patrons. This was accomplished by tying up with a local soft-drink manufacturer.

Steps lead up stairs to the conventional "rooms" of the miners, and on the little platform at the back of the steps was a cut-out of Harry Carey leaning over the railing. Needless to say the lobby had a "kick" and "The Kick-Back" enjoyed a successful run.

Sign Painting Contest Brings Kids Out for Picture

Richmond, Va.—A stunt which could be applied to any picture likely to interest children was used by the manager of the Bijou theatre on "A Trip to Paramount," when he staged a special showing for the kids, who were invited free.

The management also offered prizes of full school kits to youngsters making the best signs for the special showing.

The signs all read: "We are going on a trip through Paramount Land."

The kids assembled at a given spot and beat a noisy way to the theatre.

Many Exploitation Stunts Are Staged in Kansas

Kansas City, Mo.—Unusual interest in exploitation is being shown just now in the Kansas City territory. Here are a few random excerpts:

To cram your fork into the breast of a fried chicken and pull out a card, placed just under the skin, reading, "It's only 'Skin Deep'," and to receive a telegram, while away from home, telling you not to book Paramount pictures, that the police force is inadequate, signed by the chief of police of your town—those are two stunts that will be pulled at the Kansas convention in Wichita, Kans.

Then J. C. Cruise, manager of the Quality theatre, Independence, Kans., drew out the crowds last week when he staged a dog race down the thoroughfare of his hamlet, each dog being enveloped in a poster, reading: "The Silent Call."

And last, but by no means least, Howard Kingsmore of the Kansas City Paramount office broke into the limelight by staging a resemblance contest at Electric Park during Paramount Week. Many were the girls who thought they resembled Gloria Swanson, but a silver loving cup and season passes to the Newman, Royal and Twelfth Street theatres fully satisfied all contestants.

Stanley Chambers, Miller theatre, Wichita, Kans., had cards placed on virtually every cigar lighter in Wichita, "This flame is for a light—The Eternal Flame is for the heart—Norma Talmadge—Miller theatre."

Puts Personal Touch in Cards on "Human Hearts"

Seattle, Wash.—Direct personal advertising with a short, pointed message was used with success by Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre as one of the means of putting over "Human Hearts."

The day the showing of "Human Hearts" began, 2,000 postcards were sent through the mails to established families in the city. The cards began, "Dear Friends:—There will be three and perhaps four pictures this season that will rank as the outstanding photoplays of the year. 'Human Hearts' is one of these." A small picture of House Peters covered a part of the card on the left-hand side, and beneath the picture was the words, "P.S.—'Human Hearts' is now playing at the Columbia Theatre" in small, heavy type letters. Following this printed matter came an announcement of the other attractions on the same bill as "Human Hearts." The postcard was signed, "Sincerely yours, re-created, The Columbia theatre."

Aside from the postcards, Manager Case also had 2,000 automobile cards printed. These were the same size as the postcards, but instead of beginning, "Dear Friends," the auto cards started "Do You Know That—" On the opposite side of the card, instead of the space for the name and address, the card said, "'Top O' The Mornin' To You Soon at the Columbia theatre." In this way Manager Case put over some advance advertising on his coming attraction. The automobile cards were fastened on the steering wheels of cars that were parked in the downtown streets.

Police Escort Meets Print of "Foolish Wives" at Train

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, in addition to most of the stunts that have been reported on "Foolish Wives" went a little farther and had the exchange wire him to have a police escort meet the train that brought the picture to Wilmington, as it carried an extremely high valuation.

Stellings at once got the police chief, who designated two officers, armed, to meet the train and the picture was escorted to the biggest bank there and deposited in the vault over night. An officer accompanied the print to the bank that night after closing to see that it was safely locked up.

"Blood and Sand" is Billed as Bull-Fight at Mattoon

MATTOON, Ill.—Great excitement was caused in Mattoon when Peterson's Park billed Juan Gallardo, the world's greatest matador, in a bull-fight, instead of Rodolph Valentino in "Blood and Sand." A striking one-sheet in four colors, red, green, yellow and black, which proclaimed Gallardo "the world's paramount toreador," who will thrill Mattoon "with his matchless daring."

About the time the town was all worked up about it, Mike Vogel, St. Louis Paramount exploiteer, arrived as Gallardo's personal representative. The mayor prohibited such an exhibition. Mike then gave him the ha-ha with a newspaper ad that the bull-fight was only part of "Blood and Sand" playing at Peterson's Park soon.

Jeweler Lends Diamond Display as "Pink Gods" Hook-Up

ATLANTA, Ga.—By tying up with a local jewelry house Manager Phil Gersdorf of the Rialto, Atlanta, was able to secure for exploitation in his lobby a showcase of diamonds for Bebe Daniels in "Pink Gods." These, of course, were great eyecatchers and helped considerably in putting over the picture. Manager Gersdorf also secured window tie-ups with the jewelry house.

Pictures Exploited at Spokane Fair for First Time

Spokane, Wash.—"Blood and Sand" and "The Valley of Silent Men," were introduced to thousands of Spokane people during the 29th annual Spokane Interstate Fair and Livestock show.

For the first time in the history of the local fair association a motion picture firm was allowed to advertise its advance releases before a grandstand of more than 10,000 people. And the fair association helped put on the stunt.

Scores of prize winning cattle and horses were used to advantage by the Paramount representative in telling of the 41 coming releases. Large banners bearing the names of the 41 pictures were worn by the prize cattle in their march before the grandstand audience.

A special feature and novel attraction was used to introduce "Blood and Sand" which showed the latter part of fair week.

One man, representing Rodolph Valentino, was dressed in a bull fighter's costume and carried a spear. At his side were several other men dressed in the full regalia of picadors and matadors. Other picadors and matadors rode on decorated horses and a wild steer was released in the race track before the grand stand. This presentation very cleverly brought out that portion of the bull fight scene in "Blood and Sand."

Lobby display on "Grandma's Boy" built at the Imperial theatre, Asheville, N. C., of which John B. Carroll is manager. The house and well were built up solid in the lobby, and cut-outs were placed at either side of the entrance

Well Rounded Campaign on "In the Name of the Law"

Atlanta, Ga.—A well rounded out exploitation campaign helped Manager Phil Gersdorf of the Rialto theatre considerably in putting over "In the Name of the Law." To begin with he had a giant cut-out of a policeman strung up on top of the marquee which by its size attracted attention on all sides.

He also tied up with local policemen and gave them a special performance of the picture, which pleased and caused a great deal of word of mouth advertising, and incidentally, made things easier for Mr. Gersdorf in securing other exploitation. He had illustrated cardboards printed reading "Don't park within fifteen feet of the water plug—In the Name of the Law" and hung them on downtown fire plugs.

Just now several downtown streets are being repaired and certain parts of them are closed to traffic. At each of these points manager Gersdorf set up a cut-out of an officer holding out his hand as if stopping the traffic. The words "Stop! In the Name of the Law" were printed on each cut-out and at the bottom in large red lettering were the words "At the Rialto this week."

Theatre Program Distributed In Hotel Rooms

WILMINGTON, N. C.—The Howard-Wells Amusement Company force in Wilmington are distributing a neat eight-page program for all their houses and Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, has arranged for the placing in the rooms of the leading hotel one of these programs each Sunday morning for the ensuing week. The hotel management feels that they are giving their guests a little service in this, as all the theatrical attractions are listed, and it is sure that the theatres are receiving some benefit from it.

Hoyt's De Luxe theatre, Sydney, Australia, used this lobby cut-out display on "The Toreador"

Makes Tie-Up With American Legion on "Sonny"

Nebraska City, Neb.—Manager Robert Booth of the Paramount theatre had the idea for putting over "Sonny." Then he sat back while the American Legion did the work for him.

Seizing upon the "service" angle of the story he interested the Legion post in the picture with the result that the Legion undertook the obligation of sending letters to all theatre-goers in the town, recommending the picture.

Locomotive Ballyhoo for "The Crossroads of New York"

Orlando, Fla.—Manager M. F. Estes of the Beacham theatre built a beaver board locomotive over a small auto truck for a ballyhoo on "The Crossroads of New York." It was driven all over the city the day before and during the engagement. When the truck was not being driven about it was parked in front of the theatre. Banners on the sides told about the picture.

A realistic touch was obtained by burning a can of woolen rags inside the "locomotive." These gave off smoke that was carried out through the smokestack by a piece of garden hose. An air pump blowing into the bottom of the can assured a plentiful supply of smoke at all times.

The locomotive was supplied with a cow-catcher. And it had a bell that was kept ringing as it went along the streets. Orlando had never seen anything like this before, and there is no doubt that it got the attention.

"Good Provider" Tie-Up Helps Theatre and Merchants

Ottawa, Ont.—An interesting tie-up between a theatre and local merchants was carried out in connection with the presentation of "The Good Provider" at the Imperial theatre during the week of Sept. 18th. No less than three combination pages appeared in two local newspapers on Saturday, Sept. 16th, to announce the plan. Upwards of twenty Ottawa stores used advertising space on the pages and the theatre also used appropriate space.

Announcement was made that each of the merchants would give a free matinee pass which would be good any afternoon except Saturday during the remainder of September on the presentation of a card which would be given to each patron at the theatre during the engagement of "The Good Provider." The cards distributed at the theatre bore the names of all advertisers on the special pages and the merchants agreed to recognize the cards with a special 10 per cent discount on purchases made at their stores during the week.

The stunt worked to the benefit of both theatre and advertisers. The plan meant that attendance at the Imperial during the week of September 18th entitled patrons to a 10 per cent discount at some twenty stores during the same week, and patronage at one of the stores gave a cardholder a chance to see another show at the Imperial any afternoon during the subsequent week without charge.

Juvenile Singing Contest Is Tie-Up on "Burning Sands"

SCOTTS BLUFF, Neb.—Manager Billy Ostberg of the Orpheum theatre plans to use 200 copies of "Burning Sands," a musical number published by Richmond Robbins, Inc., as a tie-up on the picture of the same name.

Mr. Ostberg made a further tie-up with the Platte Valley News to sponsor a juvenile singing contest. A soloist is already rendering the song in the theatre and boys wishing to compete in the singing contest have an opportunity of learning the selection by ear.

Mr. Ostberg has offered substantial cash prizes to the winners. The contest itself will be held as a preliminary to a picture other than "Burning Sands." The winners will sing as a prologue to "Burning Sands."

Colonial Program Augmented as Exploitation for Theatre

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—The Colonial theatre management has engaged Miss Charlotte Treadway and company to put on 30-minute playlets at several performances each day, between pictures. Miss Treadway was formerly leading lady with the Strand Players, was employed in a long season of stock at the old Strand, which has recently been razed to give space for the new Pantages vaudeville house, contract for which has been let. Miss Treadway's opening play at the Colonial was "Say It With Flowers." The feature film of the program was "The Golden Trail."

Boat Cut-Outs in Lobby and on Car for Keaton Comedy

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Effective use of cut-outs was made recently by Manager W. A. Doster of the Strand theatre in exploiting "The Boat." In the center of the lobby was placed a painted boat with cut-out of Keaton steering it. The name of the boat, "Damfino," was painted on the hull.

As a street ballyhoo a cut-out boat in full sail was mounted on a cut-down auto. The name of the boat was prominently displayed. Banners on the car told of the attraction at the Strand.

Helen Lynch Name Contest Is Tied Up with News-stands

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Valuable window space in ten leading magazine stands was obtained for the Strand theatre on its showing of "Fools First," through a tie-up with the Cincinnati News Company.

The window posters provided by the magazine for the Helen Lynch name contest tie-up had not arrived at the office of the news company in time for use during the play dates at the Strand. W. A. Clark, publicity manager for the theatre, obtained some attractive star stills of Miss Lynch from the exchange and had signs made calling attention to the fact that "the star without a name," was playing in "Fools First" at the Strand, and invited patrons to read the magazine and take part in the contest. The idea made its appeal and helped to put the Neilan film over.

The news company arranged to follow up this campaign in the suburbs of Cincinnati, utilizing the same cards to advertise the feature as it plays in the various suburban theatres. At the same time arrangements are being made for the theatres to strengthen the tie-up by showing the same contest slides on their screens in advance of the showings.

H. O. Martin, manager of the Chicago Pathe exchange, had this dummy locomotive circulate through Chicago streets to promote the opening of "Speed." Its itinerary was so planned that it passed six schoolhouses each day at intermission period, when large numbers of school children were around

Physicians Express Opinions
On "The Masquerader"

Lawton, Okla.—Manager H. A. Williams of the Murray theatre took advantage of the dual role feature of "The Masquerader," and got prominent physicians to express an opinion as to whether such a close resemblance of two men as forms the basis of the story of "The Masquerader" were possible. To start the exploitation the manager did some research work and uncovered records of where double identity and mixed identities had puzzled the police.

With this as a basis he went the rounds of the medical fraternity and uncovered a wealth of material that formed the basis of a feature article in the Oklahoma Constitution.

The Constitution went a step further and arranged a personally conducted shopping tour for a mysterious man garbed in a mask and Prince Albert. It was sponsored by the paper's advertising department, all the stores staging bargain sales at set hour with the understanding that the masquerader would head the shopping contingent.

It worked all ways. The stores were glad of the notice, the newspaper had a chance for an extra advertising spread and the Murray theatre profited by a lot of gratuitous publicity.

Guy Bates Post Tied Up With Dunlap Hats

LOS ANGELES, CAL. — Because Guy Bates Post happened to pose for photographs in a Dunlap hat, a handsome window display was obtained at Desmond's, who handle these hats, in connection with "The Masquerader."

The best part of the tie-up is that it can be applied nationally to window displays wherever Dunlap hats are sold and whenever the star appears in any future production because there is nothing in the photographs to specialize upon "The Masquerader." The tie-up is just as good for any later production in which Post may appear.

Camera Goes About Town to Exploit "Nice People"

Des Moines, Iowa.—With the co-operation of John J. Friedl, Paramount exploiter, Manager Ed Helmts of the Des Moines theatre put a local camera man on the streets, who quietly shot about 400 feet of film showing "leading citizens" or "nice people" going in and out of stores, and so on.

Three days before the picture opened they mounted the camera on a truck, which was driven through town while the camera man turned the crank as if he were taking movies. A banner read:

"We are taking pictures of 'Nice People.' See yourself at the Des Moines theatre next week."

Storm Outfits Given Children as Tie-Up on "The Storm"

Jamaica, L. I.—A popularity contest in which complete storm outfits were presented to four children was the appropriate tie-up arranged by J. C. Fink, manager of the Merrick theatre, when "The Storm" played that house.

The contest tie-up was made with the Long Island Daily Press. It consisted of a popularity coupon run in the paper each day during the two weeks preceding the showing. The coupon was for voting for the most popular school boy or girl in Queens County, N. Y., between the ages of 7 and 16.

The most popular boy and girl each received a complete storm outfit, consisting of a rubber raincoat and a storm hat, a pair of rubber boots and an umbrella. The next most popular pair each received a coat and hat, a pair of rubbers and an umbrella. The storm outfits were donated by a local store, and were displayed in the theatre lobby during the contest.

For street display Fink made a weather indicator, made like a huge thermometer, and with various weather conditions painted up the scale and with "The Storm" at the high point of the scale. The "mercury" was painted on with chalk each day so it would reach the top on the day of the showing. This indicator, which was used both inside and outside the theatre, attracted a lot of attention.

Fink made an attractive three-sheet transparency from one of the forest fire posters supplied with "The Storm."

"Eternal Flame" Copy Breaks Into Sporting Page

Newark, N. J.—Front page publicity is not so new these days, but it remained for D. J. Shepherd, managing director of the Branford theatre, to break into the sporting page for two consecutive weeks. The publicity centered around a girls' track meet that was tied up with the showing of "The Eternal Flame."

Norma pearls were the prizes awarded to the winners, instead of medals, and it was in this manner that the tie-up was effected which brought "The Eternal Flame" the exploitation. No sooner had the idea of a girls' athletic meet been formulated than the Newark Star-Eagle sponsored the campaign.

With more than 200 entries there was enough news to fill the sporting page several times over. Contestants were drawn from every New Jersey town. The fact that Miss Camelia Sabie, holder of two world's records, put in her entry early was good for continuous copy.

Every story that was run on the meet made specific mention of the running of "The Eternal Flame" at the Branford theatre and of the Norma pearls. On the day of the meet the Newark Star-Eagle gave the athletic attraction the whole front page, naming all the entrants and an eight-column streamer head. The fact that Anita Stewart made a personal appearance at the Branford theatre with Miss Sabie, when the awards were made, further gladdened the hearts of the newspaper scribes, who wrote columns upon columns upon the biggest local athletic attraction the city had known.

Window Cards and Heralds Basis for Big Campaign

South Chicago, Ill.—The campaign for "The Storm" at Ascher's Commercial theatre, was confined to the local paper, distribution of twelve thousand heralds, two hundred window cards and decorations in the front of the house as well as on the marquee.

The display on top of the marquee was made of one twenty-four sheet. The animals escaping from the forest fire were made into cutouts and placed with the fire scene as a background, with two men and the woman. In front of the cutouts were placed two large flood light strips and brilliant red lights were used effecting a striking front.

Locomotive ballyhoo prepared by W. F. Estes, exploitation representative for the Phillips theatre, Orlando, Fla., on "The Fast Mail"

Almond Bars Are Given Away as "Rich Men's Wives" Stunt

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Rich Men's Wives," playing at the Aldine theatre, was exploited by means of 25,000 chocolate almond bars, given away on the street.

Five striking blondes, selected from nearly 200 applicants, created a stir in downtown Philadelphia when they appeared as butterflies on the principal streets especially outfitted to exploit the picture. They were dressed in bright gold costumes, with flowing capes and natty knickers, carrying baskets draped in gold cloth to match their outfits. Only the words, "Rich Men's Wives" appeared on the baskets and across the vest of each costume there appeared exactly the same inscription.

The stunt was arranged by Ben Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, the Lichtman franchise holder in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. He made a tie-up with the H. O. Wilbur and Sons Company, manufacturers of chocolate products and of the Wilbur buds, a chocolate almond bar. Amsterdam sold them the idea of donating 25,000 bars as a business booster for their products.

The bars were wrapped with a bright yellow band with the following imprinted on it:

"Food for Thought for Rich Men's Wives."

Under the wrapper was placed a smaller card announcing the engagement at the Aldine.

Attractive Tropical Lobby for "The Lotus Eaters"

San Diego, Cal.—For the presentation of "The Lotus Eaters," Manager Dwight Hill of the Pickwick theatre designed an especially attractive lobby display, representing a tropical scene with a tiny lagoon surrounded by palms, banana trees, ferns and other foliage, while lotus flowers appeared in profusion upon the surface of the water. Cutouts of the principal characters of the play stood near the edge of the lagoon. It was a display that never failed to catch the attention of the passersby.

Stickers on Store Windows Aid Merchants and Theatre

Little Rock, Ark.—Manager George Watters, of the Capitol theatre, tied up with local merchants in a contest for the showing of "A Trip to Paramounttown" in a manner that benefitted both the merchants and the theatre. The conditions of the contest, as stated in the Arkansas Gazette, were as follows:

"Fifty-one stars and directors are seen in 'A Trip to Paramounttown,' which will be shown exclusively at the Capitol theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"These stars will be placed on the front windows of the public concerns in Little Rock whose advertisements appear on this page. The stars appearing on these windows will be large gold ones, each carrying the name of some popular Paramount star. Rules governing the contest: To the first ten persons giving the names of each star and the name of the concern on whose window each star is found the following prizes will be awarded. It will be necessary to visit the windows of these business establishments and copy the name of the star from the large gold star pasted on the window. The prizes were: First, a three months' pass to the Capitol theatre; second, a two months' pass; third, a one month's pass; fourth, two tickets to the capitol theatre; fifth, two tickets to the Capitol theatre; sixth to tenth, one seat to the Capitol theatre. All answers must be presented to the Capitol theatre box office.

"Manager Watters writes that the merchants were enthusiastic about this tie-up and were unanimous in stating that it was one of the best tie-ups on any picture that they had ever had presented to them, since it brought the people directly to their show windows in order to ascertain the names of the stars in the pictures."

Liberty Theatre, Long Beach, Entitled to Apology

In issue of August 26, this paper ran the reproduction of a photograph of the lobby of the Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal., and by mistake the caption read "Los Angeles." The display illustrated was a unique arrangement which was designed to exploit "Nanook of the North," for which the Long Beach theatre deserved credit. MOTION PICTURE NEWS offers apology.

"Wolf Law"

Universal—4463 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FRANK MAYO puts on a picturesque costume, featured by the masculine gentry down Missouri way in the sixties, and proceeds to act with considerable gusto. It's a picture with more than a little gunplay—this "Wolf Law," and at the first flash almost, the guns start a-popping. The star is the untamed son of an old fire-cater, and we discover him riding his fast horse to victory. He wins a snug sum of money, but the man who owns the other horse is a poor loser. So when he offers an insult the hero sends him crashing to the floor. Thinking he has murdered him, he flees to the Ozark mountains with the sheriff in hot pursuit.

What follows presents the youth's predicament in discovering that he has walked into a hornet's nest. The mountain retreat is governed by a relentless disciple of violence. And the hero is accepted because he appears to be a dyed-in-the-wool bad man. There is action all the time—even if it is of the picture brand. The hero learns that the vicious villain is gunning for the heroine's father, a judge, because the latter sent a brother to jail. He also has designs upon the girl as likely talent for a wife. The hero determines to escape and take the innocent parties with him. And this is the point for more gun-play.

There is no incident and no suspense—even though the sponsors have attempted to build up the action with mystery. You know right along that the hero will return and discover that the first victim of his good right arm and trigger finger will bob up very much alive. But he still has to defend himself from being called a thief. He makes an enemy eat his words by simply glowering at him. Close-ups are employed here to feature the control of mind over matter. And so it ends.

It is a quick-moving yarn, implausible but sufficiently snappy to please the boys and girls who want color and movement. Mayo, seemingly, wears the same suit of clothes and the same shirt throughout the action. He has no chance to convey any subtle touches—the tale is too primitive for such treatment.

The Cast

By Hugh Pendexter. Scenario by Charles Sarver. Directed by Stuart Paton. Photographed by Benjamin Kline. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Young hot-headed son of Southern fire-eater, gets into a "jam" over a horse race which he has won. The loser insults him and the youth uses his gun. Thinking he has killed him he escapes to the mountains where he finds plenty of adventure, excitement and romance before he returns to learn that he is no criminal.

Classification—Melodrama using exteriors for most part. Featuring gun-play, adventure and romance.

Production Highlights—The good atmosphere. The scene when hero battles against his enemy. Scene when he rescues girl and father from bad men. The fight stuff.

Exploitation Angles—Get your accessories on this picture and use them. Posters, teasers, etc., will likely stimulate desire to see picture. Play up Mayo as one of our best he-men actors.

"The Headless Horseman"

C. S. Clancy-Hodkinson—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a worthy ambition on the producer's part to make a screen story from Washington Irving's celebrated classic, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." With Will Rogers selected for the role of Ichabod Crane, the Yankee schoolmaster, one might look forward to an interpretation which would meet the spectator's conception of the character. However, as the picture develops, it is noticeable that the picture is not first class screen material. In the first place it carries no situations, nor incident, but merely presents a series of episodes in the adventures of Crane.

It's greatest asset is the atmosphere. And here is where the picture must be reckoned with as quite worth while. Rogers may not be tall and angular enough to fit the character but he manages to carry out the impression of the figure in many ways. At other times when the picture sags, the star seems at a loss how to conduct himself. Particularly does the story sag in the introductory reels, when the school-room sequence is offered. It takes seven reels to tell of Crane's efforts to win the belle of Sleepy Hollow. The episodes present a quilting party, a near tar and feather party, and a mad dash by Rogers on a white nag endeavoring to distance the pursuing headless horseman. This scene is the best in the picture and it is accompanied by some excellent photography.

The atmosphere of the little Dutch settlement is exceptionally good. Nothing is out of place. The costumes, the details, the beautiful exteriors—these all help in lending charm to the picture. And that quality is the chief highlight of the story. It certainly is charming, even if it is plotless in design. Ichabod is repulsed in his romance and soon after disappears from Sleepy Hollow, frightened away by a practical joker, disguised as the headless horseman.

Will Rogers is in character insofar as suggesting a grand conceit, but he fails to catch the real cowardice of the schoolmaster. Lois Meredith is appealing as Katrina. The other players and all the extras are thoroughly in the picture. The picture will delight the lovers of the Irving tale. It is best suited for high class audiences.

The Cast

Ichabod Crane.....Will Rogers
Katrina Van Tassel.....Lois Meredith
"Brom" Bones.....Ben Hendricks, Jr.
Adapted from Washington Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Directed by Edward Venturini. Photographed by Ned Van Buren.

The Story—Ichabod Crane, Yankee schoolmaster, goes to Sleepy Hollow to take charge of school. Falls in love with village belle and determines to win her. Is nearly tarred and feathered by plotters working in behalf of rival suitor. Is repulsed by the girl and as he returns home, is frightened by headless horseman, who in reality is practical joker. Crane leaves Sleepy Hollow.

Classification—Adaptation of Washington Irving's celebrated classic, "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Romance and character study of schoolmaster in Dutch settlement during the period of 1790.

Production Highlights—The fine atmosphere. The quilting party. The dash of Rogers on the horse pursued by the headless horseman. The exteriors and interiors.

Exploitation Angles—Presents several opportunities to cash in. Go after literary societies and schools. Play it up with atmosphere for lobby and prologue.

"If I Were Queen"

F. B. O.—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE George Barr McCutcheon type of story—namely, "Graustark," is used as the pattern of Ethel Clayton's first picture under the F. B. O. standard, and since it seems to be a popular theme, if not used too often, there is no reason why it can't stand as much wear and tear as the tried and true Northwest Mounted formula or that other idea of featuring an exiled Englishman turning sheik over night. Wesley Ruggles, the director, has given the picture a first rate production—one releasing considerable atmosphere. So well has he succeeded that despite the fairy-tale character of the plot the spectator is drawn into the background.

The author, naturally, has not been inspired. There is the same McCutcheon mythical kingdom situated somewhere in the Balkans and ruled by a fair princess. There are the entangling alliances with neighboring countries and the intrigue shapes itself when the American school chum of the princess is involved in court intrigue through mistaken identity. She attempts to straighten matters out, but only succeeds in building up the complications. The prince of an adjoining kingdom has refused his consent to a marriage between the princess and her fiancé, the reason being that he loves the American and believes her the princess. The plot shows her a rebellious prisoner in the prince's castle.

It is a picture which carries an emphatic love interest. It is obvious in design, and you know just what will develop, but because of its good production and the capital acting by Ethel Clayton and a capable cast—one manages to be interested after a fashion. The settings are lavish, the costuming entirely appropriate with the best comic opera traditions. Perhaps it might have offered more satire and humor. Perhaps it would have looked better played in strictly farcical fashion. But there is an audience for this type of picture, else there would be no excuse to produce it. We will say, however, that Ethel Clayton is endowed with enough emotional fervor to be given stories adaptable to her talent. She is always sincere. And she plays here as if she had the greatest story in the world.

The Cast

By DuVernet Rabell. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Photographed by Joseph A. Dubray. Produced by F. B. O.

The Story—Deals with the American chum of a Balkan princess, who is mistaken for the fair ruler by the prince of a neighboring kingdom. She gets involved in court intrigue because she is unable to make the prince believe that she is an American. After being imprisoned in his castle she learns to love him. In due time the complications are entirely straightened out.

Classification—Romance based upon mythical kingdom formula, with intrigue as the dominating element.

Production Highlights—Sincerity of Ethel Clayton's acting. The fine settings. The atmosphere. The cast, well selected and efficient.

Exploitation Angles—What about the sedan chair with four men in the costume of royalty carrying a princess about the streets? Use a teaser campaign. Play up the star. And put on an atmospheric prologue.

"Lorna Doone"

First National—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

ANOTHER classic of English literature has been preserved for posterity in a film production that stands as Maurice Tourneur's chef d'oeuvre, a picture that must be classed as one of the finest offered the shadow stage this year. If there is any objection to costume plays, it is to be deplored when such a masterpiece as this is offered for the entertainment and educations of our people.

Here the world famous romance is reproduced with all its heart appeal, its charming atmosphere of merrie old England, its lavish scenes at court, its thrilling kidnaping, rescues, combats, loves—it's all here and mounted in a manner that is interest-compelling at every minute. The plot starts with a bang and runs along at a rapid pace until the thrilling climax and the surprise ending.

One of the biggest assets of this production is its cast. No finer selection for the role of Lorna could have been made than Madge Bellamy. Frank Keenan registers his usual flawle s characterization in the role of Sir Ensor Doone. John Bowers as John Ridd does some of the best work of his screen career.

Meticulous attention has been given to detail. The costumes, settings, interiors of humble cottages or Westminster Abbey are correct at all times. There are so many thrilling situations in this picture that it would take a column to enumerate them.

"Lorna Doone" is another broadside to hurl at the critics of the motion picture. He must be a cynic indeed who can pick anything objectionable in this picture. Everyone connected with its making is to be congratulated. It should meet with real success at the box office and those exhibitors who believe in encouraging real art in motion picture making should hasten to book this fine example of "a better picture."

The Cast

Lorna Doone.....Madge Bellamy
Lorna, as child.....May Giracci
John Ridd.....John Bowers
John, as child.....Charles Hatton
Sir Ensor Doone.....Frank Keenan
Counsellor Doone.....Jack MacDonald
Carver Doone.....Donald MacDonald
Ruth.....Norris Johnson
By R. D. Blackmore. Directed by Maurice Tourneur. Scenario by Katherine Speer Reed, Cecil B. Mumford and Wyndham Gittens, Photographed by Henry Syhart.

The Story—Lorna, traveling on a lonely road in a coach with her mother, the Countess of Lorna, is kidnapped by Sir Ensor Doone and his band of robbers. The old chief, loving her, protects her from the ruffians of his band. Dying, he leaves her to her fate as the wife of the new leader, a fate worse than death. She is rescued, however, by John Ridd, a simple youth of the country. The revelation of her birth takes her back to court but a great love for Ridd leads her to renounce her title and return to him.

Classification—A romantic drama of merrie old England, its gay ladies, courts, knights, robber bands and its charming country life. Filled with melodramatic moments.

Production Highlights—The excellent direction by Tourneur. Madge Bellamy's work as Lorna Doone. The fine characterizations contributed by Frank Keenan and John Bowers. The excellent preservation of the atmosphere of England in the days in which the story is laid. The striking sets, both interior and exterior. The rescue of John Ridd after the current and falls have taken him into the land of the Doones. The dramatic scenes attending the wedding.

Exploitation Angles—Everyone knows this English literary gem.

Drawing Power—No matter how fine your house is, this picture will be worthy of presentation on your screen. Its a gem from every standpoint.

"The Better Man Wins"

Sandford—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a fair to middlin' melodrama of ranch life just as long as they stick to the boundless West. There is a "get-up-and-go" spirit to the scenes which introduce the early footage. Then like a bolt from the blue, the story shifts its locale and sags in interest as a result. You can't put westerners down in the city and expect they are going to appear natural—especially when the background is a cabaret.

The plot tells of a rancher's daughter who refuses outside help in managing the ranch. There is big Pete Morrison just rarin' to go to her aid, but she keeps him guessing—does Dorothy Woods in the role of the western girl. Then the visitors from the city are conveniently introduced. A cabaret proprietor and his fair partner meet with a motor accident while touring the West. They are carried to the heroine's home where the other woman falls in love with the hero during her convalescence. Meanwhile the cabaret man forces his attentions upon the pretty ranch owner. The city people return with the young rancher following them to the city—to be near the cabaret artist. Her partner has offered the heroine a job.

The climax features an "up and at 'em" fight which results in the cabaret being wrecked. And the rancher takes the heroine back to the West. The scenes in the city don't harmonize with the action around the ranch. It appears as if these sequences were dragged in by the heels—to give the author a chance to show some cabaret incident. However, it carries quite a punch, even if it fails to carry any surprises. Pete Morrison, the star, looks and acts like a born westerner. Dorothy Woods makes an appealing figure as the heroine. The picture is a fair program offering and will doubtless please those patrons who do not ask for too much inspiration in their stories.

The Cast

Bill Harrison.....Pete Morrison
Nell Thompson.....Dorothy Woods
Hugh Thompson.....E. L. Van Sickle
Dick Murray.....Jack Walters
Grace Parker.....Gene Crosby
Doctor Gale.....Tom Ray

Directed by Marcel Perez.

The Story—Ranch girl refuses outside help in managing her property. She repulses a faithful westerner, but gives up her heart to city man when he meets with an accident near her home. He encourages her to come to the city. Meanwhile a cabaret artist has fallen in love with the westerner and he follows her to the city. Eventually the heroine and the rancher discover where their true affection lies.

Classification—Western melodrama which features hectic life in the city.

Production Highlights—The action. The work of Pete Morrison and Dorothy Woods. The scene in the cabaret. The fight.

Exploitation Angles—Here is a snappy title which can be worked up in a teaser campaign. Also bill it as a lively melodrama of the West. Put on your cowboy quartette for a prologue. Also feature some expert with the lariat if he is available.

"To Have and to Hold"

Paramount—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

AMERICAN audiences are going to be forced to like costume plays! How? By seeing just such pictures as this one. Here is a production that is so far away and ahead of anything of its kind that it beggars comparison. It is the apex of George Fitzmaurice's directorial career. Never has Miss Compson appeared more beautiful, alluring and so strikingly gowned. Never has Mr. Lytell had a role that calls for more physical prowess, action and real acting. Both stars are to be congratulated. And while we are upon this subject all praise to Theodore Kosloff for his convincing interpretation of the role of Lord Carnal, to W. J. Ferguson for his humorous delineation of the character of Jeremy Sparrow and to Raymond Hatton for his work as King James.

From a production standpoint, "To Have and to Hold," is a technical gem. The photography is exquisite, especially the many night shots. The settings are the last word in lavish investiture. The scenes at the Court of King James having their climax in the Indian Masque are startling. Crossing the sea to the old colony of Jamestown in Virginia we are treated to some views of life in those early days of our country that are without equal in the history of the silent art. The attack on the settlement by Indians and other stirring incidents are here, but it would take this whole book to tell all about the many thrilling scenes.

The climax is a most acceptable and satisfying one. There is swordplay all through this picture, swordplay seldom equalled on screen or stage. "To Have and to Hold" will keep any audience on the edge of their seats, from the jarring censorship license number to the very artistic finale. It is a 100 percent picture if there ever was one.

The Cast

Jocelyn Leigh.....Betty Compson
Captain Ralph Percy.....Bert Lytell
Lord Carnal.....Theodore Kosloff
Jeremy Sparrow.....W. J. Ferguson
King James.....Raymond Hatton

Adapted from the book and play by Mary Johnston. Scenario by Ouida Bergere. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Photographed by Arthur Miller.

The Story—Lady Jocelyn Leigh, ward of King James I, to escape a hateful marriage with Lord Carnal, runs away on board a "bride ship" to Jamestown, Virginia. There she is married to Captain Percy, a prosperous planter. Carnal follows Lady Jocelyn overseas and the rest of action deals with the thrilling adventures and hairbreadth escapes of Percy and the Lady. After a sensational climax, Percy wins Lady Jocelyn as his bride.

Classification—A story of adventures and romance laid in the days of merry King James I of England and the colony of Jamestown, Virginia.

Production Highlights—The masterful portrayals of Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and every member of the excellent cast. The fine direction. Ouida Bergere's smooth running actionful scenario. The elaborate settings. The exquisite photography throughout the production. The great sword fights. The battle between the pirate ship and the English vessel.

Exploitation Angles—Betty Compson! Bert Lytell! Raymond Hatton! Theodore Kosloff! What names to flash in your ads. Dress your lobby with antiques suggestive of the atmosphere of the early colonies. Your antique furniture store will help you here. Play up the lavishness of this production and tell them that George Fitzmaurice made it.

Drawing Power—Polish up the S. R. O. sign. You'll need it when you show this. Suitable for any house—including the finest in the land.

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood"

United Artists

(Reviewed by L. H. Mason)

MAGNIFICENT, this overused word alone, can be used to describe "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," for it is magnificent in its huge settings, magnificent in its great throng of panoplied warriors and fair ladies, and magnificent in acting of a story which stands out clear cut and thrilling, although surrounded by a wealth of settings and scenic backgrounds perhaps unequalled in pictures, and which might easily overshadow the story had not the direction of Allan Dwan been so masterly. It marks another milestone in the making of motion pictures and will redound greatly to the credit of Douglas Fairbanks as both producer and actor.

The gigantic task of reproducing probably the most picturesque figures in English history, Richard the Lion Hearted, and his friend Earl of Huntingdon, later the bold and merry outlaw, Robin Hood, has been faithfully carried out and the atmosphere of the romantic period of the Crusades surrounds the action.

Not since "Intolerance" have we seen such massive battlemented walls, such huge banquet halls, such throngs of armed men, and all these great settings have been blended in a series of pictures, which, for sheer beauty and impressiveness, have never been surpassed. Indeed, the photography, both in the large settings and in the love scenes, which have the delicacy of a painting, is remarkable.

Fairbanks as the Earl of Huntingdon is a heroic figure and most spectacular are the scenes of the tournament and the crusade of the knights. Impressions of the latter is of miles of mounted knights moving forward under a veritable forest of bannered lances, and yet it is when as Huntingdon returns to England and becomes Robin Hood, who with his merry band robs the rich to help the poor, and frolics in Sherwood Forest, that Fairbanks will get to the heart of his audience. In this portion of the picture he is our old familiar Doug whose "stunts" of appearing and disappearing, jumping and cavorting, will appeal to his old time admirers.

Enid Bennett as Lady Marian Fitzwalter, gives a very pleasing portrayal of the brave maiden, who wins the heart of Huntingdon, bold at wars but afraid of the ladies, and their love scenes are very finely done. Wallace Beery's characterization of Richard the Lion Hearted, will win much praise as he gives us to perfection the rough warrior king with just a suggestion of the soft heart underneath. Sam de Grasse as Prince John, the villain of the play, is also worthy of special mention.

The Cast

Richard the Lion-Hearted.....	Wallace Beery
Prince John.....	Sam de Grasse
Lady Marian Fitzwalter.....	Enid Bennett
Sir Guy of Gisbourne.....	Paul Dickey
The High Sheriff of Nottingham.....	William Lowery
The King's Jester.....	Roy Coulson
Lady Marian's Serving Woman.....	Billie Bennett
Henchmen to Prince John.....	Merrill McCormick
	Wilson Benge
Friar Tuck.....	Willard Louis
Little John.....	Alan Hale
Will Scarlett.....	Maine Geary
Alan-a-Dale.....	Lloyd Talman
The Earl of Huntingdon, {
afterward Robin Hood }	Douglas Fairbanks

Story by Elton Thomas. Directed by Allan Dwan. Photography by Arthur Edeson. Scenario Editor, Lotta Woods. Supervising Art Director, Wilfred Buckland.

Classification—Spectacular romantic drama of the middle ages based on the history and legends of King Richard the Lion-Hearted and Robin Hood, the merry outlaw of Nottingham Forest. It shows the nobility and devotion to his king, his lady, and his god, of Earl of Huntingdon, later Robin Hood.

Drawing Power—As a great spectacle with thrilling story, terrific battles, and fine love scenes, plus the name of Douglas Fairbanks, should be a great drawing card.

Scene from "The Altar Stairs." The story is laid in the South Seas. Frank Mayo is the star; Lambert Hillyer the director. It is a Universal production.

"The Proof of Innocence"

American Releasing—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE old, familiar plot of the Greenwich Village model, who ekes out a livelihood posing for a struggling artist is given another screen dressing in "The Proof of Innocence." To see artists always struggling in these orthodox stories is proof that their designers do not work with inspiration. For company in this simple romance which flairs up with a dramatic note when the hero forgets his art as a social butterfly casts a spell over him they have a wealthy art connoisseur, the latter's son, the butler in the rich man's home and a police commissioner.

Such an antiquated plot calls for new trimmings. But the picture follows conventional lines. You see the pretty Villager inspiring the artist to paint his greatest work, which wins first prize at an art exhibit. He is satisfied with life until the connoisseur visits the studio accompanied by the social butterfly. So he lives up to the traditions by forgetting his work and the pretty model. The other girl has conquered him completely. Finally after romancing for a considerable time, he asks the butterfly to marry him—so that he might get his mind back on his art. Then the melodrama appears. The art collector is found murdered and the artist is suspected of the crime. Eventually the complications are cleared up and his innocence is established.

The director has wasted a deal of footage in photographing unimportant scenes and incident. There is altogether too much walking around and too many details which have no importance in advancing the story. With these trifling touches eliminated the picture would be more compact and carry more interest. It is quite sugary except for the melodrama. And all of it is obvious. Louise Du Pre is attractive and charming as the heroine. Having formerly been understudy for Mary Pickford, she has adopted many of Mary's mannerisms. The other players are fairly competent.

The Cast

Mignon.....	Louise Du Pre
John Courtney.....	John Hopkins
Stanley Page.....	J. Francis O'Reilly
Marion Wesley.....	Dorothea Teal
Harold Page.....	Carl Sodders
Williams.....	Oliver S. Putnam
Police Commissioner.....	Don Merrifield
Supervised by Roy Mitchell and John A. Martin.

The Story—Tells of a Greenwich Village model and an artist, the girl having inspired him to create his greatest canvas. The picture wins first prize at an exhibition. An art collector, accompanied by a social butterfly, visits the studio, and the artist falls in love with the girl. He neglects his work and the model, and eventually is suspected of a murder. But he proves his innocence and real love triumphs.

Classification—Artist model and theme with the locale Greenwich Village. Romance and melodrama.

Production Highlights—The atmosphere. The appealing performance of Louise Du Pre.

Exploitation Angles—Use stills of Louis Du Pre. Center your campaign around her, telling that she was formerly Mary Pickford's understudy. Tell that she brings to the screen a charming personality. Put over a prologue in harmony with the theme. Feature the title with a teaser campaign.

Drawing Power—Best suited for neighborhood houses, catering to feminine audiences.

"Clarence"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S play, "Clarence," adapted to the screen does not measure out the effervescent humor, the sparkle of the original because there is nothing to take the place of dialogue. William De Mille has followed a too strict adaptation in the plot and characterization with the result that the humor, so abundant in the stage version, is only expressed at intervals. And the spoken lines made into subtitles do not carry the laughs. It seems to us that the director could have taken liberty with the play and made it into a breezy farce comedy. If you saw the original you will remember that the flapper and her brother, the flipper, carried the humor along in many situations. The two characters are in the picture, but they seem to have lost much of their color.

"Clarence" is a good picture—an entertaining picture, but it could have been much better. The director has placed too much stress upon the melodrama, which is fatal to carrying out the demands of comedy. Having no plot, the play depended upon dialogue and stage "business." The screen "business" is woefully inadequate.

Wallace Reid makes himself up to resemble Alfred Lunt in the original—even to his hair parted in the middle and his eyes decorated with a pair of horn-rimmed glasses. He really steps into character as the quaint soldier who is hired by a rich man because he knows too much about the family troubles. But he doesn't stay in character. About the fourth reel he becomes Wally Reid. It is a first rate performance notwithstanding. In our opinion the best portrayals are rendered by Robert Agnew and May McAvoy as the youngsters—especially the former. He could have stepped into the stage version and gotten away with it.

DeMille should have used his own version. And he should have employed more speed in his scenes and kept them lively with real farcical trimmings. When a play dependent upon dialogue is transferred to the screen, the adaptors should see to it that moving incident should take the place of the spoken words. There are some bright scenes in the screen version but they are too widely separated.

The Cast

Clarence Smith.....	Wallace Reid
Violet Pinney.....	Agnes Ayres
Cora Wheeler.....	May McAvoy
Mrs. Wheeler.....	Kathlyn Williams
Mr. Wheeler.....	Ed. Martindel
Bobby Wheeler.....	Robert Agnew
Hubert Stem.....	Adolphe Menjou
Dinwiddy.....	Bertram Johns
Della.....	Dorothy Gordon
Mrs. Martin.....	Maym Kelso

By Booth Tarkington. Scenario by Clara Beranger. Directed by William De Mille. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Tells of returned soldier who is given employment in rich man's home to keep him quiet—the youth having overheard a family quarrel. He is an odd individual who bobs up to settle the family difficulties. He prevents elopements and repairs things in the most bland manner. After restoring order, he develops a romance with the governess.

Classification—Adaptation of Booth Tarkington's play of same name. Comedy-drama featuring a returned soldier. Some conflict. Plenty of romance.

Production Highlights—Good performances by star, Ogden, May McAvoy and others of the cast. Scene when soldier shakes the secretary. Scene of the elopement and the frustrated plans of the flapper. Scene in father's office when Clarence is introduced.

Exploitation Angles—Your crowd should be familiar with this title. Play up author and star and director. Feature it as a brisk comedy-drama. Use a prologue featuring a quartette of men in soldiers' uniforms made up to resemble Clarence. Put on a saxophone number.

Drawing Power—Will go well in all houses, no matter where they are located.

"When Danger Smiles"

Vitagraph—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IF we must have westerns, let's have them like this one. Here is a clean, melodramatic story filmed in fine style, possessing its full quota of thrills and mounted against a background of long sweeping vistas of God's open places.

The story opens with action and keeps things flying until the end. Laid in New Mexico, the producers have had opportunity to use colorful settings, the hacienda being especially well done.

Some of the dramatic moments are: The opening holdup in which a man is beaten and robbed and Duncan as Ray Chapman, a mining official, going to the rescue, is hit on the head with the butt of a gun. The card game in which the villain frames the hero by placing cards in his boots. The plot of the girl and Holnar to do away with Chapman and the subsequent attempt to shoot him. The stabbing of a friend of Chapman who is mistaken for the hero. The accusing of Chapman of the murder of his friend and his thrilling escape after knocking down the sheriff and his men. And so on. It's all very fine western stuff and guaranteed to satisfy the most exacting admirers of this kind of film entertainment.

Duncan does exceptionally well as Chapman and Edith Johnson was never more attractive than in the role of the senorita. The rest of the cast is adequate. Duncan has also directed the picture with intelligence and understanding of his subject. The photography is fine, some of the night stuff being most artistic. As long as we have Duncan we'll have good westerns.

The Cast

Ray Chapman.....William Duncan
Francia Caravalle.....Edith Johnson
Jacob Holnar.....James Farley
Francisco Caravalle.....Henry Hebert
Jim Barker.....Charles Dudley
Marshall.....William McCall

By John B. Clymer. Directed by William Duncan. Scenario by Bradley J. Smollen. Photographed by George Robinson.

The Story: Ray Chapman, a mining official on a trip through the west, hits New Mexico and is roughly handled when he goes to the rescue of a man being robbed by some gunmen. Dazed, he wanders through the woods, until he comes to the home of Senor Francisco, where he is taken in by Francia, the daughter, hidden from his pursuers and allowed to escape when he gains strength. Jacob Holnar's attempts to rid the earth of the hero take up the rest of the action. Of course, he fails and Francia and Chapman are married in the end.

Classification:—An excellent western featuring a large number of melodramatic situations and a highly satisfying climax.

Production Highlights:—The fine exterior locations, many of which are gems of western landscape. The work of Duncan, Edith Johnson more attractive than ever as a Spanish senorita. The red-blooded fights. The card game in which the hero is framed. The thrilling escape of Chapman from the sheriff. The scene in which the hero, about to be hanged, startles the horse to which he is tied and is dragged along the ground at a terrific pace by the animal.

Exploitation Angles:—Play this one up as one of the cleanest and most entertaining westerns of the season. William Duncan and Edith Johnson are well known and popular in most houses catering to lovers of this type of picture. Tell these patrons that this is the best Duncan picture produced to date.

Drawing Power:—If your audiences like westerns book this one quick.

"David and Jonathan"

Second National—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is not a picture for jaded screen-goers since it carries several familiar ingredients and they will doubtless remark—"where have I seen that plot before?" There is the burning ship with the three principals, as usual, the only survivors. It is easy to guess that the subsequent action takes place on a desert isle. The substance of the story has to do with a triangle situation. David and Jonathan are Oxford men and stanch friends. Their mission is to hunt big game in Africa, and during the voyage they meet the one girl.

So the plot gets right down to the conflict—whether David will win the girl or Jonathan. Their friendship flares up in a strong antagonism during their stay on the island. However, they leave it to the girl as to which choice she will make. Jonathan speaks to her first and David, thinking that his erstwhile friend has the inside track, returns to civilization via a rescue ship. However, he is conscience-stricken over leaving his companions and sends a party to bring them home. And seeing that David has won the utmost sympathy for his modest withdrawal from the romance, the author pleases the spectator by having him emerge the ultimate winner of the love stakes.

The picture's big moment is the burning ship, although there is some excitement attached to the scene featuring uncontrolled passion on Jonathan's part. He has won the girl apparently, through brute force, and she is quick to discover which of the two suitors possesses real character. The feature as outlined above covers familiar ground. But for the sake of logic, authors when writing burning ship scenes should have other survivors than the customary young romancers. The action is easily anticipated. Consequently there is no suspense. It will make a fair program offering. Madge Titheradge plays the heroine in creditable fashion, while Richard Ryan and Geoffrey Webb give capable performances in the title roles.

The Cast

Joan Madge Titheradge
David Geoffrey Webb
Jonathan Richard Ryan
By E. Temple Thurston. Adapted by Charles E. Davenport. Directed by Martin Thornton.

Released by Second National.

The Story:—Two friends embark on a trip to Africa. During the voyage they meet a girl and fall in love with her. The ship burns, and the sole survivors are the three companions. They are cast up on a desert isle and the friendliness of the men turns to a mutual hatred. When Jonathan speaks first of his love, David returns to civilization, thinking that the girl loves the other. His conscience causes him to send a rescue party to them. And he learns that the girl loves him.

Classification:—Love triangle revolving around two friends and a girl. Offers conflict and some action.

Production Highlights:—Adequate atmosphere. The burning ship scene. The capable acting by the cast.

Exploitation Angles:—Feature this as a story of the conflict between two men for a girl. Play it up with a teaser campaign.

"Bells of San Juan"

Fox—4587 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANYONE seeing this title is liable to imagine a sentimental story, laid around the California missions with such elements as pathos and heart interest dominant. It is nothing of the kind. Except for a brief introductory flash and a closing shot, the atmosphere of a mission is entirely absent. What one sees is a shootin' story which features a sheriff determined to get his man. Thus the Northwest Mounted formula serves as the theme. Once the villain is introduced you know for a certainty that he is guilty, and that after the action has spent itself, he will be captured.

Meanwhile the sheriff gets in bad with the local lights because he is unable to restore order in the mining town. The role introduces Charles Jones. This star, whose talent heretofore has been marked by repression, literally kicks over the traces in registering emotional distress. He never appears natural because the characterization does not demand such heroic display. The villain employs some hirelings to make his term of office a nightmare. And the shootin' goes on apace. The romance enters when a feminine physician visits her uncle. She shows the local doctor something new in the treatment of surgery, but it is rather unethical that she should abuse him for his bungling of a case—the case being a bad head wound suffered by the hero. The injury causes him to become a thief and a cave-man. But the girl takes care of him and brings him back to health. The climax features the capturing of the villain—a close-up scene with a couple of Colts as the chief properties.

It is an action picture, make no mistake about that. But it is so obvious that much of the force is destroyed. From the opening reel one knows just how it will finish. The aged mission keeper rings three bells. One indicates considerable turmoil, another indicates a birth, and the third a wedding. At the conclusion the third bell sends forth its glad tidings. Jones has had better pictures and he has done much better work.

The Cast

Roderick Norton.....Charles Jones
Dorothy Page.....Fritzi Brunette
Jim Garson.....Claude Peyton
Dr. Caleb Patton.....Harry Todd
John Engel.....Hardy Kirkland
Florrie Engel.....Katherine Key
Kid Rickard.....William Steele
Antone.....Otto Matieson
Tom Cutter.....Sid Jordan

By Jackson Gregory. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Photographed by Gus Jennings. Produced by Fox.

The Story: Treats of a sheriff determined to capture the assassin of his father. The villain is a cagey chap and defies the law. He even employs a couple of bad men to harass the sheriff. In a shooting affray the hero suffers serious head injury. But the heroine, a physician, brings him back to health. The climax shows the sheriff getting his man. Romance triumphs.

Classification: Western melodrama based upon a sheriff determined to get his man. Much gunplay.

Production Highlights: Fast action. The climax showing the capturing of the bad man. Good western atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles: Jones has had much better pictures than this. So go lightly upon its highlights. Play it up as an exciting western melodrama, featuring one of the most popular stars. You might put on a prologue with a background featuring a mission. You can also put bells—the kind which are found in church steeples or missions—in your lobby. Then employ some one in costume attire—similar to a mission keeper—to ring them.

Drawing Power: Will likely draw in second class downtown houses.

"Secrets of Paris"

Whitman Bennett-Affiliated

THERE are enough good points in favor of this picture, to begin by enumerating them, leaving mention of the glaring faults for conclusion. It is melodrama undiluted, very little comedy relief, considerable action; great fight scenes. The story is inconsequential, serving, however, to prove what a splendid cast can do in putting over an otherwise underdone concoction of serial material, cooked up and served in the guise of a feature.

For instance, we find Lew Cody in the role of a Prince, and following a time lapse, as King, assuming the role of a Royal hero with admirable poise and marked ability. And Gladys Hulette, in the role of a young girl raised to be a thief, but fighting her way out of sordid environment, giving a splendid and appealing characterization. But the surprise of the picture is the work of William Collier, Jr., who, in the vernacular "walks away with it," despite the fact that he is denied the triumph of a final scene when he has found his mother, but lost a chance to live. Opportunities for out of the ordinary "punches" have been sacrificed for some unexplained reason all the way, leaving only well done fights, good suspense and an accurate description of the underworld of Paris to recommend the offering, in addition to one of the most representative casts ever assembled for a picture of this kind. There are those who enjoy seeing the habits, lives and haunts of criminals depicted upon the screen, especially when the story is laid in the underworld of Paris. That is what this picture is, the action of consequence all taking place in the interiors, showing the underground haunts of vice.

The Cast

King Rudolph	Lew Cody
Mayflower	Gladys Hulette
Madam Ferrand	Effie Shannon
Schoolmaster	Montagu Love

Adapted by Dorothy Farnum. Directed by Kenneth Webb. Produced by Whitman Bennett.

The Story—Begins with the hopeless infatuation of a Prince for a girl whose rank is so far beneath his that they agree to hold their love sacred, but see each other no more. Eventually the girl is wedded to an old roué, for whom she bears a child. In later years, the child grown up, is found by the Royal hero, now a King, who rescues her from her sordid home in "The Rat Hole," and places her in care of his old nurse. This woman, also has a great sorrow, the loss of a living son, the father having left him with the "Owl" to be trained as a thief. There are integral parts which tell stories of their own, but in the main a romance of the underworld, embracing a King, who travels incognito in search of the one woman and finds, instead, her daughter, who ultimately becomes his Queen.

Classification—Melodrama with a capital M. Not a great deal of mystery involved, rather an insight into life as it exists and sorrows of unfortunates who make the underworld of Paris their home.

Production Highlights—A number of good fights. Flooding the underground chamber where Mayflower and the King face death and are saved just in time by the brave rescue of Mayflower's devoted admirer, who pays for her life, with his own.

Exploitation Angles—Will stand for an amount of sensational advertising and supply patrons thus informed with what they expect to see in the way of revelation of lives of criminals.

Drawing Power—Play up the cast and do not be afraid to recommend the performance of each, as something out of their respective lines.

"Youth to Youth"

Metro—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by E. G. Stellings)

THIS picture introduces Metro's newest star, Billie Dove, who, since she flashed her winsome personality last season in a film play based upon stage life, was destined to reach stellar heights. If her work in "Youth to Youth" is a sample of what she is capable of doing, then there is no question that she will soon establish a popular following. Miss Dove carries her lighter moments as well as the heavier with equal grace and ease and audiences which greet her in this story of a country girl who came to New York for a stage career, are certain to be impressed by her wholesome charm and talent.

Stories of stage life are ever fascinating to those unfamiliar with its glamour. The heroine has come to New York to seek a career behind the footlights. And after two years, part of the time of which was spent in the chorus, the girl becomes a star. She is much sought after by wealthy suitors, though she is ignorant of the fact that a wealthy hotel-keeper has provided the luxuries which surround her life. Then a true understanding comes to her and she sacrifices these luxuries to become a leading lady at fifteen dollars a week. The company opens in a small town and a local youth who attends the show falls in love with her.

The story at this point develops dramatic complications which involve her with her previous adventures in New York, and the action is charged with conflict and suspense. The cast of this satisfying—though not a special—production, contains names that will make prospective patrons think twice before they decide to go to another house, and the odds are five to one that this cast will help the picture in getting them in. Cullen Landis again demonstrates that he is a first rate actor, and the support which includes the only Wallace Beery contribute excellent work. Taken as a whole the picture can be said to be one of the best that is to be had on the market at this time, although it cannot be considered a special that would get advanced prices.

The Story—County girl comes to New York seeking stage career. After two years she reaches stardom, although she is ignorant that the luxuries lavished upon her are paid for by a man whose motive is mercenary. After severe trials, the girl finds true love.

Classification—Appealing romantic story of stage life that combines romance, action and heart-touching scenes.

Production Highlights—The work of Billie Dove and the capable support contributed by Cullen Landis and Wallace Beery. The atmosphere of life back stage. The human incident.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the fact that you have a new star to exploit. Tell that the screen in need of new faces has found one. It will pay to exploit the star in view of the forthcoming productions in which she will appear. Use atmosphere of back stage life for lobby display and a prologue.

Drawing Power—Should please any audience that is seeking clean entertainment.

"Sure Fire Flint"

C. C. Burr-Affiliated Producers—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SEVEN reels of intensified comedy and melodrama, interspersed with high jinks and thrills are offered in the Johnny Hines picture, "Sure Fire Flint." If Gerald Duffy, the author, has forgotten a single trick, he should be censured, for this fast moving hodge-podge carries every known ingredient. It out-serials any serial during its closing reels, while the introductory reels are filled with laugh provoking incident which while exaggerated manages to keep you dizzy watching the whirl of events. The character, Flint, was born on the Fourth of July. Which is sufficient to say that it crackles with the necessary fireworks.

After the orphanage episode, the youth goes to war, covers himself with glory, plays a nifty game of poker, returns to become a taxi driver, gets fired, takes a job as a bus boy and waiter at a society function, receives his walking papers again, and doubles in brass as a dancing partner to a nifty chorine—and finally meets the girl whose photograph decorated the windshield of his car. It's all good fun—hokum you might say, but you don't stop to measure the absurdities because of the high voltage of the dynamic action. Perhaps you might wonder that a well bred girl could fall in love with a rough and ready fellow. His table manners are enough to queer him. But don't overlook the fact that he has a keen sense of humor, a generous smile—which qualities are sure fire enough.

Some of these scenes, particularly the one "shot" around the dinner could be trimmed. There is too much repetition. Yet it seldom sags. Ralph Spence's titles more than keep pace with the high jinks. In fact many of them carry the humor when it plays out elsewhere. Then the melodrama is introduced. Convenient? Yes! Lively? We'll say so! It gets right down to the point where the heavy villain attempts to rob the safe. The dictagraph is used to catch him. The girl discovers the plot and is locked in the safe. Then comes Flint on the train to the rescue. There are some good thrills here for a draw-bridge is used to carry on the suspense. And the hero gets there on time by appropriating a bicycle, a motor cycle and an auto. It is a mad race. The picture is well acted by the star, Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson, Charles Gerrard and Effie Shannon. Dell Henderson directed. Snappy stuff, indeed.

The Cast

Sure Fire Flint	Johnny Hines
Sergeant McCann	Edmund Breese
James Reynolds	Robert Edeson
Mrs. Reynolds	Effie Shannon
The proud father	Barney Sherry
June Reynolds	Doris Kenyon
Dimple Poole	Charles Gerard

By Gerald C. Duffy. Directed by Dell Henderson. Produced by C. C. Burr.

The Story—Youth born on the Fourth, has adventurous career as soldier, taxi-driver, bus boy, waiter, dancer, and manager of factory. He flirts with danger, but is always sure fire in handling things—using either his fists, his smile or a quick wit. His honesty gets him a good job and he falls in love with rich employer's daughter. She likes him, too. When he rescues her from a death trap wedding bells are heard in the distance.

Classification—Carries curious mixture of high-speed comedy and thrilling medodrama. Adventures of a dead game hero.

Production Highlights—Fine work of all-star cast. Ralph Spence's titles. The good production. The drawbridge scene. The comedy hokum at cabaret scene and at the dinner. The girl's rescue. The mad race to reach her.

Exploitation Angles—Get out your paper and play it up with a snappy campaign. Use the title. Mention the all-star cast. Put on a dancing prologue. Bill the town like a circus.

Drawing Power—Will get over everywhere.

MEN AND EVENTS IN THE FILM CENTRES

With "News" Correspondents

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

Springfield, Ill., News

The Gaiety has booked "Remembrance." It will come in for a week's run starting October 22. Manager Thorton has also secured Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy," which will also stay a week, starting November 25.

Hot weather during the week of October 1 shot business all to pieces at the local motion picture playhouses. Attractions like "The Man From Home," "Burning Sands," "Divorce Coupons" and "The Real Adventure" were unable to draw the crowds out in paying numbers.

The Strand has celebrated its first anniversary. The attraction for the week was "The Fast Mail," a Fox super-special. Manager Kerasotes passed out roses to all women who came to see the picture. The house was dolled up in great style. It opened a year ago on October 8.

Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame" was the highly satisfactory attraction at the Princess for the week of October 8-15. Miss Talmadge has had two wonder pictures in this and "Smilin' Through."

"The Old Homestead" played a week at the Gaiety, starting October 7. Some of the fans said it was better than "Way Down East."

Mae Murray came to the Lyric on October 8 for a week's run in "Fascination," one of her best Metro productions. Extra advertising was run and it helped to bring out the crowds.

The Capitol has been giving daily radio concerts of late. Lee Burnstine, manager, says that they are liked by his patrons.

Ben Rovin of the Amuse-U has started in on a new series of westerns. Pete Morrison in "Headin' North" was the first, shown on Sunday, October 8.

Louis Kerasotes of the Savoy and Strand is a busy man these days. Manages to keep good attractions in both houses and does not know the meaning of red ink.

The Majestic will celebrate the Orpheum anniversary the week of October 22. Manager Lampman is working night and day on stunts.

The Empress is doing nicely now that the mines are working again. It is located in a neighborhood where a great deal of money is let loose about the first and fifteenth of every month.

The Princess will be the Springfield theatre to show "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

In the Washington Exchanges

GEORGE E. SCHWARTZ of Philadelphia has replaced William Bush as special representative of the Associated Exhibitors at Washington, making his city quarters at the Pathe exchange. Jean J. Crandall, formerly of Washington, spent several days the past two weeks at the Pathe office here in the interests of President Kane of the Associated Exhibitors.

Publicity Director Edmunds of the First National office, put over some clever stunts with local storekeepers in boosting last week's business for the "Eternal Flame," appearing at Crandall's Metropolitan.

Nat Sauber, formerly with Rialto Pictures, Reliance and Goldwyn, has returned to Goldwyn as assistant manager.

"Billy" Van Dyke of the Goldwyn organization is back after a well-earned vacation.

Arthur H. Levey is now in the territory as special representative for the American Releasing exchange of Washington.

Manager Milstine of American Releasing returned last week after his first trip on the road in his new Dodge Sedan. He says that he is pleased with the results and satisfied with the performance of the new bus.

Robert M. Grace is now booker with the Empire Films of Washington, Bob Ooge having gone to Baltimore, where he is connected with an independent film exchange.

Tom Moore is to give the first large city premiere of the Goldwyn picture, "Sherlock Holmes," John Barrymore starring.

The Paramount organization, it is announced, is to co-operate with the management of Loew's Washington houses, Messrs. Gates and Beattus, in the biggest newspaper publicity campaign ever staged for moving picture productions in Washington.

Walter Davis, former booker for Universal, is now salesman on the road for the local office. Harry Weinberg is succeeding Davis as booker. Harry was formerly assistant booker at the Laemmle exchange.

Four first runs of United Artists have been placed with Baltimore theaters by George Lenehan of the Washington Exchange. George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God" is one of the four, while "The Tailor Made Man" and others were placed.

Mrs. Farnell, secretary to R. Clinton Robin of Pathe, has recovered from a severe attack of tonsillitis and is at her desk again.

Exhibitor Levine of Newport News, Va., was a visitor at Washington exchanges during the week.

Florida Flashes

C. D. Cooley, manager of the Victory Theatre, Tampa, Fla., put the big feature, "Manslaughter," over to immense business. He used half and quarter page ads prior to the opening date, and full page spreads upon the first day's showing. The business section of the city was well covered with half sheet window signs and tack cards, and the lobby was dolled up special, with cut-outs predominating.

The report comes from St. Petersburg that Miss Polly Barton, who was the winner of the first prize in their bathing beauty contest during the Festival of States Celebration in that city, also won herself a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Co., and is now at work with that company in a picture they are producing at Salem, Mass. Miss Barton's mother is with her and also working in the picture, it is stated.

Looks like Orlando was going to make a name as a production city. They have two companies at work there now. One is making a feature, the title of which is reported to be, "The Broad River," and the other company is at work on two part comedies. This latter company is the Juanita Films, which lately moved there from Tampa.

In St. Louis' Film Centre

"CHET" STEWART took the road for the local Associated Exhibitors exchange last Monday. He is making the northern half of the Illinois territory of the local office. "Chet" is very well known throughout the territory. In recent months he has been hitting the tall grass for Universal, but prior to that he was with Pathe. Sort of returning to his old love.

Pat Collins of Exhibitors Direct Service also has a new contract chaser. He is E. L. Hammerstein, late of Robertson-Cole. He grabbed an Illinois rattler early Wednesday. Staying in to see the annual Veiled Prophet parade.

Exhibitors Direct Service, which recently took over the distribution of pictures of the Fine Arts Pictures Corporation, has secured "Orphan Sally" for the St. Louis territory. Collins plans to release it about November 1.

The Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri rights to "Young America" has been obtained by Samuel Werner of United Film Exchange. Warner also purchased territorial rights to "Weekly Witticisms" from the Art Film Company, Cleveland, O.

Jack Underwood of Enterprise was hitting high places in the territory the past week. Milton Simon of F. B. O. also went out a few days to shake and talk contracts with the exhibitors.

Charley Werner of Metro returned with a pocketful of fat contracts after several nice days in the Southern Illinois key cities.

Charley Newsum, who controls three houses in Mount Vernon, Ill., was seen moving along Picture Row.

Jim Reilly's smiling face from Alton was another familiar visitor of the week. Jim runs the Princess and Grand theatres in the City of Hills.

Among the visitors to local exchanges were: O. E. Miller, Idle Hour, Festus, Mo.; W. E. Schwing, Gem, Vehlmeier, Ill., and E. O. Lewis, Pastime, Sessor, Ill.

Leon De La Mothe, director general of the Mid-West Production Company, has gone to New York to sign up some screen stars and near-stars. The company needs talent to put on "The Eyes of Mystery," a serial it is making here.

The Casino Theatre, of Ybor City, the Latin portion of Tampa, was the cause of blocking traffic on Seventh avenue, and clear around the block, a couple of nights last week. The cause of this lineup was a Spanish production which they imported. The Latin people like to see the home pictures now and then.

The Convent of the Holy Name at Tampa has booked a number of historical pictures and will give a show every two weeks for the benefit of their scholars. Sister Ethelbert is in charge of the work, and she says she hopes later to give shows weekly. The convent, besides having a complete motion picture equipment, also has a stereopticon which is used in the different class rooms.

C. A. Sappal, president of the Maceo Amusement Co., of Tampa, has closed their Ocala house. He says that the location was bad and the people failed to give the needed support, though he gave them the same class of attractions they have in Tampa.

Buffalo Brevities

Mrs. Eli T. Hosmer, member of the New York state motion picture commission, gave an address before the Zonta Club of Buffalo Tuesday, Oct. 10. Mrs. Hosmer deplores the depiction of women on the screen lolling about munching chocolates, awaiting their chauffeurs or otherwise seeking to convey the idea that all American women are idlers instead of workers. Mrs. Hosmer praised the present colored films giving American dyes credit for their excellence. She found fault with alleged unpleasant and suggestive titles of many pictures and scored pictures shown in the poorer class of houses in the cities and towns because of their glaring bad use of English. These pictures, she said, are permit pictures not reviewed by the commission.

Henry F. Thurston, manager of the Temple, Lockport, aided the local boy scout campaign committee by putting on a special showing of a film showing activities of the boys' organization.

E. O. Weinberg is recovering from an operation in the Homeopathic Hospital, Buffalo, where his tonsils were removed. Mr. Weinberg, who has been managing the Strand in Syracuse all summer while Edgar Weill was regaining his health, will shortly go to some seashore resort for a rest. He will take over the management of the new Strand in Troy when it opens. He was for years manager of the Buffalo Strand, succeeding Earl L. Crabb, now at the System, Syracuse.

Loew's State, Buffalo, and its manager, Al Beckerick, both celebrated the first anniversary of the house the week of October 16 with a fine program of pictures and vaudeville.

If Shea's Hippodrome don't break box office records the week of October 23 it will not be the fault of M. Shea and his manager, Vincent McFaul, who have assembled one of the biggest programs of the season. It will include "Nice People," with Bebe Daniels and Wallace Reid; Max Linder in "The Three Must Get Theres," and live models in a brilliant fashion show.

Ralph Thayer, manager of the new Strand in Niagara Falls, is inaugurating a series of Sunday afternoon music programs which are being given by the Strand orchestra under the direction of Albert Greenberg and George A. Bouchard, organist. The past week Mr. Bouchard made a big hit with his selection, "Indians of Niagara," in which he introduced a Tuscarora chief in full regalia.

Harry Houdini will soon make a tour of western New York towns and cities with a company of four in connection with the showing of "The Man From Beyond," which is being handled by Nu-Art Pictures Corporation of Buffalo in New York state, north of Westchester County.

Buffalo Film Row News

NOVEMBER 15 has been set as the date for the opening ceremonies attending the "dedication" of the new Fox exchange in north Pearl street. Clayton P. Sheehan, district manager, announces that Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company, will come to "his old home town" for the event and that one of the big new Fox specials will be screened at a big party for exhibitors, newspaper men, city officials and invited guests. Charles Denzinger, former manager of the Strand in Youngstown, Ohio, and now covering percentage engagements for the local Fox office, was injured last week in an auto accident in Syracuse. He will recover. W. J. Mahoney has returned from a successful trip through the Southern Tier.

What do you know about this one! George A. Hickey, former manager of the Buffalo Goldwyn exchange and now district manager for the same company, with headquarters in the national capital was married in the Queen City of the Lakes on Labor Day, and he's kept it secret up to this time. Sly old dog, this boy George. Congratulations, George, even if it is a bit late!

A. A. Schmidt, general manager of Universal, and his personal representative, D. G. Adams, were in town Friday, October 13, conferring with M. A. Chase, district manager. T. C. Leonard, Universal exploitationist, is putting on some good stuff for "The Storm." The stage set at the Plaza last week was a reproduction of the cabin scene and the approaching forest fire. It was a hit.

Film Row friends of Frank J. A. McCarthy are expressing their sorrow for him in his bereavement. Frank's mother died in Summerville, Mass., last week. He was absent from the Paramount office for a week, while attending the funeral. Allan S. Moritz, Paramount manager, has returned from his weekly trip to New York. What's the attraction, Allan?

Occupants of the Warner exchange building were in a fine predicament last week. The first cold snap hit town. The fireman quit his job. There was no heat. It was so cold in the Metro office that several exhibitors about to sign big contracts were unable to do so because the cold froze their hands stiff. Manager Henry W. Kahn is installing hand warmers such as used on the steering wheels of motor cars.

I. Weiss of New York city has arrived in Buffalo to join Syd Samson's Grand and North sales staff.

Bob Murphy of Filkins and Murphy, Merit distributors, after attending the world series games in New York, started back upstate, dropping off at the key cities in the territory in search of dates.

The F. B. O. office and sales staff had a birthday surprise party for Manager Earl W. Kramer at Meugel's Inn on the Transit Road, near Lockport, N. Y., Saturday evening, October 14. From all reports it was "some" party. Teddy Hayes is now a member of the local F. B. O. staff. He was formerly with Select in this city for a short time and then went to Albany with the same company. The local F. B. O. exchange has taken over the Utica territory.

F. B. Frank, general sales manager for Associated Exhibitors, was in town the week of October 16, conferring with local Manager Mooney on the local first run showing of Harold Lloyd's new comedy, "Dr. Jack."

With the Cleveland Branches

MAX AND JOE SCHAGRIN, prominent Youngstown exhibitors, are twins. They look exactly alike. They dress exactly alike. Max manages the Orpheum theatre and Joe manages the Park theatre. The only way a film man knows to which one he has sold film, is to capture them both at the same time. That's how it is known positively that it is Joe Schagrins of the Park theatre who is running seven straight weeks of Fox pictures. He began last week with "Monte Cristo." This week he is playing "Silver Wings" first release in the state.

William Rosenthal, formerly with D. W. Griffith, has joined the local Fox sales family.

Lew Heinrich is cashier of the Cleveland Fox exchange. Counting out money is music to his ear. So he has put the music down on paper and the Jos. Remick Company has contracted to publish it. The outburst has taken the form of a fox trot.

C. E. Penrod, manager of the local F. B. O. outfit had a profitable visit in Toledo last week. He arranged with "Doc" Horater to stage an exclusive F. B. O. week at Horater's Pantheon theatre. "Twin Husbands" with Carter DeHaven was the comedy and "The Kick-Back" with Harry Carey was the feature.

J. T. Rowe has just been appointed contract clerk of the Cleveland F. B. O. exchange.

Bill Skirboll of Educational and Goldseal productions, was in New York this week.

Maurice Lebensburger, manager of the Cleveland office of the Standard Film Service Company, went to Chicago last week. The business was to bring home his wife and daughter who had been on a visit to Mrs. Lebensburger's parents.

Bert Stern, better known as "Shorty," just returned to Cleveland, after a prolonged visit in California where he went to attend the funeral of his uncle, Maxwell Karger. Stern has joined the Educational Film sales force.

D. W. Shallenberger of Arrow Films, and his special representative, Mr. Josie, stopped off here last Wednesday on their way South.

C. P. Saunders answers to the name of Vitagraph in the roll call of local film salesmen nowadays. Saunders was formerly in the Buffalo territory.

Albany Paragraphs

Lee Langdon is now with the First National Exchange in Albany, looking after the bookings. Joseph Hanley, who formerly filled that position, has been transferred to the New York office of First National.

The Star theatre in Potsdam has been sold the past week to Sylvester Nicollette and H. E. Flack. The new owners will make several changes and among other things, will add a balcony which will give the house seating capacity sufficient for 1,000 persons.

The First National Exchange in Albany has recently expanded to the extent of taking over the third floor of the building which it occupies in Broadway. The floor will be used for office space and racks.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Regan who handle the Star at Greenwich, N. Y., were in Albany this week, booking features for early runs.

All exchanges and theatres in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, this week reported a steady increase in business. Without a single exception, each manager predicted a good Winter. North of here, in such places as Glens Falls, Ticonderoga, Warrenburg, Corinth, Watertown, Hadley and other places where the paper mill strike has almost wrecked the motion picture business, things are on the gain, due to the fact that the mills have reopened even though the strike has never been officially settled. In Albany and adjoining cities and towns affected by the railroad strike, business has brightened most perceptibly with the adjustment of matters.

The Mark Strand theatre in Albany put on an excellent prologue last week in connection with the showing of "The Old Homestead." It was the first prologue given Albany patrons in many weeks, and scored a hit.

Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy," running the entire week at Proctor's Grand, packed the house with the largest gross this fall.

Edward Colligan is said to have sold the theatre in Carthage, which bears his name, to the Schiner Theatrical company, which runs a chain of houses in central and western New York. The house has been on the market at $80,000 for some little time.

A. J. Herman, manager of the First National Exchange in Albany, is happy these days by reason of the fact that the Albany office is leading both Buffalo and New York sales exchanges.

Hope Hampton is making a personal appearance in Schenectady this week along with the showing of "The Light in the Dark." It is expected that arrangements will be consummated before the week is over, and that Miss Hampton will have a message broadcasted from the radio station in that city.

F. W. Mansert, owner of the Rialto theatre in Glens Falls, was in Albany the past week.

Canadian Notes

Over $6,000,000 was spent by 17,000,000 people in Montreal, Quebec, for amusements during the 12 months ending September 30, 1922, according to an official report just released by Mr. A. Bienvenu, superintendent of Privileges and Licenses at the Montreal City Hall for the amusement tax returns in Montreal during the fiscal year.

The actual sum received in payment of the tax on admission tickets during the 12 months was $609,854, and the total number of paid admissions reached 17,089,585. The tax is a straight 10 per cent on the face value of the tickets, which means that the sum of $6,098,540 was actually spent for amusements in the regular way in Montreal, during the last fiscal year.

For the corresponding period of 12 months ending September, 1921, the total receipts in Montreal from the amusement tax were $449,475 and the number of paid admissions totalled 16,422,927.

Luigi Romanelli, director of the Allen theatre orchestra, Toronto, has returned from a lengthy tour in Europe where he studied musical developments in European centres. Following his trip, Romanelli arranged to conduct a series of weekly orchestral concerts at the Toronto Allen, starting Monday evening, October 16, when 35 musicians played a varied program of special selections under his direction.

The Dominion theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, which was destroyed by fire some little time ago, is not to be rebuilt, according to an announcement just made by the owners, Grant Davidson and A. E. Dymont of Toronto. In place of the theatre, which formerly presented picture and Keith vaudeville, a hotel structure is to be built as an addition to the adjacent Cecil Hotel, the new addition to have 235 rooms.

The possibility of any theatre labor troubles in Ottawa, Ontario, this season has been finally settled by the signing of new agreements which provide for the same wage scales as were in force last year. The new agreements have a clause which provides for the minimum number of men to be employed in orchestras, etc. This clause was not in effect last season but it is once more in force, this being considered a concession that has been gained by the theatre employes.

Go-To-Theatre Weeks have become quite the style in moving picture theatre circles in Canada. The exhibitors of Montreal staged a celebration of this type from October 8 to 14 with fine success, special references being made to the feature in newspaper advertisements, lobby displays and otherwise.

At a meeting of the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association in Manitoba Hall, Winnipeg, on October 12, the exhibitors of Winnipeg decided to hold a Go-To-Theatre-Week there in November, and Mr. G. de Grandcourt, exploitation manager of the Fox Film Corporation, was appointed chairman of the committee to make arrangements. Will H. Hays is to be invited.

News from Canadian Exchanges

IT was incorrectly stated in these columns of the issue of October 14th that I. Sourkes, salesmanager at the Montreal office of United Artists, had resigned from that capacity. MOTION PICTURE NEWS regrets the oversight and calls attention to the error.

The personal appearance of Jack Dempsey at the Pantages theatre, Toronto, during the week of October 9, formed the occasion for a special celebration among the moving picture men of Toronto possessed of unusual sporting instinct. One of the week's social features was a luncheon at the King Edward Hotel at which Ned Miller, manager of the Pantages theatre, was the host. Those who took a prominent part in the proceedings, aside from Dempsey himself, included H. L. Nathanson, of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Arthur Cohen, vice-president and sales manager of Regal Films, Limited, and Jake Berman, a pioneer official in local film exchange circles.

G. A. Baldson, assistant manager of the Vitagraph office at New York City, has been visiting Winnipeg, Manitoba, on a business trip, making his headquarters at the local Vitagraph branch. John Flemming, of the Winnipeg office, has been on a tour of the whole Canadian West for Vitagraph.

Jack Welch, some years ago with Regal Films, Limited, has resigned as special representative of the Hodkinson Film Company in Western Canada to accept a position with Regal Films, Limited, in Toronto.

Three Canadian film distributors have taken large suites of offices in the new film exchange building which is to be ready for occupation shortly in Winnipeg, Manitoba. The three are the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Associated First National Exhibitors and the Canadian Educational Film Company.

Because of the pronounced bi-lingual situation in the Province of Quebec, film features having titles in both English and French are enjoying peculiar success in theatres of the various centres of the Province. One of the latest attractions to appear with the dual titles is the Famous-Lasky release "Blood and Sand."

With New England Exchanges

J. M. CUMMINGS has been appointed office manager of the Goldwyn Boston office. He is an old newspaper man and still retains his nose for news. He started in the film game with General Films, and has now been at it for more than 12 years. Of late he has been Boston manager for Hodgkinson.

Miss Rose McNulty, who was assistant to Mr. Cummings at the Hodgkinson office, has stepped into his shoes there and is now in complete charge. She is the second woman to be tried in the Boston district and it is sufficient to say that she is putting things over in great style where some men have failed.

Allen-Cherette, Inc., operating nine theatres in New England, have closed a contract with Goldwyn's on their super-specials. President Allen is very popular in Boston's film district and his many friends there are glad to see that he has returned from his summer home at Oak Bluffs, Mass., primed for a busy season. He says he is about to lay up the wild motor boat that has kept him busy all summer. Skipper Earl Allen, 4-year old seasoned salt, has returned with his Dad to inject pep into the company offices.

Ted Jacocks, for a number of years with United Artists, has been put in charge of the New Haven office of Independent Films. He who was there, Timothy O'Toole, returned to Boston, only to be told that he would shortly have to pack up and trek for Western Massachusetts and also Rhode Island, which districts he will cover for the company.

John Wilstach, one of the best known exploitation men in the New England district, has been added to the Goldwyn staff in Boston. He comes of an exploitorial family, his father having been in that line for years with the Shuberts. John himself has worked with several New York productions, and has the rep of being one of the very best in his class. He started on his new assignment at New Bedford, October 2, with a bang.

The new offices of the Franklin exchange are a busy spot these days, all in preparation for their monster opening on Tuesday, to which every man, woman and child interested in motion pictures has been invited.

Carolina Close-Ups

Otto Haas, prominent Charlotte, N. C., exhibitor, was one of the many theatrical people seen in Europe during the summer. While spending a vacation there with his mother it so happened that he was seen in Germany by the William Oldknow party of Atlanta.

Jerome Saffron, special representative for H. M. Berman of F. B. O., was in Charlotte last week with Bill Conn who is to manage the new branch of F. B. O. which will be opened there immediately.

A. C. Bromberg of Bromberg Attractions was called to Mobile, Ala., last week by the death of his mother.

T. E. Dilliard, formerly with United Artists, has been made representative at large in the Southeast for Universal and will concentrate on the Jewel productions.

H. B. Varner of Lexington, N. C., has just announced the purchase by him of the Strand theatre in Salisbury, N. C., from Southern Enterprises in whose possession it has been for two years.

New England Jottings

Information given out yesterday at the Massachusetts State House brings to light the fact that 17 companies, with an aggregate capitalization of $36,850,000 have been barred from selling securities in Massachusetts by the Public Utilities Commission since May 20, when an amendment to the "Blue Sky" law went into effect, that gives the commission power to issue findings barring sale of a company's securities. Prominent in the list is the $3,000,000 Ziegfeld Cinema Corporation of New York City.

Jim Somes has severed his connections with the Giles Circuit of motion picture theatres in Massachusetts to become general manager of the Gray Circuit in Maine. The circuit comprises about 30 houses and has its headquarters at Lewiston. Jim, well known in trade circles in New England, keeps stepping.

William Hardy has left the Strand, of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and is about to close negotiations on a big theatre proposition in or around Boston.

Norman Dickson, formerly exploitation manager for the Famous Players-Lasky organization at their Cincinnati office, has assumed management of the Empire Theatre, New Bedford, Mass.

Motion pictures are playing an important part in the Better Home campaign in Massachusetts, a movement which is endorsed by city and state. Shows are being run in many Boston schools with films on the subject of home building and improvement, performances being given in the afternoon for the children, and for parents in the evening.

The Film Club of Boston opened its eighth session Saturday with a reunion and business meeting at the Hotel Victoria. Mrs. J. Wentworth Brackett presided. Miss Marion H. Brazier reported on sessions at Chautauqua, and discussions of new pictures followed.

Miss Carol Dempster, starring in Griffith's new film, "One Exciting Night," now having its first official run at Boston, was the honor guest Saturday, at a luncheon given at the Women's City Club, by Miss Elizabeth Joyce, who invited Boston's newspaper women to meet her.

Personal appearances are getting to be all the thing in Massachusetts. In connection with the showing of "Sure Fire Flint" at Gordon's Washington Street Olympia, Johnny Hines will be much on the job at every performance. Margery Wilson, was at New Bedford's Capitol Theatre last week with "Insinuation," her own production. She pleaded with her hearers at every performance to keep their faith in William S. Hart, defending him from much newspaper criticism of late.

The Strand in Lowell, Mass., observed its fifth birthday last week, and Manager Samuel Torgan put on a special bill in honor of the occasion. He seemed quite fussed up over the many tributes and congratulation that were his.

Southwestern Items

J. A. Lemke, proprietor of the Crystal theatre at Waco, Texas, has filed an application for an injunction in the district court, asking for a restraining order against the City of Waco and the City Censors of public amusement.

The power of the city court is also attacked, Lemke alleging that the charter fails to prescribe the jurisdiction of the court and that the general laws of the state do not confer jurisdiction on city courts in cases where the city is organized under a special charter.

Managers and operators at Sherman, Texas, have signed a new contract at a scale of $30 per week and 75 cents per hour overtime.

E. C. Leeves, formerly of Dallas, Texas, manager for the Associated Producers, has been appointed Dallas, Texas, manager for Al Lichtman and Saenger Amusement Exchanges for the states of Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Texas. Sale promotion will start with "Rich Men's Wives."

Ray Stinnett has taken over the management of the National theatre at Breckenridge, Texas, and now controls all of the houses at that place.

W. M. Grandstaff has taken over the management of the Haskell theatre, Dallas, Texas. Winfield Orr will be house manager.

Josh Billings has opened the new Billings theatre at Billings, Okla. It is a modern theatre with up to date cooling system and steam heat.

R. B. Montgomery has leased the Annex theatre at Perry, Okla., from J. B. Tate. H. C. Tate, former manager, is going on the film market in Oklahoma City.

The Busby theatre at McAlester, Okla., changed October 17th, from pictures to road shows and musical comedy.

Sam Benjamine, former Universal manager at Oklahoma City, has switched over to the management of the F. B. O. exchange at Oklahoma City, Okla.

C. B. Hughes has installed a radio set in his Liberty theatre at Heavener, Okla., and will later install a more powerful set.

The Rialto at Midland, Texas, moves from the Airdome to the theatre for winter season.

W. H. Auston has purchased the Barron opera house at Gravette, Ark., from the Barron estate and will open the theatre soon for business.

Clark Porter of Davis is opening a new theatre at Charleston, Ark.

D. S. Fitton will establish a radio set in his theatre at Harrison, Ark., soon.

A. B. Baker will open his new theatre at Luling, Texas, in near future.

Ray Blankenship has leased the Savoy theatre at Savoy, Texas.

In Kansas City's Film Center

BY virtue of a "trade in jobs," Howard E. Jameyson, exploitation manager of the Kansas City Universal office, and L. D. Balsly, advertising manager of the Wichita theatre, Wichita, Kan., are assuming new roles this week. Jameyson formerly was advertising manager of the Liberty and Doric theatres in Kansas City, later going to Milwaukee as managing director of the Butterfly theatre, while Balsly was the first manager of the Kansas City First National office.

Hal Horne, Film Booking Offices representative out of Omaha, and his wife were painfully injured in a motor car accident in Kansas City last week when the car in which they were riding skidded and over turned. Both Mr. and Mrs. Horne now are in a hospital. Mr. Horne is badly cut about the head and may lose his right eye, while Mrs. Horne is suffering from body bruises.

Beating the newspapers on a story is no small accomplishment for a cameraman, but William Andlauer, official cameraman for Pathe and the Newman theatre, turned the trick in Kansas City last week, having pictures of the Priests of Pallas parade on the screens of first run houses half an hour after the parade and incidentally having some of the best night shots ever seen in Kansas City.

T. Y. Henry, formerly manager of the Kansas City United Artists branch office and one of the most popular exchange managers in the Kansas City territory, left the latter part of last week for New York to assume his duties as assistant general sales manager for United Artists.

If popularity can be measured by newspaper publicity, Ben Turpin won the "key" to Kansas City this week, making personal appearances at the Pantage theatre. Despite the fact that the comedian was severely ill during the middle of the week, he refused to discontinue his work. In addition to his personal appearances, Mr. Turpin delivered a radio address from the Kansas City Star, which was broadcasted over the country, and spoke to many civic organizations.

Arthur Carlson, 20 years old, 62 South Eighteenth street, Kansas City, Kansas, has been identified by C. H. Burkey, owner of the Summit theatre, Kansas City, and a member of the M. P. T. O. Missouri executive board, as one of the bandits who held Mr. Burkey up, September 18 and October 2, robbing him each time of box office receipts. On each occasion Mr. Burkey was on his way to the bank from his theatre, two bandits jumping upon the running board of his car, which also was stolen. Carlson is being held on a charge of vagrancy.

It was to capacity houses that the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, played to on its anniversary week this week, with Theodore Roberts of screen fame as the headliner.

according to F. F. Nine, Kansas City branch manager of the National Film Releasing Company.

Three changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City territory have been made during the last week. The Empress Theatre at Paola, Kan., has been purchased by Willard Frazier from J. P. Everett; the Liberty Theatre at Cherryvale, Kan., purchased by A. W. Pugh, and the Criterion Theatre at Enid, Okla., purchased by Leon Weil.

A number of changes in the personnel of Kansas City exchange offices has taken place in the last week. J. J. Curran, formerly with the Famous Players office of Kansas City, now is representing United Artists in the territory, while Stanley Mayer, formerly with Hodkinson, now is a member of the Kansas City Educational staff, and Mike Newman, former Educational representative, has gone to St. Louis to become affiliated with Paramount. Then there is G. I. Bradford, former manager of the Hodkinson branch in St. Louis, who now is representing Universal in the Kansas City territory, and Joe Manfre, formerly with Fox in Kansas City and Denver, is in the booking department of the Kansas City Paramount office.

A sure sign of increasing fall business in rural Missouri—the Cater Theatre, owned by the Howe brothers at Marceline, Mo., no longer can remain closed six nights of the week but is open every night and doing a good business.

Baltimore Chatter

Bitter attack on street advertising, ballyhoos, etc., as exploitation for motion pictures has been launched by the motion picture editor of the Baltimore Sun, who write over the initials, "T. M. C." The writer begins by wishing to know whether there is "no end to the spectacular stunts to which the exhibitor will resort in order to attract patrons to his theatre."

Using recent exploitation stunts of this sort in Baltimore for ridicule, he quotes from a New York paper on the subject.

"One expects," writes the critic, "a circus performance to be preceded by a parade of monkeys and elephants through the city streets, but the practise of 'ballyhoo' methods in connection with the thing they wish to call the eighth art is scarcely compatible with the dictates of good taste."

Sales of two more theatres here are being advertised, the first that of the Lord Calvert theatre, a neighborhood house, which is being disposed of by the owner; and the second the Echo theatre, another neighborhood theatre, of which the equipment also will be sold. The latter disposition is being made through a trustee's sale.

The York theatre, formerly the Pastime, has been reopened under the management of Harry Cluster. The theatre had been closed for several months for improvements and alterations. A new front of ornamental brick, a handsome lobby enclosed by glass doors and new indirect lighting have been provided. A new gold fibre screen and late type projection machines have been installed.

The New theatre, a Whitehurst house here, has blossomed forth with a four page program under direction of Eugene N. Daley, who recently became directing manager of the house. The New's present policy is full week runs of first-run pictures.

Seattle Briefs

Edward Armstrong, Northwest division manager and representative of the Universal Film Company, has been a recent visitor. He was on the road several weeks and lately completed a tour of his territory, having previously visited San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Butte, Denver, Spokane and other cities on his route. Mr. Armstrong makes the tour around the circuit every five or six months. Upon his de-

Another film exchange sprang into being recently with the establishment of the L. K. Brin Exchange, distributors of Warner Brothers' features in this territory. The local exchange will distribute these pictures in the four Northwestern states, Washington, Oregon,

"Grandma's Boy" recently finished its run at the Liberty theatre here, after playing to large audiences at Manager Leroy V. Johnson's house for two solid weeks. Lloyd's first five-part feature is the first picture that has played a full two weeks' run at the Liberty since October, 1921, just about a year ago. Charles Chaplin, in "The Idle Class" was the picture that was playing at that time.

Kansas City Gossip

Contracts for the distribution in western Missouri and all of Kansas of eight 5-reel westerns, starring Jack Livingston, and a series of six 5-reel westerns, featuring George Larkin, were closed last week by the National Film Releasing Company's Kansas City office and the Russell Productions, Inc.,

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Comedian to Re-Crete Original Role

E. MARKS BEHRMAN, general manager of Smart Films, Inc., announces that he has secured the services of Billy West to produce a series of twenty-four comedies for release via state right market, one every two weeks.

The producer states that no expense will be spared in making the new series second to none and that every effort will be made to secure the best stories. Experts will be engaged in each particular department and each of the principals required for the cast, will be selected according to their proven histrionic abilities.

Work on the first production has been started at the new "Billy West Studio," located at Glendale, N. Y.

Stage Folk to Appear in Support of "Peggy"

Alf Gouding, Baby Peggy's director, has surrounded his little star with a cast of well known stage folk for her present Century Comedy Special, "Little Miss Spunk." Joe Bonner, Peggy's chief aide-de-camp played the parts originated by George M. Cohan in the road company of each of Cohan's successes, Arnold McDonald, Peggy's father in the story was for years a featured member of the famous Kolb and Dill organization, while Paul Stanhope, the heavy, just returned from Australia, where he had his own traveling company for the last eight years. Every other member of Peggy's cast has had stage experience.

Two-Reelers Approved, by National Board

Educational's serial of two-reel pictures on "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" are listed among the hundred films approved by the National Board of Review, and listed by the Board in connection with the Motion Picture Book Week Campaign which it has begun.

"And Women Must Weep," the first release in the current series of Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, is also included in this list.

The National Board of Review has launched this campaign through its National Committee for Better Films in connection with the Fourth Annual Children's Book Week to be observed nationally from November 12 to November 18. Only approved films, based upon literature suitable for children and youths, are included in the list.

"Ropin' Fool" To Be Released

Will Rogers Picture Heads
Pathe's Program for Oct. 29

WILL ROGERS, in "The Ropin' Fool," a picture which shows the rope throwing comedian's skill in fast comedy and slow motion, heads Pathe's release program for October 29, while Leo Maloney in "The Bar Cross War" has been given second place. In addition, there is episode two of "Speed," Pathe's News numbers 88 and 89 and "Topics of the Day" No. 44 in the output.

The second episode of the Charles Hutchinson serial, "Speed," is entitled "Nerve," and depicts the hero athlete performing some hazardous stunts in a mad race to clear his name.

"The Bar Cross War" is a western said to be teeming with action. It has to do with the hero cow-boy's aversion to unnecessary bloodshed, which makes him unpopular with the excitement craving ranchmen.

In the Hal Roach comedy, called "The Golf Bug," Paul Parrott devotes his comic talents to preparations for a matched game in which things are done with clubs and ball, and to the spectators, calculated to turn the famous sport into the jazziest sort of burlesque.

The Harold Lloyd re-issue is called "At the Old Stage Door." By accident the hero believes himself to be the happy object of the leading lady's sudden affection. Neither the pouring rain, the policeman's warnings nor physical violence from the stage doorman interferes with his ecstatic morale. But just as he is finally admitted and warmly welcomed by much beauty, the real "Johnny" shows up—and what happens to the hero is too painful for words.

"Henpecked Harry" is the Aesop's Film Fable release. Harry Dog decides to become a policeman, and is an all-round hero of incredible adventures until Mrs. Dog recaptures and shows that "no man is a hero in his own home."

The outstanding feature of this issue, however, is the Pathe Review No. 179, being another section of "Photographic Gems," depicting early autumn aspects. "The Floating Egg" section gives fascinating demonstrations of specific gravity. Pathe color shows Alpine scenery along the French-Italian border.

Choice Productions Offer 12 Novelties

THE Choice Productions, Inc., have styled their latest series of short subjects as "Comparables," two-reel subjects which compares different things, showing different things, showing the situation fifty years ago, in comparison with today, on many topics. Special scenarios, with this idea in view, have been written for these two-reelers, embracing the inherent trait of the present generation to recall incidents occurring in early life. For instance, the shy and modest maidens of our childhood. These, compared with the "flapper types" of today, are interesting and amusing. It is around just such situations as these that the Choice Productions have woven their themes. Each of the twelve "Comparables" are promised to be clean, wholesome and with sprinklings of pathos and comedy balanced to bring forth exceptionally pleasing short subjects.

Fox Gets National Board Aid

Plan to Present Praiseworthy Films
During Book Week Being Made

THROUGH its Educational Division, Fox Film Corporation is co-operating with the National Board of Review in presenting praiseworthy films based on literature. New prints have been supplied to all Fox exchanges covering several screen creations from famous authors' works. Exhibitors across the land will play during Book Week, November 12th to 18th, the follow subjects, which the National Board of Review has announced in a circular posted in public schools and libraries, everywhere in the United States:

Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, 5 reels, from Arabian Nights.

Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, 8 reels, by Mark Twain.

Evangeline, 5 reels, by Longfellow, with Miriam Cooper.

If I Were King, 8 reels, by Justin Huntley McCarthy, romantic drama, starring William Farnum.

Jack and the Beanstalk, five reels.

The Lamplighter, 6 reels, by Maria F. Cummins, drama, starring Shirley Mason.

The Last Trail, 7 reels, by Zane Grey, western melodrama.

Les Miserables, 8 reels, from Victor Hugo's immortal story about Jean Valjean, starring William Farnum.

The Men of Zanzibar, 5 reels, by Richard Harding Davis, a mystery tale of Africa, starring William Russell.

Merely Mary Ann, 5 reels, by Israel Zangwill, starring Shirley Mason.

Monte Cristo, 10 reels, by Alexandre Dumas, an unforgettable drama.

Over the Hill, 11 reels, by Will Carlston, story of the home, with Mary Carr.

A Self-Made Man, 5 reels, by George Horace Lorimer, humorous bits of Wall Street, starring William Russell.

A Stage Romance, 7 reels, by Alexander Dumas, from the play "Edmund Keane," starring William Farnum.

A Tale of Two Cities, 7 reels, by Charles Dickens.

Treasure Island, 6 reels, by Robert Louis Stevenson, romance, mystery, adventure.

'Speed,' Pathe Serial, Novelized for Press

"Speed," the Pathe serial, starring Charles Hutchinson, has been novelized in fifteen instalments, by Herbert Crooker. It is the fictionizing of the story, in episodic form, from which the serial has been made, following closely the action of the corresponding picture episode and is a part of Pathe's exploitation plan, since it may be had in proof sheets or mats for newspaper or magazine editors.

Pathe alleges that exhibitors have found this sort of publicity so valuable in connection with their announcements as serial showings, that many of them make a personal matter of securing publication of the novelizations in their local newspapers.

Exploitation outgrowth is reported in the readiness of exhibitors to screen slides naming the newspapers in which the novelization of their serial attraction is appearing, in return for which "circulation aid" the later print lists of the theatres whose screens announce their serial story publication. Pathe quotes letters from editors acknowledging the "circulation value," owing to the intensity of the suspense combined with rapid and thrilling action identified with these serial novelizations.

Circuit Bookings For Educational Product

AMONG the new contracts for Educational's 1922-23 product are two from widely separated parts of the country.

All two-reel subjects scheduled for release this season by Educational have been signed up for the entire Gordon Olympia Circuit operating throughout Massachusetts. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," release of which began in the spring, had already been signed up for this circuit.

The great Southern Enterprises Circuit has arranged through the Educational Branch at Dallas for the showing over this circuit of Mermaid Comedies, Christie Comedies, Hamilton Comedies, Earl Hurd Comedies, Cameo Comedies, Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, and Kinograms—Educational's news-reel.

With these contracts in, practically almost all important key centers have now been closed for Educational's new program of Short Subjects.

Favorite Star Series Being Revived

The Independent Pictures Corporation, a newly organized concern devoted to the production and release of attractions for State Rights distribution, has acquired a series of two reel productions, starring screen celebrities who heretofore worked under the direction of David W. Griffith and Christy Cabanne.

The first of the series of these revivals embrace productions in which appear Lillian Gish, Harry Carey, Mae Marsh, Henry Walthall, and Lionel Barrymore. These were directed, in a majority by D. W. Griffith and include a list of short reel successes of yesteryears.

Six of these twelve productions are out and out westerns, the remaining six of the first series being semi-western dramas, dealing with situations arising in mining and lumber camps.

The Independent Pictures Corporation will not confine activities to re-issues, but are at present organizing a staff for the production of special features for the independent market.

"My Country" Selected for Important Program

When the Capitol theatre, New York, was closed to the public for the first time on the evening of October 3 and a special program was given for the American Bankers' Association, one of the most important units on S. L. Rothafel's program was "My Country," one of Educational's Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, which had previously been shown for two weeks at the Capitol during the summer.

Mr. Rothafel said of "My Country": "One of the most beautiful motion pictures I have ever seen."

Educational Secures New Series

Howe's "Hodge Podge" Consisting of Twelve Single Reels Announced

FOLLOWING the phenomenal record made by Lyman H. Howe's "Famous Ride on a Runaway Train," released some time ago, Educational has arranged with Lyman H. Howe for a series of twelve single-reel pictures to be released under the series name, "Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge."

The first picture in this group of novelty reels will be called "King Winter" and will be released October 22nd. As the name "Hodge-Podge" indicates, each reel will consist of several subjects. They will include unique scenic shots, some animation and some trick photography. All who have seen "A Ride on a Runaway Train" have noticed Howe's tendency toward producing unexpected results on the screen.

The material being used to make up Hodge-Podge has been gathered from all parts of the world on Howe's extended trips through many lands in search of lecture data and unusual motion pictures.

A feature of the first release of this series, is a group of views of Niagara Falls in the grip of "King Winter." When scenic shots are presented they are treated in such a way as to make them absolutely unique.

Hodge-Podge will be a series of novelty reels—and each subject included in each release will be a novelty in itself.

In connection with the new release, it is interesting to note the recent statement of the editor of a large national trade publication. "The main trouble with movies today is their sameness," said this editor. "This is what the public doesn't like. The public is hungry for novelty, as every showman knows—novelty in entertainment and novelty in exploitation."

"That the public is hungry for novelty is not to be doubted," said E. W. Hammons, President of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in announcing this new series. "It was in answer to this demand that we arranged with Lyman H. Howe for Hodge-Podge."

Technical Series for Hodgkinson

26 Single-Reel "Technical Romances" to Start Releasing Early in November

IN a statement issued this week from the home office of the W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation announcement is made of the release of the Hodgkinson schedule of a series of twenty-six short subjects under the collective title "Technical Romances." These subjects are produced by the J. R. Bray Productions, Inc. The first, set for release early in November, is titled "The Mystery Box."

It is understood this single reel series will contain glimpses of modern science and invention, bringing them out of the class of the ordinary by giving them a touch of novelty as well as instructive interest.

"The Mystery Box" tells a complete story of the important subject of radio in its closest relation to the average citizen, and concludes with a prophecy of future communication with an outside planet. In this film the functioning of the radio sending and receiving apparatus is visualized. In this way the wonderful radio waves that emanate from the broadcasting stations are represented together with the sound waves transmitted to them, and shows how the radio waves are picked up and transformed again into sound waves by the receiving instruments at the homes of the radio fans.

J. N. Norling of the Bray technical staff both wrote the scenario and directed the production.

Rodner's "Music Film" Praised

Novel Short Subject on Program of Broadway Theatres Praised by Critics

HAROLD RODNER, one of the best known film salesmen in the industry, is said to have brought forth a novel and unique short feature subject in the "Music Film." This subject is declared to be the first synchronization between action on the screen and musical accompaniment.

Many of the most representative theatres in New York have booked the film, and it is said to be meeting with unusual favor with the motion picture public. Some of the theatres that have booked the novelty are the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres, managed by Hugo Riesenfeld; the Loew Circuit, Bim's Circuit and others.

No mechanism is used in connection with the film, and according to Mr. Rodner it is impossible for the orchestra to get "out of step" with the action on the screen. The New York Times, in reviewing the film at the Rialto, said:

"Don't fail to stay around for the pictorial because this includes one of the most charming little bits that has come to Broadway for a long time. It is called a 'Music Film,' and its direction is credited to J. F. Leventhal."

"Mud and Sand" Next Stan Laurel Comedy

"Mud and Sand" is the title of Stan Laurel's newest comedy to be filmed by Amalgamated Producing Corporation for Metro.

"The Price of Progress" Exploits Timber Country

SOMETHING "thrillingly different" Pathe declares to be its opinion of the Kiser Studios production called "The Price of Progress," which it will accordingly release about the middle of November as a two-reel feature. The picture is described as a thrilling human drama of the big timber country—a sort of screen epic in which men and machinery triumph over natural obstacles in felling and transporting giants of the Oregon forests. Seen in pre-view, the Sunday Oregonian reviewer wrote of "The Price of Progress": "It graphically shows the daring chances that those unsung heroes of the forest take in their daily work."

First Run Theatres Acclaim "Baby Peggy"

Century Comedies officials report being duly gratified by the growing popularity of "Baby Peggy" and assert that bookings prove that prominent exhibitors of first run houses now regard Baby Peggy as representative of the highest type of short subject entertainment. The increasing demand for Baby Peggy ordinary releases has warranted the more pretentious productions, beginning with "Little Red Riding Hood," which are now being prepared and made.

In a letter to Art Schmidt, sales manager of Universal, New York, Dave Bershon, of the West Coast Theatres, wrote regarding "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Peg of the Movies": "I wish to congratulate the organization in having productions of this kind, as short subjects of high quality are very necessary for high class houses. These two productions will make 'Baby Peggy' one of the biggest bets in the business."

New Booklet Describes Urban Classics

An interesting example of the progress being made by producers toward intelligent sales advertising is the booklet just off the press describing the "Urban Popular Classics." This series of fifty-two one-reel features, produced by Charles Urban, and released by Vitaphone, is proving one of the most popular of short subject novelties. This booklet in question, with its slogan, "To entertain and amuse is good; to do both and instruct is better," wins the distinction of giving its readers a clear understanding of each of the fifty-two subjects.

The current release is "Roving Thomas on an Airplane," a travelogue of the air, with some views of New York City and environs.

Washington Approves "Mirror" Events

THE MIRROR, the novelty reel of outstanding events filmed in past decades, and now being released by International, through Universal, recently made a great hit in Washington, when it was shown in Loew's Columbia for two solid weeks, according to Universal. The Mirror (No. 1) which contains shots of McKinley's inauguration in 1895, and comparison shots of Wilson's inauguration, and finally, Harding's inauguration with Wilson and Harding riding together, was received with great enthusiasm by the Washington public.

Woodrow Wilson is a regular Saturday night patron of the B. F. Keith Theatre in Washington, so on the first Saturday night after the release of the picture, Loew's Washington manager loaned the film to the Keith house as a matter of courtesy. The audience applauded the film and accorded Mr. Wilson a reception as prolonged and profound as if he were still President.

Top-Notch Talent in Trimble Comedies

Accompanied by Robert J. Trimble, president, Frederick G. Becker, producing a series of two-reel romantic fantasies starring little Arthur Trimble, arrived in New York last week to make releasing arrangements for the entire series. Mr. Becker brought with him three completed films, which will be shown to interested distributors during his stay in the east.

In a statement issued from the Yale Club where Mr. Becker is residing, he said:

"In addition the actors, unlike those in many other offerings in two-reelers, are all top-notchers in our productions, chosen both for their abilities and their drawing power. Anyone who has seen Arthur Trimble in 'Remembrance' and 'Fink Gods' knows that he promises starring power. Bessie Love heads the principals in the cast of all three pictures, which includes Roy Coulson, Charles Belcher, Gilbert Clayton, Jack Carlisle, Fred Peters and others."

Topics, Weekly Reel, Praised by Showmen

Wit and humor gems culled from leading publications of this country and Europe called "Topics of the Day," distributed by Pathe, are the subject of letters received by the producers, Timely Films, Inc., from which the following expressions are quoted:

"'Topics of the Day' is one of the finest short reels on the market."

"We are using 'Topics of the Day' in all six of our houses, and consider this one of the very best short reel subjects on our programs."

"'Topics' gets more laughs than some of the comedies I know."

"'Topics' is an asset to any program," writes another exhibitor.

Famous American Poet Praises Short Subject

Carl Sandburg, noted lyricist, recently wrote an article for the Chicago Daily News in which he praised educational subjects, defending motion pictures against unjust criticism. He referred to the Fox subject, "Alligator Hunting and Farming," using it as an example of the kind of entertainment from which the spectator may gain a broader knowledge of varied industries, and stated that he would be interested in seeing more educational subjects such as the Fox program may boast of.

Second Burr Comedy Is Near Completion

The second of the "All-Star Comedies" being produced by C. C. Burr for nation-wide release by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is rapidly nearing completion.

Temporarily titled "Her Rich Uncle," this two-reeler presents the veteran comedy star Charlie Murray with a role that is said to give him every opportunity to display his most versatile self.

Ray McKee and "Sunshine" Mary Anderson also have unlimited opportunity to give highly creditable performances that are reputed to be laugh-producing in every respect.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"Once to Every Boy"

(Universal Comedy—One Reel)

THIS comedy presents Lewis Sargent, who has flashed his talent before—the juvenile actor being quite adept in any kind of entertainment, be it high jinks or serious drama. Here he enacts the part of a messenger boy, who is always on the job. He is delivering a telegram to a house, when he is bowled over by a burglar making an exit. The boy runs after him, thinking him the man to whom the message should be delivered. This calls for much confusion with a cop coming in for some of the excitement. The officer thinks the boy is the burglar and takes the real crook along to appear against him. But the lady who is robbed puts in an appearance and accuses the burglar. The messenger boy receives a reward and buys a Ford. The heroine is played by Mary Philbin, who will soon be featured in the Jewel production, "Merry-Go-Round." It is a bright little number.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Reporter"

(Lupino Lane Comedy-Fox—Two Reels)

THE much advertised Lupino Lane and his first comedy will be accepted as clever entertainment everywhere. The English comedian has seemingly set a high standard for himself with his initial effort. If the succeeding pieces toe the mark as well as "The Reporter," then it won't be long before people will be flocking to see him quite as much as they do Clyde Cook, Buster Keaton and the others. Lane has something of Doug's agility to execute stunts. He is not only a stunt artist but he knows something about novel and up-to-date gags. One stunt, especially, will earn a big laugh. It shows Lane plodding along with a telegraph pole tied to his back and tumbling about the ground. His effort to adjust himself by pulling one leg over the other is good for a large guffaw anywhere. Patrons who see "The Reporter"—even though they have witnessed all the trick comedies of the past three years—will remark that it gets over with its original gags and stunts. Lane has arrived. Now it's up to his sponsors to keep him going.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Golf Bug"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a comic version of the troubles and ambitions of a golf enthusiast and burlesques the modern and popular sport, with Paul Parrott as the comedy star. Since the action is constructed with a view to provoking laughs, it is difficult to describe. The star devotes his comic talents to preparations for a matched game in which things are done with clubs and ball, and to the spectators, calculated to turn the famous sport into the jazziest sort of burlesque.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Henpecked Harry"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is one of the most amusing of the Aesop's Film Fables, showing how Harry Dog, disconsolate because of marital conditions, decides to become a police officer. His adventures would make him a hero in the eyes of the cartoon neighbors and police officials, but not to his nagging wife. With the consequence the old axiom "No man is a hero in his own home" is illustrated.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Ocean Swells"

(Educational—Two Reels)

A COMEDY wherein Neal Burns plays the husband of a girl with an excess family. In the hope of escaping a summer with the "in laws," the couple, with their small child, take a cottage on the beach. But there is something even worse than the family to make them miserable, mosquitos in droves.

The idea occurs to the young husband to take a house boat. That will insure them against both the inlaws and the pests, but "Mary" thinks she really ought to write her mother what a lovely time they are having, which excites the entire family with the idea of making the couple on the houseboat, a visit. The fun is fast and furious when the "ocean swells," the family all dressed in the best beach costumes, arrive, and take possession of the floating house. Baby Bebe Blackburn does some splendid "baby" acting and takes direction like one ten times her age, while Charlotte Meriam, as the young mother, is pretty and graceful. It is, also, one of the best things Mr. Burns has done. This is a "neighborhood house" picture, being one that the entire family will enjoy, amusing, clean and well done.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Solitary Cyclist"

(Educational—Two Reels)

ACCORDING to the two reel screen versions of the Sherlock Holmes series of Conan Doyle stories, the great detective is so in demand that he has scarcely sufficient time to complete one case before he is sought to unravel another mystery.

In "The Solitary Cyclist," we find him endeavoring to "clean the slate" when he is interrupted by the call of a young lady introducing herself as Violet Smith. She desires to interest the detective in assisting her to solve the problem of some mysterious happenings and begins by reciting some peculiar incidents which have to do with her inheritance of a large fortune and the strange actions of one who continually follows her on a bicycle, but has never attempted to do her any harm. The detective states that he is too busy to handle the case, but will listen to her story. However, before the finish, he becomes interested and solves the mystery in true Sherlock Holmes style.

There is a plot of considerable interest, the story being one of a period of some years ago, when the bicycle was in common use. There is a surprise finish, with Holmes collecting a bet from his friend, Dr. Watson.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Punctured Prince"

(Hunt Stromberg-Bull Montana Comedy—Metro—Two Reels)

IF the sponsors of this latest Bull Montana comedy intended to make a burlesque of some very familiar material, they have succeeded with a vengeance. It is slapstick with a capital S, and the star is thrust forward in scenes which rather tax his ability to make them funny. Bull is at his best when he plays the "bull in a china shop." Which is to say that he shines when his presence in a situation seems out of place.

"A Ladies' Man" was a good beginning. "The Punctured Prince" is forced comedy. And the star doesn't appear at ease. There is no spontaneity, the comedy relying more upon trick hokum rather than a comic plot worked out comically. Bull seemed on the right road with another zippy picture, when he flashes into view wearing horn-rimmed glasses and studying how to become a traffic cop. But once he reaches the restaurant where he acts as chef, the spectator is in for much dish smashing, etc. There are some new gags but they seem forced. After this idea expends itself, Bull gets his diploma, motor-cycle, badge and uniform from a correspondence school. So he branches out as a cop.

Then comes the burlesque of putting Bull in a comic opera costume of a prince traveling incognito. There is no subtle humor. It is all expressed in a slap-bang style. Bull needs pieces where he can appear embarrassed—where he registers constant surprise as if wondering what it is all about.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Bar Cross War"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

NOW and then a realistic western is refreshing. We found this one so, even if it does keep one alert. There is a story of sufficient merit to hold the interest, the direction is on a feature par and the last reel is a series of combats that are about as well done as the camera has ever photographed. There is riding, an amount of it, but not meaningless footage just to show off good mounts and men who know how to ride. Every foot of action has a bearing on the plot and there is action with a capital "A." In addition, scenic value plays an important part in the two reeler, one of the best.

Leo Maloney, as the hero cowboy, does some splendid work. There is also a pretty girl in the only feminine role, who holds her own as a rider with a flock of western saddle hounds who thoroughly understand their business.

For rapid action, pleasing photography and an all 'round western, "The Bar Cross War" is a sure-fire.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Wedding Pumps"

(Century-Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a rattling good two reeler, with an element of distinct entertainment value. It relates of the efforts of a couple about to be married, to purchase the pumps for their respective outfits. The first reel is all in the shoe store, where "Jackie" a baby salesman sells the prospective groom his pumps, and another clerk sells the girl a pair. Deliveries are made by dog-truck. When "Brownie" arrives at the address of the groom, he finds he can be of use in helping the man fasten his collar. Later, at the wedding feast, Jackies and "Brownie" over-indulge in stolen sweets and as a result become patients of a doctor who prescribes castor oil. "Brownie" scene following the dose, his disgust for the medicine and the attempt of relieving his "chops" of its trace, is about as well done as anything could be.—LILLIAN GALE.

Big Publicity Campaign for Pola Negri

A BIG publicity campaign has just been launched by Paramount in the interest of Pola Negri, who recently started work at Hollywood on her first American-made picture, "Bella Donna," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

The opening gun in this campaign is a series of ten special Sunday feature articles in the New York World and thirty other papers, telling Miss Negri's life story and titled, "The Mirror of My Life." Before the Polish star's arrival in America, arrangements were made by Charles E. McCarthy, Paramount publicity manager, with the New York World for the publication of the story. The first of the series appeared October 15.

The feature articles are being heavily advertised by the various newspapers, on billboards, delivery wagons and in newspaper space.

Ray Greeting Sent to Poet's Celebration

Because Charles Ray, screen star, has made film versions of two of the poems of James Whitcomb Riley, the last of which, "The Girl I Loved," has just been completed for release by United Artists Corporation, Mr. Ray was asked by the committee having in charge the recent celebration of the birthday of the poet to send a greeting to the citizens of Indianapolis where the celebration took place. To E. B. Knight, chairman of this committee, Mr. Ray sent the following telegram:

"I gladly avail myself of your invitation to greet the people of Indianapolis on the occasion of the observance of James Whitcomb Riley's birthday and pay a tribute to that great citizen of Indiana. It seems to me that of all our poets, Mr. Riley in his homely and gentle verses touched the truest and deepest notes of our national heart."

"Grandma's Boy" Rated First By Critic

The Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors' superattraction, "Grandma's Boy," produced by Hal Roach, is accorded first position in the Indianapolis Star's "graduated list of the best pictures for September." That paper's reviewer, names five which he considers of special merit and these, he explains, "by virtue of their novelty, acting, story and entertainment, fall into this respective order," the Harold Lloyd classic being indicated as "No. 1" in the list.

"The Radio King" is Commended for its Exactness Regarding Detail

ONE of the most striking compliments ever paid to a moving picture and particularly to a serial has been accorded to "The Radio King," according to the Universal office. It has been unqualifiedly approved as to its scientific merit and usefulness, and unstintingly praised as a thrilling chapter-play by the leading radio authorities in the publication field—the staff of the Radio News.

When they were asked by Universal officials to view the chapter-play, they consented. However, in justice to the subscribers to the Radio News, they made the absolute reservation that it would be necessary for them to see the entire serial and to make whatever changes in it that were necessary to render it scientifically bomb-proof, as it were.

H. Gernsback, editor of the Radio News, has written to Mr. Laemmle the following letter:

"Regarding our collaboration with Universal chapter-play, 'The Radio King,' we venture to say, as we stated editorially in the November issue, this is the first time that any radio publication has identified itself with a motion picture in any form.

"We, particularly, had to be extremely careful and certain of our ground. With a monthly circulation of 235,000 copies, Radio News is today the most widely read radio publication in the world, the greatest in volume, and conceded to be authoritative. In justice to the magazine and its readers we were naturally cautious before tying-up with the Universal's chapter-play, 'The Radio King,' and for this reason our entire editorial staff reviewed the whole picture before giving it the stamp of our approval.

"Availing ourselves of your cordial invitation, we made various suggestions and freely offered our criticisms. While these would perhaps have gone unnoticed by the layman, it is a credit to your production staff that all of our recommendations have been acted upon, thus making the picture in its portrayal of radio activities and tendencies absolutely scientific and accurate.

"Trifling Women" Well Received

New York Reviewers Praise Metro Picture Upon Opening at Astor Theatre

"ALL around it was a brilliant success," said one of the New York newspapers of the opening presentation by Metro of Rex Ingram's "Trifling Women," at the Astor theatre October 2.

From the point of view of the merit of the drama of this most recent Ingram photoplay, of the heartiness of its reception, and the celebrity of the first-night audience, the premiere was a brilliant occasion.

Quotation of the summary lines in the criticism follows:

"Rex Ingram . . . is the same Rex Ingram. We find the same clever detail that marked the other films that established his reputation."—The Sun.

"A superb motion picture . . . 'Trifling Women' is practically perfect in its direction, wonderful in its photography and its cast could not be improved upon."—Don Allen, Evening World.

"This film tale made fascinating by the telling of it; there is an evening of exciting entertainment in store for you at the Astor."—New York Times.

"'Trifling Women' is called Rex Ingram's greatest picture . . . It deserves a place with the big pictures of the year. The scenic effects and the photograph are excellent."—New York Evening Post.

"Both acting and direction are excellent. 'Trifling Women' bears unmistakably the Ingram stamp."—The Globe.

"Gorgeous and glittering exhibition. Its direction is superb."—Quinn Martin, The World.

"The only way it could be done on the screen is the way Ingram did it, and it is interesting."—Tribune.

"The settings of the picture are elaborate, and the whole thing is well done and acted."—American.

"Definitely made with intelligent direction. The young Irish director has the gift of visualizing scenes and picturing them in a charming manner."—Morning Telegraph.

Johnson Thriller Gets Heavy Booking

Martin Johnson's latest feature thriller, "The Head Hunters of the South Seas," got off to a fine start, say officials of Associated Exhibitors, which organization is distributing the picture. Mr. Johnson's fame as a traveler, adventurer and explorer, the stories of his experience and discoveries in the South Seas, and the immense interest manifested in his previous adventure films have combined to cause a heavy booking demand for the present release, while reviewers who have seen this offering have declared it the best he ever made.

Lloyd Picture Gets S. F. Record Price

WHAT is declared to be the highest guaranteed rental ever paid by a San Francisco exhibitor for any type of picture is stipulated in Pathe's first contract booking "Dr. Jack," Harold Lloyd's new five-reel feature comedy, for the Portola theatre in that city.

This contract was made last week at the Pathe Home Office by Eugene H. Roth and General Manager Elmer Pearson.

The guaranteed rental price agreed to by Mr. Roth is not indicated by either party to the contract further than in the above statement that it establishes a new advance booking record for San Francisco, no star or type of production excepted.

The exact date of the Portola's opening with "Dr. Jack" is not stated, but it is said to be toward the middle of November.

Costuming Costly for Lorna Doone

Summing up the cost of Maurice Tourneur's ambition screen production of "Lorna Doone," which has just been completed at the Thomas H. Ince Studios in Culver City, it has been found that the heaviest expense entailed for costumes was in supplying accurate seventeenth century garments for the peasants in the picture, rather than for the 400 actors and actresses who took part in the sumptuous court scenes.

It was found comparatively easy to obtain court dress for the "high life" scenes, though some of the armor used of necessity had to be especially turned out "made to measure." Silks, satins, brocades and all the elaborate sartorial fixtures in vogue during the time depicted in "Lorna Doone" could be had with little difficulty, but the "linsey" and "homespun"—the leather jerkins and waistcoats worn by the peasantry—all had to be designed and the materials imported. It was this factor which heavily swelled the cost of production, according to Tourneur.

Veteran of Stage Joins Paramount

Ned Burton, veteran of the stage of fifty years' standing and of the screen for ten years, is playing his first Paramount engagement with Thomas Meighan in George Ade's "Back Home and Broke," being assigned to the role of a country town grocer. The picture also marks the screen debut of James Marlowe, well-known Broadway comedian.

Children's Book Week Pictures Listed

THE National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review, in presenting a plan for the use of motion pictures during Children's Book Week, Nov. 12 to 18, lists, among others, nine First National Attractions which it recommends to be shown during that week.

The First National Attractions recommended are "All For a Woman," "Bob Hampton of Placer," "Kindred of the Dust," "The Last of the Mohicans," "Lorna Doone," "The Old Swimmin' Hole," "Penrod," "Pilgrims of the Night," and "The River's End."

"Librarians testify to the demand among both adults and children, for books upon which popular motion pictures have been known to be based," says the committee in outlining its plans. Women's clubs, parent-teacher associations, school superintendents, etc., and exhibitors should get together without delay, so that the exhibitor may be sure to include one or more pictures from the list among his bookings for that week."

League of Nations in Paramount Picture

A veritable league of nations is the cast of "My American Wife," Sam Wood's production for Paramount, starring Gloria Swanson.

Seven nations are represented in the cast of this picture, which is a romance of Argentina by Hector Turnbull, scenarized by Monte M. Katterjohn.

Antonio Moreno, who plays the leading role of the young Argentine politician and sportsman, is pure Castilian and hails from Sunny Spain. Josef Swickard, who plays the principal character role, is a native of Austria. Geno Corrado, the suave villain, known on the screen as Eugene Corey, was born and reared in Italy, as was his brother, Louis Dumar, who plays a minor part. F. R. Butler, who plays an English dandy, is a native Britisher, Jacques d'Auray is a native of Nice, France. Senorita Cristina Montt, playing an Argentine vampire, is a daughter of the highest aristocratic and political family of Chile.

Novelty Is Promised in "Bavu"

A novelty in screen entertainment is being promised by Universal in its adaptation of "Bavu," Earl Carroll's thrilling melodrama of the Russian crown jewels, now the subject of much controversy in international banking circles.

Leon d'Usseau, Universal's eastern scenario chief, who arranged the purchase of the play from Carroll, has been in frequent conference with the theatrical producer concerning the staging of the piece, particularly as to the unique setting used, throughout the stage version, and which will be an important part

Picture Dedicated to Fire Chiefs "Timothy Quest" Wins Highest Praise

"The Third Alarm" Will Offer Exceptional Possibilities For Exploitation

WHEN "The Third Alarm," the companion picture to "In the Name of the Law" and the second Emory Johnson production for release through the Film Booking Offices of America, is released it will be dedicated in each city where it is shown to the local fire chief.

This dedicatory title will in many instances include either a motion picture or a photograph of the local chief. The motion pictures were obtained at the recent convention of fire chiefs in San Francisco when the heads of departments from all over the entire country gathered in that city.

Not only, states F. B. O., will "The Third Alarm" excel "In the Name of the Law" in entertainment values, but the big forthcoming fire picture will even prove of greater exploitation value than the first Emory Johnson production. By the time the new picture is released a most complete campaign will be prepared which will allow exhibitors almost unlimited opportunities in putting it over.

"The Third Alarm," claims F. B. O. will be exploited in the same way. Already fire chiefs from many of the larger cities have expressed, in writing, their willingness to aid the run of the picture when it is shown in their city.

London Critics Praise "Nanook"

Pathe Eskimo Classic is Commended as Among Best Ever Seen in England

THE latest batch of London newspapers reaching New York give unusually generous space to reviews of "Nanook of the North." These are unanimous in their praise of the Pathe Eskimo classic, heartily agreeing on both its solid screen value and intense popular appeal. Following are excerpts:

Daily Graphic—"I saw yesterday a film which will make history, 'Nanook of the North.' It is full of the most appealing humanity."

Daily Express—"The most remarkable film ever seen in London is 'Nanook.' The frozen North leaps suddenly out of the screen and the epic revelation of Nanook's fierce struggle for existence amid tremendous wastes of snow and drifting ice-fields begins immediately."

Westminster Gazette—"It is a gripping panorama of Arctic life, of grim adventure, of Polar domesticity, a masterpiece alike of enterprise and photography."

Daily News—"Nanook of the North" is a wonder-film."

Morning Post—"The film is weird, terrific and well nigh unbelievable. It must be seen to be credited."

The Times—"The whole production is one of the most comprehensive that has yet been seen in London."

Associated Picture Is Popular

"The Woman Who Fooled Herself" Draws Interest of Exhibitors, is Claim

WIDE interest already is said to have been shown by exhibitors in the release, set for October 29th, of "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," the first of the series of Edward MacManus productions for Associated Exhibitors, and the first of the MacManus features to be made in Porto Rico. The names of the featured players, May Allison and Robert Ellis, have done much to inspire eagerness on the part of exhibitors to close booking contracts early, according to officials of Associated Exhibitors.

Previews have revealed scenic efforts of rare charm, every scene having been shot in or about the MacManus studios on a large estate near San Juan.

The drama presented is a typically human, romantic and fast-moving story by Charles A. Logue, who, with Robert Ellis, directed the production. Appearing first as a member of the Follies, then as star danseuse in a lively business town in the tropics, and finally as the affianced wife of a wealthy young planter, the always popular May Allison enjoys a rare opportunity for the display of her beauty and her talents, and from all accounts full advantage has been taken of it.

One of the most realistic and effective of the scenes is that in which a night street carnival is shown. This was flashed in San Juan itself. The entire populace turned out in a genuine carnival spirit, so there is nothing whatever. The feature is in five reels.

"Timothy Quest" Wins Highest Praise

IN a letter to American Releasing Corporation The Better Films Committee of Atlanta places its unqualified endorsement upon Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Timothy's Quest."

The letter from Mrs. B. M. Boykin, chairman, says: "The Better Films Committee of Atlanta had the pleasure of viewing the screen version of Kate Douglas Wiggin's delightful story, 'Timothy's Quest' today. The word pleasure is used advisedly; never have we seen a picture more exquisitely tender or more convincing. The atmosphere is perfect in every detail, and each role has been portrayed with such feeling that its sincerity is unchallenged. Especially commendable is the work of the two beautiful children, Timothy and Lady Gay, and the women who were Miss Avilda and Samantha Ann."

"Knighthood" Is Great London Success

That "When Knighthood Was in Flower" has duplicated in London, where it opened on October 2, the success that it is achieving here at the Criterion theatre, New York, in which house it has been playing to capacity for the last five weeks, was indicated this week when photographs of its premiere at the Scala, London, arrived here.

These photographs reveal, more than anything else, the way in which the picturization of Charles Major's beautiful romance has taken hold of the English theatregoing public. At the opening performance the crowd which gathered to see the picture grew to such proportions that it was necessary to form a police cordon about the theatre to keep the enthusiastic film fans in check.

In achieving this English success, "When Knighthood Was in Flower" chalks up another record in that its London showing marks the first time that first run film has appeared in this country and in Europe simultaneously.

"Till We Meet Again" Booked in South

"TILL We Meet Again," the production by Dependable Pictures Corporation, Morris Kohn, president, which is the current offering of Associated Exhibitors, was booked this week by Southern Enterprises for runs in its circuit of theatres, scattered about six states.

The contract was signed following previews at which the booking officials of Southern Enterprises welcomed the feature as one which they regarded certain to prove a big box-office attraction. Mae Marsh, Martha Mansfield, Walter Miller and Norman Kerry are among the well known players in the cast.

Kane Tells of Picture Difficulties

Arthur S. Kane, when in Kansas City on the way to the Pacific Coast, was interviewed by the Kansas City Star. The resultant article read in part as follows:

"The motion picture industry is so evolutionary, so revolutionary, that the only way I have been able to keep pace with it is to come to my desk every morning prepared, if necessary, to revise entirely all my opinions concerning it."

"The pictures change constantly," said Mr. Kane. "The taste of the public has become so well educated that a picture made four or five years ago is far below present standards. Sometimes popular demand results in a revival of some old films, but it invariably is a disappointment. People do not realize how much higher their tastes have become until they have the chance to compare them with their likes of earlier days."

The ultimate heights have not been reached and probably will never be reached, according to Mr. Kane. Most of future development lies on the dramatic side rather than the mechanical, the producer said. The combining of the best of the stage with the best of the screen is a future development to which Mr. Kane looks.

Bronx Girl Wins Fox Prize

Fox Changes Name of Successful Picture in Eighth Week of N.Y. Run

EXHIBITORS and the motion picture industry in general will recognize the significance which is attached to the announcement this week by Fox Film Corporation that the title of "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," the current season's special now in its eighth consecutive week at the Lyric theatre, New York, has been changed to "Who Are My Parents?"

The importance which the announcement of the re-titling bears, lies in the fact that the change came after the production had already entered a Broadway run.

The new title was selected as the result of a contest carried on by means of newspaper advertisements in New York City. A prize of $1,000 was offered to the person not connected with the corporation who would submit a suitable name for the photoplay. The decision to make the change came after it became apparent that some persons were misled by the title into believing the picture to be of a Biblical nature when in fact it is a social modern melodrama. Fox Film Corporation desired to select a title which would confirm in the public mind the dramatic qualities of the picture.

Exactly 11,741 contestants in New York City and surrounding territory sent their suggestions to the offices of Mr. William Fox.

"Who Are My Parents?" submitted by Miss Julia Gordon of 836 Dawson Street, New York City, to whom the $1,000 prize has been awarded, was chosen as a title which gives the essence of the plot of the picture and embodies all other necessary characteristics.

"The Infidel" Wins Reviewers

In connection with the showing of Katherine MacDonald in "The Infidel," a First National attraction, at the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, an elaborate fashion show was staged by the management. Twenty-two mannequins display the latest creations in gowns, cloaks, laces and hats, and the combination of "Vanity Fair" and "The American Beauty," as Miss MacDonald is known, drew great crowds.

Los Angeles newspapers, in their reviews of the show, praised the enterprise of the management of the Kinema and were enthusiastic in declaring "The Infidel" to be a remarkable picture. Following are some of the comments:

Express—"The cinema feature of the program was Katherine MacDonald in a B. F. Schulberg production, 'The Infidel,' billed as a romance of the South Seas. It is romance hectic and high-powered. It is chockful of action. Director James Young has not overlooked a single angle of melodramatic incident.

Herald—"Katherine MacDonald, the noted screen beauty, is the star in 'The Infidel,' a thrilling film of glorious adventure in Menang, in the Mohammedan section of the Philippine islands. Under the finished direction of James Young the beautiful star of 'The Infidel' blossoms out as a real star. The entire film shows the result of the genius of Young."

"Score another triumph for Metro," said Harry Lustig, district manager in Los Angeles of Metro Pictures Corporation, after viewing a greater part of the Metro-SL Special production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Lustig wired his enthusiastic criticism of the picture to W. E. Atkinson,

The wire read as follows: "Previewed greater part of 'Quincy Adams Sawyer.' Score another triumph for Metro. Big picture every sense of word. Perfect work on part of large cast.

Hoot Gibson Picture Is Completed

UNIVERSAL has completed another western comedy drama starring Hoot Gibson. It is "Ridin' Wild," an original story written and scenarized by Roy Myers. Nat Ross, who made Hoot's recent success, "The Galloping Kid," directed it.

Opposite Gibson, Edna Murphy portrays another charming feminine figure. William Welsh, Wade Boteler, Wilton Taylor, Burton Wilson, Otto Hoffman and Jack Walters have principal roles in support.

"Cyril" is the hero's name and he is a fellow suffering under the title of "Sissy." His friends believe him incapable of real rough masculinity, and it takes a long, hard battle against ridicule and humiliating circumstances to change their attitude.

Ethel Clayton Picture Nears Completion

Ethel Clayton is nearing the completion of "The Remittance Woman," the working title of her second production for release through the Film Booking Offices of America. The story is adapted from Achmed Abdullah's novelette of the same name. Miss Clayton is again directed by Wesley Ruggles, who was responsible for "If I Were Queen," the star's initial release through F. B. O. which is now being issued.

For the leading male role Rockcliffe Fellows was selected. Other principals in the cast include Mario Carillo, Tom Wilson, James B. Leong, Etta Lee, and Edward Kimball.

Bookings Numerous for "Slim Shoulders"

In order to prove the widespread success which is being achieved by the W. W. Hodkinson feature "Slim Shoulders" with Irene Castle, in conjunction with the Castle Promenade, it is announced that more than 100 of the best theatres in the country have played this Castle production in less than a Broadway run.

Griffith Honored by Boston Mayor

CONSERVATIVE Boston set aside all precedents recently when Mayor Curley summoned D. W. Griffith, to the Boston city hall, soon after Mr. Griffith had reached that city to attend the opening performance of his latest production, "One Exciting Night." Then Mayor Curley presented to Mr. Griffith the key to the city.

It was said that this is the first time any motion picture producer or theatrical man has been so honored by Boston, and that in the entire history of the famous city only twenty other persons have been similarly honored.

The picture is scheduled to open in New York City at the Apollo theatre, Monday evening, October 23:

"Covered Wagon" In Production

Great Staff in Nevada and Salt Lake for Filming of Paramount Picture

THE making of Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon" undoubtedly is Paramount's most ambitious production undertaking to date, according to a statement from that company's office, and in the filming of this epic of the West, adapted for the screen by Jack Cunningham, James Cruze has taken one of the most difficult directorial assignments in motion picture history.

Early this month Cruze left for Baker, Nevada, accompanied by one hundred technical assistants, the vanguard of an army of three thousand who are to be in camp for nearly two months on an immense 200,000-acre ranch. Included in the party was Adam Hull Shirk, Paramount's West Coast publicity director.

Later the same week, leading members of the cast, including Charles Ogle, Alan Hale, Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall and Guy Oliver, went direct to Antelope Island in the middle of the Great Salt Lake. There they were met by Director Cruze and are now engaged in staging a big buffalo hunt. On this island is the largest herd of American bison remaining in the United States, the group numbering nearly five hundred. This is the herd whose extermination by hunters was threatened a couple of years ago until a storm of protest from all parts of the country intervened.

Following the completion of the buffalo hunt scenes, this company will rejoin the throng at Baker, where at the Baker ranch the other big episodes of the story of pioneer life are to be filmed.

"Face In The Fog" Going Big

Cosmopolitan Production Moves to Rialto and Still Draws Crowds

FOLLOWING its gratifying success at the Rivoli theatre, "The Face in the Fog," Cosmopolitan's picturization of Jack Boyle's famous Boston Blackie story of the same name, moved down to the Rialto this week where it continues to win the approbation of the patrons of the Broadway film houses.

With a cast headed by Lionel Barrymore, Seena Owen and Lowell Sherman, "The Face in the Fog" presents a mystery story, full of action and one in which there is not a dull moment. Of its many thrilling scenes, the one which carries the most punch is that depicting a fight between Lionel Barrymore, as Blackie, and Louis Wolheim, of "Hairy Ape" fame, who portrays the role of a Russian terrorist leader.

But there are other thrills which follow in rapid succession. There is the storming of the Russian palace by the terrorists, the escape of a Russian Grand Duchess and her followers through a secret passageway, the appalling murder or a foggy night in New York of a mysterious blind beggar and the final round-up of the terrorist leaders.

In interpreting the role of Blackie, Barrymore does some great work. Louis Wolheim is ideally cast as "The Face," leader of the Soviets, and Seena Owen makes a majestic Tatiana. For a change Lowell Sherman appears in a heroic role while others who appear are Macey Harlam, George Nash, Mary MacLaren and Gustav Von Seyferitz. The picture was directed by Alan Crosland.

Ballin Begins New Picture

Screen Version of "Vanity Fair" Based on Famous Novel by Thackeray

HUGO BALLIN has prepared the continuity for his screen version of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," one of the most famous novels in all literature. He has based his story upon Thackeray's novel and not upon the stage version prepared for Mrs. Fiske under the title of "Becky Sharpe."

The continuity has been completed and both Mr. Ballin and his wife, Mabel Ballin, who will act the leading role, are now at the Goldwyn studios, where the production will be made for Goldwyn release.

No player other than Mabel Ballin has yet been definitely chosen, but Mr. Ballin has stated that the leading roles will be played by actors of standing in their profession and that they will measure fully up to the greatness of the production he is undertaking. A number of them will be stars in their own right.

Mr. Ballin has been associated with Goldwyn before, as director and as art director. He directed several Madge Kennedy pictures, "Baby Mine," "Help Yourself" and "Daughter of Mine" which he wrote.

Big Business Reported from Philly

When "Rich Men's Wives" opened at the Aldine, Philadelphia, recently it is reported the business done was the best at that theatre in six months.

In the Philadelphia territory, where the Stanley Company of America has its pick of product, this production has been booked at once into its theatres. Following the Aldine showing, the Capitol, another Stanley house showed it for a week. The Great Northern and the Allegheny, each of which had booked the picture for three days extended the run to a week.

Pola Negri Picture Is Under Way

SCENES in London's luxurious Savoy Hotel marked the start on October 7, of Pola Negri's first American-made Paramount picture, "Bella Donna," by Robert Hichens. This George Fitzmaurice production, adapted from the Hichens story by Ouida Bergere, will present Conway Tearle and Conrad Nagel in featured roles in support of Miss Negri, while Claude King, noted member of the New York dramatic colony, who played opposite Ethel Barrymore in "Declasse," will portray the important character of Dr. Isaacson.

Conway Tearle is to have the strong featured role of Baroudi, the exotic, saturnine lover of the desert who is the cause of the conflict and tumult which carries the career of the adventurous Mrs. Chepstow (Bella Donna) to a pinnacle of drama.

Title Change Brings New Press Book

Changing the title of the Fox picture, "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," now in its eighth week at the Lyric Theatre, New York City, to "Who Are My Parents?" necessitated getting out a new press book, with entirely different stories and advertisements, in record time, and the entire publicity staff was called in on the job.

The exploitation ideas continued in the book are along the lines of a sensational campaign, though there is no playing up of a sex appeal. Instead, the copy has been tied up with some of the most spectacular news stories of the day, known to the entire country because of their human interest.

"Who Are My Parents?" was first shown at the Lyric Theatre under the temporary title of "A Little Child Shall Lead Them." A prize of $1,000 was offered to the public for the best title to supplant this.

"Bells of San Juan" Fox Release

Charles Jones, in "The Bells of San Juan," Fox release October 15, is one of the most delightful program pictures this star has ever appeared in, according to the Fox office. Full of the action that is always expected in a Jones picture and replete with Fox thrills, the picture is claimed to be an honest hour's entertainment. Jones plays the role of Roderick Norton, a young sheriff.

Others in the cast besides Charles Jones are Fritzie Brunette, Claude Peyton, Harry Todd, Hardy Kirkland, Katherine Key, William Steele, Otto Matieson and Sid Jordan. The photoplay is adapted from the story by Jackson Gregory. It was directed by Scott Dunlap.

Colleen Moore, beautiful and talented star who has been featured in a number of big productions released by various producers during the past year, among which is "Slippy McGee," the new Oliver Morosco picture for First National release

Owen Moore Picture Is Under Way

With "Love Is An Awful Thing," the latest Selznick picture starring Owen Moore, in leading theatres throughout the country, President Myron Selznick, personally in charge of the western Selznick producing unit, has already put in production at the studios in Los Angeles another Owen Moore picture.

The new production is being directed by Victor Heerman to whose skill in bringing out the best things in the Owen Moore style of comedy President Myron Selznick attributes much of the success achieved by "Reported Missing" and "Love Is An Awful Thing." Mr. Heerman is not only directing the picture but is also responsible for the story which is being made under the title of "One Dollar Down."

San Diego Exhibitor Praises Picture

This is what W. W. Whitson, proprietor of the Plaza theatre, San Diego, Cal., had to say about Charles Ray and "A Tailor Made Man" after he had played this United Artists release.

"It is with much pleasure that I tell you of our success with and the public's approval of Charles Ray in 'A Tailor Made Man.' It was one of the few pictures that the Plaza has been able to use for a two weeks' run."

"Pawned" Prints Due Shortly

Select Plans Extensive Campaign For Picture Produced by J. Parker Read, Jr.

GENERAL MANAGER JOHN S. WOODY, of Select Pictures Corporation, is laying down the opening barrage in the sales campaign which he is planning for J. Parker Read, Jr.'s "Pawned," recently secured for distribution by the Select company. The first of the big outside specials to be handled by Select is finally cut, titled, and edited and prints for the thirty-odd branches throughout the country are in work. It is expected that these prints will be in the hands of the selling crew within the next ten days or two weeks.

Woody is a great believer in "starting right" with a picture and he has been quite successful during the past few months in getting his selling associates in the field to look at things precisely the way he does. When "Love Is An Awful Thing" starring Owen Moore, was sent out not so long ago the Select men created quite a stir in the exchange cities with special showings, exploitation stunts, etc., and the same thing may be expected when "Pawned" is offered to exhibitors.

The J. Parker Read, Jr., photograph is the pictured version of a Frank L. Packard story which was first published in Munsey's magazine and later in book form by the George H. Doran Company. Mr.

Packard, probably best known in the motion picture industry because of his authorship of "The Miracle Man," is particularly keen for the "Pawned" picture.

Tom Moore and Edith Roberts are featured in the cast.

Fox to Produce Many Famous Novels

The list of current and forthcoming William Fox productions reads like the index list of the public library.

Here are a few of the famous novels to be seen on the screen: "If Winter Comes," A. S. M. Hutchinson's celebrated novel; "West," by Charles Alden Seltzer; "The Roof Tree," by Charles Neville Buck; "Lynch Lawyer," "The Buster" and "Hearts of the Range," by William Paterson White; "Calvert's Valley," by Margaret Prescott Montague; "Free Range Lanning," by George Owen Baxter; "Alcatraz," by Max Brand; "Shadows of the East," by E. M. Hull, author of "The Sheik"; "One Way Trail," by Ridgewell Cullum; "Trooper O'Neil," by George Goodchild; "Dr. Rameau," the French novel, by Georges Ohnet; "A Self-Made Man," by George Horace Lorimer, and "Gentle Julia," by Booth Tarkington.

F.B.O. Will Distribute Equity Picture

FILM BOOKING OFFICES OF AMERICA, it was announced this week, will distribute "What's Wrong with the Women?" Daniel Carson Goodman's production for Equity Pictures in the states of Missouri, Kansas and Central Illinois. The picture will be handled through the St. Louis and Kansas City branch offices of F. B. O. Prints and advertising and exploitation material on this picture are now available in these exchanges.

To the Kansas City exchange of F. B. O. also will go the three latest Clara Kimball Young pictures distributed through Equity on the independent market. These are "Charge It," "What No Man Knows" and "Worldly Madonna." Bookings of these three pictures are accepted for the State of Kansas only. The pictures are now being screened for exhibitors in that territory.

Preview of Comedy in San Francisco

The newest of the Plum Center Comedies, "Pop Tuttle's Polecat Plot," was given a tryout at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, recently, through the courtesy of Manager Newman.

The comedy is the story of a rivalry in the bus industry in Plum Center. "Pop Tuttle," the character created by Dan Mason, has been driving a bus between the depot and the Palace Hotel for forty years without a competitor. Suddenly Nosey Nichols, the town busybody, starts up a new bus line in opposition to Pop.

A fist fight ensues between the rivals, and each tries to put the other fellow out of the running. Pop wins out in the end with the aid of a little colored boy and a skunk.

The principal players in support of Mason are Wilna Hervey, leading woman; Eddie Harris as Nosey Nichols; Edward O'Brien, Shelby Roach, Helen Howell, Charles Gerson, Robert Hendricks and Charles Oro.

Picture Ties Up with "Kindly Act Week"

The launching of a "Kindly Act Week" campaign to cover all of Greater New York, was the occasion of a special invitation presentation of the latest Distinctive Pictures Corporation production, "The Man Who Played God," starring George Arliss, at the Palace theatre, New York, on Tuesday morning, October 17, at 10:30.

The "Kindly Act Week" will be launched by the Keith, Proctor and B. S. Moss houses during the week that this feature picture is shown in their various theatres.

One thousand dollars in prizes will be awarded to those who report the kindest and most charitable acts performed within the radius of one mile of each of these theatres.

Independent Acquires Three Stories

A N NOUNCEMENT is made by the Independent Pictures Corporation that they have acquired the motion picture rights to three stories which will form the basis for the first three super-special productions which they will release by way of the states right market.

The working title of the first production, is "Blind Parents" and is a screen adaptation from "The Diary of a Physician," written by the late Sir Samuel Warren.

The second production, is an original subject entitled, "Mate and Checkmate," a domestic drama, and the third subject is also an original story entitled "Does Marriage Pay."

Big First Run Accorded Equity Picture

Probably the biggest first run yet accorded Daniel Carson Goodman's production for Equity Pictures will start on Sunday, October 2nd, when the society drama opens at Kunsky's Capitol theatre in Detroit, Michigan. "What's Wrong With the Women" will have the honor of a premiere in that territory in the largest theatre in Michigan. Strand Features, of Detroit, purchased the rights for the Michigan territory and in less than a week after the purchase, James Minter, president of the Detroit exchange, had booked the picture with Mr. Kunsky. "What's Wrong With the Women" will open at the Capitol three weeks after the date of sale.

Mr. Goodman's society drama is consistently proving its first-run qualities, states Equity, by the number of successful openings it has already enjoyed in the leading houses throughout the country. It completed a week at the Cameo theatre, New York, and in Philadelphia it played simultaneously in two Stanley houses, the Palace and the Arcadia. Among the big forthcoming openings in addition to the

Garsson Working on Features

Two Companies Start Productions; One in New York, Another in Georgia

INDICATIVE of the fact that Murray W. Garsson intends to take an even more prominent place in the producer ranks is the announcement made this week that two companies under his banner began work on big feature productions.

Ralph Ince started shooting on Oct. 16 at the Talmadge Studios, New York, on a screen version of the stage hit "Success." While the working title of "The Has Been" has been used in announcing this production, it is probable Mr. Garsson will keep to the original nomenclature, "Success," when the feature is ready for release.

A cast which may be termed all-star has been provided by Mr. Garsson, the well known names including Brandon Tynan (by special arrangement with Flo Ziegfeld), Naomi Childers, Mary Astor, Dore Davidson, Stanley Ridges, Lionel Adams, Gay Pendleton, Billy Quirk and Jos. Kilgour (through special arrangement with Sam Harris). Thomas Atkins is assistant director.

Simultaneously with the activity of the New York company, another group under the direction of Roy Sheldon which left New York on Oct. 15, starts work on "Way Down South" at Albany, Ga., the locale of the story. Careful selection by Mr. Garsson of players has resulted in the collection of an unusually strong cast in support of Marian Swayne, who plays the leading feminine role, and Joe King, the male lead. The cast includes Jack Richardson, Irene Boyle, Isabelle Fisher, Norma Lee, Dan Haynes, W. F. Chaplin, Melville Shyer, John Jenkins and Frances Grant.

Griever Strengthens Season Releases

SI GRIEVER, of Griever productions, Chicago, has materially strengthened his list of fall and winter releases by the purchase of a number of feature and short subject pictures, the rights for which he has taken over for Illinois and Indiana.

They include six Dick Hattons, four Irving Cummings, seven Cactus Westerns, the rights for which he purchased from Sol Lesser; "Broken Shadows," "One Moment's Temptation," from Second National Pictures; the Illinois rights to "The Parish Priest," from Herman J. Garfield, and eighteen two-reelers included in the cast of which are Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish and Wally Reid, from Monopol Pictures, the last mentioned being a reissue.

Warner Picture Has Strong Cast

Popular Screen Players Are Included in "The Beautiful and Damned"

AN exceptionally large cast of popular screen players are included in the Warner Brothers production, "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost, announced as the second of seven releases for this season. The production, directed by William A. Seiter, was made from the novel of the same name written by F. Scott Fitzgerald. Olga Printzlau adapted the story for the screen.

Included in the cast headed by Miss Prevost are Kenneth Harlan, Louise Fazenda, Tully Marshall, Harry Meyers, Cleo Ridgely, Emmett King, Kathleen Key, Clarence Burton, Walter Long, Parker McConnell, George Kuwa and Charles McHugh.

Miss Prevost, who plays the part of Gloria Gilbert, the vivid and fascinating beauty as described in the novel, is declared to have a large following of motion picture enthusiasts.

Louise Fazenda, one of the best known comedy actresses, plays the part of the jazz baby in the picture. Some of the latest pictures in which she has appeared are "Down on the Farm," "The Beauty Shop," and "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Harry Meyers is perhaps best known for his characterization in "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." He has been allied with the industry for more than eleven years, and he plays the part of a poet and author in the Warner production.

Interest in Hyperion Pictures

Many Inquiries Received in Regard to Series of Six Independent Features

NUMEROUS inquiries received at the offices of the Hyperion Pictures Corporation, furnish evidence of the widespread interest aroused by the company's announcement of a series of six features offered to independent exchanges.

"Finger Prints," first of the six, is ready, and screenings of it for independent buyers will be begun in a few days. Plans have been completed for an unusual and comprehensive exploitation campaign in connection with this picture.

Arrangements are being made with finger print experts and other police officials all over the country to give demonstrations of the use of finger prints and secrets of this most modern crime-detector — in-

Striking accessories of power have been prepared to help this exploitation.

Among the featured players are Violet Palmer, Arthur Donaldson, and "Little Aida" Horton.

Select Industrial on "Rich Men's Wives"

Underwood and Underwood, commercial photographers, have been commissioned to produce an industrial, the story of which deals with the selection of worthwhile motion pictures by discriminating motion picture patrons. "Rich Men's Wives," the first Lichtman release was selected.

The other day a downtown theatre which had papered its front with a good supply of lithos on the picture was shot by the Underwood and Underwood cameraman.

N. Y. Territory Sold on "Notoriety"

The biggest territory in the country is the first to secure the rights for the distribution of Will Nigh's latest feature, "Notoriety." While the working print of the seven-reel society drama was still being put in final shape, the Apollo Exchange of New York was already booking the feature for first run.

A gala campaign is being staged to introduce "Notoriety" in the metropolis.

Warner Distribution Is Now Completed

THE last link in tying up the entire country for the distribution of the forthcoming series of the Warner Brothers' seven productions was completed last week by Harry M. Warner, it is announced.

The deal was consummated with the Southern States Film Company, Atlanta, for the southern territory, which includes Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina and Florida.

The seven Warner productions purchased by the Southern States Company are "Rags to Riches," "Little Heroes of the Street," "The Beautiful and Damned," "A Dangerous Adventure," "Main Street," "Brass," and "Little Church Around the Corner."

Australian Concern Buys Arrow Product

In addition to the big Arrow feature contract recently closed with Cooperative Film Exchange, Ltd., of Melbourne, Australia, David J. Mountain, manager of Arrow's foreign department, advises that he has now closed a contract with the same concern for Australia for eleven Sport Pictorials, Arrow's super-feature, "Ten Nights in a Barroom" and a minimum of fifty-two two-reel comedies, which will include a series of Hank Mann's, twelve two-reel Eddie Lyons special comedies, fourteen Mirthquake's, twelve Speed comedies and five Cruelywed comedies.

"Sheriff of Sun Dog" Print Shown

"The Sheriff of Sun-Dog," the second picture of the Arrow-William Fairbanks Series, has been received from the West Coast studio of Ben Wilson, the producer, and was pre-viewed by members of the Arrow organization early this week.

Burr Glendale Studio Active

Great Preparations Being Made for Next Johnny Hines' Feature Vehicle

THE C. C. Burr Glendale Studio has taken on the aspect of a mighty busy organization it is reported, in preparation for Johnny Hines' next feature vehicle adapted from an original story titled "Luck" by Jackson Gregory, who has written a host of successful screen stories in the past few years.

With an augmented technical force to build the many imposing interior sets prior to Hines' coming, which will probably be the early part of next week, the studio staff under the direction of Charles O. Seessel and Production Manager Richard Thorpe, is working in double shifts, so that no time will be lost in shooting all interior scenes as quickly and efficiently as possible.

Coincident with the building of interiors an additional staff of carpenters is busily engaged in the erection of a village scene immediately outside the studio, and directly on the studio grounds. No less than twelve small houses are slated to be built plus the regular accessories of a general store, a bank and other necessary appurtenances to make this village appear like the real thing.

Advance reports indicate that the story chosen for Hines is particularly adaptable for the typical breezy Hines characterization, at the same time affording untold opportunities for his support, which to date includes Edmund Breese, J. Barney Sherry, Charley Murray and Joe King. It was Mr. Burr's intention to announce this week a nationally known female star who is to appear opposite Johnny Hines in "Luck" but since the terms of the contract have not been definitely settled at this time, Burr is withholding the young lady's name from publication until such time as all arrangements have been definitely completed.

Arrow Completes Important Deal

Disposes of Major Portion of Product for Western Penn. and West Virginia

ONE of the largest and most important deals to be consummated in the Independent field thus far this season has recently been completed between Dr. W. E. Shalenger, President of Arrow Film Corporation, and Harry Simeral, who operates the H. C. Simeral Company, an Independent exchange in Pittsburgh, of which Mr. Simeral is the president and P. W. Hamilton is the secretary and treasurer.

Under the terms of this contract H. C. Simeral Company will distribute in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia the major portion of the Arrow product. Mr. Simeral is building up a new organization for the proper handling and exploiting of these pictures.

Ben Abrams, one of the real veterans of the film industry who began his activities some eighteen years ago with Ad Kessel and who has just severed his connection with First National, which organization he served in the capacity of Special Representative, has affiliated himself in a like capacity with the new company.

H. C. Simeral has been in conference with various Arrow executives during the past week, perfecting his plans.

W. Ray Johnston, vice-president of Arrow Film Corporation, has sold to Qualtoplay Film Company of Syracuse, the Jack Hoxie series, for upper New York.

"The Curse of Drink" Has Many Bookings

SAM GRAND of the Federated Feature Films of New England, state right buyer of "The Curse of Drink" melodrama, reported to the distributors of the Blaney stage-play, L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, that the feature was a strong favorite in his territory.

In its third week of release, "The Curse of Drink" has collected a total of 130 bookings, most of them in the Massachusetts district. The bookings on the four adjoining states of the territory always come later than the Bay State.

The cast, including Harry Morey, Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Marguerite Clayton and Miriam Batista is the main target of attraction among his exhibitors, while the title, with its popular appeal and old-time flavor also comes in for its share of attention.

St. Louis Exchange Buys "Curse of Drink"

Sam Sax, sales manager for L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, announced the sale of "The Curse of Drink," which that firm is distributing in the independent field, to J. J. Schrempp of the Schrempp Film Co. of St. Louis. The territory covered by that exchange includes Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Schrempp has won a reputation in his territory for the high quality of his fall program. His purchase of state-rights on "The Curse of Drink" did not come to a head till he undertook a special trip East and had the picture screened at the home office of the distributors.

It makes you feel good to know that when you sell an exhibitor the Six Box Office Winners he is going to make money with them. The facts prove that "More to be Pitied" is one of the biggest box office knockouts of the year. It has been booked over the Rowland and Clark Circuit, Pittsburgh, and Libson's Circuit in Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Louisville. Did great business at the Rialto, Des Moines and Victoria, Altoona. Cleaning up all week at Colonial, Detroit, and Hippodrome, Reading. Manager Harstn, Regun Theatre, New York, took off a super-production that had played a long downtown run to make room for "More to be Pitied." At the Belmont, New York, they had to get two cops to manage the crowds. And there's lots more only we haven't time to tell you about it. Just one thing more—wait till you see "Only a Shopgirl," the second of the box office winners—It's a humdinger!

Constant Potential Generators For Motion Picture Projection

Machines Perfected Permitting Several Lamps to Operate Simultaneously

By A. M. CANDY*
Engineering Dept. of Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co.

AFEW years ago the public was satisfied to attend motion picture theatres which were equipped with only one projection machine, necessitating a delay of from four to eight minutes at the end of each reel while the operator was removing the reel just projected, inserting and rethreading a new reel. The electrical equipment required for supplying current for such a projection scheme was quite simple to design and operate.

To some unknown person, however, we are indebted for the idea that two projection machines can be used alternately and thereby materially reducing the time lost at the end of each reel, the same electrical generating equipment being used. Some other equally progressive person conceived the idea that if the lamp in the second projector could be started before the end of a reel, then the new reel could be started at the proper time so as to make a continuous projection of pictures on the screen. This necessitated the addition of electrical control equipment or ballast resistance for the second projector as well as for the first, see Figure No. 1. Obviously, when the second lamp was started, an overload was imposed upon the source of electrical power, usually a motor generator, see Figure No. 2, and as a result the voltage of the generator was decreased, which caused each lamp to receive less than its normal current, thereby decreasing the brightness of the picture on the screen. This is illustrated by Figure No. 3, which shows the characteristic curve of a generator designed for delivering 55 amperes to one arc only, with the arc operating at approximately 60 volts. When a constant voltage generator is used for this purpose it is necessary to provide a resistance in series with the arc to make it stable. Since the generator is designed for 80 volts and the arc operates at approximately 60 volts, the resistance must be designed for a 20 volt drop at 55 amperes, or a resistance of .364 ohms. Now when we attempt to operate two arc

THE following paper discusses the development through which the constant potential generator has been carried for producing satisfactory results in projecting pictures in modern motion picture theatres. To eliminate any flicker or recrease of illumination on the screen when a second lamp is connected to the generator while the other lamp is being used for projecting pictures, has required very careful study of motion picture projection requirements by the design engineer. As a result, these generators, with their control equipment, have been perfected so that several lamps can be operated from the same generator, using different current values in the various lamps, without producing any visible flicker or decrease of illumination of pictures on the screen. The ability of the machine to carry several lamps at different current capacities will fulfill the requirements of modern theatres where it is frequently desirable to operate stereopticon lamps, spot lamps, flood lamps and a projector at the same time or any combination of these machines.

lamps from the same generator, it is necessary to provide a similar resistance (see Fig. No. 2A and Fig. No. 2B) in the circuit of each lamp. With both lamps connected to the circuit, the effective resistance of the ballast rheostat is .282 ohms. To determine the current which the generator will deliver under these conditions, it is only necessary to make a few trial calculations by selecting an assumed current value, say 90 amperes, multiply this by the resistance of .182 ohms, which gives 16.3 volts, and add the arc voltage of 60 volts, which gives 76.3 volts, which must be delivered by the generator. By inspecting Figure No. 3, however, we find that at 90 amperes the generator only develops about 73 volts and will, therefore, not supply 90 amperes for the two arcs under these conditions. Suppose, then, that we try 82 amperes; we get $82 \times .182 + 60 = 74.9$ volts which falls on the curve as per Figure No. 3. Therefore, with one lamp operating, it will receive 55 amperes, whereas, with both lamps operating the total current delivered by the generator is 82 amperes, or 41 amperes per lamp. This is a decrease of approximately 25 per cent below normal, which will result in a decrease in the illumination produced by each lamp. When pictures are being projected the motion of the objects on the screen makes even this decrease in illumination but slightly noticeable. However, it must be recognized that these generators which were designed primarily for the operation of one lamp are not as satisfactory as can be designed where it is necessary to operate two lamps alternately. However, machines have been operating under these conditions for years, and producing fairly satisfactory results.

The continual demand for improvement in every phase of the motion picture industry, and the desire on the part of the design engineers to produce electrical equipment for motion picture projection which would give an uninterrupted and practically steady illumination, has resulted in a great improvement in generator design, especially as regards voltage regulation. On first thought it would seem that an over-compound generator, with characteristics as shown in Figure No. 4, would meet all requirements for better

Society Motion Picture Engineers Hold Successful Convention

THE Fall Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was held at the Powers Hotel, Rochester, New York, October 9th to 12th, inclusive. The opinion of those present held this meeting as the greatest success in the history of the society. It is interesting to note that each succeeding meeting of this society gains in popularity and prestige in the motion picture industry. A large representative portion of the industry now looks forward to these conventions as the big events of the year.

The Committee on Papers and Entertainment prepared an unusually interesting program, combining business and pleasure, which appealed to both members and guests.

Through the courtesy of the Eastman Kodak Company and the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, visits were made through both plants. A trip was made to Kodak Park and, under the supervision of experts and guides, a very comprehensible inspection was made of both the research laboratories and film manufacturing plant. At the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company the method of making optical glass was demonstrated, the observers being particularly fortunate in witnessing the handling, in the heat treatment process, of one of the immense discs of molten glass.

The papers presented at this convention included those on the general subject of theatre construction, projection, optics, educational motion pictures, laboratory equipment, studio methods and photography. Through these various papers the industry was presented with much valuable information which will be available upon the publication of the transactions of this meeting.

An election of officers was held to fill those expiring. Those elected were:

President—L. C. Porter (reelected).

Vice President—Dr. H. Kellner.

Secretary—P. M. Abbott.

Treasurer—W. B. Cook.

Board of Governors—Dr. Mees, W. V. D. Kelly.

On Tuesday evening the resident members of the Society in Rochester tendered the convention a dinner. The affair proved one of the high lights of the meeting, and especial credit is due Joseph DiNunzio, who was in charge of the arrangements for this dinner and entertainment.

The members were given an opportunity to inspect the world famous Eastman theatre and also had the pleasure of there attending a theatre party Wednesday evening.

The society voted to hold their spring meeting at Atlantic City.

All those who took an active part in making this meeting the success it was are to be highly commended.

The ladies who accompanied the members found Rochester and the entertainments provided extremely pleasant.

Columbia University Opens Course on Various Phases of Motion Pictures

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, in the City of New York, opened a course in Motion Pictures on October 3 which will continue to May 29.

This course forms a basis for elementary training upon which present and future producers of various types of motion pictures may build. It is designed to be of special value to scenario writers and persons interested in becoming directors, title writers, camera men, laboratory workers and film editors. It is also of value as part of a general education.

The course is both cultural and practical. It considers the motion picture as a means of expressing thought and communicating ideas through kinetic pictures. It furnishes a practical background for understanding, judging and making pictures used for entertainment, instruction and in industry.

The course gives a working knowledge of the principles which underlie production, of the psychology of visual appeal, and familiarity with the best practice in producing motion pictures, both on "location" and in the studio.

Students will have experience with the functions of production by actually producing a picture. This includes planning, directing, photographing, titling and editing. In addition, pictures will be shown in the classroom to illustrate the technique and artistry used in production.

The course deals briefly with the history and development of motion pictures, and the classification of pictures according to their use: entertainment, educational and industrial. It establishes tentative standards for judging these types of pictures according to the degree of success with which they attain their objectives. It also includes a study of the following topics:

1. The physics of production, including a study of the nature and phenomena of light.

2. The chemistry of production, especially the manufacture of raw photographic stock, developing, printing, tinting and toning.

3. The mechanics of production, with consideration of various types of motion picture cameras and their method of use.

4. The functions of production, with analysis writer, production manager, director, actor, art director, camera man and editor.

5. The factors of production, including types of photography, as straight, trick, natural color, and microscopic, the making of cartoons and technical drawings.

For further details in regard to this course address the Secretary of Columbia University, New York, N. Y.

Manufacture of Organs for 1921

Washington, D. C., October 7, 1922.—The Department of Commerce announces that the census reports show considerable increase in the activities of the establishments engaged in the manufacture of organs during 1921 as compared with the year 1919. Fifty-five establishments reported products valued at $10,173,904 for 1921 as compared with 68 establishments having products valued at $5,973,268 for 1919. The increase in the total value of products was 70.3 per cent. Of 55 establishments reported in 1921, 11 are located in New York; 10 in Illinois; 6, each in Pennsylvania and Ohio; 4, each in Massachusetts and Wisconsin; 2, each in California, Connecticut, Kentucky, Missouri.

performance. Trial calculations will show that this machine will deliver 100 amperes at 76.3 volts to two lamps, or 40 amperes per lamp, compared with 55 amperes for one lamp, or a decrease of but 10 per cent below normal. When placed in service, however, we find it almost impossible to operate one lamp alone because the arc is so unstable. This is because the slope of the voltage characteristic curve is in the wrong direction for stable arc operation; because as the carbons burn away and the current through the arc decreases, the voltage drop across the arc increases. Therefore, if the generator voltage actually decreases with the current, the arc will go out.

To obtain the best voltage regulation characteristics for supplying current to one or two lamps, consistent with a reasonable cost for the equipment, it was equipment will deliver 55 amperes to one lamp and 97 amperes to two lamps, or $48\frac{1}{2}$ amperes per lamp, which is only about $11\frac{1}{2}$ per cent below normal current. The resulting small decrease in illumination is not perceptible when pictures are projected on the screen. Inasmuch as the performance of the electrical equipment, as it pertains to the illumination of the picture, is determined by the results produced on the screen, this slight decrease in current through the arc, which is projecting the picture, when both lamps are operating is of no consequence whatsoever.

Since the constant voltage generator can be readily designed so as to assure a steady and uninterrupted source of direct current, so far as the illumination of the picture as viewed from the theatre is concerned, and furthermore, since the constant voltage generator provides for operating two or more arcs of different amperage, simultaneously, it seems to be a very satisfactory type of equipment for this service.

When we first designed our generators for operating projecting lamps, a number of years ago, it was the custom at that time, as you recall, to use one projection machine only, and when it was necessary to change from one reel to another the projection on the screen had to be stopped. The machines we designed for that service were satisfactory, but, as the art progressed, we commenced to get into the field of stealing one arc from the other, and finally operating two arcs simultaneously during transition from one reel to another. We found that the machine designed to handle one lamp only was not entirely satisfactory for this latter service, so we commenced to improve these machines. The reason these machines were not entirely satisfactory for this latter pro-necessary to design a generator using a liberal amount of copper in the armature, reasonably small air gap and the proper magnetic saturation in both the armature iron and the steel pole pieces. When used as a part of a motor-generator, the motor must be designed for good speed regulation. The voltage regulation curve of such an improved equipment is shown by Figure No. 5. By trial calculations similar to those made before, we find that this jection service was that when a second lamp was connected to the generator circuit, the current through each of the lamps would be reduced below the normal value as indicated by Figure No. 3 of the paper.

To make the information in my paper somewhat clearer, it will probably be advisable to show the characteristic curve of an arc circuit as illustrated by Figure No. 6, which shows the approximate volt ampere characteristics of a fixed arc gap normally operated at 55 amperes. From this curve it will be observed that as the current through this given arc gap is decreased, the voltage drop across the arc gap actually increases. Vice versa, as the current is increased, the voltage across the arc gap actually decreases. If, therefore, we attempt to operate an arc from

We Stand Corrected

An inquiry relative to a discussion being carried on by some projectionists on the subject of "an in and out of focus gate" was published recently in this department. An opinion expressed by the Editor stands corrected upon the receipt of the following letter.

Dear Sir:

I noticed the letter in your department of the October 14th issue from W. J. Burton, Jr., of 2230 Court Place, Denver, Colo., in regard to the in and out of focus gate. Well, there is just such a part made by the Precision Machine Company and takes the place of E. 4 and has two small single film trap door pads just above P-100. E and takes the place of S-310. E and S-311. E and are supposed to keep the film flat so that you do not get an in and out of focus effect when the machine is running. I have never seen this part listed in the parts or instruction books but that is the way they were billed to us in the Omaha office of the Argus Enterprises, Inc., when I was the branch manager there and think that if you call on Mr. Walter Green of the Precision Machine Co. he will show you the difference in this and the old E. 4 part.

Yours very truly,

An Old Friend

We have with us an old friend, the discussion of the crossing of light rays in their journey from the aperture to the screen. Those who have discussed this problem seem to have good reasons or proof for their conclusions and yet there doesn't seem to be any general agreement on the subject. Here are two projectionists who take reverse views.

Dear Sir:

In looking over the Anti Misframe League Forum, I note a few points brought forward which I might assist in making more clear.

With regard to the Cross of the Light Rays might say that in a compound multiple combination lens the rays will always cross in front of the lens. The exact point being of little moment to the scientist he expresses this fact with a standard symbol. Namely, an oblong with its ends closed by eclipses and the diagonals of the oblong shown. This does not by any means convey the idea to him that the rays cross within the lens. But it does tell him that they cross somewhere.

He can, if necessary, by the use of mathematics determine the exact location and afterward by practical experiment check up on results.

The root of the evil in these matters is that 95% of exhibitors are "pound foolish and penny wise" and instead of giving an incentive to their mechanical employees to become projectionists, simply force them to be operators. The average man knows enough to get by with a show. He does not know the reason why for anything. He does not care and under present conditions he will never learn.

You are mistaken in the matter of "An in and out of focus gate." There is such an animal and it is very much alive. On the Power machine it supplies a twofold function when used. It consists of making the tension shoes a little wider and somewhat longer, and slotting them longitudinally. The idea is to assist the film in passing the aperture plate when green without sticking, or warping and bulging and so bringing parts out of focus.

On the Simplex it only carries out the last functions, I believe it was suggested and designed by Mr. Lester Bowen for a long time Chief Operator of the Rialto theatre and now designing engineer of the Nicholas Power Company. It is made by placing an extra set of tension springs above the regular pair in this way forcing the film to travel over a longer path and under tension and has the effect of smoothing out green film.

Very sincerely,

EDMUND MCD. BENDHEIM,
312 West 126th St.,
New York City.

And here is the other side of the question.

Hello Ed.:

It has been some time since I have sent any news to the League, hence I thought I had better call you up as I am in a small town I don't have much news to send in but I watch the Forum for what the other boys send in.

My manager, Mr. Culbreath, is head over heels advertising this week as the county fair is going on here so that makes my hours longer too.

Just to settle the argument for Mr. John Lineham of Aston, Mass., I wish to state that I believe the light crosses inside of the lens tube, try this test.

Light the lamp and project the white light on the screen. Now take a screw driver and place the point of it in front of the projection lens on the right hand side and you will see that the shadow of the screw driver is on the right side of the screen. Now take the screw driver and put it on the right hand side of the aperture plate and you will see that the shadow of the screw driver is on the left hand side of the screen. This proves that the light crosses inside the lens tube between the two lenses.

Now I'll ring off.

Respectfully,

CARL VAL, No. 1503,

Caruthersville, Me.

Dear Editor:

Find enclosed three applications for new League members. These projectionists are all working for the Bureau of Clubs and Playgrounds and are very anxious to become members. Have several more projectionists to see yet and will send their blanks in just as soon as I can get to see them.

Received the labels okay and they are the best thing out. They catch the eye and call the projectionist's attention to a good organization.

Thanking you for the labels and also my membership card, which I am proud of owning,

Very truly yours,

WM. G. ELLIOTT,
Balboa, Panama Canal Zone.

Dear Editor:

Please find the enclosed membership blank for a projectionist friend of mine. You will find 25c. enclosed for membership button. Also send me a bunch of labels.

Send all this to the Grand Theatre, Salem, Ohio.

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

a constant voltage source, as the current builds up through the arc, the voltage required becomes less and less, and therefore the current will keep on building up indefinitely until a very severe overload is placed upon the source of supply. For this reason, therefore, it is necessary to provide a stabilizing resistance frequently called a ballast resistance in series with the arc, so that as the current through the arc circuit increases, the voltage drop across the resistance will increase and thereby leave less voltage available for the arc circuit, which will cause the system to reach a balancing point where the voltage available for the arc is just sufficient to keep the desired current flowing through the arc and prevent the current from building up to any higher value. For the best operation of an arc circuit, the carbons should be separated so that the current through the arc is slightly less than the current which will cause a hissing, unstable arc. Furthermore, the carbons must be separated the proper distance so that the arc is not hissing. By referring to Figure No. 6 again, it will be observed that when operating the arc at 55 amperes the arc is a few amperes less than the point where hissing begins, namely, slightly over 60 amperes.

Third Edition Cameron's Handybook Best Yet

This industry's well-known author, James R. Cameron, has only very recently completed and published his third edition of the popular volume "Motion Picture Projection." This edition, which covers every phase of projection in a most comprehensible manner, has earned the distinction of being placed in a class by itself. The author has just reasons for being proud of his latest accomplishments.

It is of interest to note that this book is the latest and largest volume published on the subject of motion picture projection.

The book in general is written in an easily understandable style and should be found an invaluable asset to every projectionists' library.

American Manufacturers May Soon Be Required to Adopt German Standards

"THE day may not be far distant when American manufacturers will receive inquiries from overseas countries to furnish goods according to the German national standards, and it behooves us to plan in time to meet such conditions."

This statement is contained in a communication to the American Engineering Standards Committee from Oscar R. Wikander, an American engineer, who has just returned from Germany, where he represented the A. E. S. C. in conferences concerning the international standardization of ball bearings.

Describing the great strides in standardization that have been made by German industries during the last few years and the important foreign trade advantages accruing to German industries because of their intense standardization activities, Mr. Wikander said:

"There is no doubt in my mind that one of the main reasons why forward-looking Germans force their standardization work is because they want to introduce German standards in the great importing countries, and possibly in the whole world. Holland, Switzerland, Austria, Sweden and many other European countries follow the German lead very closely. The great German deliveries in kind to France will no doubt be made as far as feasible according to German standards, thereby introducing them in that country."

"It was only a few years ago that the 'Normenausschuss der Deutschen Industrie,' an organization corresponding to our American Engineering Standards Committee, was formed, but the amount of work which it has already accomplished is stupendous."

"The day may not be far distant when our manufacturers will receive inquiries from overseas countries to furnish goods according to the German national standards or specifications, and it behooves us to plan in time to meet such conditions. England seems to have realized fully the importance of recognition of her standards and is trying to force the adoption of them in her colonies."

"In conclusion I wish to express the hope that the example of the German engineers and manufacturers may spur us to make equally large contributions in work and money to the cause of standardization, and that our leading engineers may try to realize the enormous economic importance of both national and international standards."

Giving Performances Despite Alterations

The Society theatre at the present time is undergoing extensive remodeling including complete renovation of the house and of the lobby and foyer. Several weeks ago the corner on which the theatre is situated was condemned by the street department as a dangerous crossing and is consequently being rounded off and cleared of all obstructions. When finished this will make the street nine feet wider, bringing the curb to the former entrance of the theatre. L. L. Goldsmith, manager of the house, unwilling to leave the lobby in such condition, is having it entirely changed. New plans call for a rounded front, with a new marquise and electric signs also larger exit door at the rear of the building. Performances are being held every night despite the repairs that are going on. It is expected the house will be completely renovated within the next ten days.—Prager.

Rockingham Theatre Company Increases Chain

The Rockingham Theatre Company of Rockingham, N. C., have bought the Playhouse theatre from Southern Enterprises in Bennettsville, S. C., and alterations and improvements are already under way. This company recently opened the Garden theatre in Rockingham. The Playhouse will be under the supervision of William G. Atkinson who is managing the other theatre. It is expected the improvements will be completed within four weeks.—Stellings.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

R-C Production Notes

"The False Alarm" is the title of the seventh DeHaven comedy. The continuity has been prepared by Beatrice Van and it is being directed by Henry Lehrman.

Harry Carey is beginning work on "Canyon of Fools."

Mal St. Clair is directing the second of "Fighting Blood" series, which is titled "Knight in Gale," featuring George O'Hara and Clara Horton.

The Ethel Clayton company has several magnificent Chinese settings for "The Remittance Woman," now being directed by Wesley Ruggles.

With Paramount Units

Cecil DeMille is offering one thousand dollars for an idea for his next photoplay through the Los Angeles Times and is receiving thousands of answers. Suggestions are limited to 300 words.

Charles Maigne is making final scenes for "Sacrifice," starring Mary Miles Minter, in which he is using hundreds of negroes as African savages.

Philip Rosen is selecting the cast for the next Mary Miles Minter subject, showing Parisian life, titled "Bacchanal."

Penrhyn Stanlaws has completed "Singed Wings," featuring Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nagel.

The Palace of the President of the Argentine Republic has been built for the Sam Woods production of "My American Wife," starring Gloria Swanson.

Paul Powell will next direct Agnes Ayres in "Have a Heart," by Byron Morgan, the continuity by Will M. Ritchey.

"Making a Man," starring Jack Holt, has been finished by Director Joseph Henabery.

Some remarkable night photography will be one of the features of Robert G. Vignola's next Cosmopolitan production, "Adam and Eva," starring Marion Davies, which will be completed shortly. Mr. Vignola and his company have just returned to the studio from a location trip to Connecticut where they took night scenes for his forthcoming production. These scenes were taken under great difficulties and special lighting apparatus was brought on from New York and used.

After a vacation of several months Dorothy Dalton has started another Paramount picture. She began work this week at the Paramount Long Island studio on an original story for the screen by Edmund Goulding, temporarily titled "Black Fury" under the direction of Victor Fleming. Robert Ellis has been selected to play the role of the British officer, and Jose Rubens, who had such a colorful role in "The Man From Home," which was made in Italy, will portray the sinister Egyptian doctor. Ellen Cassidy, Pat Hartigan and Marie R. Burke have also been cast for important roles.

Christie Comedy Bits

One of the new Christie comedies which has gone into production is "Chop Suey," a Chinese story featuring Dorothy Devore. The scenes of the picture are laid in San Francisco's famous Chinatown.

Al Christie has finished filming "Choose Your Weapons," the Graustarkian comedy featuring Bobby Vernon.

Warner Brothers Items

William Seiter has been retained to direct "The Little Church Around the Corner," instead of Mason Hopper, who was borrowed from Goldwyn. Alec Francis and Cyril Chadwick have been added to the cast.

Harry Rapf is busily engaged in casting "Brass."

On the Goldwyn Lot

Marshall Neilan purchased the screen rights to "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" by Thomas Hardy, for which Dorothy Farnum, recent arrival from New York, is preparing the continuity. Frank Urson, director; David Kesson, cameraman and others left Friday for England, there to make some exteriors.

Rupert Hughes has completed the script for "Souls for Sale."

Several reels of "Passions of the Sea," filmed by R. A. Walsh in Tahiti, was shown to members of the "Wampas" Monday night.

Alma Bennett, who played opposite William Russell in "Man Size," has been placed under contract by Goldwyn.

Just before their return from the Island of Tahiti to the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Tony Moreno, House Peters, Pauline Starke and other members of the cast of "Passions of the Sea," and R. A. Walsh, the director, were guests of honor at a ball given by the French colony to the American residents on the island.

Cables to the Goldwyn studio from Paris state that Elinor Glyn has finished the atmospheric scenes for her picture, "Six Days." The gardens of the Ritz-Carlton hotel and other points of interest were used as a background. The rest of the picture will be filmed at the Goldwyn studio, Culver City.

Dagmar Godowsky's next screen appearance will be in "The Strangers' Banquet," which Marshall Neilan is producing in association with Goldwyn.

At Universal City

Carl Laemmle is expected Friday. Edward Laemmle arrived here the past week and will first direct a feature instead of the Acord serial,

"The Trail Blazers." The latter will be directed by Duke Warren.

Stuart Paton is preparing for an all-star production, entitled, "The Attic of Felix Beva," a Russian revolutionary tale.

William Worthington will direct Frank Mayo in "The Bolted Door," now being cast, the continuity for which will be the work of George Randolph Chester.

King Baggott is casting "The Madonna of Avenue A," starring Gladys Walton.

George Archainbaud is beginning work on "The Power of a Lie," with an all-star cast.

Edward Kull will next direct a series of six two-reel Westerns.

The title of what was "Wolves of Society" has been changed to "The Social Buccaneer," which features Jack Mulhall and Margaret Livingston.

Jack Conway will next direct Herbert Rawlinson in a story now in preparation.

Hugh Hoffman has been appointed supervisor of the Gladys Walton Productions unit.

Lois Boyd and Jean Hope have been added to the cast of Baby Peggy's special production being directed by Alf Goulding. Miss Boyd is a former "Follies" girl, and both Misses Hope and Boyd were formerly with Hal Roach.

Julius Stern is expected from Europe this week.

A new story is being prepared for Lee Moran.

Lillian Rich has been engaged by Universal again for a leading role. She will play opposite Herbert Rawlinson in "One Wonderful Night."

The filming of George Patullo's story, "The Summons," which George Randolph Chester prepared for the screen, has been completed at Universal City. The feature, starring Frank Mayo and directed by Edward Sedgwick, has been in production for several weeks.

Bessie Love has been engaged to play in the all-star production, "The Ghost Patrol," now being made at Universal City. Nat Ross is directing the feature, which is from the story written by Sinclair Lewis, of "Main Street" fame.

Around Metro Studios

Hunt Stromberg has finished the Bull Montana comedy, "Glad Rags," which he is now editing.

The next Viola Dana production will be "The Noise in Newboro," which Harry Beaumont will direct. Casting is already under way.

Jesse Hampton has established offices at Metro studio.

"The Woman in Bronze" is the next production which will star Clara Kimball Young. It is an adaptation of a French novel by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton. It is at present being cast. Garsion's independent subject, entitled "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," will be completely edited within the week.

"Peg O' My Heart" is finished.

In and Out of the Fox Lot

Joseph Franklin Poland prepared the scenario from William McLeod Reine's "Man Size," starring vehicle for William Russell, to be directed by Howard Mitchell. In the supporting cast are Alma Bennett, Stanton Heck, Charles French, James Gordon, Carl Stockdale.

William Beaudine is directing Tom Mix in "Shoe Bar Stratton," the continuity by Jack Stumwasser. The cast is composed of Lillian Rich, Claude Payton, Gordon Griffith, Harry Griffith, Bob Milash and Katherine Anderson.

"The Footlight Ranger," under the direction of Scotty Dunlap, stars Charles Jones. The story is an original by Dorothy Yost, who also prepared the continuity. In the cast are Fritz Brunette, Henry Barrows, James Mason, Lillian Langdon, Lydia Titus.

Jerome Storm has begun "Truxton King," adapted from McCutcheon's "Graustark," by Paul Scofield. John Gilbert will appear in the leading role, while on support will be Ruth Clifford, Frank Leigh, Mickey Moore, Otis Harlan, Henry Miller, Richard Wayne, Willis Marks, Winifred Bryson, Mark Fenton.

Shirley Mason's next starring vehicle is entitled "Pawn Ticket 210." William Van Dyck is directing, scenario by Jules Furthman. The cast embraces Robert Agnew, Otto Lederer, Irene Hunt, Frank Brownley, Joe Girard, Martha Franklin.

Colin Campbell has been engaged to direct Dustin Farnum in "Three, Who Paid," by George Owen Baxter, the continuity prepared by Joseph Poland. Bessie Love will play the leading feminine role, while four heavies will be ably represented by Frank Campeau, Fred Kohler, Robert Day, William Conklin, and Robert Agnew in a juvenile character.

Lupino Lane writes from London that he will be back at Fox studio early in January.

Here and There

Victor Heerman will direct Owen Moore in "A Dollar Down," the original story by Victor Heerman, for which a continuity by Sarah Mason will be used.

Rowland V. Lee will direct Florence Vidor in "Alice Adams," the Tarkington-Pulitzer prize novel for Associated Exhibitors.

with its long scale of gradation faithfully portrays all that is in the negative. It carries quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words “Eastman” “Kodak” stenciled in black letters on the transparent margin.
